Understanding

LLOYD EDMUND WHITNEY

THE belief that God's law operates as a material law of nature, and that God at infrequent intervals sets aside this law when some special proof of His power becomes necessary to teach mankind a needed lesson, has never helped humanity to have faith in God. In fact, to attempt worship of God while holding in thought such a concept of His law begets a lack of faith in His unchanging goodness and infinite intelligence and love. It is even believed that the various ills of the flesh are experienced as a punishment visited upon mankind by God for disobedience of this law of nature, and this, irrespective of whether or not the offender was aware of his mistake. Mankind, believing themselves deprived of reliance on God by this teaching, are directed to the ever changing opinions of materia medica for instruction as to what constitutes proper obedience to God's will. This has left humanity at the beck and call of various material systems, which are not in agreement among themselves as to the proper method of caring for the body, except that all believe prayer an unimportant element.

Religious teaching which accepts this material belief of God's law, or which makes a theoretical condemnation of "the things of the flesh" in the nature of a compromise with materiality, cannot furnish mankind the spiritual guidance which they have been taught to seek in the church, nor can such teaching give a concept of prayer in which God is known to be Spirit, Love, and His law absolutely spiritual, in accordance with the teachings of Jesus as summed up in his talk with Nicodemus, when he said, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit." This necessity for the rejection of materiality was also taught by Paul, for he declared, "The flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh: and these are contrary the one to the other."

In Christian Science God is understood as Love, divine Principle, infinite, unchanging, eternal; and because it deduces all its conclusions from this spiritual basis, Christian Science rejects all material sense testimony of man and creation and contends for the reality and allness of Spirit and its spiritual creation. This understanding of God enables one to demonstrate His law to be a law of love, not a blind and often destructive force, but an ever beneficent, intelligent power, constantly manifesting good throughout creation, protecting and sustaining His creatures. To material sense, however, love is a variable condition of human thought, and to undo the errors which this falsity imposes, this finite belief must be eradicated and a true concept of Love as divine Principle, the only God, must be established. It is then necessary to reject the counterfeit or spurious evidence of the material senses and to affirm and demonstrate the true understanding of Love.

To learn how to reject this material sense testimony and to manifest the spiritual sense, one must test each mental concept which presents itself to his consciousness, with the truth concerning divine Love, God. If there seems to be a concept of sickness, it needs to be refuted with the understanding that infinite Love never created an inharmonious sense, but that where the belief of erring sense claims to exist, the power and presence of God must in reality be manifest. If the sense belief should claim reality as sin or animality, it can be proved unreal and without power with a courageous knowing of the infinite power and perfection of God and His eternal reflection in man. The belief of lack or want is proved to have no reality or being by the same process of realizing that such a claim is not of Love, but a false belief of finite sense which is contrary to the nature of God, who supplies all His ideas with the abundant harmony of infinite good.

A belief in a God of nature with changeable, material laws leads to an excuse for failure to do the works of spiritual understanding, and results in the contention that Jesus and his disciples did their healing works under a special dispensation of power, through which God set aside His laws for the purpose of supporting the claims of Messiahship in the Master. This explanation may seem to satisfy a merely superficial sense, but does not, and indeed cannot, fulfill the hungering desire of one who seeks relief from disease or sin. To such a one the message of the healing power of Love as revealed in Christian Science comes as a ray of light to the sufferer, and he joyfully and gladly accepts its promise with a faith that is spontaneous.

Jesus knew the omnipotence of Love to the utter exclusion of any belief in a power apart from God, and through this understanding he performed his mighty works. As Mrs. Eddy has written in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," beginning on page 476, "Jesus beheld in Science the perfect man, who appeared to him where sinning mortal man appears to mortals. In this perfect man the Saviour saw God's own likeness, and this correct view of man healed the sick."

When blind Bartimæus heard that Jesus of Nazareth passed by, he cried, "Jesus, thou son of David, have mercy on me;" and it is worthy of note to one who has not received healing at his first appeal, that this blind beggar could not be silenced but cried the louder that he might be healed. The Master, conscious only of man's perfect reflection of divine Love, asked, "What wilt thou that I shall do unto thee?" and answered the petition for healing with instantaneous proof of God's love for man. The record in the gospel of Luke concludes with the statement that this man followed Jesus, "glorifying God: and all the people, when they saw it, gave praise unto God."

To the Master, then, the creation of God was not to be found in the expression of disease, blindness, or any of the ills of the flesh; nor were such conditions to be accepted as having dominion even to the human sense of existence; neither was God to be known as "a God afar off," governing His creation through the operation of heartless and blind laws. His teaching and practice exemplified an understanding of God as a tender, loving Father, ever expressing throughout His universe the infinite perfection and goodness of perfect love, producing absolute harmony, in which health, joy, peace, are forever the result of obedience to God's law.

To-day Christian Scientists are again bearing grateful testimony to the omnipotence and tender care of divine Love, and they are sanguine that eventually all mankind will know and demonstrate the truth of Mrs. Eddy's statement (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 82): "Man is the offspring and idea of the Supreme Being, whose law is perfect and infinite. In obedience to this law, man is forever unfolding the endless beatitudes of Being; for he is the image and likeness of infinite Life, Truth, and Love."

The Unfolding of God's Purposes

HENRIETTA A. FIELD

THAT every student of Christian Science may learn to differentiate between the ideas of Spirit and the beliefs of material sense is evident, for Mrs. Eddy says in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 505): "Spirit imparts the understanding which uplifts consciousness and leads into all truth. . . . Understanding is the line of demarcation between the real and unreal." To realize that there is a line of demarcation between truth and error and that consciousness can be so enlightened as to see this difference and choose intelligently, is to lay a sure foundation of confidence that a right decision is possible of attainment under any circumstances.

Science and Health provides a most exhaustive study of the character, qualities, and activities of spiritual ideas, and so furnishes the means for their identification; while experience soon makes it possible to apply some of the simple, practical tests that will guide into a right choice between ideas and illusions. One of the first steps in discerning whether that which is presented has the origin and character of an idea, is a frank and fearless investigation of the motives and desires that lie back of it. Is it the child of reason, justice, and love, or the product of some wayward mesmeric influence? Whither does its development tend,—toward the promotion of spiritual betterment or toward self-gratification and self-advancement? Will it bring clearer views of God or bury one deeper in materialism? The answer to these questions will go to the very root of the matter, for Mrs. Eddy says of the exalted thoughts or spiritual ideas (Science and Health, p. 299), "These upward-soaring beings never lead towards self, sin, or materiality, but guide to the divine Principle of all good, whither every real individuality, image, or likeness of God, gathers." Thus by their character and probable leadings, ideas may be recognized and accepted, and their opposites rejected.

The next step is a perfect willingness to be led, whether the leading harmonizes with human desires or not, a determination to put aside human will and endeavor, to give up outlining, and to recognize Spirit as that which outlines and creates. Then will the unfolding of the right idea be in every way natural and orderly, for "order is Heaven's first law." Spiritual ideas never appear as a confused mass out of which good may be drawn at random, but like the flowers they come in the fullness of time, each clothed by Spirit with appropriate and diversified expression, suitable to its place and mission. The Science and art which pervade all spiritual creation find their most delicate expression in this perfect fitness of things to their surroundings, for there are no misfits or misplacements in Truth and Love. Every vague longing and unformed thought, if right, will be directed into its proper channel of expression, if one will but wait patiently on God. And according to its kind or intelligence will it manifest some degree of true love, strength, beauty, and usefulness.

Again, the unfolding spiritual idea rouses into living action everything associated with it, finding willing allies in what before had seemed of little value, as well as enlisting the unseen forces of the spiritual universe; for when God moves in the affairs of men "all things work," and they so "work together" that the result is concerted, harmonious action. More than this, the energy of all the component parts will be directed toward one definite and worthy achievement, because "all things work together for good to them that love God," as Paul says. While erroneous beliefs, selfish desires, and false limitations may be rudely jarred by the spiritual power of an unfolding purpose, yet it is certain the gathering energy and activity will not cause damage or do wrong to any of the useful and natural surroundings, but will rather bless and multiply all good, as its nature and behest require. When Spirit has thus been given full sway in consciousness, and permitted to lead and designate, the message of John to the angel of the church in Philadelphia is again heard, "Behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it."

One may therefore go out with joy, certain that with each succeeding footstep the way will grow more plain, and that every obstacle which would hinder this broader outlook and higher development will be overcome or removed by Truth's omnipotent touch. In the words of one of our hymns (Hymnal, p. 65):—

His purposes will ripen fast,
Unfolding ev'ry hour;
The bud may have a bitter taste,
But sweet will be the flower.

To Realize

MARY MEXIA FORD

TWO definitions of the verb "realize," which seem to express most clearly the scientific viewpoint are, "To comprehend completely," and, "To bring home to one's own experience." The latter especially is the "open sesame" by which we enter the kingdom of God on earth and perceive, though faintly at first, "the ability and power divinely bestowed on man" (Science and Health, p. 393). One is seldom willing to profit from another's experience, probably thinking that the fruit he gathers for himself will be of a better flavor. In the end, however, one finds that all mortal experiences are about the same. Then tired, weary, and heartsick, one turns to divine Love, and begins to see that the most valuable experience one can have is to bring home to one's own self the realization of God's goodness, and prove it conclusively in overcoming the woes and trials of mortal existence.

Suppose we should be told of great wealth unexpectedly inherited, or of rare talents unknowingly possessed; of what avail would they be, unless we were brought to realize the truth of the statements, and to use the wealth or develop the talents? Some one, for instance, realized the possibilities of arid land under irrigation, put thought into action, and lo! the once sterile sands blossomed like the rose. So it is with the treasures of Truth given to us in the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, which reveal and make available our inheritance to "every good gift and every perfect gift" which divine Love has always for His children. We may read of them, talk of them, think of them, and believe in them, but unless we absolutely realize their truth by incorporating them into our daily lives,—learning through a right understanding of God and His law how to put out the erroneous thought and replace it with the true, just "here a little, and there a little," striving patiently each day to prove what we have been taught—we are still echoing that centuries-old cry of inability to realize the Christ, Truth, "Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief."

Had the rich man in the parable realized the true nature of substance, no fear of exhausted supply, no thought of hoarding in bigger barns, would have been entertained; rather, the desire would have been to share with the less fortunate. So, too, with the young man of many possessions who came to Jesus inquiring about eternal life. In reply to Jesus he said that he had kept the commandments from his youth up; yet when he was told to sell all that he had and give to the poor, he went away sorrowing. Jesus perceived that his thought of substance was wholly material and must change to the realization of God, Spirit, as the only source of supply and substance. In thus acknowledging a source of good apart from God this young man was all unwittingly breaking the first and fundamental commandment.

What else did Jesus mean when he said so plainly, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you"? The understanding that God has already provided for our every need, brings the result in "things added," in the form of whatever that need may be. The blindness of mortal belief and the futility of looking to or depending upon anything but God, is shown when we look to mortal methods to aid us, and depend upon human so-called wisdom to guide us, which is unsubstantial, frail, and powerless to give real help.

When we grow in the understanding that we "live, and move, and have our being" in Him who is infinite Life, Truth, and Love, surely we, too, will say with the psalmist, "I will fear no evil: for thou art with me." As we see one after another of error's claims destroyed, we thereby prove that by the demonstration of Christian Science we can realize how all evil will ultimately vanish from consciousness; for the great taproot, fear, is withering away under the radiant "sun of righteousness" which brings "healing in his wings."

The Little One

JESSIE L. REMINGTON

IT is the common experience of Christian Scientists to be grateful. If their gratitude is not the result of some specific demonstration over illness, sin, poverty, or inharmony of any nature, there are manifold instances when they recognize and are grateful for unfoldment,—a daily, hourly experience to those who are working under the guidance of Truth. The Word is ever unfolding to bless. As if to prepare thought for the true wonders of the Word, even words have a way of unfolding.

Does anyone think that when Jesus said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of heaven," he meant to exclude the grown people? Obviously not. He knew, and we are learning to know, that there are little children in all states and stages of unfoldment. Those like unto little children are of the kingdom of heaven. How shall we find them? We have not far to go in our search, for the meaning of the word "little" begins to unfold to us.

If we, as Christian Scientists, see not the little one in our own consciousness, it is time to stop and question ourselves. The little one is humble. Let each ask himself, Do I find humility in myself? The little one is dependent on Father-Mother God. Again, Am I conscious of this sweet dependence? Self-righteousness plays all kinds of tricks to hide from us the little one in our own consciousness and in that of others. In "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 130) Mrs. Eddy writes, "The greatest sin that one can commit against himself is to wrong one of God's 'little ones.'" How is this too often done? By a depreciation or an undervaluing of one's true self; by a false estimate of man; by not appreciating the right motive; by failing to recognize the proportion of our acts which are right.

It is quite possible to be mesmerized into the error of thinking that there are no indications of progress if a problem or difficulty seems long in the solution. Here and now is the time to search diligently for the little one. Perhaps one is confronted with a case of illness that seems slow in yielding to the action of Love. Let him be careful that he does not overlook the little one, which may appear in a more loving attitude, in a trifle more of cheer, in greater patience and appreciation; or the so-called invalid may be more interested than formerly in other people, in some slight occupation.

Time may seem to claim importance as a factor when one is being healed of a false appetite. Those watching may be eager for the healing in its completeness. Do they recognize the striving? Do they show understanding and appreciation when an attempt, however much of a failure it may seem to be, is made to do better? It is the little one again. Take care of it. How well was the little one guarded from Herod! Mrs. Eddy nurtured, nourished, and guarded the Christ-child as it came to her. When it grew stronger she gave her understanding of it to the world. Still she guarded it, and as its truth dawns on individual consciousness, we, too, have our duty in this direction, knowing the great need of protecting still this little one.

"Peace, be still"

R. C. MC CLAY

THE availability of the presence and power of God as understood through the teachings of Christian Science has been experienced many times by the writer, and when earnestly and honestly relied upon has never failed of proof. On one occasion when it became necessary to return home from one of the island resorts off the coast of California, a distance of some twenty-five miles of open sea had to be crossed. Our boat was an open launch thirty feet long and five-foot beam. Everything was made ready the night before, and at seven the next morning we shoved off. The party consisted of my wife, our small daughter, and myself. As soon as we were out in the open sea we encountered a heavy wind, with resultant rough water. We ran along slowly for a while, but we finally decided to turn back and lay over another day for smoother weather.

Early the next morning we again started, and when we reached the open sea the same conditions presented themselves. We reluctantly turned back again. As there was a lecture on Christian Science to be given on the mainland that evening and we were anxious to hear it, we decided to face the wind and waves once more and trust in God to carry us across. On our course again it was hard beating against the "chop." The waves seemed higher, and for a while it seemed impossible to go on. At this moment my wife shouted from the stern that she would read the Lesson-Sermon, as we always take the Bible, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," and the Quarterly with us, while I did my best at the helm. She began to read, and now and then I could hear a word—such words as it seemed I never had heard before, although I had read them many times. As soon as we had taken our stand with God, fear subsided, and the assurance of a power not our own started us to work. Never a thought of turning back came, for, as Mrs. Eddy says on page 67 of Science and Health, "when the ocean is stirred by a storm, then the clouds lower, the wind shrieks through the tightened shrouds, and the waves lift themselves into mountains. We ask the helmsman: 'Do you know your course? Can you steer safely amid the storm?' He answers bravely, but even the dauntless seaman is not sure of his safety; nautical science is not equal to the Science of Mind. Yet, acting up to his highest understanding, firm at the post of duty, the mariner works on and awaits the issue."

We were now in mid-channel, about fifteen miles from the mainland. All at once I scanned the horizon, having been too interested in hearing a word of the Lesson now and then and in watching the compass to do so before. I saw that the wind was slackening and there were not so many whitecaps. We had not gone a mile farther before the water became smooth as glass. We could hardly believe our eyes, at the smoothness and calm that prevailed. Needless to say we attended the lecture.

To face the seeming waves of mortal belief and steer a true course toward the golden shore of spiritual understanding where divine Love reigns supreme, we must be willing to follow God's word as it silently and meekly appears to those who trust Him. Then the joy of working out our salvation is at hand, because each experience brings progress and confidence. To stay at the false mental resort of supposed material pleasure and try to gratify the desire of the senses is not struggling to lift our heads above the drowning waves of error. It is only when our eyes are opened to the nothingness of this fleeting dream that we have the moral courage to start on the true course, and find true what Mrs. Eddy says on page 254 of Science and Health, "If you launch your bark upon the ever-agitated but healthful waters of truth, you will encounter storms." Steering by the compass of God's ever present directing, with the charts, the Bible and Science and Health, before you, the winds of error may blow and lash the waters white, but the "Peace, be still" of infinite Mind silences forever the seeming tempest of evil.

Relief

FREDERICK R. RHODES

A LARGER sense of what rightly constitutes the true idea of relief has been gradually but surely unfolded to humanity through the activities of the Christian Science War Relief rooms, through which splendid work was accomplished all over the United States of America, France, and the United Kingdom. Many are the expressions of deep gratitude not only from those who were at the head of the various departments of the service, but especially from the women and men who found these true resting places a real help in their various needs. Although good work was done through various agencies in providing for the material comfort of those wearing the uniform of the Allies, a great opportunity certainly remained for the Christian Science movement to supply that which would minister to the higher needs of the soldiers.

It has been the privilege of the writer to see a great deal of work done through The Mother Church War Relief fund, and also through the Camp Welfare activities, and it is extremely gratifying to watch the splendid results obtained through the spiritual understanding which lies back of these various activities. If we do our best to think in accord with right, then our Father-Mother God, who is always working with us, will see that this best is blessed and will give the increase. This is the direct result of right desire, and conscious, constant right desire is prayer without ceasing. This consistent and persistent effort to think rightly, has therefore the omnipotent power of omnipresent Truth behind it and must successfully overcome all the many and varied attacks which mortal mind opposition can claim to launch against it. This conscious desire to think in harmony with divine Love is the procurer of the only true relief from any discordant human condition. Spiritual thinking, being man's conscious ability to reflect God, is in reality his true prerogative, and when once he becomes conscious of this fact, he is lifted above the power of any discordant conditions to interfere with his constant sense of harmony; in other words, he enters into at-one-ment with true relief.

The one who is determined to gain a genuine victory over the world and its lying suggestions of poverty, sin, sickness, and the like, soon realizes that such a victory can be gained only by meeting the erroneous beliefs of the carnal mind or physical senses, and overcoming them through exact knowledge of the truth. As our Leader says (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 118), "The warfare with one's self is grand." Therefore one sees that every adverse circumstance, of whatever name or nature, can be overcome through the knowledge of Truth, and thus used as a stepping-stone to a higher recognition of the omnipotence of God, in whom we have placed our trust. We, like Paul, can then take pleasure in overcoming the adverse conditions which come up to be met. The spiritual atmosphere of our Christian Science War Relief rooms proved the power of right thought to draw those desiring the enduring and true, and also to show those who come how to gain such a state of consciousness. This is clearly indicated by the fact that it was not necessary to placard the walls with a number of "Don'ts," since it was assuredly the pure atmosphere of truth and purity which did the work.

A sailor walked into the rooms one day smoking a pipe. Obviously noticing the cleanly appearance of the place, he looked round to see if there was not a notice forbidding smoking, but not seeing anything of the kind, continued to smoke. Very soon he gave another glance round, and saw the other boys had removed their hats, so he removed his; then he walked across to the fireplace, knocked the tobacco from his pipe, and sat writing for over an hour, leaving with the remark to the welfare worker that "it would be a pity to spoil such a handsome place."

One constantly heard expressions of surprise concerning the good behavior which was consistently maintained in our Welfare rooms, notwithstanding the apparent simplicity of the methods employed; yet it is this very condition of thought, which, although childlike in its simplicity, appeals with irresistible power to the true consciousness of all those who feel its beneficent influence. Thus the true nature of those using our rooms was appealed to, and they found themselves unconsciously yielding themselves servants to obey this higher model rather than the human propensity to mimic or to accept and follow unconscious suggestion, which usually determines the activities of those using public assembly rooms.

Probably one of the greatest joys a human being experiences is the realization that he is manifesting a higher sense of true being, or real manhood, and when he finds a resting place in which he consciously feels this true reflection of his creator being unfolded, he is always only too ready to take full advantage of that for which he has often felt a great need. Thus has our beloved Leader's divine message to humanity been able to offer to those in need the true, lasting, and scientific understanding of welfare or harmony, and mankind in ever increasing numbers are learning with heartfelt gratitude to God, to accept His "unspeakable gift."

Uprooting Error

ELIZABETH H. MURPHY

ON page 188 of the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," Mrs. Eddy has written, "Sin and the fear of disease must be uprooted and cast out." The writer learned a helpful lesson one day while overseeing the uprooting of an elm tree. Two strong men dug long and faithfully around the roots that held the tree firm in the soil. Each root was immediately cut off as soon as the dirt was cleared away from it, leaving the tree less secure in the ground. There were, however, many roots to be cut, making it a long and tedious job. It was interesting to note that it was not until all of the roots had been severed down to the taproot, the very largest and most important root of a tree, that the workmen were able to budge the tree or feel that it was loosening from its place. After digging much deeper directly underneath the tree the large taproot was eventually found and cut off, and this left the tree entirely uprooted.

How many times the student of Christian Science feels that his problem is a long and tedious one, and fails to see that each root of error he cuts off is a great step toward the complete uprooting of every belief connected with his problem. As to the onlooker the tree appeared firm and unshaken in its place until the very last and deepest root was struck, so our human problems may seem slow in being solved, and the error appear real, until every belief connected with them is uncovered and severed. As Mrs. Eddy says in Science and Health (p. 37), "Consciousness of right-doing brings its own reward; but not amid the smoke of battle is merit seen and appreciated by lookers-on."

Alone, Yet Not Alone

CASSIUS M. LOOMIS

HAVE friends forsaken thee? and do thy days
Drag wearily along? Think not
That Love thy yearnings hath forgot.
Look up to God and voice to Him thy praise;
Scorn not thy humble lot.

Contentment shall be thine the very day
When thou hast learned to seek Truth's own,
And, into broader freedom thrown,
Canst tread with joy the perfect way
Alone, yet not alone.

A mighty Presence, greater far than all
That human kinship can supply,
Surrounds thee even now. Then why
Look down? However dark the way,
Heed not the baneful lie;

For he who trod Judea's hills looked up
To God and prayed, with tongue unknown
To those whose hearts had turned to stone.
Canst thou not share with him the needful cup
Alone, yet not alone?

Selected Articles

["Speaking with Authority"—The Christian Science Monitor, Boston, U. S. A., April 26, 1919]

Man's authority is derived from God, from Principle, and from no other or lesser quarter. The authority of the individual is the result of his understanding of Principle, of his living in accordance with Principle, and of his demonstration of Principle. Pilate discovered that when he boasted to Christ Jesus of his authority, and recognized its limitations in the roar of the despised rabble outside his doors, "Thou art not Cæsar's friend." Cæsar himself realized how little it all meant when he hid himself from his assassins, in the curtains of his window. The authority of Cæsar, the authority of Pilate, then, was nothing but the simulated authority of the human mind, the counterfeit of the only true authority, which is divine. Neither Cæsar nor Pilate had ever dreamed of the authority which said to the blind man, See, and to the deaf man, Hear, which ordered the storm to cease and the dead to come forth from the tomb.

Cæsar and Pilate were of the earth earthy, as has been every Cæsar from Augustus to Napoleon, and every Pilate from Pontius to Warren Hastings. True authority comes from unknowing every thing which has ever been most real to Cæsar and his pro-consuls. It is born, in the human consciousness, in repudiating matter for Spirit, and deserting the footsteps of Cæsar for the footsteps of the Christ, as is made absolutely clear by Mrs. Eddy, in a well-known passage on page 14 of Science and Health: "Entirely separate from the belief and dream of material living, is the Life divine, revealing spiritual understanding and the consciousness of man's dominion over the whole earth. This understanding casts out error and heals the sick, and with it you can speak 'as one having authority.'"

To understand the full significance of this it must be remembered that the common people who had followed Christ Jesus "from Galilee, and from Decapolis, and from Jerusalem, and from Judæa, and from beyond Jordan," brought with them their sick, all who "were taken with divers diseases and torments, and those which were possessed with devils, and those which were lunatick, and those that had the palsy." All these Jesus healed. And it was because he demonstrated the truth of his teaching through his healing, that the people recognized the power of his doctrine, and declared that "he taught them as one having authority, and not as the scribes."

The scribes were but a subdivision of the Jewish ecclesiastical hierarchy, a hierarchy which relied, after the manner of Cæsar and the Pontifex Maximus, on ritual, creeds, and denunciation, to establish and to maintain their authority. They appealed to matter, where Jesus trod it under foot, and found their argument in the services of the jailer and the executioner, where Jesus found his in healing the sick and raising the dead. Such a thing as the new gospel was unknown, almost incomprehensible, to the fishermen and plowmen, accustomed to run from the whips of the Roman centurions or to bow to the decisions of the Jewish doctors of the law. And so it was that these fishermen, finding the elements themselves subservient to the commands of this man who wore neither the scarlet tunic of the centurion nor the phylacteries of the Pharisees, asked one another in astonishment, "What manner of man is this! for he commandeth even the winds and water, and they obey him."

What manner of man was Jesus the Christ? The disciples should have been better able to answer the question themselves than any other human beings. They appear, however, never actually to have grasped the meaning of Christ Jesus until after the resurrection, and then one, and one only of them, John, the beloved disciple, sufficiently to himself meet and master death. It took the resurrection, apparently, to impress upon these men, who had seen the sick healed and the dead raised, the multitudes fed and the storm calmed, the utter unreality of matter. Yet without a scientific understanding of this the mighty works of Jesus can never be repeated with any compelling influence. But the reason of the human failure to accept and rise to the grandeur of the teaching of Christ Jesus, Mrs. Eddy makes perfectly clear on page 345 of Science and Health: "This thought of human, material nothingness, which Science inculcates, enrages the carnal mind and is the main cause of the carnal mind's antagonism." The rich young man "went away sorrowful: for he had great possessions."

It is just those great material possessions, though they may not necessarily be numbered in gold or silver, in houses or cattle, which obliterate the footsteps of the Christ under men's very eyes. Mankind is willing enough to surrender its pains and its sorrows, but its sensual pleasures are very dear to it. It will make every excuse for them, and even argue that they are a positive necessity to it. Many of them seem harmless, but it is doubtful if any concession to matter can ever be entirely free from harm. Some particular surrender may be altogether beyond the understanding of the individual, and it is no man's business to judge another lest he be judged himself. None the less the scientific fact remains that the rich young man went away sorrowing because he was not willing to sell all that he had and give to the poor.

What has a man to sell, to part with? Plenty of things often much more difficult to give up than the purple and fine linen, and the sumptuous living which held Dives as in a vise,—envy, hatred, malice, and all uncharitableness. Many a man who thanks God that he is not as the common thief, will steal his neighbor's character or opportunity without blenching. The thief risks his liberty. The slanderer risks, as he thinks, nothing; but in reality he risks his life. "What shall it profit a man," Jesus demanded, "if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" Mrs. Eddy put the same warning, even more forcibly, on page 426 of Science and Health: "If the belief in death were obliterated, and the understanding obtained that there is no death, this would be a 'tree of life,' known by its fruits. Man should renew his energies and endeavors, and see the folly of hypocrisy, while also learning the necessity of working out his own salvation."

[Aaron E. Brandt in Warren (Pa.) Chronicle]

Thousands of Christian Scientists will unhesitatingly say that all kinds of sickness and sin have been overcome by an understanding of the absolute fact that God, the only creator, never made them, and that therefore they can have no more reality or power than erroneous belief gives them. It is also true that the lives of many people have been prolonged thereby.

Why should a clergyman, of all persons, find fault with those who have found a better way of obtaining a present salvation from such ills? Evidently our critic deems it against the rules, as it was in Jesus' time, for individuals unauthorized by ecclesiasticism to do spiritual healing more successfully than the ecclesiastics themselves. Our critic has yet to learn that in these days it is merit that will count with the people rather than worn-out dogmas. The answer given by some one to the question why Christian Scientists are happier than others is pertinent here: "Because they have found what others are seeking."

Again the critic finds fruitless fault with Mrs. Eddy's teaching to the effect that the real man of God's creating cannot depart from holiness and is incapable of sin, sickness, or death. But we need only turn to the first epistle of John to confirm her position: "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him: and he cannot sin, because he is born of God." Being without sin he is, therefore, not subject to sickness or death, as Jesus proved. Before criticizing Mrs. Eddy one should at least make a reasonable attempt to understand her. "Anybody," she writes on page 345 of Science and Health, "who is able to perceive the incongruity between God's idea and poor humanity, ought to be able to discern the distinction (made by Christian Science) between God's man, made in His image, and the sinning race of Adam."

[Willis D. McKinstry in The Blue Rapids (Kan.) Times]

It is just as impossible for our clerical critic to render invalid the teachings of Christian Science through his erroneous statements and arguments based upon popular Christianity, as it is for a mariner to keep his vessel in a direct course without a rudder. Spiritual truths are not capable of an explanation based upon materiality or human opinions. Christian Science deals with the Scriptures from a spiritual basis and reveals God's means and methods of helping humanity as demonstrated by His Son, Christ Jesus, who declared, "It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing." If this statement of the Nazarene is accepted as true, why does our critic make such ado about matter? Why should he feel disturbed because of what Christian Science teaches about the unreality of matter?

To declare for the reality and substantiality of matter is to oppose the teachings of our colleges and universities of to-day. Let us read what some of the world's eminent scholars and instructors have to say upon the subject of matter. Mr. Huxley says, "After all what do we know of this terrible matter except as the name of the unknown hypothetical cause of states of our consciousness." Such eminent natural scientists as Lord Kelvin and Sir William Crooks, according to newspaper reports, have concluded that atoms in their last analysis are forces, a conclusion which shows a tendency toward mental, rather than material causation. Grant Allen says, "The charges of materialism could only be brought against such a man by those abject materialists who have never had a glimpse of the profounder fact that the universe, as known to us, consists wholly of mind, and that matter is a doubtful and uncertain inference of the human intelligence." Professor Fiske expresses his opinion thus: "Apart from consciousness there are no such things as color, form, position, or hardness and there is no such thing as matter."

Christian Science does not teach that matter and material things do not exist as human phenomena, but it does demonstrate that the appearance to which the senses testify is not a creation of God, Spirit. However, this human sense or appearance of a natural universe and a matter man does not destroy the spiritual fact of existence, and Christian Science awakens mankind to understand and prove his divine sonship, existing in a spiritual universe governed and controlled by God, infinite Love. "Therefore, brethren, we are debtors, not to the flesh, to live after the flesh. . . . For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God."

Our critic takes exception to the use of the term Principle as a synonym for God, as used in Christian Science.

Digitized by Google

Principle is primary, it is that from which something proceeds or emanates. The Bible teaches that God is first, that He is cause, origin, or basis of all real existence, that it is He who created the universe and all it contains. Then is it not a logical conclusion that God being first of all and having made all that was made, must be the Principle of it? God is Love, therefore the cause, origin, or Principle of the universe, including man, must be Love. Christian Science defines God not only as Principle or Love, but as infinite Mind, Spirit, Soul, Truth, Life; and only as we recognize God in this infinite way, do we understand or know Him as Supreme Being, the one and only creator.

Our critic quotes from the first chapter of Genesis the true record of creation. Then he endeavors to have others believe that Christian Science treats this creation purely as delusion, which is wholly untrue, for upon this record of creation, and the First Commandment, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me," rests the truth of scientific being as taught and demonstrated by Christian Science. This Scriptural record sets forth the spiritual facts of existence, including man created in the image and likeness of God, yes, male and female. No element of materiality or matter enters into it; it manifests the substance of Spirit, God. When referring to man, our friend ignores this first record of spiritual creation by taking up the second account of creation which states that the "Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground." Right here is the parting of the way from the perfection of spiritual being or existence as created by God, divine Mind; it is the entrance of the finite, human, or perverted sense of the carnal or mortal mind's creation, which Paul declared was "enmity against God." With the erroneous belief of a matter man, comes all the discord of human living,—sin, disease, hatred, dishonesty, selfishness, envy, jealousy, sensuality, and death.

[Ernest C. Moses in Decatur (Ill.) Herald]

My attention is called to the report of a sermon in which the speaker commented on physical and mental reconstruction. He said: "Most modern nervous diseases are the result of self-attention. Get the mind on something else and the symptoms disappear; this simple fact is the fundamental of Christian Science." We would not disagree with the clergyman's first proposition, and are grateful for the recognition of the fact of mental causation, which Christian Science teaches. I would request, however, that you permit me to make a correction of the gentleman's statement as to the fundamental basis of Christian Science. It is not the change of the human or mortal mind from thinking disease to thinking of some other phase of this mind, for that would be sheer will power, or self-mesmerism.

The basis for Christian Science is given in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," on pages 138 and 192, where, in referring to an experience in apostolic times, Mrs. Eddy states that "divine Life, Truth, and Love, and not a human personality, was the healer of the sick, and a rock, a firm foundation in the realm of harmony. . . . The supremacy of Spirit was the foundation on which Jesus built;" and that "we walk in the footsteps of Truth and Love by following the example of our Master in the understanding of divine metaphysics. Christianity is the basis of true healing." From these authoritative statements by the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, it is indeed clear that nothing in the human mind, either in its thinking through declaration or diversion, can form a basis for true Christian healing; but that the basis is the spiritual understanding of God on which Christ Jesus founded Christianity. The results of the practice of this Science of Christianity prove this to be true. We are in hearty accord with the statement wherein the clergyman says that "the loving trust in God and a life of self-forgetful service," constitute "moral reconstruction."

Funds of The Mother Church

"The inclosed check for three dollars is sent to The Christian Science Benevolent Association in grateful recognition of a recent demonstration over a claim of limitation, this being a small part of a loving, generous gift wholly unexpected, but which came only after demonstrating supply and stepping out ready to stand on God's promise, which Christian Science has shown me how to do. The Christian Science Benevolent Association has interested me much since its inception, and I have longed many times to be able to send something, realizing the great good it can and will do. I wish this might be a larger amount but am glad to be able to send even this mite."

"Please find inclosed money order for three dollars, one for my church dues, one for the Real Estate fund, and one for The Christian Science Benevolent Association fund. I am more than ever thankful this year for Christian Science. My boy has been so wonderfully protected while in France; it was Christian Science that brought him back to me safely."

"Inclosed is another small donation which I am sending with so much love and gratitude to The Christian Science Benevolent Association fund. From time to time I send on what I can spare at the moment, rather than wait until I could send a larger amount, thinking that it is better to keep something continually flowing into the treasury for this splendid work for suffering humanity, than for larger sums to come at intervals. It is always a pleasure and privilege to give toward The Mother Church activities, and I shall avail myself of the great blessing of giving to them as often as I can. With loving cooperation in this benevolent work, I am . . ."

"Please accept the inclosed ten dollars as a contribution to the Real Estate fund. I have just returned from one year's service in France and feel very grateful for the protection that was manifested on many occasions. I have received everything that I now hold dear through the teachings of our dear Leader, Mary Baker Eddy."

"Inclosed herewith please find a check for five dollars to be applied as follows: two dollars to pay my per capita tax to The Mother Church and three dollars to the Real Estate fund and The Christian Science Benevolent Association fund. Though this contribution to the above mentioned funds is small, it carries with it my heartfelt gratitude that I am enabled, through the ministrations of divine Love, to do even this little."

"I am inclosing a check for fifty-one dollars, one dollar for the per capita tax and the remainder to be divided between the Real Estate fund and The Christian Science Benevolent Association fund. I am sending this in deep gratitude for the many blessings that have come to me and are coming to me daily through Christian Science, this wonderful truth that was given to the world by our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy."

Divine Good Will

In some of the doctrinal statements made in past days regarding God's dealing with men, it used to be given out that some men are to suffer disadvantage throughout all eternity, and this "according to the good pleasure of his will." It is difficult for the people under such instruction not to think of God's will as arbitrary and capricious; whereas if one speaks of God as acting according to the benevolence of His will, there comes a glow of answering love to God and a sense of safety. Human wills are many and urge human action into diverse ways. Divine will is one and good; hence its government leads only into the way of good.

It should be easy to accept the divine will and obey it, but mortals do not find it so. Men are troubled by their wantings and their vauntings, by secret covetings and clamorous desires for they know not what; hence the command of the Decalogue, "Thou shalt not covet . . . any thing that is thy neighbour's." The basis of anarchy and frequently of revolution is desire for the possessions of the neighbor. Indeed the proclamations of some agitators might be: We covet all that is our neighbor's. It is as if they said of the neighbor: We wish to destroy his church, his government, and his peace of mind, to destroy the very law and order under which he is wont to live his life and accomplish usefulness and service. But revolution does not cease once it has begun. The agitator who overthrew the erstwhile ruler finds his own seat of power overthrown, and then to him is done in turn just what he did to others. The confusions of the world have been due to mortal minds trying to work out the good pleasure of their wills. Mrs. Eddy says of this in "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 208): "Mortals have only to submit to the law of God, come into sympathy with it, and to let His will be done. This unbroken motion of the law of divine Love gives, to the weary and heavy-laden, rest. But who is willing to do His will or to let it be done? Mortals obey their own wills, and so disobey the divine order."

Wherever there has been the peace of order, wherever there is a country truly prosperous, there will be found men who regard honor and truth and righteousness, because they have some sense of the government of Principle and so obey the benevolence of the divine purpose. Does it involve sacrifice to be obedient? Men seem to think so. A woman was once asked: How did you know when a child if a thing was wrong? and her quick reply was: Because I wanted to do it. The problem, then, is to change the desire within so that in the achievement which is made in accordance with the right desire, there may be a joy adequate for a full satisfaction. Mrs. Eddy speaks of the satisfactory form of resurrection when the seeker after God reaches the point of knowing and doing the divine will. Of this she says (Miscellany, p. 258): "To the woman at the sepulchre, bowed in strong affection's anguish, one word, 'Mary,' broke the gloom with Christ's all-conquering love. Then came her resurrection and task of glory, to know and to do God's will,—in the words of St. Paul: 'Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God.'"

Men have spoken of the war as being world-wide, but now there appears to be a condition of confusion also world-wide. The clamor of those who have remedies to offer is added to the outcries of those who suffer. Many of the remedies offered would cheat the patient of the healing needed. What can either lower prices or higher wages do to remedy the pain within the heart over the golden rule unkept? Ravaged countrysides or pillaged warehouses bring no healing for the covetous desire which burns insatiably within. Evil passions are not satiated by that which they destroy; but these passions, as fire, consume the cherisher of evil desire until purified desire becomes his prayer, and by prayer he aspires for deliverance from his self-created hell and longs for the heaven of obedience to God. Then his desire may be expressed in the words of the psalmist: "I will hear what God the Lord will speak: for he will speak peace unto his people, and to his saints: but let them not turn again to folly. Surely his salvation is nigh them that fear him; that glory may dwell in our land. . . . Yea, the Lord shall give that which is good; and our land shall yield her increase. Righteousness shall go before him; and shall set us in the way of his steps."

The printed records of the false beliefs and unkind acts of mortals attempt to make these things history; but history is being written by the noble and the true of every land, who in self-abnegation are working for the humanities. Silently but irresistibly is the will of God prevailing. It is uniting the hearts of the upright and blessing their obedience to the best they know. It comforts the honest man struggling against unfair dealing. It strengthens the loving woman trying to quiet the violent ill-will of others. It blesses with heavenly grace those who as children of God in all lands are laboring to be peacemakers. Mrs. Eddy, in her poem "Satisfied" (Poems, p. 79), most beautifully sets forth assurance and promise:—

Love looseth thee, and lifteth me,
Ayont hate's thrall:
There Life is light, and wisdom might,
And God is All.

The centuries break, the earth-bound wake,
God's glorified!
Who doth His will—His likeness still—
Is satisfied.

William P. McKenzie.

Obedience

From cover to cover the Bible proclaims one necessity. "Hear my voice and obey it," is God's perpetual demand of the children of men. Never has the world been without such constant admonition. Never has it been left in ignorance as to what the command involves. At one time it has been stated with all the authority of Deity, "Walk before me, and be thou perfect." At another with the tenderness of infinite Love it has declared, "I have loved thee with an everlasting love: therefore with lovingkindness have I drawn thee." Again the demand for obedience to infinite good has been presented in the "Thou shalt nots" of the Mosaic Decalogue; and yet again there has been the care of the loving Father pointing out the dangers which must result from disobedience. Never has it been other than the divine voice declaring the omnipresence, omnipotence, omniscience of the one infinite God, the All-good, always caring perfectly for His creation.

To obey God is a harmony-producing activity. Mrs. Eddy tells us (Science and Health, p. 183): "Divine Mind rightly demands man's entire obedience, affection, and strength. No reservation is made for any lesser loyalty. Obedience to Truth gives man power and strength. Submission to error superinduces loss of power." Obedience to God is the law of freedom. Law seems prohibitive only to the disobedient. The obedient are never conscious of any restraint from law. Law is protective to them and is welcomed as a beneficent provision. It is a strong tower of defense where one may hide from the assaults of the enemy.

But the question has always been, What constitutes the voice of God? How can one know when God is speaking? Christian Science answers this with wonderful clearness. Starting as it does with the truth that God is infinite Mind, it immediately deduces the conclusion that man must know God through His thoughts. In Science and Health (p. 462) we find: "Anatomy, when conceived of spiritually, is mental self-knowledge, and consists in the dissection of thoughts to discover their quality, quantity, and origin. Are thoughts divine or human? That is the important question." And again, on page 581, we have the definition of Angels: "God's thoughts passing to man; spiritual intuitions, pure and perfect; the inspiration of goodness, purity, and immortality, counteracting all evil, sensuality, and mortality."

Christian Science teaches that humanity's necessity is to watch for the thoughts of God. It must also live in obedience to them, yield to their government, cling to them, reflect them. One obstacle in the path of the Christian Scientist who starts out to conform his life to this standard is the claim that good thoughts belong to human intellectuality. Even though one may believe he is thinking good thoughts, if he in any way considers them as having originated in a human mind, to his consciousness he immediately divorces them from the power of God. To believe in them as human in origin, is to find them but cold, valueless counterfeits.

Then one must constantly give God, divine Mind, all the glory for every least thought of good. Thus, he will continually increase his sense of unity with God, which means an ability to obey and also to reflect the thoughts of good. He will come so to understand their power, since they are God manifest, that the mighty works which Jesus did will follow. These works Jesus insisted were the only proof of man's obedience to God and His Christ. Always to watch for the thoughts of God is to be mentally alert and to allow no thought to pass the door of one's consciousness without the challenge: Is it divine? To the beginner this may seem difficult. His thoughts have been allowed for so long to run riot without let or hindrance that when he is called upon to be a sentinel for God, he discovers what great earnestness of purpose, what great love of good is demanded. A faithful beginning, however, prophesies steady progress. With progress there comes the quicker ability to divide and the greater power to reject; and God never asks more than one is able to perform.

Then there is ever the wonderful goal ahead! The goal of opportunity to reflect all the power of God's thoughts. Christian Science, in its insistence that God is all good, shows from the outset that everything is to be gained and nothing lost through obedience to God. It is foolish to imagine that evil could come out of good, that from obedience to good aught but good could come. To be sure, a mistaken sense as to what constitutes good has to be corrected in every mortal's concept of things. But with the light of Christian Science there is ever the assurance that this can be accomplished and that infinite Love includes all that is desirable, and is certainly sufficient to satisfy every one. Then let us hasten to lift up our sense of obedience to the joyful perception that to obey our perfect God each day more perfectly must inevitably result in the blissful blessing of ultimate perfection.

ELLA W. HOAG.

The Christian Science Benevolent Association

In a letter written in 1905, and published in the Christian Science Sentinel of October 7, 1916, Mrs. Eddy states in speaking of the establishment of a Sanatorium: "Our cause demands a wider circle of means for the ends of philanthropy and charity, and better qualifications for practical purposes." Since the announcement that definite steps had been taken toward supplying this demand, The Christian Science Board of Directors, in whose charge Mrs. Eddy placed this work, as stated in another letter published in the same article, have endeavored to bring the project to fulfillment in as substantial and prompt a manner as wisdom and economy would permit.

When it was stated in the Christian Science Sentinel of December 2, 1916, that it would cost "to erect and equip the buildings and provide a maintenance fund for the first institution of The Christian Science Benevolent Association, not less than $600,000.00," it was proposed to erect immediately but one large building, and to place this on the most convenient site on the property; but subsequently it appeared clear that while such a proposition could be worked out satisfactorily it would prove in the future to be the part of wisdom and economy to begin on a comprehensive plan for a thorough development of all the property. The work was begun when building operations were at a standstill because of the war but it has proceeded without interruption, and many beautiful instances showing divine Love as the source of our supply could be related.

The plan which we are now following will eventually include eight large dormitories, an administration building, and three separate smaller buildings containing a garage, power house, laundry, electric lighting plant, and heating plant. The administration building and two of the dormitories are now nearing completion, as are also the garage, power house, laundry, electric lighting plant, and heating plant. These have been so constructed as to constitute a working center for the present buildings and those that will be established in the future. Besides this the grounds have been improved with a view to the future needs of the group of buildings, although the work involved a present expenditure of a large amount of money.

The furnishings are now being installed and it is expected that the buildings will be ready for occupancy not later than November 1, 1919. It is clear that the extra expenditures will prove wise and economical, but because of them and the increased costs for all material and labor, the completion and equipment of the first unit will call for a total expenditure of over $900,000.00, and of this amount $675,964.13 has been received. Besides this there should be a substantial maintenance fund on hand to care for current supplies and running expenses.

The opportunity is now presented to the field to contribute further in establishing this new channel of usefulness.

All contributions should be sent to Edward L. Ripley, Treasurer of The Christian Science Benevolent Association, 236 Huntington Avenue, Back Bay, Boston, Massachusetts.

MISSOURI.—On July 6 there was delivered at the Missouri State Penitentiary, in Jefferson City, a lecture on Christian Science by Dr. John M. Tutt. The committee which had this in charge represents the five Christian Science churches in Kansas City, the church in Independence, and the Mt. Washington society, these places all being in Jackson County. Through its efforts Christian Science services have been held in the State Penitentiary, the different penal institutions, and the County Home in Jackson County. The Christian Science churches and societies throughout the state support the services held at Jefferson City. About thirteen hundred inmates attended this lecture. The closest attention was paid and great interest displayed. Earnest expressions of gratitude were received from those permitted to talk.

Admission to Membership in The Mother Church

The next admission of candidates will take place on November 7, 1919, as provided in Article XIII, Section 2, of the By-laws of The Mother Church. Application blanks may be obtained by addressing the Clerk of The Mother Church, and should be returned to him on or before Friday, October 24, 1919. Consideration of any applications received after that date will be deferred until the June 4, 1920, admission.

An application sent to the Clerk does not constitute the applicant a member. Notice of election will be sent to those who are admitted to membership.

Those who have made application for membership prior to May 30, 1919, and have not received notice of election, may communicate with the Clerk if they so desire, and are especially requested to do so before sending in a second application.

CHARLES E. JARVIS, Clerk,

The Lectures

BURLINGTON, VT. (Society).—William D. Kilpatrick, lecturer; introduced by Franklin H. Dewart, who said in part:—

It may be worth while briefly to tell how Christian Science first penetrated the armor in which I was incased not so very long ago. I had boarded the train one morning, in the course of business, and was soon delighted to observe opposite me a father, mother, little son, and daughter, all radiating a beautiful, harmonious spirit which is always attractive. Not one alone, but all, beamed with unconcealed yet unobtrusive peace, joy, and health, so much so that in a wearisome journey of some length not a trace of aught discordant appeared. After settling down comfortably, the parents, with a delightful unity of spirit, became so absorbed in a book that I could not feel satisfied until I had, by furtive glances, made out the name. And then I was less satisfied than before, and roughly repulsed, on seeing that it was "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. The scene kept recurring to thought at intervals, and led to the serious question, Is it possible that there is truth in this book at which I have so often scoffed? But I had to admit in fairness that if these people, having seen in it what I had not, were thereby made happy, I must have been hasty or superficial in judgment.

NEW HAVEN, CONN. (First Church).—Paul Stark Seeley, lecturer; introduced by Howard M. Hopkins, who said in part:—

Christian Science does heal. The truth of this statement can be proved by each and every one who is willing to lay aside prejudice and look into it with an open mind. Christian Scientists all over the world are proving each day that they have the same Principle, the same Christ, Truth, which was demonstrated by the Master over nineteen hundred years ago. They are preaching the gospel, healing the sick, and casting out evils; for the promise reads, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."

DECORAH, IOWA (Society).—John C. Lathrop, lecturer; introduced by Harry C. Goddard, who said in part:—

The message of Christian Science brings light and peace, abiding and permanent, to those who hear it. To those who seem to be behind the prison door of suffering and disease, of poverty and sin, the word of Truth comes with the joyous statement that there is an open door for each and every one, as stated by the Revelator, "Behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it." Christian Science is that open door, through which all may enter.

LYNN, MASS. (First Church).—The Rev. Andrew J. Graham, lecturer; introduced by Joseph C. Lewis, who said in part:—

Christian Science is distinctively a religion of right thinking. If each person in the world were thinking right at this moment and should continue to do so, there would be no wrongdoing, as action must be preceded by thought. Christian Science therefore is a religion of doing, a religion which proves its teaching by its works.

OTTAWA, ILL. (First Church).—Miss Mary G. Ewing, lecturer; introduced by Miss Isabella Sanders, who said in part:—

The world, war-weary after the suffering and destruction of the past four years, and looking forward to the complex problems of reconstruction, realizes at length to some degree that this recent fiery ordeal would have been averted, had mankind obeyed this simple command given them by Jesus of Nazareth twenty centuries ago: "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself;" and that the hope of a permanent future peace, through the establishment of a League of Nations bound by the bond of universal brotherhood, can come only by the practical application of Christianity.

This has been called a pragmatic age. Each new theory presented, in every line of human activity, has been challenged by the question, Will it work? Christian Science stands ready to be judged by its results, since "by their fruits, ye shall know them." It demonstrates the efficacy of the word of God in producing and maintaining harmony, health, and happiness, thus fulfilling the whole law, healing the sick as well as preaching the gospel, and so meeting the needs of the world.

MAMARONECK, N. Y. (First Church).—John Randall Dunn, lecturer; introduced by Walter Lockwood Stevens, who said in part:—

The religion of Jesus of Nazareth was a living, pulsating truth that not only spread the gospel but healed the sick. His commands that we should do likewise have come down to this age, and the recognition of the potency of these commands is the distinguishing difference between the religion of Christian Science and that of other churches. By restoring to Christianity its lost element of Christian healing, Christian Science is holding up to the view of the world the lessons Jesus taught of works rather than words. Christian Science is demonstrable; it proves its words by its works. A lecture on this subject is given to make known that its teachings are not some strange, mysterious thing, but the simple teaching of Christ Jesus applied to human needs.

FRESNO, CALIF. (First Church).—William W. Porter, lecturer; introduced by Berton Einstein, who said in part:—

At this time the world is facing many problems of social, economic, and national readjustment. So far-reaching are these questions that they affect each and every one of us. On what foundation shall we build each needed structure? What standard of measurement, what measuring rod, shall we apply to the work? Christian Science, in this hour of confusion, presents the key with which to unlock that immense storehouse of wisdom, the Bible, whose leaves are "for the healing of the nations." It strips away all the false and unimportant so-called facts and gives a clear view of the fundamental truth of each problem. Being Science, it is equally potent in the proper regulation of our individual daily lives, including the healing of disease, and in the solution of great world problems, which are after all only the problems of larger numbers of individuals. It will enable us to avoid the building of other towers of Babel, with their diverse tongues and inevitable conflicts, and will turn us to high cooperation in the establishment of that eternal city "which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God."

Fresno Republican.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. (Second Church).—John Sidney Braithwaite, lecturer; introduced by Clinton Baum Weamer, who said in part:—

Christian Science teaches mankind that God is Love. It heals sin, sickness, and disease in the same manner our Savior, Christ Jesus, did two thousand years ago, and gives to all true seekers health and peace, joy and gladness, for which Christian Scientists are profoundly grateful to their Leader, Mrs. Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science.

CANTON, OHIO (First Church).—Dr. Walton Hubbard, lecturer; introduced by Miss Ruth Schilling, who said in part:—

On each Sunday in every Christian Science church in the world this announcement is made from the pulpit: "The Bible and the Christian Science textbook are our only preachers" (Quarterly, Explanatory Note). In James we read: "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him. But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering." The first sentence of the first chapter of our textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, is, "The prayer that reforms the sinner and heals the sick is an absolute faith that all things are possible to God,—a spiritual understanding of Him, an unselfed love." This church has invited you here to hear something of what Christian Science teaches about this faith, this spiritual understanding and wisdom spoken of in the Bible; of this religion which when understood and applied heals the sick, reforms the sinner, comforts the sorrowing, and rests the weary and heavy laden to-day just as it did centuries ago "when Jesus was here among men."

Testimonies of Healing

Several years ago I took up Christian Science, not particularly for physical healing but more because it appeared to me to be a sensible religion. At that time, while reading the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, I was healed of the tobacco habit. The healing came before I had finished reading the chapter on Prayer, the first chapter in the book.

We thereupon had treatment for our six-months-old baby, who was suffering from a bronchial cough, which had manifested itself in a very severe form. A cure was effected in one treatment. Since then the healings experienced have been many. Chronic as well as functional disorders have been overcome, including malaria, chills and fever, coughs and colds, headaches, chronic bowel trouble, and chronic catarrh. Beneficial results are always experienced according to the extent that the fundamentals of Christian Science are inculcated in my life and daily actions. As a Government employee my annual ratings have been increased from a very low grade to a rating as high as is ordinarily obtainable, and work which formerly seemed a burden to perform is done with ease and great satisfaction.

I am grateful for the authorized literature, especially The Christian Science Monitor, the only paper of its kind in existence filled with authenticated news destined "to injure no man, but to bless all mankind" (Miscellany, p. 353). For the many blessings Christian Science is bringing to me and mine I am also very grateful.

C. A. Tockstein, Fresno, Calif.

Over six years ago I took up the study of Christian Science, and it has never failed me since. I had been in bed for six months after an operation and had been told by the most prominent physicians in this country that nothing more could be done for me. For five years I had been ill and my stomach had been pumped daily for a year.

A friend who had been healed through Christian Science brought it to my attention, and I was convinced that it was the truth. After she left and I had decided to try Christian Science my first temptation came. My medicine bottles had been refilled and some medicine was brought to me to take. Then the thought came that if I were obedient to the little I knew of Christian Science, I would thereby be knowing the truth that makes men free. The story of the blind man also came to me. He did not ask why he should go and wash in the pool; he was obedient and was healed. So I took my stand. I threw out my medicine in spite of the advice from members of my family that I had better save it for I might need it. I found myself healed and ordered a good supper.

I was also said to have a tubercular hip. The fear of this trouble was so great that I never told anyone but hid my hip-corset under the mattress. No one knew about it except the girl who helped to dress me. It was many weeks after Christian Science treatments were given me that the light came which brought the healing of this diseased condition. I was going upstairs depending on the banister for support, when the voice of Truth woke me up. I got a glimpse of the fact that man's real strength is in Mind. All fear left me and I walked perfectly free. Within a week or two the sore on the hip was healed.

Two years ago I was called upon to visit a relative who held a position in a hospital in Chicago, and I had to room with the head nurse. In the night I was taken with an ailment at the appearance of which I had always asked help from a practitioner. I waited until the nurse was asleep, then got up and read the Lesson-Sermon for the week. I was healed! I had proved the truth again, that "one on God's side is a majority."

As regards the permanence of my healing, I wish to state that I am perfectly well and have been able to work steadily in a store every day for the last five years. I am grateful for these blessings, grateful to God and also to our dear Leader, Mrs. Eddy, for the truth that has made me free. I am very grateful also for class instruction and for our literature. Many times I have been healed while reading it.

(Miss) Gertrude Sherman, Red Wing, Minn.

Christian Science has helped me spiritually, morally, physically, and I am truly grateful. My first knowledge of the healing power of Truth came when I turned to Christian Science in physical need, and found an immediate answer. On page 494 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" Mrs. Eddy tells us, "Divine Love always has met and always will meet every human need." To me that has been a steadying help again and again. The sense of freedom and joy and gratitude grows each day; while the desire and opportunity for service is a prayer which is beautifully answered. As a result of my study of Christian Science I am a healthy, happy woman. In the years before I came into Science there were long periods of ill health and loneliness, which now never occur. The study of this demonstrable religion acts as a preventive as well as a curative, and I am learning to recognize any seeming difficulty as an opportunity to demonstrate the truth.

Very recently I had two experiences that clearly demonstrated the healing and helping power of Christian Science. When I woke up one morning I seemed to be almost speechless, able to whisper and that was all. I treated myself and read our literature through the day, but when at four o'clock that afternoon the condition had not been overcome I went to a practitioner. My work made it necessary for me to speak in public that evening, and I was able to speak so as to be understood, and the next day was entirely healed. The following week a young girl associated with me in the same work was taken ill and we were told the doctors considered it dangerous, if not impossible, for her to attempt to go to her work; consequently, the work in which we were all engaged would have to be abandoned for the time, with the loss to all concerned of occupation and money, unless some one could take her place. I was quite unacquainted with her part of our work, but turning to divine Mind and relying absolutely on divine intelligence, for four days I did the necessary work, and besides overcoming a false sense of self and position I was also shown how to overcome a sense of inharmony.

I have been healed and uplifted so continuously by Christian Science that it is indeed a joy to feel that my testimony may be a help to others.

(Miss) Katherine Grey, New York, N. Y.

To me Christian Science is the most wonderful thing in the world. It has been my only physician and comforter at all times and under all conditions for the past eight years. At the time I first heard of it I was suffering from stomach trouble in its worst form, also from chronic appendicitis. I went to see a practitioner and after treatment left her house feeling like a different person. In three days I was healed. I continued treatment for about three weeks in order that I might gain some understanding of the all-loving God who had healed me. Glasses were discarded at the same time, after I had worn them for seven years. My little boy has been healed of measles, mumps, whooping cough, and croup by Christian Science. Many times discouragement would try to creep in, but knowing that God is all-power, that there is no problem too small to take to Him, I was encouraged to press on. The sense of lack has been wonderfully overcome by knowing that our supply comes from God.

Each day I am earnestly striving to learn a little more about the truth so as to help others as others have helped me. I am grateful for our literature and the Lesson-Sermons and for the privilege of membership in both The Mother Church and a branch church. It would take too much space to tell all that this healing truth has done for me, the blessings have been so numerous. I am sending this testimony that it may help some one who has need of the great Physician. My heart overflows with thankfulness to God and gratitude to our Leader, Mrs. Eddy, for all that Christian Science has done for me and mine.

With a heart filled with gratitude to God and also to our beloved Leader, Mrs. Eddy, I give my testimony of what Christian Science has done for me. Over five years ago I came to it for healing after all medical theories had failed me. I had been in a hospital for several months and had undergone different treatments, but all seemed to leave me in a worse condition physically and mentally, and I was a nervous wreck. When commencing the study of Christian Science, I had very little faith in its healing power, but upon my first reading of Science and Health I realized that I must give up medicine. After my first visit to a practitioner I destroyed all the drugs in the house and have never resorted to material remedies since. Heart trouble, malaria, nervousness, and many other discordant conditions have yielded to the power of Truth, and thought has been corrected in trying to overcome sensitiveness, criticism, and resentment.

I am grateful to all those who have helped to guide me along the way, and for the Sentinel and Journal.

(Mrs.) ALICE AMBJONSON, Oakland, Calif.

With the deepest love and gratitude to God I give this testimony. After having treatment from several doctors, among them some specialists, the verdict was given that I had from twenty-four hours to possibly one or two years to live; in fact, some of them stated that one could never tell what the next minute would bring forth for anyone with organic heart trouble and other complications such as I had.

Then Christian Science was brought to my notice and Science and Health was given me to read. I read faithfully and had treatments for about three months and was healed. I began to do my housework and had several piano pupils. For nearly three years I walked from one to three miles one day of each week giving five lessons, and also gave other lessons at home. Then I went South to a place where there was no one in Science. Gradually I left off studying the Lesson-Sermon and finally allowed mortal mind to creep in and dictate. Neighbors and relatives urged me to have a doctor. I took four small bottles of medicine and then began to see that I had left the best friend I ever had for material remedies and was losing ground all the time. With my eight-year-old boy I returned to Denver and again turned to Christian Science for help. A practitioner treated me all winter and spring, and I am glad to say I have put my trust entirely in God since then. Four years ago I laid my glasses off after wearing them steadily for seventeen years and have never had any need of them since.

I am so grateful for all our Christian Science literature and that my boy is a member of the Sunday school. Words are inadequate to express my thankfulness to God for the many blessings we have received and for Mrs. Eddy, who was good enough to make known to us again the Christ, Truth, the bread which "cometh down from heaven."

(Mrs.) NETTIE CLARK THIMYAN, Denver, Colo.

I consider it a great privilege to testify to the working of truth in my consciousness. My first reading of the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, was on the evening before our little boy, now six years old, was born. I read far into the night and awoke in the morning with a wonderful sense of peace. At seven o'clock the child was born and so-called physical laws were to a great extent set aside. Two years later when another child was born the freedom from material laws was yet more remarkable.

About five years ago our small daughter was healed, through the work of a Christian Science practitioner, of a skin disease, believed to be inherited. Many material remedies had been applied and an operation performed removing the skin of the lower part of the face. As relatives bore scars from this same disease, great fear was held over the child, but thanks to Christian Science the healing was perfect and no traces of the trouble remain. Through the help I received during this healing, a great burden of anxiety over the children was removed, and I long to have all mothers know of this loving Comforter which says "Fear not" to every anxious thought.

For over a year we have lived many miles from a Christian Science organization, and I deeply appreciate the Lesson-Sermons so lovingly prepared. By conducting Sunday school services in the home, the children are learning to overcome error with Truth, and are thus being fortified with the law of Love to meet the experiences of life. I wish to express my gratitude for the Sentinel, which seems to meet my need each week; as I read the testimonies and various articles I feel a sense of comradeship with those who are working their way "from a material sense of existence to the spiritual, up to the glory prepared for them who love God" (Science and Health, p. 566). I thank our Leader for the gift of the daily prayer (see Manual, Art. VIII, Sect. 4), which blesses all mankind, and my greatest desire is so to conduct my life that this prayer may be fulfilled.

(Mrs.) ADA M. WAYMIRE, Mesquite, Nev.

I would like to tell just a few of the things that Christian Science has done for me, that my experience may bring encouragement to others. When the Christian Science literature was brought into my home I was on the verge of a nervous breakdown, weary and discouraged, trying to keep up a semblance of courage to the outer world but inwardly sick at heart. Many times I had tried to turn to God for help, only to find that I did not understand Him, and so I was thrown back on my own resources, which failed me one after another. At the time of my greatest need Christian Science was presented to me. First I read the literature, trying to put into practice in my daily life the things I read, and I was greatly benefited. Later I went to a practitioner for help, and as my understanding of God increased, many physical healings were experienced. The old nervous trouble disappeared, sick headaches from which I had suffered for years were overcome, also palpitation of the heart, kidney disease, and a spasmodic contraction of the throat that left me speechless at times.

A little more than a year ago I fell on an icy pavement, hurting one hand and wrist very badly. Thinking there might be a broken bone I had it examined by a surgeon, who told me that there was no bone broken but there were other serious injuries and I would have very little if any use of that hand or wrist again, as they would always remain stiff. My faith in God was such that after a talk with a Christian Science practitioner I decided that we did not need the service of a surgeon, and I have my reward in the perfect use of both hand and wrist, and both are in perfect condition.

I am deeply grateful for these physical healings, for the help that I have had in a business way, and for the overcoming of many faults. I am grateful for the understanding of God that has come to me, an understanding that has given me faith in God and faith in man; indeed, I cannot put into words my gratitude for what Christian Science is daily teaching me. I can only say in the words of the man who was blind from birth and to whom Christ Jesus restored his sight, "One thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see."—(Mrs.) Millicent Foresman, St. Joseph, Mo.

My mother's healings have been just as she has given them. I have also had several physical healings and have been wonderfully protected from what might have been serious accidents. One time a big touring car ran over one of my legs, but the wheel bounded up and passed over leaving only a red mark, which quickly disappeared. This accident was witnessed by a number of people who could hardly believe their eyesight when I got up and walked as usual. Another time my bicycle broke when I was riding very fast and threw me headforemost to the pavement. A lady ran to me thinking I had been killed, as I struck on my head, but I was only stunned and badly bruised and lamed in one knee. I was completely healed in one treatment.

I am grateful for my knowledge of God that has given me freedom from fear.—Edward Foresman.

Christian Science has healed me of false appetites, an impatient and irritable disposition, and many other tendencies characteristic of mortal mind. It has given me comfort, endurance, satisfaction, and assurance, as well as peace and harmony, which I never before enjoyed. I have been healed of a severe case of Bright's disease, considered hereditary. Stomach trouble, hemorrhoids, rheumatism, chronic pain in the back, and many other inharmonious physical conditions have also yielded to the power of Truth. I had tried physicians of different schools and all kinds of medicine without any permanent healing.

Christian Science is indeed the most wonderful inspiration that has ever come into my life. It was in February, 1906, when I first turned to it. Our youngest daughter, then eight years old, was lying at the point of death from a severe attack of typhoid pneumonia, and our family physician held out no hope for her. Our next door neighbor asked us to try Christian Science, and we did so. The ailment was overcome in three days by simply reading the Bible and Science and Health, and the child lost only a week of school. This was the first time I had studied Science and Health, and all sense of fear left me after reading the book for half an hour.

After this wonderful healing, whenever inharmonious conditions of any kind manifested themselves they were overcome through the application of the truth as taught in Science and Health. I was healed of the liquor habit, and also the smoking habit, after having been an inveterate smoker for over forty years. All these healings were accomplished through the study of the Bible and the writings of Mrs. Eddy.

It is impossible to express in words the fullness of joy, the perfect peace, and the daily spiritual uplift which Christian Science has brought into my life. Truth has indeed been our only physician for the past thirteen years, and the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," has made the Bible a vital power in our home. Words are inadequate to express my thankfulness to God and my gratitude to our dear Leader, Mrs. Eddy, who made it possible for these manifold blessings to come to me and mine through the teachings of this blessed truth.

Frank S. Miller, Reading, Pa.

I can truthfully verify the statements of my husband's testimony. Christian Science has indeed been a blessing in our home, and I have had many proofs of the power of Truth. I was healed of chronic headache and chronic stomach trouble, also of deafness in one ear, contracted over fifty years ago. These conditions were all overcome by simply reading Science and Health. Several attacks of sickness, such as a throat affection, influenza, and malarial fever, yielded to the truth in from one to three treatments.

While sincerely grateful for the splendid physical healings, I appreciate more than anything else the peace of mind and the spiritual uplift which I have gained and which our family enjoys.—(Mrs.) Selesa B. Miller.

Having received great help from the testimonies of others, I send mine as a token of gratitude, hoping it may be helpful to some one. Since November, 1907, Christian Science has supplied my every need, enabling me, through the understanding and application of the truth as taught in Science and Health, to overcome discord of various kinds. A condition for which I had taken medicine almost daily for years and also undergone a surgical operation without permanent relief, quickly disappeared. Sciatic rheumatism, general debility, fainting attacks, the sense of fear, and other ills have also been overcome.

For all these blessings I am most grateful, but especially so for having had the happiness of helping others. I am thankful to God for this healing truth and grateful to Mrs. Eddy for making it demonstrably clear, so that we may follow to some extent in the footsteps of our great Way-shower.

(Miss) A. M. Little, Ballymore, Donegal, Ireland.

With a heart overflowing with gratitude for what Christian Science has done and is doing for me, I send this testimony. Some years ago I was in rather poor health, and having heard of Christian Science from a friend I decided to try it. I improved in many ways under treatment; more especially I noticed the improvement in my disposition. A little over a year ago a swelling appeared on one of my fingers. I had suffered intensely under medical treatment for this same trouble on two previous occasions, had undergone operations, and one nail had been removed. This time I decided to have Christian Science treatment and rely entirely on God, the great Physician, but soon discovered that I was filled with fear owing to my past experiences. I therefore asked a Christian Science practitioner to help me, and in two days all the pain and swelling had disappeared.

For this beautiful demonstration of the healing power of Truth I am most grateful, but for the spiritual understanding which we gain from the study of Christian Science I am even more grateful. I am filled with gratitude to our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, who has given to the world the "pearl of great price" in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," our textbook, and am very grateful for all the authorized literature. Each day I am striving to become a better and more earnest worker in Christian Science. All glory, honor, and praise belong to our Father-Mother God, the giver of all good.—(Mrs.) SALLY S. SHEPARD, Boston, U.S.A.

There are no words which could adequately express my deep gratitude for the freedom which has been mine since I began to study and practice Christian Science. Daily I can see that suffering comes from lack of understanding of God.

Although only a beginner in Christian Science, I have so many healings and blessings to record that it is difficult to know where to begin. My husband was healed of a so-called tubercular lung two years ago, while in a military hospital. He has also ceased to manifest acute headaches, which were supposedly chronic. My mother was instantaneously healed of what doctors describe as gallstones, and at sixty-six years of age she enjoys the best of health. I have had great relief from sick spells and biliousness, to which I had been a martyr since childhood, and a growth in the breast and kidney trouble have both disappeared. I am also quite free from bronchitis, to which I was in bondage for ten years, afraid to go out in cold weather. This healing alone would cause me unbounded gratitude.

I think the most wonderful of all is the healing of an acute sense of lack. My husband had found it almost impossible to obtain regular employment since his discharge from the Army. One trial after another had seemed as depressing as evil could make it, and I have had to get rid of pride and become as a little child, dependent on God every moment for all I need. Now the burden of debt has been lifted, proving that God was watching over us all the time. My thanks go out to many dear Scientist friends for encouragement and help when all was dark to me. Our literature also is meat and drink, and many times fear has instantly been dispelled through reading one of the articles.

(Mrs.) ALICE ROWE, Toronto, Ontario, Canada.

About four years ago I took up Christian Science and my daughter was healed of appendicitis in one treatment. I was cured of the drink habit about three years ago, of smoking about one year ago, and have been very successful in business. I got out of work on account of a strike, but through Christian Science I obtained a position where I earn more than ever before. Money is, however, not to be compared with the peace of mind I enjoy. I thank God for all I have received and am grateful to our beloved Leader for bringing this truth to the world.

THOMAS CROSS, Ruth, Nev.

I wish to express my gratitude to Christian Science for bringing to me the realization that God is good and all-powerful. For a number of years I had known of this teaching in a general way, but having always been well and happy I did not appreciate my need for it until about five years ago, when a very painful condition developed in my back. It grew rapidly worse and within two weeks I could not stand erect or walk without intense pain. The trouble was variously diagnosed as neuritis, lumbago, exhaustion, and a bad strain, and I spent four months experimenting with rest cure, braces, plaster cast, and change of climate, only to be told at the end of that time that a brace would have to be worn indefinitely. Altogether discouraged I turned to Christian Science as a last resort and was wonderfully healed; but about two months later I slipped back into the slough of despond and was again filled with fear and despair. This was once more overcome, and it is now three years since I have had even the slightest fear of a recurrence of the trouble.

Since then I have been helped, both physically and mentally, over some very rough places by the wonderful, certain knowledge of God's love and power, as taught in Christian Science; and I long most earnestly to show by my daily life that I have found a religion which can be practically and helpfully applied to every thought and action of our lives. The physical healings are unquestionably wonderful, but the sense of peace and rejoicing which follows the study of the Bible, as explained by our Leader, is far above everything else. The world owes Mrs. Eddy a boundless debt of gratitude for her unending devotion to the task she undertook; and many, many people, including myself, rejoice when they have an opportunity to express their gratitude, or to pass on to some one else the message of this wonderful religion, which makes the world seem like a different abiding place.

Until about five years ago I was a great sufferer from many ailments, often having medical advice and always taking medicine and tonics in the hope of getting relief, but in vain. When Christian Science was brought to my notice, I commenced to read "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, and in three weeks was healed of neuritis, chronic rheumatism, very weak nerves, and heart trouble. A few months later I was able to lay aside my glasses, which for twelve years I had been obliged to wear when reading or sewing. Since then many other troubles have disappeared, such as chronic catarrh of the head, bilious attacks, and frequent colds.

I am very grateful for the physical healing, and much more so for the better understanding of God, the consciousness of ever present Love, and the protection and peace which Christian Science brings into one's daily life; also I am very grateful for the authorized literature, which is a constant and never failing help.—(Mrs.) KATHARINE E. DUTT, East Grinstead, Sussex, England.

Signs of the Times

[San Jose (Calif.) Mercury-Herald]

There is a growing inclination among the people to demand that the church address itself more to ministering to the needs and welfare of the people in this world and less to the contemplation of the blessings to be experienced in the world to come; to demand proof of the change in the life of one who joins himself to the church, and evidence of an increase of ability to minister to the needs of men as Jesus ministered by those who profess to be his followers.

Churchmen cannot ignore the demands being made upon them for proof of the possession of a religious quality different from that possessed by the non-churchman if they expect to attract those who now profess no religious belief. The church must give evidence of being something more than a temperance society, civic federation, or association for human elevation and betterment if it is to justify its claim that it is the representative of the teachings, ministration, life, and divine power of Christ Jesus. If the church differs from other organizations of men, it is because it stands for spiritual ministration, for divine power, for a quality of helpfulness that is not human but divine.

The appeal of Jesus to men lay in his ability to do for those in need what no human could do. He brought to the world a wisdom more than human, a love and tenderness all-embracing and divine, and inspiration so elevating and compelling that it turned men away from sin because it revealed to them the quality and the beauty of the divine Spirit. His life and ministrations were a revelation and exemplification to the world of the higher, the spiritual, the divine life, and he invited all men to share this life and receive its blessings, and promised that they might do so if they followed him in life and conduct. He did not teach by word alone, but he illustrated his teachings by acts and verified his promises by results accomplished. Now that the world has thrown off the fear of questioning religious things, it is asking to see the proof in deeds, in power, in spiritual qualities, of the claim that it is the church of Christ Jesus and the present day embodiment of his teachings and life.

The skeptic asks to see the works that Jesus promised should be seen accompanying faith in his followers. The church will make a grave mistake if it does not address itself to the task of showing to the world the evidence of the possession of the power and spirit of Christ that it may convince the most skeptical that it is his church. If it is to content itself with profession of faith with no deeds following, more and more will thinking men turn from it, more and more will they charge its professions to be confined to lip service only, more and more will it lose influence and power in the world, and louder will be the demand going up from sincere hearts all over the world for a manifestation of the spirit of Christ to be evidenced by works, by love, by the power to cleanse and heal and spiritualize the lives of those to whom it ministers.

[The Archbishop of Athens in The Balkan Review]

If those churches which have so long maintained an attitude of hostility toward other churches will conscientiously examine retrospectively the history of that hostility, they will be obliged to confess that the results are not worthy of their struggles and sacrifices. The question of the restoration of Christian unity cannot be solved either through proselytism or through dispute. The ideal will be attained through forbearance in love. This method will free the Christian groups from the atmosphere of debates, altercations, swellings, and, prompting them toward reciprocal respect and appreciation, will prepare the ground for cooperation in those practical objects which are common to all the churches.

[Rev. W. H. Hopkins in Christian Herald]

Hereafter the church must minister to all the needs of life. It must be interested in everything which makes for happy homes and for the welfare of young and old in the community life. It will be a church with a larger program, facing greater opportunities, and meeting greater needs than any church the world has ever seen. We are at the dawning of a great new age in the world's history.

Just before the Master left the little band out of which he formed his church he said to them: "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do." The church of to-morrow, more than ever did the church of the past, will realize the greater things. It will be a church recognizing the one Master and seeking to make his life, his standards, his program, realized throughout all the world.

Letters of Appreciation

Many letters of appreciation of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR and other Christian Science activities are constantly being received. These letters express what these activities mean to different individuals in various occupations and pursuits. The favorable comment that has been received on those already published indicates that they are welcome and helpful; therefore others will be published under the above heading. One such letter follows:

A LITTLE incident of awakened interest in our international daily newspaper was just related in conversation to Miss —— ———, and she assured me that you did not feel too busy to hear of any healing work the Monitor was accomplishing. One of the workers on our committee for making distribution to institutions has been taking two Monitors a week to ————. After benefiting from this distribution for almost three months, the management feels the desire and the need of giving the paper daily to the men in its care. In consequence thereof we are just in receipt of a year's subscription to the Monitor from them. The manager stated that since his brief acquaintance with the Monitor he had felt it his duty to aid those in his care to gain some little concept of Christian Science.

I wish to take this opportunity of expressing my appreciation of the Monitor. I had long felt that I had an appreciation of our paper, but since taking up the work of this office, where we mail approximately 2,000 copies of the Monitor monthly, the companionship I have formed with it has endeared it with a love in excess of anything I had known before, and has awakened a reverence for its mission that has meant a new consecration to me. Sometimes the third or fourth recipient of one marked copy will call to ask for a duplicate copy to send to a friend. Great interest has been shown in its splendid, fearless editorials.

VOLUME XXII SEPTEMBER 13, 1919 NUMBER 2

The Shunammite Woman

MARY H. CUMMINS

THE story of the Shunammite woman, as recorded in the fourth chapter of II Kings, is full of beauty and instruction to the Christian Scientist. This woman must have possessed some spiritual perception, else she would not have noticed the prophet Elisha, as he passed her house, and have invited him in to eat bread. Tarrying at her home for a brief rest, as he went to and fro on his journeyings, became a regular practice with the prophet, just as Christ Jesus loved to stop at the home of Mary and Martha at Bethany; and who can tell what these seasons of spiritual refreshment meant to the Shunammite as she listened to the words of truth from the lips of "the man of God"?

When the thought came to her of preparing "the little chamber on the wall," with its simple furnishings of "a bed, and a table, and a stool, and a candlestick," she, no doubt, never connected this act of disinterested ministration with the solving of her own problem, the fulfillment of her heart's desire. She may have given up all hope that her desire would ever be fulfilled, but this one act of unselfed love opened the way for the answer to her prayer. She must have grown to love that little room, where the promise was made which afterwards came true in her human experience, for we read that when her child died she took him up and laid him there, while she went out to find Elisha.

What wisdom she showed in refusing to discuss the seeming grief which had come to her, until she could talk with "the man of God" himself! In answer to her husband's inquiry as to the cause of her sudden journey, she merely answered, "It shall be well." Instinctively she knew that his fear would not help the situation and that it must be quieted. Not even with Gehazi, when he came to meet her, would she discuss the matter. Beyond a further denial that sorrow or death had entered her home, her lips were closed. Then came her wonderful, intuitive compliance with the great demand which Mrs. Eddy has voiced on page 495 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," "When the illusion of sickness or sin tempts you, cling steadfastly to God and His idea." In the words, "As the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee," was evidenced the Shunammite's quiet determination to "cling steadfastly to God" and to the spiritual idea as represented by Elisha. The result was what might have been expected; the prophet went with her and her child was raised from the dead. Can we not imagine the serene confidence and gratitude which filled her heart when in response to his admonition, "Take up thy son," she bowed herself in silent thankfulness at his feet, took her son up in her arms, alive and well, and went out?

All the steps necessary to demonstration are set forth in this simple narrative: the exercise of whatever spiritual perception one has gained, the expression of unselfed love, wisdom in not talking unduly about our problem, denial of the false claim of life in matter, and the steadfast clinging "to God and His idea." There is a simplicity, strength, and sincerity about this woman which wins our hearts at once. How many of us to-day would have the courage to offer to a guest such a room as that which she placed at the disposal of Elisha? How often when the impulse comes to us to do some kindly deed, does the whisper immediately follow that the amount we have to give is so small, the thoughtful act too trivial to be worth while, the place where we would entertain a friend too humble, too unlike that to which the friend is accustomed? When such suggestions come to us let us remember the little chamber on the wall, which the Shunammite woman prepared for Elisha, and which to the prophet was furnished as no room in the king's palace was furnished, for it was equipped with that which cannot be reckoned or measured by material objects, and with which luxury has nothing whatever to do—unselfed love. Let us also strive that our home may become such an one as hers, or as the home of Mary and Martha, where all that represents the spiritual idea is honored and welcomed, and where "the man of God" will love to tarry a while, and we shall prove, as did they, that sickness and death cannot long hold sway there.

"The stranger within thy gates"

CHARLES THOMAS WALKER

THE word stranger is of diverse meanings. In the Scriptures it frequently alludes to an enemy or to a member of a different tribe who was to be watched or guarded against. In numerous other instances it refers to a sojourner who, being on friendly terms, is entitled to respect and consideration. In its most common usage it means one who is unacquainted or unknown. In any case the lot of a stranger could hardly be called a pleasant one. He is at least under suspicion in one instance and is as one apart in another. Being absent from acquaintances and familiar places often engenders loneliness, homesickness, and discontent. Understanding is put to a severe test when called upon to rise superior to sense testimony, as sometimes happens when one finds himself a stranger in a strange land.

Scattered throughout the Bible and particularly in the books of Moses are many commands relative to the treatment of strangers. Even the most casual reading of these passages must prove convincingly that Love has ever been mindful of the peculiar position of the well-intentioned stranger within the gates. In the twenty-second chapter of Exodus the Hebrews are thus admonished: "Thou shalt neither vex a stranger, nor oppress him: for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt;" and in the twenty-third chapter the command is repeated, with these words in addition: "For ye know the heart of a stranger." This was undoubtedly meant to remind the people of their own loneliness while sojourning in foreign lands, that they might have regard for the sensibilities of those who should, perchance, come to dwell among them. Based on reciprocal love this was similar to, if not identical with, the charge given centuries later by the Master, and which has come to be accepted and known as the golden rule, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them."

The one who leaves home for only a brief period scarcely feels a sense of loneliness. His sojourn is more in the nature of a visit. In a convenient season he will return to well-known haunts and will step back into the circle of acquaintanceship from which he but temporarily absented himself. How different is the mental condition of the one who has been led by duty into new fields and who has bidden good-by, perhaps, to pleasant home and loving friends. This one may feel a sense of loneliness that is very marked and which is almost impossible to describe, and he will appreciate immeasurably the sunshine of brotherly love and friendly intercourse.

In Science, where to "love thy neighbour as thyself" is a fundamental, there can, of course, be no strangers; but not all have yet risen to the point of being above the suggestions of mortal mind. Christian Scientists need ever to be watchful lest they unwittingly turn "the poor and the stranger from the gate," against which Mrs. Eddy cautions us on page 142 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures." There is danger at times of our being so self-centered that we may overlook the "weary wanderers, athirst in the desert . . . waiting and watching for rest and drink" (Science and Health, p. 570). No matter how unintentional the neglect accorded a stranger, it is a form of selfishness, and the object of it may experience difficulty in overcoming a sense of resentment which such neglect may arouse.

In this connection an experience which befell the writer may be of benefit to those who would not knowingly offend. His first attendance at a Christian Science service was met with such cordiality as to astonish him. He had not gone seeking physical aid, although in need of it, but solely because of dissatisfaction with the theology he was trying to understand and to live. Subsequent visits proved that the cordiality noted at first was not feigned, neither was it an accident, both of which had been suspected. He found it was the result of an overflowing love which several hundred people were undoubtedly experiencing. Ere long he felt more at home in the Christian Science church than he did in the one he had been attending regularly. Having found a reasonable, rational, provable, livable religion, it soon came to pass that his former church knew him no more.

Afterwards his place of residence changed several times. In each city he met the same loving welcome that had had so much to do with his entry into Christian Science. Finally he became, as he thought, permanently located in a certain city. Here many loving acquaintances had been made and a membership in the branch church of that city was one of his privileges. Suddenly he was called to a position in another city. He seldom missed a Sunday service or a Wednesday evening meeting in the city to which he had removed. From the start an indifference toward strangers seemed apparent on the part of the congregation. The sense that he was being neglected began to arouse a feeling of resentment, so that he felt called upon to catechize himself: Was he himself entirely blameless? Had he been too diffident or too reserved? Was he craving personal friendship more than the realization of the Father's omnipresence, which had so often proved "a very present help in trouble"? Was he reflecting toward others the love that he wished to have reflected toward himself? He did not know. One thing he did know, however, was that his own thought had not been right. Turning to the textbook, he opened it at page 254, and his eyes fell upon those wonderful words: "Pilgrim on earth, thy home is heaven; stranger, thou art the guest of God." This had been read several times before, but now it brought a new light. He was the guest of God when he was in that church. The sting of neglect was drawn and sensitiveness was overcome. Holding steadfastly to this thought a change was soon noticeable.

While deeply grateful for this opportunity to defeat resentment, thoughts something like the following have several times presented themselves: "Suppose the experience had occurred when the writer was first venturing into the health-giving waters, could he have withstood the temptation to cease attending that church?" Since he himself had found difficulty in destroying the effects of indifference, might not some one whose desire for Truth was not yet fully aroused find it impossible to pass over a lack of what the world calls hospitality? Christian Scientists have much to be grateful for, and it is often remarked how happy and how joyous they appear. They should not forget that they can be selfish even of joyousness, and that to limit their portion of it to themselves or to the little bands of their intimates while the stranger looks on, laden perhaps with loneliness, is selfishness, and that by a display of it they may be putting needless obstacles in the way of others.

The Master said, "Freely ye have received, freely give;" and the apostle Paul wrote to the Hebrews, "Be not forgetful to entertain strangers: for thereby some have entertained angels unawares," meaning, not that angels in the flesh had been entertained, but that by being thoughtful of others, "kindly affectioned one to another," some have received and entertained heavenly thoughts.

Righteous Judgment

MAUDE J. SULLIVAN

NO form of mortal thought, perhaps, is so common as that of unjust judgment. Generally understood, human judgment has come to mean the formation and expression of human opinion regarding the actions or condition of individuals and things. Mortal belief usually begins the day with a thought of judgment. It considers the weather: it is good or it is bad. It takes account of itself and pronounces judgment upon the individual: "I am well" or "I am ill." Mortal belief turns to other individuals and pronounces judgment upon them; and so throughout the day, in contact with persons and things, in every activity, there is human judgment, regardless of the Scriptural injunction found in the second chapter of Romans, where Paul says, in speaking of the evilly minded, "Therefore thou art inexcusable, O man, whosoever thou art that judgest: for wherein thou judgest another, thou condemnest thyself; for thou that judgest doest the same things."

Jesus also, instructing his disciples, said: "Judge not, that ye be not judged. For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged: and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again." Strong words these, and they bring to the earnest student of Christian Science a realization of the necessity for heeding the admonition contained in "A Rule for Motives and Acts," as given in Article VIII, Section I, of the Manual of The Mother Church: "The members of this Church should daily watch and pray to be delivered from all evil, from prophesying, judging, condemning, counseling, influencing or being influenced erroneously."

In mortal thought, judgment precedes condemnation; therefore it behooves the Christian Scientist to be very watchful and prayerful that he "judge not according to the appearance," but in all ways "judge righteous judgment." Even the most cursory analysis of material conditions reveals the fact that the favorite weapon for the destruction of the popularity of any of the world's heroes is that of false criticism or mistaken judgment. There are many examples of this to-day. Following some wonderful deed of heroism or self-sacrifice, mortal mind places a man upon a pedestal as being a hero; he is suddenly exalted in the world's esteem, honors are thrust upon him, he is approved and applauded, his praises are sung the length and breadth of the land. For a time all appears to be well; then some belief of human selfishness—that seemingly ever present pivot of the human mind—brings the hero into juxtaposition with itself, compares him with itself, then sends forth its propaganda of envy, jealousy, and hatred, to find lodgment and gather to itself kindred beliefs, until finally there is the spectacle of the erstwhile hero being dragged from his pedestal, his every act and motive harshly considered and judged. Rare indeed is that man who can undergo without downfall the grilling of mortal mind when he is weighed in the scale of human will and opinion.

Is this righteous judgment? From a literally human method, perfect judgment is impossible. To judge righteously, the judge must be conversant with all existing conditions, including motives. Now it is obvious that one human being cannot possibly enter into every thought and intent of the heart of another, even though the two are most closely and intimately associated. When judgment of personal conduct is in evidence, one often hears the expression, "If I were in that man's place I would not do what he is doing." How false may be that statement! If the one uttering it had been living under the same conditions as the one being judged, his action might have been the same; for if he were in that one's place, his education, environment, knowledge, thoughts, desires,—yea, even his temptations would be similar; consequently his actions would very likely be identical. What the critic really means to say is this: "If I were in that man's place, and could be possessed of my present knowledge and enlightenment, I would not do what he is doing."

A student of Christian Science was one time sitting with a party of friends, all similarly interested, near an open window. In some unaccountable manner the window fell upon the student's fingers. There was no great outcry, and after a slight pause the conversation was continued. It took some time to gain the realization of harmony, while those about, not seeing what this one was trying to overcome, went on in their happy visiting, unconscious that one in their midst was struggling with a sense of pain. Would it not have been rank injustice if the person nearest, the one perhaps who best knew and understood the student, should have attributed the quiet manner during that interval to peevishness or the like?

In the fourth chapter of James we read, "There is one lawgiver, who is able to save and to destroy: who art thou that judgest another?" If by reason of experience in the practice of Christian Science, some are called upon to be helpful to others, great care should be taken to judge righteous judgment; for in this relation it is a fundamental requirement. There is but one basis for righteous judgment, and it must be according to the pattern shown in the Mount. It includes a spiritually scientific knowledge of God and of man, the image and likeness of God. Anything less than this knowledge of God and His idea is likely to result in unrighteous judgment. It is always the purpose of error to make the Christian Scientist acknowledge that it can manifest itself as person, place, or thing; therefore, if we judge man to be sick, sinful, self-willed, envious, jealous, dishonest, unkind,—in any way unlike God,—we are "inexcusable" and are participating in the same belief to the extent that we accept a mortal in place of an idea of God. Instead of aiding the attack of error we must deny its asserted power, realize the ever presence of God and His perfect idea, and thus help to release the sufferer from the error, no matter what phase it may assume. We may not ourselves submit to the false belief, but we are partakers of it in the measure of our belief that it has real power or presence.

This does not mean that we are to close our eyes to error or cry "Peace, peace; when there is no peace," but it does mean that we are to turn from and deny the evidence of the material senses with the truth taught by Christ Jesus, which he said would make free. In "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 476) Mrs. Eddy tells us: "Jesus beheld in Science the perfect man, who appeared to him where sinning mortal man appears to mortals. In this perfect man the Saviour saw God's own likeness, and this correct view of man healed the sick. Thus Jesus taught that the kingdom of God is intact, universal, and that man is pure and holy." There never has been and there never will be but one true judge or deliverer,—that is Christ, Truth. Anything unlike the one true judge or deliverer is an unrighteous judge.

Fruit of Obedience

NINA F. WINN

TO be conscious of God's omnipotence is to reject the untrue and false, for, as Isaiah states it, "If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land." A very significant statement appeared in the Sentinel not long ago, containing counsel which every Christian Scientist should heed, to the effect that obedience to the Manual of The Mother Church affords protection against aggressive mental suggestion. What is this aggressive evil but the thoughts of the carnal or fleshly mind expressing its own limitations as to health, happiness, substance, life, love, and truth? Upon reading the statement above referred to, the writer was impelled to examine her own thought and to go to the Manual for further consecrated study; and in doing this there came to her the fruits of past obedience to the provisions especially dealing with the individual's conduct.

For many years there had never seemed to be a time when she could send the amount to The Christian Science Publishing Society for a year's subscription to The Christian Science Monitor. Part of the time she had subscribed on the monthly basis plan and the rest of the time depended on those in her household to subscribe, but the time arrived when our newspaper seemed not to be available through either source. She herself was without a position and consequently with no income. According to its nature error put up the arguments of limitation that made renewal seem impossible, but above this was her desire to be obedient to Article VIII, Section 14, of the Manual: "It shall be the privilege and duty of every member, who can afford it, to subscribe for the periodicals which are the organs of this Church," and our Leader's further word that we "read our daily newspaper" (Miscellany, p. 353). The question had now resolved itself into whether or not she could "afford" it, and the answer came that she could, when she considered that she afforded food, shelter, clothing, and recreation. It was with a heart full of gratitude, therefore, that she drew from a very small savings account the amount for a year's subscription.

This done, she realized that her work was not finished until she read the paper, and not partially but wholly. Interesting employment had already opened up, and shortly afterwards she was privileged to belong to the Cooperative Committee of The Christian Science Monitor.

Digitized by Google

This was not all, however. Reading this international newspaper awakened an interest in world problems, and she saw through its pages continual proofs of the allness of divine Principle and error's nothingness in world affairs. The uncovering of evil in this way aided her in seeing error as a belief, and false, because it is the expression of mortal mind.

That which especially benefited her was the bringing of thought in contact with big activities for women, and one she followed up particularly. At last came the opportunity to have the best of training that could be afforded by our Government for the work that our newspaper had opened to her. She finds herself to-day engaged in that activity with its wonderful opportunities for service, and The Christian Science Monitor is still preparing her thought daily for the problems that come up in connection with her work.

The Goal and the Prize

CHARLES W. HOAG

THERE are many stations or waymarks on the journey Spiritward, and the reaching and passing of any one of them should bring satisfaction to earnest Christian Scientists. All are important and indicate progress made in the right direction. There is one, however, that seems of supreme importance, the goal which all Christian Scientists should strive to reach. Our revered Leader named it "spiritualization of thought." She says in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 407), "Spiritualization of thought lets in the light, and brings the divine Mind, Life not death, into your consciousness." Again, in "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 15), she says, "Nothing aside from the spiritualization—yea, the highest Christianization—of thought and desire, can give the true perception of God and divine Science." Spiritualization of thought, then, means growth, development, strength, —the gain of spiritual sense. It is the one indispensable attainment, therefore, upon which all else in Christian Science depends, and without which there can be no real healing of either sickness or sin.

The above statements being true, and certainly no thoughtful Christian Scientist will dispute them, the first question that presents itself is, How is this spiritualization of thought to be attained? In attempting to answer this question let us take it for granted that in this, as in all things of real value, the rule is set forth in our textbook; and further let us remember that the price to be paid always corresponds to the value of the object sought.

An important step, then, toward this great goal is to clear the mind of material or unspiritual thought. This in itself is no small task. Here again we turn to our Leader for clear and concise direction. On page 392 of Science and Health she says, "Stand porter at the door of thought." We should watch the thoughts that apply for admission at this door; but bear in mind that it is not always the diseased beliefs that cry for admission with the loudest voice that need the closest attention. It does not require so great an effort to guard the door against such burly enemies. Even an indifferent porter would recognize them as unwelcome, and refuse admission. The really dangerous foes are the little, crafty thoughts, such as resentment over real or fancied wrongs; jealousy, sometimes called a "green-eyed monster," which is often so quiet and subtle that it slips through the door unnoticed; pride of place or even of attainment in the knowledge of Christian Science; envy of another's position or success; fears and worries; and many others of the same class. These are the little foxes against which Solomon warned, and it takes an alert porter to discover them and close the door promptly. Yet when all this is done the task is only half completed. If thought is to be spiritualized, not only must the door be closed against enemies but it must be flung wide open to friends. White-winged angels, named truthfulness, purity, love, meekness, stand without, tapping gently for admission. To them the porter should open wide the door, giving them most hearty welcome and ushering them in to honored places. With these guests filling all the house, blending their voices in perfect harmony, echoing heaven's own music, no room will be left for other applicants for admission. When the porter, through experience, repeated trials, and earnest efforts, is able to discern the false and untrue, under whatever guise it comes, the way is open to success.

Only when the house is "empty, swept, and garnished," and a hearty welcome extended to the heavenly visitors, is the Christian Scientist approaching the goal and ready to receive the prize which Paul was contemplating when in his letter to the Philippians he wrote, "This one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." What of the prize? Let John, the beloved disciple, answer: Fruit of the tree of life, spotless raiment, a new name, a lasting place in the temple of our God. Then the petition, "Thy kingdom come," is answered, and the Christian is ready to go forth in the Master's vineyard with an unveiled face, "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed,"

To image forth the beauty of His perfect grace,
To stand endowed with strength divine,
Reflecting from the unveiled face
The glory of the Mind divine.

The Transgressor

ALEX L. WALKER

THE statement is often made by some of those who are studying Christian Science, that the straight and narrow path as pointed out and demonstrated by Christ Jesus and later made possible and practical in this age through the untiring efforts of our Leader, Mary Baker Eddy, is a long and hard road to travel. If we will but make a conscientious analysis of this state of thought, we shall no doubt arrive at the conclusion that it is not the ruggedness of the pathway of truth which causes us to stumble and sometimes fall, but that the burdensome things—false beliefs, which we are trying to take with us—are the cause of all of our seeming trials.

Oftentimes error will prompt us to seek a shorter and more convenient way where the carrying along of these often unrecognized burdens is not prohibited. We may find ourselves arguing thus: If my environment were different, or if the rest of my family or dear friends were interested, or if I had more time for study, I would progress more quickly. But these are only subtle suggestions of error and must be met with the realization that there is no real opposition to Truth, and no place or condition that can keep us from progressing if we are honestly following the light as it is revealed to us. It is our indulging in these false beliefs which, either ignorantly or otherwise, we think are beneficial to us, an indulgence which seems to bring us a sense of satisfaction or pleasure for the time being, that causes the pilgrim to believe, in some instances, that they are necessary accompaniments on our journey Spiritward. As we progress, however, we shall find that these things which we thought so needful are very burdensome; yet it is oftentimes seemingly with great reluctance that we begin to part with some of these cherished beliefs. Very often that which seemed to give the most satisfaction is the first we are required by progress to give up. Sometimes we obey willingly, but often we continue to stagger on, complaining how hard and heavy is our load, yet not willing to be unburdened. In fact, most of us can recall instances when we even resented being helped. For instance, if some one came to us and told us we were indulging in error, or tried to correct us in some way, when we thought we were right, we would either retaliate or make some excuse, either mentally or audibly, thereby binding the already heavy burden with tighter bands.

Hereby it will be seen that our journey is just what we make it. If we insist on taking with us self-will, self-justification, self-love, and a host of other erroneous beliefs, including a belief in the necessity of sickness and sin, our progress will be slow, attended by many trials and hardships. If, instead, we keep our thoughts filled with Truth, error cannot find an abiding place therein, for it is only through indulgence in idle thinking that error can possibly gain admission. The Bible teaching on the subject is very clear, for in it we are told that "the way of transgressors is hard," not the way of the righteous. "My yoke is easy, and my burden is light," said our Master; but he also said, "I am meek and lowly in heart." Herein, then, must be our remedy if our way seems long and wearisome. We must learn to be meek and lowly in heart. We must learn to be humble, not to humble ourselves to certain persons, not to caste or creed, but to Principle, and we must not expect or want the way changed to meet our personal whims. Not until we are willing to "leave all for Christ" (Science and Health, p. 192) and to say with Jesus, "Not my will, but thine, be done,"—to be guided by Principle and not person,—can we expect our progress to be rapid.

Although they may not seem so in passing, yet the trials and experiences which we meet are good and useful, if they help to destroy the false sense of matter entertained by mortals, thereby planting our feet on that which is really substantial,—on the spiritual understanding of God, and of man in God's image. The law which governs all who travel this road is absolute and cannot be transgressed; neither are there any special provisions made in it relative to creed or person; neither can any hidden thing be carried along, for everything that is hidden shall be uncovered and corrected. "The conceptions of mortal, erring thought must give way to the ideal of all that is perfect and eternal," Mrs. Eddy writes on page 260 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," and our solemn duty and privilege at the present time is to strive each day to reflect more of this ideal.

Truth Triumphant

EDITH F. MUNROE

NO more do mortals grope in vain
To find God's guiding hand;
For Truth has conquered sin and pain
And all their alien band.

For now are we the sons of God—
These words ring true and clear.
We lift our eyes above the sod
To see the dawn appear.

Love sends its beam to light the way;
Truth sunders error's chains;
Life reigns, and death no more holds sway;
God's man his birthright claims.

["Moral Victory"—The Christian Science Monitor, Boston, U. S. A., April 16, 1919]

On page 419 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" Mrs. Eddy, in the simplest of language, utters a warning which it were well the whole world pondered. "A moral question may hinder the recovery of the sick. Lurking error, lust, envy, revenge, malice, or hate," she writes, "will perpetuate or even create the belief in disease." The Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science in these words draws attention to the fact that evil beliefs, of whatever name, not only perpetuate but cause disease. And in doing so Mrs. Eddy has helped to open the eyes of mankind in no uncertain manner to the essentially mental nature of sickness.

Now since what has just been stated is true, it follows that with the total destruction of evil there will be perfect freedom from disease. And has not this been proved, at least to some extent, by every human being? No one exists who has not seen the havoc which vice produces on humanity. And if the subject be examined more closely it will be found that every sick belief springs from the same source,—namely, the belief that matter is real substance, possessing sensation and controlling life. This belief is held by the majority today. Although Christ Jesus demonstrated the unreality of matter time and again in all the healings of sickness recorded of him, in his walking on the water, in his stilling of the tempest on the Sea of Galilee, and in his feeding the multitude when the disciples had only a few loaves and fishes at their disposal, still it is quite certain that the metaphysical meaning of his works has not been generally understood.

Christian Science shows that Christ Jesus was perfectly certain as to the unreality of matter because of his intimate knowledge of the allness of God. No one had ever before realized as Jesus did that God was All-in-all, that God was the divine Principle, the only creator, the only cause, and that God was Spirit or Mind. Christ Jesus knew all these things. If he had not known them he could not have done the wonderful things recorded of him, from the restoring of the withered hand to the raising of the dead. In each and all of the miracles, as they are called, there is evidenced the same profound understanding of divine Principle, the same clear-sighted appreciation of the utter unreality of matter. It was all one to the Nazarene whether it was a case of sin or sickness he was called upon to heal. He applied the same Principle in every case. He understood the allness of Principle and consequently the utter unreality of matter or evil; and it was this spiritual understanding which brought about the healing.

In dealing with the sick in Christian Science practice the question as to where they are standing morally has to be taken into account. Envy, revenge, jealousy, malice, hate—are they not among the deadliest enemies of the human race? The passions of the human mind are the poison germs which play havoc with health and harmony. This being so, but one course is open for humanity to pursue in order to be free. First of all, the truth about God and His creation must be learned; and then in the light of this truth the unreal nature of evil or matter will become evident; the next step will consist in the application of the truth to the seemingly complex problem of human existence.

Occasionally it is remarked by those who are unacquainted with the teachings of Christian Science that this Science makes nothing of evil, meaning of course that it ignores evil. Evil is nothing and it would be impossible for Science to make something of it, but to say that Science ignores evil's claim to existence and power is untrue. Throughout the whole of her writings Mrs. Eddy warns mankind continually against the claim of evil, pointing out the suffering which inevitably follows its indulgence, and urging upon the human race the necessity of obtaining a knowledge of Principle, of good, whereby to destroy evil's false claim to actuality. Thus on page 418 of Science and Health she writes: "Include moral as well as physical belief in your efforts to destroy error. Cast out all manner of evil."

Recent years have shown evil apparently rampant, demanding to be made ruler over all men. Were ever lurking error, lust, envy, revenge, malice, hate, so apparent before in their combined efforts to destroy morality and to dethrone Principle? Yet the gigantic effort came to naught. It could not have ended otherwise, since Principle is omnipotent. When this fact became sufficiently known, the mesmerism of material sense which gave support to all the evil passions was broken, and the mighty effort of diabolism was vanquished. Nevertheless it will not do to conclude that the victory of moral right is complete. It never will be until every nation and people in the world have come to see the spiritual truth that Principle is All-in-all, and consent to the government of Principle. What, then, must be the line of enlightened pursuit? Obviously it must be the instruction of the whole world as regards the nature, wholeness, and omnipotence of divine Principle. This is what Christian Science is bringing about. All its efforts are directed to that end. Christian Science is the friend of humanity, telling the world that good is man's heritage, exposing the vices of the peoples, laying bare the autocratic meannesses of the human mind.

If a man's knowledge of Principle could be known, a correct estimate of his capacity for good would be obtained. That is the test of all effort. To secure a complete moral victory would mean to gain an absolute realization of the divine Principle. The realization will take place gradually to human consciousness. The great thing, however, is that it should take place. "If Truth is overcoming error in your daily walk and conversation, you can finally say, 'I have fought a good fight . . . I have kept the faith,' because you are a better man" (Science and Health, p. 21). Christian Science is the most practical religious system ever presented to mankind. Its teachings are based on the truth about the one infinite divine Principle, and as these teachings are understood they are found to include the method of healing all moral faults and all physical disease.

To write that Science and Health is a muddle of bad philosophy and worse English is to play poorly at a very cheap performance. Why? Because a system of Christian idealistic philosophy and Science cannot be dismissed with a sentence, and because many competent scholars agree that Mrs. Eddy's literary style is excellent and original. Her diction is pure and forcible, her phraseology apt and accurate, and her meaning is clear to those who sincerely seek it.

An antagonistic critic can say that even the Authorized Version of the Bible is poor English (because it is of the time of King James) and that its teachings are utterly contradictory. This simply shows the need of spiritual interpretation. Surely it is humorous to read from the pen of one who belongs to one of about one hundred and forty sects in America, the accusation that Christian Science is sectarian. It can be maintained that Christian Science is no more a sect than Christianity is a sect, although early Christianity has been described as a despised sect. Also he misrepresents utterly the healing of Christian Science when he attributes it to the influence of the human mind. It is the divine Mind, God, who is ever invoked in Christian Science, and reliance upon God, Spirit, is essential in all its healing work, which is according to the instructions of Christ Jesus, who always looked to the Father.

This critic says that Christian Science is not Science, because Mrs. Eddy claims that there is no matter. The Right Hon. Arthur Balfour said, in an address as President of the British Society, that in explaining matter it is explained away. Natural science reduces matter to electrical ions, to theoretical force, and leaves the inquirer to wonder what is beyond force. Christian Science bases its teachings on Principle and deduces its conclusions logically. In Christian Science effect follows cause consistently. Cause being good, the effect must be harmonious. In Christian Science the personality of Deity is defined as infinite. God is not a corporeal person but is incorporeal. On page 116 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" Mrs. Eddy writes, "If the term personality, as applied to God, means infinite personality, then God is infinite Person,—in the sense of infinite personality, but not in the lower sense."

As to the effect of food, a hypochondriac may eat very freely and yet manifest little energy. Real strength is a spiritual quality, not derived from food. "The joy of the Lord is your strength." Jesus said to the disciples regarding his partaking of spiritual refreshment and thus overcoming hunger, "I have meat to eat that ye know not of." Similarly mental conditions have to be taken into consideration in determining relative cold or heat. The Eskimo has a very different standard of feeling temperature than a South Sea islander. In fact, to understand Science and Health, the reader must do something else than start a newspaper controversy with his first superficial impressions of it.

Many things, good, bad, and indifferent, have been said of Christian Science. It has only remained for a recent critic to refer to this religion as an example of "a disintegration of the pure monotheism which the world inherited from Israel."

As a matter of fact, the doctrine that there is but one God is the central teaching of Christian Science, as will appear from almost any page of its literature. For example, Mrs. Eddy writes on page 331 of Science and Health: "God is individual, incorporeal. He is divine Principle, Love, the universal cause, the only creator, and there is no other self-existence." Again she says on page 207 of the same book: "There is but one primal cause. Therefore there can be no effect from any other cause, and there can be no reality in aught which does not proceed from this great and only cause. Sin, sickness, disease, and death belong not to the Science of being." From these quotations from Science and Health it will be seen that the Christian Science doctrine of the unreality of disease has its basis in pure monotheism.

[Charles M. Shaw in Lancaster (England) Observer]

The difference between our clerical critic and the Christian Scientists in their attitude toward pain and disease is a fundamental one. He accepts the dualistic conception of man and the universe; that is, he believes matter is as real as spirit, that evil is as real as good, and that the mind of the flesh is as real as the mind of the Spirit. To him, therefore, pain and disease are facts, and he condemns Christian Science because it "tended to ignore the facts of existence."

Digitized by Google

On the other hand, the Christian Scientist believes that there is only one Mind, one Spirit, one power, one substance, God and His idea infinitely manifested. He holds, therefore, that evil is the supposed absence, in consciousness, of good; matter, the suppositional absence of Spirit; the mind of the flesh, the suppositional absence of "the mind of the Spirit." And he holds that evil is to be overcome of good, that evil being negative and good positive, the understanding and expression of the latter in every activity and relationship of life completely destroys the former in its physical as well as in its mental manifestations. There is thus a tremendous gulf between the two positions.

The Christian Scientist maintains that his position is based on a true interpretation of Scripture, which reveals the fact that the spiritual is the real and the only, and also that evil has no place in the divine creation. The two accounts of creation in the book of Genesis are contradictory. The first, contained in the first chapter, is the account of the spiritual creation, and "God saw every thing that he had made, and, behold, it was very good." The second, contained in the second chapter, is the mortal conception of creation, based largely upon mortal experience. I cannot here adduce all the evidence from the Scriptures to support the judgment of Christian Science that the first is the true account, but I will content myself with one very significant statement from Hebrews: "Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear."

In Doctor Cairns' able book, "The Reasonableness of the Christian Faith," he says: "The point from which all religion started was the conviction that above and behind the present world there was another and a mightier universe, a spiritual and unseen world, by union with which men could attain the life and freedom which in their fullness were denied them here." And he speaks of the common world and our life in it as the "earth-dream." He further says: "Is there not every probability that there is a condition of knowledge and of life possible for us all to-day, waiting for us in God and in the soul of man, as much above our present condition as ours is above the condition of prehistoric mankind?"

What Doctor Cairns suggests, Christian Science affirms positively. Accepting such revealed truths as that God is infinite Spirit, omnipotent and omnipresent—truths which our critic accepts—Mrs. Eddy accepted also their logical implications. She disavowed the belief that matter and evil were real in the absolute sense. She declared also on the basis of revealed truth, the truth that man was made in the image and likeness of God, that it is man's privilege, through the understanding of his relationship to God, to overcome evil in all its forms. And the Christian Science practice of healing is simply the application of these great truths to our immediate human needs. It is a mistake to suppose, because healing is so prominently regarded in Christian Science, that we esteem mere physical health to be of supreme importance. Mrs. Eddy taught that the body should be insensibly well, or, in other words, that holiness is the great desideratum, and mere bodily health is by the way.

Our critic seems to imply that spiritual healing is wrong; for he says, in effect, that the action of a Christian Scientist in relying upon God and declining to avail himself of the skill of physician or surgeon was "foolish and futile." May I say that Christian Science healing is based solely upon the divine Mind and does not admit at all the human factor which he seems to approve. The sentence he quotes from the Christian Science textbook, "Mind governs the body, not partially but wholly" (Science and Health, p. 111), refers to the divine Mind, not the human. Now I cannot conceive of any unbiased reader of the gospels not forming the conclusion that the healing therein described is spiritual and that its practice was enjoined upon all the followers of Christ Jesus. The writer whom I have previously quoted—I am quoting Doctor Cairns because he is regarded in orthodox circles as one of the ablest exponents of modern Christianity—undoubtedly indicates approval of such a consolation. He says with positive assurance, "They (the deeds of Jesus) are one and all in this view illustrations of the power of the spiritual over the physical."

This critic is anxious to know where Mrs. Eddy's interpretations of Scripture are obtained. They are, like those of a teacher of mathematics, in harmony with the fundamentals of the Science she is dealing with; for Christianity is really a Science, the true and exact knowledge of God and His creation, as the later Scriptures imply. It is not a compound of knowledge, dogma, superstition, and emotionalism. Mrs. Eddy has, therefore, interpreted Scripture in accordance with its own highest revelation, and not in accordance with human opinion and experience. The Founder of Christianity taught the allness of God, and consequently the supremacy of the spiritual. He taught that if men only had a single eye to this great fact, it would give them dominion over evil, and he proved the truth of his contention in life and works. The uniqueness of Mrs. Eddy's discovery is that she has brought to light again the Christianity of Jesus stripped of its ecclesiasticism and scholastic theology, and she has shown that it can be applied to the healing of sickness and sorrow as well as of sin.

Extracts from Letters

"This letter is addressed to you as an expression of my gratitude for Christian Science. I have always found it very helpful to me in civilian life and even more so in the Army, since I have not always been in a position where medical aid was available, had I been in want of it. Then is when I perhaps realized most fully the value of Christian Science. Heretofore I have always had a practitioner to rely upon to help me out, but since coming into the Army I have learned to work out the problems myself as they came up. When I first landed in France there was a great deal of fear about the epidemic. Several of the boys in my outfit were taken with it, and many of them were sent to the hospital. I got a slight touch of it, and if it had not been for my understanding of Christian Science I would have been compelled to seek medical attention. However, I was able to take care of myself, so that when orders came a few days later for the movement of the battalion, I was able to make the four-mile hike to the railroad station with full pack, in a pouring rain. There were a great many of the fellows who were unable to carry their packs.

"I came to this town after I had been in France about a month. At first there were very few troops here and I knew of no other Scientists in the camp, but I had not been here very long when I learned that a Christian Science chaplain had arrived in a neighboring town, with a new battalion. Inasmuch as Cour-Cheverny is the headquarters for this area, the chaplain was soon transferred to this town, and ever since then we have held regular Sunday services and Wednesday evening meetings in his billet. You may be sure I was very glad of the opportunity to attend these meetings, and we got a great deal of good out of them."

Asking Wisdom from God

It seems to be the custom of many to seek for advice casually, and it must be evident in such cases that it is more than information which they want. They desire to have a certain course commended and are very much less hospitable to counsel or warning that would dissuade them from what they wish to do than to the casual advice which seems to them to be confirmation of a cherished intention. This accounts perhaps for the surprising effect of what can only be called evil counsel and the apparent ineffectiveness of much good advice such as elders are continually giving to the young. It is a fact, however, that every one at some time must actually learn wisdom.

The casual adviser cannot know what is within the heart of the one to whom he proposes guidance and direction, but every man who is honest with himself knows about himself much more than he will tell; and just as soon as he finds a standard and has his eyes open to actual truth and discerns what is meant by Principle he begins to correct himself, he begins to exhibit righteousness and to reflect Mind, concerning which Mrs. Eddy says in "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 361): "The divine modes and manifestations are not those of the material senses; for instance, intelligent matter, or mortal mind, material birth, growth, and decay: they are the forever-existing realities of divine Science; wherein God and man are perfect, and man's reason is at rest in God's wisdom,—who comprehends and reflects all real mode, form, individuality, identity."

The first step toward the gaining of wisdom may be said to be the recognition of one's lack of it, followed by desire for it. Ere long the search is full of zest because it is like seeking for hid treasure and jewels that are beyond price. In answer to the question, Where shall wisdom be found? the response is: "The Lord giveth wisdom: out of his mouth cometh knowledge and understanding;" and a characteristic of those who receive wisdom is indicated by the proverb which says, "When pride cometh, then cometh shame: but with the lowly is wisdom."

The treasures of earth are fragile and troublesome. Costly fabrics invite the moth and the thesaurus tempts the thief. Mere possession is of itself anxiety and discomfort; but not so for those who have wisdom. It keeps the heart young, rejoicing in freedom, because it unfolds the truth of being; it enriches companionship so that friends are found everywhere by the wise man; it sweetens affection because where wisdom dwells anxious domination and fear-inspired solicitude are not found. Mrs. Eddy says (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 165): "The secret stores of wisdom must be discovered, their treasures reproduced and given to the world, before man can truthfully conclude that he has been found in the order, mode, and virgin origin of man according to divine Science, which alone demonstrates the divine Principle and spiritual idea of being." Why do men seek for glory rather than wisdom, for grandeur rather than grace? Why is mightiness admired in conqueror or king and ambition stirred in view of miter and crown, when it may be true after all that it is the sage who governs the realm by his wise thinking and the philosopher who gives rules to mankind by his science,—by what he knows of everlasting truth? The true rulership is not that of a person over persons, but that of one governed himself by wisdom unfolding the rules of wisdom to others. The words of Jesus, "I have given you an example," present the true way of teaching by wisdom and the true type of greatness.

The apostle James says, "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him." Did the apostle really mean that wisdom may be given to all, to every one? Is access to the storehouse open to all? Can a child at school and the struggler in business, the mother with household cares, and the statesman responsible for a nation's welfare, each and all turn to a divine source for aid and true knowledge? The answer is, from age to age, Yes. The records regarding human life which we consider most valuable are our sacred Scriptures gathered together in one volume which we name "the Book," or the Bible. What makes it of universal value and interest is its central theme, its unfolding of the way in which men become obedient to divine wisdom. Whether we think of Noah, preacher of righteousness, or Abraham, pioneer of faith, or Moses, leader and lawgiver; whether we think of Paul, the apostle to the Gentiles, who recognized the Christ in Spirit; or of Peter, who recognized the Son of God in the flesh; or of John, the discerner of Love as God and the revealer of the triumph of good over all evil, this is the theme. The Bible centers in Christ Jesus, to whom the prophets gave witness beforehand, for whom apostles and disciples were witnesses after his resurrection and ascension, so that mankind may come "to the acknowledgement of the mystery of God, and of the Father, and of Christ; in whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge."

Trust

In "The First Church of Christ, Scientist, and Miscellany" (p. 171) Mrs. Eddy gives us the following epigram: "Trust in Truth, and have no other trusts." This is a statement so simple, so direct, so all-embracing in its demands, that if obeyed it will bring the reign of heaven upon earth, the perfect government of God, and thus banish all the difficulties of the world. All our fears, all our doubts, all our disappointments and discouragements, are because of lack of faith in Truth. To trust Truth to the exclusion of reliance on aught else is to rest absolutely in the assurance of the supreme governing power of God, good, no matter what the seeming may be.

There is no place and no circumstance where this complete, all-encircling faith in Truth will not act to the elimination of any seemingly opposing power. We are always trusting something that we acknowledge as power. If error seems to govern in our affairs it is because of our belief in it as a power. Then the remedy is to learn to understand Truth. In "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 286) Mrs. Eddy says, "The understanding of Truth gives full faith in Truth, and spiritual understanding is better than all burnt offerings." Then if one would advance in the understanding of the Science of Life he must seek Truth with all his heart. That all men shall know Truth is the will of God for all. Not only is this His will, but in Christian Science He has revealed Truth to this age in so plain a way that all are without excuse who do not avail themselves of its marvelous power.

The difficulty is that the human mind prefers its burnt offerings. It prefers to stumble along with its beliefs in matter, laying its sacrifices upon error's altar, because there is always the argument that it is the easier way. It invariably insists that it is easier to yield to error than to resist it with the truth. The unwary are thus beguiled into treading a long way which must inevitably be retraced, for every step in the wrong direction involves an equal number of steps reversed. On the contrary, each effort to follow Truth is a point gained in the pathway of overcoming evil with good. Even the least endeavor to trust Truth will be a step in the right direction, for we must all take the first step before a second is possible. We do not always find perfect results immediately, but persistent effort to hold our faith in Truth under all conditions will finally win the victory of perfect trust.

When one has gained even a slight knowledge of Truth he immediately has an equal degree of faith in it, and he therefore begins to trust it and to use it. Now it is Truth which acts, which works, which accomplishes. It is always Truth alone which is the light that uncovers every least claim of error and proves it unreal. It would be as foolish to go into a cave without a lamp and try to clean out the hidden things of darkness as to expect to cleanse the human consciousness from its evil beliefs without the light of Truth. It is Truth which denies error.

Just here the Christian Scientist must be on guard lest he allow himself to drift into a negative state of thinking, which loses sight of Truth. In Science and Health (p. 418) we read: "Truth is affirmative, and confers harmony. All metaphysical logic is inspired by this simple rule of Truth, which governs all reality. By the truthful arguments you employ, and especially by the spirit of Truth and Love which you entertain, you will heal the sick." The suppositional nature of error, however, seems constantly to insist on itself as entity. This effort is subserved when the error is continually kept in thought through denial. If a truth were known in regard to mathematics one would understand that that truth would reveal all mistakes about it,—and there would be no necessity of searching to see how many such mistakes might present themselves. Clinging to the truth, any mistake would be uncovered and rejected as it appeared. Thus in the practice of Christian Science we concern ourselves with the error only to the extent of casting it out with the truth; in other words, we must trust in Truth and have no faith in error,—we must erase error whenever it claims to appear, and we do erase it by knowing the truth. Then Truth is indeed "affirmative," and to trust in Truth is to affirm the truth at all times, under all circumstances. This affirmation is more than repetition of words; it is to dwell in the spirit of Truth,—it is to "have no other trusts."

Another tendency of supposititious mortal mind is to steady God's altars, and this always implies a stupid lack of trust in Truth. In the home, in the church, in business, there is the danger of attempting to take all responsibility on one's own shoulders, forgetting that Truth is always present to govern. All right affairs are the affairs of Truth, and Truth certainly knows enough to control every detail properly. What joy and freedom must come to the Christian Scientist who perceives that he can give his every thought, his every word, his every deed to the upbuilding of the cause of Truth in the world, through solving his own problems—performing his own tasks—in modest, unassuming obedience to Truth; in other words, that his only necessity is to "trust in Truth, and have no other trusts."

Among the Churches

Current Notes

COSHOCTON, OHIO.—The new church edifice of the Christian Science Society will be ready for occupancy Sunday, August 3, which date has been set for the opening service. The property at the corner of Seventh and Walnut Streets was formerly used as a residence. It was purchased and the remodeling begun about April 1 of this year. The auditorium has a seating capacity of one hundred. The building represents an investment of about seven thousand dollars, and will be one of the beauty spots of Coshocton.

Coshocton Tribune.

ORANGE, N. J.—First Church of Christ, Scientist, is placing contracts to the amount of approximately ninety-five hundred dollars for improvements to the church edifice on Cleveland Street. The space formerly used as a reading room will be added to the auditorium by removing the separating wall. This space is to be furnished with pews and fixtures to harmonize with the present fittings and will provide two hundred and fifty additional seats, thus increasing the seating capacity of the auditorium to about eight hundred and fifty. Two additional rooms will be constructed in the basement and other improvements will be included. The reading room has just been moved to its new location at 361 Main Street, between Park and Canfield Streets.

NEEDHAM, MASS.—The corner stone of First Church of Christ, Scientist, was laid Thursday morning, August 7, at six o'clock. Work is progressing rapidly, and it is expected the church building will be ready for occupancy by November 1.—The Needham Chronicle.

CHRISTIANIA, NORWAY (Society).—John Sidney Braithwaite, lecturer; introduced by Karl F. Knudsen, who said in part:—

It has so happened that my visit to this country has coincided with the presence here of my friend Mr. Braithwaite to deliver a lecture on that interpretation of the Christian religion which has been so well named Christian Science. It has been so named because it is based on the Bible, and in order to denote that nothing can save mankind except that which has become part of one's knowledge and understanding of God.

I look upon this as the first public lecture in this country on this subject, and have therefore been glad to accept the invitation to introduce the lecturer. You have a right to ask why I have undertaken this responsibility. The answer is easy. Fourteen years ago my wife was attacked by consumption. She quickly concluded that the ordinary means could not save her and, having just heard of Christian Science, desired to study the subject. My sister was with us at that time. You will not be surprised to hear that she and I joined in the study. I came into touch with a number of people having a very healthy and normal view of life. They conveyed to me none of that sense of feeling themselves better than other people, which we business men have so often associated with those who adopt a definite religious teaching. I found that they were able to appreciate anything good wherever, whenever, and by whomsoever uttered, ascribing everything good and pure to the same source.

Digitized by Google

I found also, that these people regained their health. Thus I was faced with two alternatives: Should I allow prejudice to rule me, should I disregard the phenomena presenting themselves, or should I treat them in the only way in which phenomena of nature are treated by those who only are entitled to claim the name of natural scientists? They do not dismiss phenomena conflicting with preconceived notions but seek their cause. We chose the latter course. The result was that my wife was healed. Some time afterwards my sister was healed after a somewhat serious accident. I have frequently experienced the help of Christian Science in sickness, and I have had my capacity for work increased.

The Christian Science movement is essentially democratic. It recognizes no priesthood,—or I should perhaps more correctly put it, we recognize as "priests of God and of Christ" all those who prove their understanding of Christian Science by making it practically useful to themselves and others.

La Fayette, Ind. (First Church).—Dr. Walton Hubbard, lecturer; introduced by Arthur Hussey, who said in part:—

The sweetest carol ever sung, the sweetest song ever heard, was that listened to in rapturous wonder by the wakeful shepherds in the far-away hills of Judea, more than nineteen centuries ago. The words of the song brought this message of hope and joy: "Unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord;" and then followed those wondrously comforting words: "On earth peace, good will toward men."

The message of Christian Science comes to this age teaching us as individuals and as nations how to attain the realization of that angelic message of long ago, how to attain the understanding of the truth which makes men free and which shall make us brothers indeed. This message came to us through its Discoverer and Founder, Mary Baker Eddy, a little more than half a century ago, and since then has brought to countless thousands health, happiness, joy, peace, and comfort.

Los Angeles, Calif. (First Church).—Virgil O. Strickler, lecturer; introduced by Miss Bertha L. Babcock, who said in part:—

We have come here to-night to learn something about Christian Science. Mrs. Eddy in "Rudimental Divine Science," on page 1, defines Christian Science as "the law of God, the law of good, interpreting and demonstrating the divine Principle and rule of universal harmony." Jesus of Nazareth did his mighty works in obedience to this law of God, healing all manner of sickness and sin and raising the dead. He said to his followers of all time, "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also." To-day, in proportion as Christian Science, "the law of God, the law of good," is intelligently understood and applied, the demonstration of healing is made manifest, and many living witnesses are saying in the words of the psalmist, "Great peace have they which love thy law: and nothing shall offend them."

Urbana, Ill. (Society).—William D. Kilpatrick, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. E. C. Greene, who said in part:—

Whether you have come out of idle curiosity or with a sincere desire for good, divine Love is here ready to bless every heart that will receive. It may be you have come to find out the difference between Christian Science and the religion of the Master as taught in the Bible. As we see it, Christian Science is the religion of our Lord Jesus Christ. But is there not a marked difference between his teachings and the practice of those Christians, sincere and earnest though they be, who make no attempt to obey his direct command, "Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils"? Christian Scientists, studying the Bible from a spiritual standpoint and applying the rules discovered by their Leader, Mrs. Eddy, are endeavoring to follow all the instructions of our Lord, the Way-shower.

Wausau, Wis. (First Church).—John C. Lathrop, lecturer; introduced by Miss Mary Harger, who said in part:—

We have all been called upon, during the recent war, to sacrifice in one way or another, and this sacrifice has taught us the necessity and value of searching our minds and hearts and standing for a righteous cause. It has prepared us somewhat for this period of reconstruction which is calling upon us for even a deeper search.

Webster tells us that to reconstruct means "to form again or anew." Jesus said, "Ye must be born again," and Christian Science is here to offer a means of reconstruction to all human problems, physical, mental, moral, whereby right thinking becomes more natural than wrong thinking because it is based upon an understanding of God.—Wausau Pilot.

Aurora, Ill. (First Church).—The Rev. Andrew J. Graham, lecturer; introduced by R. W. Scudder, who said in part:—

The Bible states that God is "a very present help in trouble." If when we are in trouble we do not experience this "very present help," it is because we do not avail ourselves of God's omnipotence and ever presence; and the reason for this is our misconception of God and of the teachings of Jesus the Christ. Through the teachings of Christian Science we learn that the promise of God's ever presence is actual. We also understand how to avail ourselves of this fact and thereby reap the reward of health and happiness.

New York, N. Y. (Society, Columbia University).—Paul Stark Seeley, lecturer; introduced by Miss Eleanor Troxell, who said in part:—

In the Declaration of Independence of our country, we read that "men are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness." Throughout the ages men have sought for more abundant life, liberty, and an abiding happiness. Christ Jesus tells us, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God;" and, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." But men have forgotten this and have sought for life and happiness in mammon instead of in God, and so have been fettered by material thinking and laws, thus shutting out the freedom which comes from an acceptance of "the glorious liberty of the children of God," which Jesus proved belonged to man. Christian Science brings to us the message of life, liberty, and happiness.

Hammond, Ind. (First Church).—George Shaw Cook, lecturer; introduced by Walter D. Patton, who said in part:—

Students of social and religious conditions throughout the world are trying to determine the causes of the great unrest prevailing in all phases of life, and are striving to arrive at some conclusion which may lead to a remedy for these conditions. In the matter of religion we have been told of the changed attitude of many, and of the growing dissatisfaction with the old forms and ceremonies; and it has been repeatedly stated that the new religion, the religion that will satisfy this need, must not be composed of rituals, formulas, or dogmas, but must be a religion of service, of doing, of being. Right doing must be preceded by right thinking, for according to Proverbs, as a man "thinketh in his heart, so is he."

Jesus of Nazareth taught a religion of thought and action, for he said, "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also;" and his disciples and followers were able to demonstrate the truth of his teachings by "signs following," healing the sick and casting out evil. The Principle of these teachings was not, however, fully understood until it was revealed, as the result of unceasing work and study of the Bible, to our Leader, Mrs. Eddy, who presented it to all the world in her book "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," which includes all of Christian Science, the Science of Mind-healing. This is the new religion of love, of service, of being.

LONDON, ENGLAND (First Church).—John W. Doorly, lecturer; introduced by the Hon. Sibyl Pauncefote, who said in part:—

Reconstruction is the password to-day because so much is expected of new conditions, but let us not forget that reconstruction has its true foundation in change of thought. The whole thought of the world is in process of fermentation and, like the prophet Joel, we see "multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision." From the Christian standpoint it is evident that the fundamental need of the hour is a sound mind to judge righteous judgment, and a clean heart, or purification of motive, to make this judgment operative in right action and right living.

To thousands of men and women Christian Science means great spiritual light, shining through every page of the Bible, leading human thought out of confusion into order, and piercing the mists of earth which cloud our vision; and it was said of old, "Where there is no vision, the people perish." Christian Scientists are immeasurably grateful for the moral, mental, and physical reconstruction they experience through this illumination of the Bible.

HARTFORD, CONN. (Second Church).—Miss Mary G. Ewing, lecturer; introduced by Walter O. Eitel, who said in part:—

In approaching the subject of Christian Science it is but fair to ask if its claims can be practically realized by anyone who will sincerely investigate. This question has been answered affirmatively by thousands of people whom Christian Science has healed of all manner of disease and sin during more than fifty years. Jesus said of his followers, "By their fruits ye shall know them;" and on page viii in the Preface to her book "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" Mrs. Eddy has written: "The question, What is Truth, is answered by demonstration,—by healing both disease and sin; and this demonstration shows that Christian healing confers the most health and makes the best men. On this basis Christian Science will have a fair fight."

Testimonies of Healing

About four years ago, after many years of seeking and searching for something higher and more worthy than life seemed to offer, I was gradually led naturally and beautifully into Christian Science. Its teaching answered all my questions concerning man and his relation to God and immediately satisfied the desire for something reasonable and logical, a truth that was tangible. It furnished not only a practical religion but one which commanded great respect. The blessings which the study of this Science brings began almost at once. Before the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, was half read a seemingly tenacious habit of smoking, of probably twenty years' duration, and the indulgence of a so-called moderate desire for liquor entirely left me. This was most gratifying, because at times these habits had troubled me greatly. Later on I was healed of an annual attack of illness, which had been a source of annoyance for a long time.

Shortly after endeavoring to convince a fellow employee who had shown some interest in Christian Science and who was suffering much from a fistula, that Christian Science would heal him, I became afflicted with what I believed to be the same difficulty in an aggravated form. My only physician was God, "who healeth all thy diseases," and the manifestation was entirely and quickly overcome. Many other demonstrations of the healing efficacy of Christian Science have been experienced or have come under my observation. In our home life the power of divine Mind is constantly proved, and we are trying to become more obedient to Principle as the truth unfolds.

The peace of mind and the harmony that have come to us in our business and home life through trying to live in accordance with Principle, cause us to be deeply grateful to Mrs. Eddy, who has truly emancipated mankind from the bondage of materiality and its concomitants, sin, sickness, and death, through her discovery of the real or spiritual meaning of the Scriptures.—Clarence Brooks, Erie, Pa.

With deepest gratitude for Christian Science I wish to relate some of the blessings received therefrom. Once my dear mother was, according to sense testimony, very sick. For several weeks she was confined to bed and could not take any nourishment except a little milk. She was so weak that she could only with difficulty speak or swallow. We held steadily to the truth that God is our Life and strength, and she recovered and is now active all day. Last winter she was not one day in bed. Although more than eighty-five years of age she is clear mentally and strong physically.

One evening I was bitten on the hand by an insect. The arm became twice its normal size and felt very heavy. I told no one of this and tried to abolish my fear of blood poisoning by declaring the truth. Other people had suffered severely day and night for weeks from a similar trouble, and in some cases a doctor was compelled to use the knife; but I experienced no pain, only the discomfort due to the abnormal swelling. I was able to do all the housework, and on the third day, while busily engaged in declaring the truth for some one else, I knew I was healed, although to all appearances conditions were not very favorable, as the arm and hand were covered with blisters. These however soon disappeared. Thanks to Christian Science the trouble was entirely overcome within a few days, and I had learned something from the experience.

Since turning to Christian Science we have had many blessings through its study, and we are grateful to the friends who sometimes lent us a helping hand. When round about us all were sick with influenza, we were protected, and could also help others. Above all we are thankful for learning how better to love our enemies, to help the poor and lift the fallen, to live practical Christianity, as I always wished. We thank God every day for Christian Science and for sending that noble woman, Mrs. Eddy, with the good news for all men.

The knowledge of Christian Science is the most wonderful blessing that has ever come into my life. It has given me a demonstrable understanding of God that is applicable to the solution of all the problems of daily life. When it first came to my notice fourteen years ago I was, and had been for many years, suffering from two distinct and chronic internal diseases, while arising out of these was a mental condition causing much misery. As my husband was a surgeon, I had tried every form of treatment which could be offered by materia medica, including one operation, but none of these things had given me more than temporary relief. After reading the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, I applied to a practitioner for treatment and both conditions were completely overcome, although the healing was slow. It is now twelve years since I have had any drugs or treatment other than Christian Science. Some years ago I had very bad abscesses in both ears. This condition seemed rather serious and there was a great deal of pain, but in about four treatments it disappeared and I have had no return of this trouble.

The following experience, which was very remarkable in that it set aside all material laws as to processes of healing, also took place some years ago. The forefinger of my right hand began to trouble me. I did not pay much attention to it for a day or two, but then it became very much worse and presented all the appearance of a badly poisoned finger. The pain was intense, and the finger very much swollen and suppurated, so I asked for Christian Science treatment. I slept the whole night through and in the morning the pain was practically gone, although the finger looked much the same. It did not open, but gradually became normal, and a new nail came.

These are only a few of the many healings I have had since I first heard of Christian Science. Is it any wonder that Christian Scientists are grateful to Mrs. Eddy for her revelation of this new-old truth, which to-day, as at the beginning of the first century, is what Jesus referred to when he said, "If ye continue in my word, . . . ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

(Mrs.) Jean Ramsey, Glasgow, Scotland.

I had been a semi-invalid for several years when a lady came to stay with me for a few days who was a student of Christian Science, and after a few words of explanation of its teachings I asked if she would go with me to a practitioner. This she did and after the first treatment I felt a change for the better. In searching my thoughts, on my return home, to remember what the practitioner had said to me, the only thing I could think of was that God is the only power and I must not use any material means while she was treating me; so I immediately threw away all the medicine I had and have never needed any since. For the last eight years I, as well as the rest of the family, have depended upon the one Physician.

I wish to give a comparison of healing between the material method and the spiritual. Our boy fell and lacerated his under lip; he was taken to a doctor and it was several weeks before it was completely healed. One day, after I had begun the study of Christian Science, our little girl fell and lacerated her lip quite as badly. I picked her up, declaring that God's idea could not be harmed, that God is ever present, the only power, and His reflection could not reflect anything but the perfect spiritual likeness. She slept for perhaps half an hour, and when I took her up there was no sign of any discord, no inflammation, and the lip was completely healed; and oh! the joy and spiritual uplift of knowing that our own right understanding of God and man—the true man being perfect and spiritual, even as the Father is perfect—does heal instantaneously and permanently, certainly is a blessing that one can never describe or know until he has realized that truth for himself.

I have always been very grateful that when I began the study of Christian Science, I also began the study of the Bible. I am profoundly grateful for Jesus the Way-shower, for Mrs. Eddy, whose pure thoughts brought primitive Christianity again into practical everyday living, also to the many students of Christian Science for every step that has been pointed out that would bring me from the valley to dwell "in the secret place of the most High." My daily prayer is that I may do good to some one who is striving to gain a higher sense of God and man and for the unfoldment of the Bible as given in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures."

(Mrs.) AMY WARRENBURG, Porterville, Calif.

I want again to express my gratitude through the columns of our beloved periodicals for the joy and the abundance of good things which have come into my life through the study of Christian Science. During the twenty-three years I have been striving to be a Christian Scientist, I have seen many wonderful proofs of healing. Nervous prostration, typhoid fever, smallpox, blood poisoning, and minor ailments have been met and mastered by the power of Truth over error. At the time this great light first dawned on my thought, I was seemingly drifting out under materia medica; but when the word of God was spoken by a loving practitioner there was instantaneous healing. The darkness and torture of hell were replaced by the bliss and peace of heaven,—a peace which surely "passeth all understanding."

Mrs. Eddy tells us in "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 224), "We should go forth into life with the smallest expectations, but with the largest patience; with a keen relish for and appreciation of everything beautiful, great, and good, but with a temper so genial that the friction of the world shall not wear upon our sensibilities." Unwittingly this kindly wisdom was neglected, and I started my long journey with the largest expectations and the smallest amount of patience. This has caused many stumbles and impeded my progress, but as thought becomes more receptive to the truth, the way grows more beautiful and the vision plainer, so that "the wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein."

(Mrs.) ALICE M. JONES, Denver, Colo.

I wish to express my gratitude to God for the wonderful revelation of Christian Science, which has been the means of restoring my child to perfect health after he was given up by doctors. When he was born one arm was found to be broken in two places, at the shoulder and the elbow. It was quite useless and very much twisted and he had the appearance of a hump on his back. Doctors asserted that an operation would be necessary when he was a little older, and one stated that as the child was such a weakling, he did not think it would be necessary, as he did not expect him to live. Shortly afterwards it was decided to try Christian Science treatment, and in a week the baby began to move his arm and open his hand. He was quite healed in a very short time. The arm has since been examined by a surgeon, who pronounced it normal. In addition to this my little boy has been healed of whooping cough, boils, and a very severe skin eruption. Help was also given during vaccination period and he suffered no apparent discomfort. Thanks to Christian Science he is now a perfectly healthy boy.

My wife and I have had abundant proof of the greatness of Christian Science, and we are only two of the many who are thankful and grateful for this wonderful revelation.

GEORGE MANSELL, Liverpool, England.

I should like to verify the testimony given by my brother-in-law, for I had the privilege of seeing the healing of his little boy. It would be difficult to describe the transformation that has taken place in a very short time. The child's arm is now normal, and he is a healthy, happy boy.

Christian Science was first brought to my notice by a friend, who gave me a Sentinel to read. The articles and testimonies appealed to me so much that I decided to learn more of what appeared to be just the religion I had been seeking. I began to attend the church services in September, 1915, and will never forget how deeply I was impressed. The study of the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, was taken up almost immediately. It interested me greatly, and I found that I had read for five consecutive hours. Previous to this I had never been able to read longer than half an hour at a time without experiencing great pain in my eyes. I have been healed of great sorrow, also physical troubles. A bad attack of neuralgia was overcome in one treatment; and a severe cough, from which I had suffered for at least fifteen years, has entirely disappeared. For this healing I am extremely grateful. I had tried almost every known remedy without getting relief and had been told I would probably suffer from this trouble all my life. It is, however, for the better understanding of God and of man as His reflection which one gains through the study of the Bible together with the Christian Science textbook, that I feel most grateful.

Words can never express my thankfulness to God and my gratitude to our dear Leader, Mrs. Eddy, for her unselfed love in giving to the world this beautiful truth.

✧ (Miss) LUCY PERRY.

With a heart full of gratitude and love to God and also to our dear Leader, I give this testimony of what Christian Science has done for me. I first became interested in it at an early age; and through the daily life and influence of a young Christian Scientist my thought then was that if Christian Science helped her to live as she did, I wanted it too; and by an earnest, prayerful study of the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, I have learned my lesson in divine Science.

At that time I was in great need of something, I knew not what. I was like a ship at sea, lost in a storm, not knowing which way to steer my course. I had attended many different churches, but their beliefs did not satisfy my longing desire. When Christian Science was presented to me, I knew it was what I had longed for, and all the literature I could get was most eagerly read. I am now content, satisfied, and happy. The spiritual awakening has been the greatest blessing. It came while I was attending a Christian Science church service for the first time. The subject of the Lesson-Sermon was "Love." I grasped something of the real meaning of the word, and the whole service was a revelation to me. I have received several physical healings for which I am most grateful. After suffering from nervous prostration for nearly six months, during which time I was given up by physicians, I turned to Christian Science and was instantaneously healed.

It is now over nine years since I came into Christian Science, and I am very grateful to the friends who have so faithfully helped me. I have walked through the "valley of the shadow of death," but feared no evil, for I realized that God, divine Love, was with me and nothing could harm His child. Our literature gives us spiritual food for thought. I have had the blessed privilege of becoming a member of The Mother Church, and my one desire is to live the life of a true Christian Scientist, to help others as I have been helped.

(Mrs.) Lora M. Lenertz, Deerhead, Kan.

In gratitude to our Father-Mother God, and to Mrs. Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, I am writing this testimony in the hope that it will help some one to seek and to find God, divine Love. Christian Science came into my life about twelve years ago. At that time I had reached, as it seemed to me, the end of all earthly hopes; and as I knew nothing of heaven, the future looked dark indeed. I did not take up the reading of the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, to find health, but because I was told that through the study of this book I would learn how to love my enemies. After reading the first page in the chapter on Prayer I knew that I had found the God I had been seeking from childhood, and after reading for about two days I suddenly realized that I was healed of heart trouble, an abnormal condition of the kidneys, and stomach disorder. I knew that I could eat without distress anything that was set before me, which I had not been able to do for many years. The joy and peace that came to me at that time cannot be expressed in words. As I continued to read that wonderful book, the Bible became a new book to me, and I knew that I had started in the right direction to a correct understanding of Life and holiness.

I am still seeking to know more of God and to let the light shine so that our heavenly Father may be glorified.

Of all the numerous blessings which have come to me through the study of Christian Science, one of the greatest is the wonderful illumination which its teaching throws upon the spiritual meaning of the Scriptures. For some years I suffered from weak nerves, neuralgia, and a condition of the heart which the doctor told me was serious. For ten years I had been troubled with a severe form of nasal catarrh, which defied all medical remedies and seemed to be sapping my strength. All these ailments were healed through the application of Christian Science, and I am now well and strong and able to do my work with pleasure. The conditions were not overcome immediately. When I first sought a practitioner I imagined that every pain and discord would immediately vanish, and was not a little disappointed to find that they did not do so. I had to learn that the wrong thinking which had brought on the suffering must be exchanged for correct, scientific thinking before true healing could be effected. As I tried to eliminate false beliefs and erroneous teaching, and to cultivate love for humanity in the place of self-love and self-pity, my health began to improve.

For about seven years I have taken no material remedies whatever, and I never was so well in my life. In difficult business conditions Christian Science has been to me an unfailing help. I am grateful beyond words for the wealth of literature which is ours, and to that noble woman, Mrs. Eddy, the Discoverer of Christian Science, who has made possible in this age a repetition of the works of Jesus and his disciples, bringing about the present fulfillment of the great Teacher's own words, "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also."

(Mrs.) Annie Saville, Headingley, Leeds, England.

I wish to tell how happy I am for having had Christian Science brought to my notice. I have known of this truth about a year, and during the ten months when I served in the Army it was a constant help. I had heard Christian Science mentioned many times, but gave it no more than passing notice until after reading the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. Then I knew it was just what I had longed for. Now it is invaluable to me in my daily work, which I find much easier, for a sense of timidity and lack of confidence has been overcome. Shortly after entering the Army I began reading the Lesson-Sermons and I have never missed one day in doing so, slowly and thoughtfully, since that time. Through this constant study and application of the truth and the help of the Camp Welfare worker I was freed from lameness, due to spraining my ankle eleven years ago. Not a sign of the trouble remains. I can walk as well and as far as anyone without the slightest thought of pain. This was my first demonstration of the healing power of Truth and I feel truly grateful for it.

I could go on and on telling about the many uplifting thoughts that come to me in my studies. It is true, genuine happiness to study this healing truth and to do as we are taught by it; and for all the good things learned I feel happy and grateful.—John W. Wood, Streator, Ill.

While in Wisconsin on business I became interested in Christian Science. For sixteen years I had suffered greatly from the results of smoking and chewing tobacco, drinking, gambling, and using profane language. When I learned that God's son cannot sin and does not want to sin, I was healed of these habits; and when I learned that man sees and hears spiritually, I was healed of deafness of the left ear. I have had many other healings and am very grateful for them. I am a member of a branch church and of The Mother Church and grateful for the privilege of being a subscriber to the Christian Science periodicals. Everlasting gratitude is due our Leader, Mrs. Eddy, who so unselfishly pointed to all mankind the way to love our Father-Mother God and His Son.—Henry Menton, New York, N. Y.

I have been helped so much through reading the testimonies in the Sentinel that I feel as though some one might be benefited by hearing a few of my experiences since taking up the study of Christian Science. Through having friends talk to me of this healing truth I was freed from a chronic intestinal trouble immediately. My husband and I began the study of Christian Science, and since then I have been able to lay aside glasses, which had been worn constantly for over fifteen years. Fears of all kinds have been allayed. We have been beautifully led to find a home, when it has been necessary to move from one city to another. Business opportunities have opened up wonderfully, and my husband has been advanced several times by his employers.

I could fill pages with healings from all kinds of discord and inharmony, and often wonder how we ever lived without this beautiful truth.

(Mrs.) GEORGIANA CLINE, Baltimore, Md.

It is with much thankfulness to God and gratitude to Mrs. Eddy for Christian Science, and the sincere hope that these words may bring encouragement to others, that I write this testimony. Although from the age of six years I had been a regular attendant at Sunday school and church, during the year 1913 I ceased attending church and tried to satisfy the spiritual desire by reading the Bible; but I was unable to reconcile what I read, as there seemed to be so much contradiction. All my life my health had been extremely good, yet I occasionally experienced periods of utter despondency, until in desperation I purchased a copy of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," because Christian Science was the only religion I had heard of that even claimed to be practical, and I had ceased to be at all interested in mere theory. Here again I seemed to be baffled, as I did not understand what I read.

In the early winter I was engaged in some special work which required great mental alertness, and so I was utterly dismayed one night when I awakened with an intense earache and learned from the specialist summoned that I could expect total deafness within a year unless a large growth in the ear was removed. I immediately went to the hospital to prepare for the operation, but my physician was called to another city for a few days, and this time spent in morbid reflection seemed unendurable. A friend who had known of my slight interest in Christian Science asked if she might have a practitioner treat me until the day of the operation, and I rather indifferently consented, promptly forgetting all about the promised treatment. In a preliminary examination for the operation, however, the examining physician said he could see nothing to operate on, but would let the case rest until the specialist returned. On his return the specialist expressed much surprise and interest in the case, and after a careful examination corroborated the opinion of the other physician; consequently, the following day I was released from the hospital without having had any treatment other than that of the Christian Science practitioner. I did not realize the source of my healing until some weeks later, when I refused to continue treatments from the specialist for a minor trouble in the nose after part of a small growth there had been cut away.

The despondency did not lessen, and I was very impatient about having lost so much time from my work, until a friend finally urged me to renew my interest in Christian Science. I attended a Sunday morning service and went to the Wednesday evening meeting and then commenced treatment with a practitioner. After several visits with her I caught glimpses of the, to me, unique features of this religion, namely, strict adherence and obedience to the First Commandment; but it was not until after almost three years' study, with frequent help from the practitioner, that the sense of despondency was fully destroyed.

All during the years since then I have had manifold blessings through this uplifting and sustaining truth, experiencing many mental and physical healings. Among these blessings have been attendance at a Christian Science Sunday school as a pupil and later as a teacher, class instruction, membership in The Mother Church and a branch church, a great and increasing degree of freedom from "sudden fear," learning and demonstrating the real meaning of "home," and rapid emergence out of attacks of sickness. Omnipresent, omnipotent Truth protected both myself and my husband while he was in one of our training camps the past year. I wish also to express loving gratitude for our literature, which has brought me untold comfort and assistance in many times of seemingly great need.

Signs of the Times

[Rocky Mountain News, Denver, Colo.]

As hard-headed a business man as John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is reported to have said a day or two since that industrial peace will never arrive until both capital and labor put into operation the golden rule. "Bolshevism is not likely to spread in the United States when the wage earner knows that capital is treating him fairly," continued Mr. Rockefeller. "Therefore, the sanest industrial policy is that which has constantly in mind the welfare of the employees as well as profits, and which, when human considerations demand it, subordinates profits to welfare."

This is the prophecy. What are the signs of its fulfillment? A dispatch of the same day announced the transfer by the Eastman Kodak Company of six million dollars' worth of stock to its older employees and the setting aside of a like amount for the newer employees as soon as they became eligible through length of service—not as a gift, but to be paid for on easy terms at par value, about one sixth of its real value. On the same day the Endicott-Johnson corporation of New York announced that each year henceforth, after paying a certain fixed dividend on preferred stock, the remainder of the profits shall be divided fifty-fifty between the workers and the owners of the stock. These are not concessions with a string tied to them. If so, they would be worse than useless. And they are as complimentary to the employees as to the employers, for discontented, disloyal workmen would never inspire such expressions of good will.

Surely, these may be accepted as signs of good omen. They mark the long, long journey traveled by society since feudal lords forged an iron collar about the necks of their serfs. Are they not rainbow promises of America's immunity, as Mr. Rockefeller indicates, to Bolshevism, which, full of hate and forgetting that two wrongs never make a right, is attempting to-day to forge an iron collar about the neck of capitalism? The golden rule has not yet arrived, to be sure, in the industrial world. But let us remember this: when it does arrive it will be as a still, small voice. It will come in no noisy, raucous convention, but it will steal into the heart of the employer at his desk and of the artisan at his bench or lathe. It will be more enduring for the amelioration of humanity than any bargain or compact, even though it be engraved on steel and stored in a fireproof vault.

[From an editorial in The Independent-Times, Streator, Ill.]

As a religion capable of vitalizing the soul of man, Christian Science has a very glorious record to its credit; as a scientific therapeutic, it will be judged by the scientific standards which it assumes as its basis. This article presumes only to notice its religious assets, which are memorable enough in their worth to be recognized in all their potency. In an age of crass materialism it has been the gracious function of Christian Science to reaffirm the dominancy of the spiritual and prove beyond peradventure of doubt that the kingdom of heaven is within you, and conversely the kingdom of hell likewise.

The reality about any human being is not his body, not his aches and pains, not his clothes, his lands, his chattels, but his mental and moral capacity to react on all of these. It is the intangible thing that is real, the thing you cannot see, taste, or feel, that decides whether your world is to be glorious or infamous; in other words, as the Christian Scientist would say, the measure of your God consciousness is the measure of your reality, the measure of your freedom, the measure of your service to the world, the measure of your ability to be well, sound, sane, and efficient. The human body and all of its environing features are the raw material on which the alchemy of the spirit acts to transmute into further spiritual capacity, and the great value of the Christian Science movement in an age which has grossly overemphasized the claims of matter, is that the Scientist has cut through the morass of debasing servitude to the illusions of materialism, and reaffirmed with victorious power the transcendency of Spirit to conquer all the obstacles which threaten our harmonious development.

The idealists of all ages have made similar claims as to the paramount power of the spirit, but they have not subjected their faith to the acid test of daily experience as the Christian Scientists have done, which makes their religion a practical working hypothesis for the regeneration of both the body and the soul.

[Palo Alto (Calif.) Times]

Religion, in its true sense, takes on a larger and larger meaning as the bounds of understanding widen, and in the process it sometimes leaves its atrophied votary behind. In its crudest sense religion is the tie which binds man's spiritual nature to a supernatural being or force upon which he is conscious that he is dependent. In its higher development it is an understanding of the universal relationship of all things as proceeding from a common cause. In its scientific aspect religion ventures to know all that mind may know about that common cause and to trace its limitless workings. The desire to understand and appreciate the great laws of everlasting Life and universal Truth is something that cannot be satisfied by blind faith, which accepts without question or analysis. This thirst for truth rises above the dead level of blind faith, which leads another to accept without understanding. It demands that religion shall be a philosophy of abundant and happy life, holding fast to all that is good and true. It hesitates not to discard the incongruous and the unessential, even though they may be bolstered by the dust of centuries.

[News item in Boston (U.S.A.) Traveler]

Members of the Unitarian, Quaker, and Christian Science churches are represented on the board of governors elected by the Worcester Y. M. C. A. This is said to be one of the first, if not the first, liberal action of this nature taken by any individual association since the war, and it is said to anticipate similar action by the national association.

[The Christian Work]

We have brought the realm of human relationships up into the kingdom of God; now we must bring the nations, until all the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ. We must insist that as a result of this war there be but one standard of ethics in the kingdom of God.

Letters of Appreciation

Many letters of appreciation of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR and other Christian Science activities are constantly being received. These letters express what these activities mean to different individuals in various occupations and pursuits. The favorable comment that has been received on those already published indicates that they are welcome and helpful; therefore others will be published under the above heading. Extracts from such letters follow:

YOU will probably be interested in some comment on The Christian Science Monitor from the library of the University ———. A friend who is employed there and is becoming interested in Christian Science told me yesterday that the Monitor was coming to the library and would be bound, and that she was curious as to why the library was taking it and made inquiry. She was told that it was because of the editorials in the paper, which were considered the finest and most impartial.

I AM not a Christian Scientist nor have I any personal interest in the paper referred to, but I have read it for some time, and while I have not found out why it is called after a sect, I have discovered that it has a staff of unusually able writers who seem anxious to establish the truth first, last, and all the time. I wish there were more papers with the same object in view.

IN closing I wish to state that I consider the Monitor, beyond a doubt, the foremost paper in America in its line. It is especially good on foreign as well as domestic news, and its editorials are of a superior type. One of the other members of the department and I take it as joint subscribers for the many clippings that we secure from it along our line of work.

MAY it interest you to know that this letter and subscription comes to you from a wage earner, an orthodox Jew (born in Russia), as a mark of appreciation and admiration for the good quality of newspaper you publish and for such a small subscription price.

"What I say unto you I say unto all, WATCH." Jesus

VOLUME XXII SEPTEMBER 20, 1919 NUMBER 3

"The Lion of the tribe of Juda"

LOUISE KNIGHT WHEATLEY

IN the fifth chapter of Revelation we read of a book "written within and on the backside, sealed with seven seals," and the Revelator goes on to say that he "wept much, because no man was found worthy to open and to read the book, neither to look thereon." But presently one of the elders said unto him, "Weep not: behold, the Lion of the tribe of Juda, the Root of David, hath prevailed to open the book, and to loose the seven seals thereof." What is this "Lion of the tribe of Juda," we perhaps wonder, which had power to prevail when all else failed? Since the Bible to be correctly understood must be spiritually interpreted, how natural it is to turn at once to that dear companion, ever close at hand, which is indeed a veritable key to hidden treasures, our beloved textbook; and there we find our answer, on page 514 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy. "Moral courage is 'the lion of the tribe of Juda,' the king of the mental realm."

How beautifully it all unfolds as we ponder it more deeply and recognize the indisputable fact that he who would break the seven seals of error's utmost effort and read, as in an open book, "things which have been kept secret from the foundation of the world," must indeed possess that kingly quality which enables him to roam the mental realm as its master. What Christian Scientist, in fact, has not already proved this, to some extent; for who of us has not, at some time or other, been placed in a hard situation, a trying position, an embarrassing predicament, from which there seemed for the moment no possible way of escape? That so-called mind, which is always enmity to God, likes nothing better than to get mortals into "a tight corner," as the saying is, and then stand off and laugh at them. "What are you going to do about it?" it seems to say; and, to tell the truth, we hardly know, so bound hand and foot do we seem to be by the invisible chains of fear, uncertainty, and irresolution. No matter where we turn, it seems impossible to take a single step in any direction. Yet as we stand there, praying for wisdom to know what to do, it begins to dawn upon us after a while that the one thing needed to break our bonds and set us free, is moral courage.

Following this conviction, quickly comes the realization that no matter how much mortal mind may be laughing at us, there really is a way out after all. If this were not so, would not the one All-power be powerless on some occasions? Divine Love has always and under all circumstances provided "a way out;" let us never forget that. So, as we look about us, gathering fresh courage now from our confidence in God's willingness and ability to help us, a strange thing sometimes happens; instead of seeing no way out at all, we now see two ways,—a right way, which looks like a hard way, and a wrong way, which seems to be a very easy way. The question now arises, Which shall it be?

It should not take a true Christian Scientist long to decide, and the decision once made, all we need is moral courage to take the next step. Sooner or later, to-day or to-morrow or next month or next year, according to our faith in the omnipotence of good, this step is taken, and we find that with it our bonds are instantly broken and we are free to go forward as Principle may direct in that right way, though it may seem the hard way. This is wonderful enough of itself, but after a while another even more wonderful thing happens: the right way gradually ceases to be the hard way, and becomes the easy way instead. Why? Because Love is right there with us, to help us through. A joyous sense of protection, of safety, of peace indescribable steals over us. Can this be the hard path which we thought we were entering? We supposed we should have to tread it with bleeding footsteps; but it might be carpeted with flowers, so little do we feel the stones and the thorns and the hard places on the road. Where are the jagged rocks which we once saw standing in the way, the threatening cliffs which looked so terrifying, the dark, icy waters which we thought we would have to cross alone? Were they, after all, only the visions of our frightened imagination? How beautifully the way is all smoothed out before us as we go steadily, surely, unfalteringly on, with the Father's hand in ours! Why should we be afraid when all that really is, is on our side?

It may be, however, that some of us have had to learn a much needed lesson by trying to get out of our corner by taking the other path, the wrong way, which seemed the easy way. Then what did we find? Just this,—that we were simply going round in a circle, and would sooner or later find ourselves exactly in the place from which we started. For the easy way is only the hard way camouflaged, as many of us have found to our sorrow. No matter how innocent and alluring it may appear, it never gets us anywhere but right back in our corner again. In other words, the predicament in which a student of Christian Science may find himself will present itself again and again, until he has extricated himself from it in the right way. If he attempts to escape in any other he will simply have to go back, sooner or later, and do it all over again. It may present its claims in a new form and call itself a new set of circumstances; but underneath it all ever lurks the same old lie, the lie which was never squarely faced and overcome, as it should have been, but avoided and evaded and condoned instead.

Another thing we find, when we endeavor to escape the issue by a wrong path: we find that the farther we travel, the darker things seem to grow. It is no small thing to have let go of the Father's hand, and of course that is what we are doing when we voluntarily turn from Principle. We no longer have anything on which to rely, no basis for our conclusions, no foundation for our footsteps, no law to govern our actions, no stability, no permanence. We begin to be afraid, and that is only natural; for when we are walking in a wrong path, we have reason not only to be afraid but to be very much afraid. God has not changed in any way, of course; but what has happened? Even that of which Isaiah wrote, "Behold, the Lord's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear: but your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you, that he will not hear." Has not our Leader expressed the same thought on page 19 of Science and Health, "If living in disobedience to Him, we ought to feel no security, although God is good"?

Why should we, then, why do we, ever wander into that insecure path which never goes anywhere but round and round in a circle? What keeps us from taking that first right step in the other direction? Nothing but lack of moral courage. And what is back of this lack of moral courage? Fear. We are afraid to leave the beaten track of popular opinion lest we be thought odd or queer or different; or we are afraid of hurting somebody's feelings; or we are afraid of losing something,—social standing, business prestige, or personal popularity; or we are afraid of ridicule, the worldling's frown, or its cynical smile; most of all, we are afraid that our motives will be misjudged, our acts misunderstood, our words misinterpreted. So we try to dodge the issue. In other words, while we are not, of course, saying that black is white, we are quite satisfied to compromise by calling it a sort of gray.

Divine Principle, however, recognizes no such vacuous and neutral tint: He who is not with me is against me. Right is right, and wrong is wrong. There is no convenient middle ground. We stand at the parting of the ways. Will we choose the right path now, or do we prefer to go round in a circle a little longer? Of course no one likes to be misunderstood; but after all, what does it matter? There are worse things than being misunderstood. Being a coward before Truth is worse. Every one who has ever done anything for humanity has been misunderstood more or less. Our Master himself was mocked and reviled, as he trod in mighty meekness the shores of Galilee. Then, many centuries later, another great teacher had to stand and face the world alone, —a gentle, patient, loving woman, misrepresented, maligned, misunderstood. Have we ever considered what it must have meant to be the only Christian Scientist on earth? No wonder that the sublime quota of moral courage which enabled our beloved Leader, Mrs. Eddy, to take her single-handed stand for Truth, was also that which opened for her the seven seals, and gave us the complete and final revelation of Truth as contained in our textbook.

Is not this quality, then, well worth cultivating, and never more than now? Because the outward conflict across the sea is over, it by no means follows that our mental warfare, as Christian soldiers, is over also. The ringing of the peace bells did not at the same time, unfortunately, sound the requiem for all error. Already those on the watch-towers have given us warning. Let us not subside into self-satisfied lethargy, lest it trap us, after all, in the very midst of our songs of victory. During this coming period of reconstruction many questions will undoubtedly arise,—indeed, have already arisen,—which will require much earnest, prayerful consideration on the part of every student of Christian Science. The warfare between flesh and Spirit has not yet reached the place where there is even an armistice, as most of us know, and we may at any time be called upon to take a stand for Principle which will not seem easy; but let us always remember that Love is right there with us to help us through.

Then let us cultivate this moral courage which enables us to take the required first step, thereby helping others to do the same. "On ne passe pas" should be our daily watchword, as each wrong suggestion is halted and challenged. Let nothing pass which is not in accord with Principle. Let nothing elude our mental vigilance; most of all, that phase of evil which may come in the guise of good. Let there be no good-natured, easy compromise. Since we must take our stand against error, sooner or later, why not meet every question fairly and squarely as it comes? In the presence of "the Lion of the tribe of Juda" it will quickly show itself for what it is; for it dares do nothing else. And why not take our stand at once? Surely there is nothing to be gained by waiting. We live not in a past of unhappy memories, nor yet in a future of vague possibilities. We live in the to-day of Mind's eternal presence.

Subduing the Belief in Disease

ONE of the fixed beliefs of the human mind is that disease is very real and that it operates because of certain laws of cause and effect. The student of Christian Science is learning that disease has no more reality than the human mind concedes to it, and that it has no law back of it by which it is produced, maintained, or operated. This at first thought may seem to be an extreme statement, and yet its verity is being proved beyond question in Christian Science practice, in which the fundamental difference between reality and unreality is clearly demonstrated.

On page 145 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy we read: "The struggle for the recovery of invalids goes on, not between material methods, but between mortal minds and immortal Mind. The victory will be on the patient's side, only as immortal Mind through Christ, Truth, subdues the human belief in disease." The patient, then, is that condition of human belief which calls itself "a sick man;" in other words, it is sick thought which needs to be healed, and this is done by substituting Truth for error, reality for unreality, and harmony for discord.

This must of necessity be a purely mental or spiritual process, since the elements to be eliminated obtain only in human belief and the remedy is alone found in spiritual understanding. There is therefore no use spending time in the contemplation of that which is called physical or inert matter, for scientific demonstration deals with conditions as they really are, not as they may seem to be. The human belief of disease, or the human belief of sin, has no real entity. Jesus' teachings set forth the fact that sin and sickness are one and the same thing, and that the operation of God's healing law destroys them, and because with Him "is no variableness, neither shadow of turning," the same law is operative now and forever.

The human belief in disease assumes many phases, of which physical sickness is only a small part. It is important that mankind should be taught to perceive its erroneous mental character, whatever particular phase of it may be presented. The belief may be a sick body, a sick mind, or a sick business; it may be a claim of poverty, lack, limitation, hereditary taint or impairment; it may be a supposed tendency toward self-indulgence, vicious habits, intemperance, or the like; each one of these obtains only in human belief and is therefore destructible.

The primary purpose of Christian Science is the salvation of humanity, and all its activities are intelligently directed toward this end. Mankind needs to be saved from sin, and needs salvation also from that which is the result of sin. Disease, being mental in its origin and procurement, is due entirely to the bias of false education and to wrong thought processes. That which destroys it must then be opposite, or right thought processes. This is clearly set forth in Science and Health (p. 423): "The metaphysician making Mind his basis of operation irrespective of matter and regarding the truth and harmony of being as superior to error and discord, has rendered himself strong, instead of weak, to cope with the case; and he proportionately strengthens his patient with the stimulus of courage and conscious power."

What a wonderful opportunity is presented through Christian Science for the overcoming of all evil; for it teaches plainly and directly that the only Mind there is to govern man is God, and that because God is omnipotent, no human belief or false sense can resist His power. The necessity, then, is to bring this teaching to mankind, to arrest their attention, and show them the better way of spiritual, right thinking. The wise man said, "When a man's ways please the Lord, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him." Surely the ways which "please the Lord" must be ways of good, of purity, of kindliness and Christian charity. These ways of right thinking must include love for God and man, confidence in the right and disbelief in the wrong, and the certain assurance of God's protecting care. Thus it is that the "enemies," lust, malice, hatred, fear, and the like, are nullified and cease to claim either presence or power, for they find no abiding place in that consciousness which reflects God.

In like manner disease fails to find lodgment or abiding place with one whose thought is in accord with Truth. Disease thus becomes as impotent as any of the suggestions of evil which came to Jesus and found nothing in him that could respond. Jesus had no belief in evil, and his experience substantiates Mrs. Eddy's statement (Science and Health, p. 234), "Evil thoughts, lusts, and malicious purposes cannot go forth, like wandering pollen, from one human mind to another, finding unsuspected lodgment, if virtue and truth build a strong defence." Christian Science teaches humanity how best to build this "strong defence," how to overcome evil and discord, and how to attain to that heritage of the sons of God, which Peter speaks of as "incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away."

A Lesson from the Forest Reserve

OLIVE JENNINGS ORBISON

IN the recent days of stress and anxiety the attention of the Christian Scientist and in fact of every Christian was called again and again to the thought of protection,—protection in battle, on the seas, in the air, and even in the quiet fastnesses of the home, protection from the various phases of evil, which at times have seemed almost overwhelming. Never before has humanity been so awake to the need of something higher, outside and above itself, to appeal to for safety and comfort. To the lay mind this sure turning has been surprising and a bit disconcerting, and a great struggle to meet this desire is going on, but the Christian Scientist knows it is a marvelous spiritual awakening, which, if rightly directed, can revolutionize the thought of the whole world.

Although during the conflict I had no near relatives serving in the battle zone, from the first the mental side of the struggle claimed attention. I knew it was my duty constantly to work and pray for the protection and victory of those serving, and I am particularly grateful for an experience through which I passed shortly after the United States entered the war, and which, helping me to know how lovingly God stands ready to protect and save from any trouble which may assail, gave my work for others a surer foundation.

A trip in a small automobile had been planned and was being carried out. The party consisted of two, my husband and myself. We had had several adventures and had overcome minor difficulties. One day it was found necessary to make a very long detour in order to reach a certain city included in our itinerary. This detour led five thousand feet up into the mountains and across one of the large Government forest reserves, without so much as a postal station or a farmhouse the whole of the way, a distance of over one hundred miles. No apprehension was felt, however. The weather was perfect, and after a thorough examination of the car an early start was made. In a short time the last post office was left behind, and the road began to wind up and up into the mountains. When at last the top of the mountain was reached, the road had become a mere wagon track, leading through great pine forests. We enjoyed to the utmost the wonderful views. Dry needles cracked under our tires, the air was like incense, and the sky a beautiful blue bowl. We knew that there were wild animals all about us, but we were not disturbed, the car was making fair progress, and I remember as we rolled along I was humming to myself a song from our Hymnal, "He that has God his guardian made."

At about two o'clock in the afternoon, when nearly half of our journey still lay before us, we came out upon a wide, open plateau several miles in circumference, encircled by the pine forests. Suddenly there was a crashing sound, the machine trembled, ran a short distance, and stopped. Examination showed that the high grass between the ruts in the road had concealed a sharp pointed rock, and this hidden surface had ripped asunder the pan of the car, caught the oil pump and clipped it neatly off, draining the engine and leaving the car a wreck.

So suddenly had the accident occurred, and so appalling did it seem, we were almost unable to grasp its significance. One moment we were rolling smoothly along enchanted with our surroundings; the next, staring at each other across a useless car. We found ourselves with but scanty provisions, marooned forty miles from civilization, in a lonely forest infested with wild animals. I quickly perceived that the work was mine, for my husband, with a greater knowledge of our difficulties added to the responsibility of my welfare, seemed overcome. Something had to be done speedily; night comes quickly in the mountains. There was a wordless cry to God for help,—no formulated plea, just a heartfelt reaching for Him, answered almost immediately by the conviction that tremendous though the problem seemed, we would still be shown the way out.

I expressed this to my husband, and after a few moments it was decided that one must stay and one must seek help, trusting to God to guide. I remained with the car, on the forlorn hope that some one might pass,—forlorn because the road was not used for days and sometimes weeks at a time,—and he started for the forest a mile or so away. As I watched his form grow smaller and smaller in the distance and finally disappear, my heart fairly stood still; terrible pictures of fear came crowding thick and fast into my imagination. I walked up and down the road, striving to remain calm, and repeating over and over the words, "Divine Love always has met and always will meet every human need," from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 494). With this went a fervent petition to God to protect us and show us the way. After what seemed a very long time I heard a far-away shout, and in the distance I saw a tiny automobile bumping and rolling over the meadows and coming toward me. In it sat my husband and a forest ranger.

My husband said that without material evidence to guide him, after leaving me he stumbled almost blindly along. No sense of where he was going or what he was going to do entered his thought; he just went as if impelled. As he entered the forest a faint trail caught his eye. Following this he threaded his way through the pines, and to his utter amazement he suddenly came upon a clearing where, gathered in a small circle, were the tents of half a dozen forest rangers, fire fighters. The men were as surprised as he was and hurried to our rescue, expressing themselves in no uncertain terms as to what might have happened had we broken down anywhere but in just exactly the spot we did, for this was the only camp in the whole reserve, two thousand and seven hundred square miles, and the only possible place which held help for us. The head ranger remarked to me, "What beats me is, how did he ever happen to walk in the right direction, when he could so easily have missed us." Needless to say, we were taken in and cared for by these kindly men. Among them was a practical automobile man, and he sat for hours patching up our car, and so successfully that it eventually carried us home. We stayed two days with them while oil was procured for our engine, and found it a most delightful visit as we listened to their tales of forest fires, great storms, and difficulties overcome, and we parted from them with regret.

One said to me as I related this experience: "But why did you have an accident in such a remote place? Why were you not protected through the whole trip?" The answer seemed very simple to me. As long as we are struggling with mortal thought, we must inevitably pass through some of its experiences, but it rests with ourselves whether they shall leave us as they found us. Daniel found the protecting power of Love closer than were the lions; so with us, God's care was never absent from us, even though at the time of the accident all material evidences were to the contrary. As we allowed Him to control the situation, however, and started trustingly to find help, it was manifested to us in a way we could never have dreamed of, and the whole incident was turned into a beautiful lesson. It is easily imagined what would have happened if we had supinely believed and yielded to the suggestions which presented themselves to us.

Along the same line of thought we find that our Leader says on page 66 of Science and Health, "Trials are proofs of God's care;" and again on page 410, "Every trial of our faith in God makes us stronger." It is for each individual Christian Scientist to discover that a trial of faith can prove God's protecting care; for it is only as one rises above the trial that the care is revealed and the proof established in consciousness. In the light of later events, the lesson of the forest reserve was a necessary and precious one, and not for worlds would we part with an experience which brought with it such definite, strengthening, and glorious results.

Confidence

HAROLD D. COLTER

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE was indeed a wonderful help to the writer while he was serving in the ranks as a soldier. On our departure from Canada the conditions aboard ship were very unfavorable, and therefore the disease prevalent at that time found many victims. Some of my very best friends never had the experience of reaching England, and for a time every one called our boat the doomed ship. While I had been what one might call a lukewarm student of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" up to my leaving Canada, I was very much awakened out of my dream and saw that I had to put forth a great deal of honest mental effort. I was thrown upon my own resources to work out my problems, whereas before that time I was always willing to call for my loving mother's assistance; but the words quoted in Science and Health (p. 266), "Man's extremity is God's opportunity," brought home a wonderful lesson to me.

Each day the moment I arose from my hammock I began to know the truth about my situation and relationship to God. Everywhere about me there seemed to be darkness and dismay; every turn I made it seemed I ran into some material phase of error; but the moment I went above deck I studied my little copy of Science and Health, tried hard to grasp firmly the contents, and then went "about my Father's business" rejoicing. Every minute of the day I clung steadfastly to the truth, and many times throughout the long nights while on board ship, upon waking my first thought was to declare and know that I was being divinely taken care of. I was therefore indeed grateful to arrive on English soil feeling fine and awakened to the fact that working out my own problems, relying on God, good, under all circumstances, was indeed a big blessing to me. My understanding assisted me wonderfully with the men I had to instruct, knowing that I could reflect only love toward them all and receive the same from them in return. On our return trip to Canada we experienced very rough weather, few being able to come on deck; but I am glad to say that I was in perfect health all the voyage back and arrived home in time for a happy Christmas.

I had enlisted to serve Principle,—and surely I was rewarded. Each day I am trying to show forth my thanksgiving in studying and living right. In the first sentence of the Preface to Science and Health Mrs. Eddy says, "To those leaning on the sustaining infinite, to-day is big with blessings." This was a great help to me throughout my military career, especially while being tossed about by the waves in mid-ocean apparently with very little material protection. My safety, however, was in clinging steadfastly to Truth. The words of the psalmist brought a wonderful sense of protection, "He that dwelleth in the secret place of the most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty."

Fuller Light

H. VON BERGEN

THE writer desires to express his gratitude for the healing he received from the daily reading of The Christian Science Monitor. Born in Germany, after his parents had returned there from this country, he was raised and educated there and came to California a few years before he attained his majority. Living with relatives who were thoroughly American, he soon acquired the language and customs of the country, and in due course of time became a citizen. From time to time he visited his family in Germany, and on several occasions ran afoul of German bureaucracy, which thoroughly disgusted him and convinced him that he had made no mistake in selecting the United States for his permanent residing place. On his first visit he was informed that the laws required registration and a request for permission to remain in the country for a limited time. After complying with this he was informed by the authorities that in order to avoid trouble in future and to insure indefinite sojourns thereafter, it would be best for him to renounce his American citizenship and to serve in the army for one year.

The writer politely but firmly declined to accept this advice, and thereafter notice was served upon him that leave to remain for two months had been granted and that if at the expiration of this time he was still found to be in the country, an escort to the frontier would be provided. Similar treatment on every subsequent visit did not increase the writer's love for the German system, and had it not been for the family ties, he never would have visited the country again. When war was declared in 1914, it was not the love of the country but what he considered his sense of justice, which made the writer lean toward Germany; for knowing history, it seemed to him that the cause of the war was a desire to crush an inconvenient competitor and that this plan should fail. On the other hand, he could plainly see the danger for democracy and religious freedom in Germany's ascendancy, and thus he hoped that a compromise would be effected.

Some years prior to the beginning of the war the writer had become a student of Christian Science, was a regular reader of The Christian Science Monitor and a great admirer of its editorials. Great was his consternation, therefore, when this newspaper came out strongly against Germany and her methods, and in fact denounced her entire system in no uncertain terms. The writer did not at first seem to be able to comprehend why such a stand should be taken. Often the editorials would make him unhappy, so that he would have to retire to his closet and pray to be shown the light; and that which always sustained him in these moments of doubt was the positive assurance that our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, had founded The Christian Science Monitor with the avowed purpose of harming no man, but of blessing all mankind, and that this established purpose was effective forever.

Gradually the fuller light came, and long before this country became a participant in the struggle, the conviction had come to the writer that the German people had, with the phenomenal growth of material wealth, been turned from the true religion, and that selfishness, gross materialism, and a false philosophy had made them an easy prey to the subtle influences of mesmerism, discovered in their own midst and brought to a state of perfection by unscrupulous manipulators. It was seen that mesmerism must be destroyed by the weight of its own wickedness.

As the truth was thus unfolded, it became clearer that the struggle was not primarily one between nations but between good and evil, and that the outcome could be but the victory of the former, so that the brotherhood of man might be established and all mankind be governed by the one Mind, and not by creeds and dogmas. The world at large surely owes The Christian Science Monitor a debt of gratitude for fearlessly exposing the fallacy of the German system; and the German people themselves will at some time gratefully appreciate the loving and helping hand which is being extended to them through Christian Science, and which persistently points out the way to rend the veil of darkness and to find the light.

Out of the Depths

LAURA GERAHTY

WHERE art Thou, Lord? A thousand voices call,
And saddened hearts reach out for Thee in vain.
Can no light pierce the gloom or lift the pall
That hides Thy healing from a world of pain?

Where art Thou, Truth? Within a dwelling mean
A humble heart rejoices. One has found
Above earth's poverty, by sense unseen,
The healing Christ; good doth for all abound!

Selected Articles

["Substance"—The Christian Science Monitor, Boston, U.S.A., Feb. 18, 1919]

It does not require any very exhaustive study of the New Testament to recognize that throughout its pages the endeavor is persistently made to instruct mankind as to the true nature of substance. In its pages Jesus is heard declaring, "It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing." And Peter calls aloud: "For all flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of grass. The grass withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away." Similarly, also, it is Paul who announces to the Galatians in no uncertain language: "For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh: and these are contrary the one to the other." In all such statements the truth is intimated that Spirit is substantial and that matter, or the flesh, which is Spirit's opposite, is insubstantial or unreal.

Now this teaching is fundamental. It lies at the very foundation of true Christian doctrine and demonstration. It was because of his understanding of the truth about substance that Christ Jesus performed every one of the miracles, as they are called, which proved so conclusively the divine nature of his mission. The Galilean Prophet had such a knowledge of God, the divine Principle of the universe, he knew so well the allness of Principle, that he was aware of the unreality of matter. He did not hold these facts merely as interesting theories. They were real and actual enough to be put to the test; and this he did, setting at naught the so-called laws of matter by stilling the tempest at sea, walking on the water, and raising the dead; indeed, every one of the healings he performed proved the power of Truth to annul so-called material law. To restore a paralyzed limb to normal activity was but the work of a moment to the man whose understanding of Principle was clear enough to enable him to perceive the total unreality of matter.

There is little doubt that the generality of mankind are often impressed by the fleetingness of human existence. No one can look upon the changing scenes of human life without recognizing that there is something, to say the least of it, insubstantial about all material phenomena. Change and decay seem to be the outstanding feature of everyday experience. And this has struck many so forcibly that, not having the explanation of the phenomenal and not possessing a knowledge of reality which only Christian Science is capable of giving, they have been driven to the brink of despair, even while trying to cling perhaps to some of the most cherished dogmas. It is absolutely essential to get down to bedrock fundamentals. There can be no "open vision" otherwise. Unless the truth about God, divine Principle, becomes known to men, they are bound to remain in doubt as to the meaning of the transient happenings of material sense, and liable to be driven down before them in their lawlessness.

It is the truth about divine Principle which Christian Science is teaching the world to-day. Instructed by Christian Science, one can recognize with improved clarity of vision the extent and the nature of the whole human position. There is not a single human trouble that Christian Science cannot heal. And how is this possible? Because Christian Science declares the truth about divine Principle, and explains how spiritual law, which is the law through which Principle operates, can be brought to bear on every human difficulty in order to solve it. Christian Science declares that divine Principle is infinite. Spirit is another name for Principle. And so Spirit is infinite. At the very outset one is thus brought face to face with a proposition which forces the thinker to contemplate the whole problem of existence in a new light. It must occur to him at once that the acceptance of the truth that Spirit is infinite necessitates the conclusion that matter is unreal, since nothing real can exist outside of infinity. And if he be faithful to the conclusion, he will have commenced the solution of the entire human problem. On page 335 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy states the position clearly and forcibly when she writes: "Spirit is the only substance, the invisible and indivisible infinite God. Things spiritual and eternal are substantial. Things material and temporal are insubstantial."

But, it is sometimes said: To think of Spirit does not convey much to me. What is Spirit? The term is indeed one of great value, revealing as it does to the metaphysician many phases of God's being. To some, especially at the beginning of their study of divine Science, the word Mind, although it is simply another synonym for Principle, may also be employed profitably. The moment the word Mind is used, the mode of Principle's expression is brought out. There is only one way in which Mind can express itself, namely, through ideas. Hence, as Christian Science states, infinite Mind expresses or manifests itself through an infinite number of ideas. It follows, therefore, that the ideas of Mind, which of course can never be separate from Mind itself, are real substance. Mind's ideas are perfect, because their divine Principle is perfect; and being perfect they are eternal.

As the real universe of spiritual ideas begins to unfold itself to a human being, he may be said to begin to live. He is awakening out of the dream in which matter appears to be real. This awakening not infrequently signifies the healing of some form of disease or sin; for all forms of disease and sin have their pseudo-origin in the belief that matter is real substance. When this false belief is entirely destroyed as human consciousness, sickness and sin will have vanished forevermore, and will have left not even the trace of a memory behind. But until that day arrives the struggle will go on between spiritual truth and material belief, between the understanding of true spiritual substance and the false material concept of it. This struggle is going on to-day as never before. Every time good prevails over evil, every time unselfishness gains the victory over self-will, every time love overcomes hate, injustice, impurity, another glimpse has been obtained of the truth of the statement in Science and Health (p. 468) that "substance is that which is eternal and incapable of discord and decay."

[Robert G. Steele in Unionville (Mich.) Crescent]

Christian Scientists study the same Bible used by other Christian denominations, the Authorized Version or King James Bible. They are constant, consistent daily students of its pages, and Christian Science has undoubtedly produced more earnest students of God's Word than any other single agency.

The teaching of Christian Science relative to heaven and hell is precisely that of Christ Jesus; namely, that neither one is a place or locality to which one is transported after death, the first to be attained only by those who are good, and the second the abode of those who have sinned. The Master, in his reply to the Pharisees' demand as to when the kingdom of God should come, said, "Behold, the kingdom of God is within you." He thus indicated that heaven is a present possibility attainable here and now to those who understand his teaching. It is therefore a state of consciousness. Hell, heaven's suppositional opposite, is therefore an opposite state of mind. Mrs. Eddy makes this plain on page 266 of the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," where she writes, "The sinner makes his own hell by doing evil, and the saint his own heaven by doing right." Being good through fear of punishment or hope of reward never made man truly righteous. Right thinking and right acting as a result of a knowledge of God, good, is the only Christlike way, and this is the teaching of Christian Science.

The members of no religious denomination in the world believe more implicitly in true prayer or use it more constantly than do Christian Scientists. Theirs is not the prayer of supplication and petition only, asking God, as one would an earthly father, to change His mind and bestow something hitherto withheld, but the true prayer of realization and affirmation of God's allness, of His goodness, of His boundless love, and of the real man's relation to Him as His spiritual image and likeness, through which man, reflecting all that God is, has all that God has. This prayer, through the understanding of our spiritual relationship to God, brings us into at-one-ment with Him, and places us in position to realize our holy and right desires.

Christian Scientists use the Lord's Prayer audibly as Jesus gave it to his disciples, and this is the only form of prayer which the Master has given us. Christian Scientists believe in silent prayer, as did Jesus. In the Sermon on the Mount he rebuked those who use vain repetitions and think they shall be heard for their much speaking, and admonished his hearers when they pray to enter into the closet and shut the door—in other words, pray silently and secretly, and he promised that the Father would reward them openly.

In speaking of Deity, particularly in the spiritual interpretation of the Lord's Prayer (Science and Health, p. 16), Christian Scientists use the term "Father-Mother God." The word Mother here has no reference whatever to Mrs. Eddy and was never intended to be so construed. It never is so taken except by those who, like this critic, delight in setting up a man of straw for the mere purpose of knocking him down again. On page 332 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy writes, "Father-Mother is the name for Deity, which indicates His tender relationship to His spiritual creation."

The popular theological use of the names Jesus and Christ as synonymous is no doubt responsible for many misstatements as to the teachings of Christian Science relative to the Master, as well as of much of the ambiguity in the so-called orthodox interpretation of the Bible. Christian Science distinguishes between Jesus, the human man, and Christ, the divine idea, in exactly the same manner as did Christ Jesus himself. In his statement to the Jews, "Before Abraham was, I am," it is apparent that he could not have referred to the human, material Jesus, but to his divine selfhood, or Christ, the idea of God, co-existent and co-eternal with Deity. To his frightened disciples, in the midst of whose deliberations he appeared after the crucifixion and resurrection, he pointed to his hands and feet to indicate that it was no other than Jesus who stood before them. On page 497 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy gives the tenets of Christian Science, one of which is as follows: "We acknowledge that the crucifixion of Jesus and his resurrection served to uplift faith to understand eternal Life, even the allness of Soul, Spirit, and the nothingness of matter."

The statement of our critic that he believed in divine healing but that it should not be connected with religion, certainly discredits the teachings of Christ Jesus and repudiates many of the most important passages in the Bible. The only recorded instance in which Jesus gave a reason for his being recognized as the Christ was in his reply to the messengers of John the Baptist, when they asked him if he was the one who should come, or if they should look for another. He cited his works of healing as proof of his being the Christ. In all Jesus' commands to his disciples and to his followers to preach the gospel he included the one to heal the sick, and a large portion of his ministry was given up to such works. Christian Scientists are endeavoring to emulate Jesus in all his ways and so are found to-day successfully healing the sick, casting out evil, and destroying sin in the same manner and through the same methods as did the Master himself.

[George R. Lowe in Toronto (Ontario) Star]

Paul said that death is the last enemy that shall be destroyed. He also said that Christ Jesus had abolished death. In the very same sense Mrs. Eddy declared that as death is not a spiritual reality or fact, it is unreal. There is no death to God, Spirit, nor to spiritual, immortal man. Similarly Christian Science teaches that sin is not of God, and that spiritual man does not sin, even as John declared. It is an utter misconception to say that Christian Science makes no distinction between God and man. In "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" Mrs. Eddy writes, "Man is never God, but spiritual man, made in God's likeness, reflects God" (p. 70); also she writes on page 250: "Man is not God, but like a ray of light which comes from the sun, man, the outcome of God, reflects God;" and on page 336 she says: "God is the parent Mind, and man is God's spiritual offspring." Throughout all her writings it is consistently maintained that the real, spiritual man is God's idea, the conscious expression of divine Mind.

[Willard J. Welch in Forest City (Iowa) Republican]

In the Forest City Summit under the caption "Prodigal Son" is a report of a sermon in which the clergyman said, "It is the cross which is left out of Christian Science."

In "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, the Christian Science textbook, on page 288, it is written: "The cross is the central emblem of history. It is the lodestar in the demonstration of Christian healing,—the demonstration by which sin and sickness are destroyed." In her Message to The Mother Church for 1902 Mrs. Eddy writes: "The great Master triumphed in furnace fires. Then, Christian Scientists, trust, and trusting, you will find divine Science glorifies the cross and crowns the association with our Saviour in his life of love." And in the Christian Science Hymnal (p. 214) is a beautiful hymn written by Mrs. Eddy and frequently sung at the services held the world over by Christian Science churches, which contains these words:—

> Then his unveiled, sweet mercies show
> Life's burdens light.
> I kiss the cross, and wake to know
> A world more bright.

Throughout the entire writings of Mrs. Eddy the cross of Christianity is made brighter and clearer by her teaching and testimony. To say that the cross is left out of Christian Science is to make a statement so regardless of truth as to indicate either inexcusable ignorance or the deliberate belying of a religion which reforms the sinner and heals the sick now and here. Such reformations of course do not appeal to one who recognizes no results unless accomplished in his own way, yet the Master said, "The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do." The question then is pertinent: Does this gentleman who claims to wear the mantle of an evangelist, reform the sinner and heal the sick? Such is the real significance of the cross of Christianity which Jesus commanded his followers to take up.

Cowper speaks of a man who "built God a church, and laugh'd his word to scorn." Christian Science teaches that God's church is "the structure of Truth and Love" (Science and Health, p. 583). The marvelous growth of the Christian Science church, which has been established scarcely forty years is ocular proof of this statement; for Christian Scientists build upon no other foundation. Many thanks are due the free press of this free country, for through this medium people are discovering that "fanatic faith, once wedded fast to some dear falsehood, hugs it to the last," and they cannot longer be deceived by such hypocrisy.

A recent editorial in an Iowa paper says: "The person who will stand up in a pulpit and condemn Mrs. Mary Eddy and her followers, who are striving to do nothing but good in this world, upholding nothing but that which is good, pure, and Christianlike, and call them fools for following a false faith, is afflicted with a severe case of leakage of the brain and is in no condition to call other people fools. We are not a Christian Scientist, but we know some splendid people who are. Every good cause which is leading up to better and purer people had a starting point. We are all striving to reach the same place, but we are firm in our belief that there will be some disappointed beings, who are spending so much time attending to every one else's business, left out the golden gate."

Extracts from Letters

"I am indeed grateful for the many blessings received through Christian Science. I am particularly grateful at this time for the many activities of The Mother Church. When our battalion arrived in France we were billeted several kilometers from the medical headquarters. This was a source of fear to the boys, of getting sick and not having a doctor right on hand. Christian Science met this condition for me through the understanding that God is the only Physician, and He is not 'afar off' but here and everywhere.

"Next in blessings, I had the privilege of attending a Christian Science service held at the edge of a wood adjoining a big chateau. There was no other building near. Nine of the boys of our battalion were in attendance, four had never before attended a Christian Science service, and only two were members of a Christian Science church. Next came the blessing of The Christian Science Monitor. It came first through my work as a soldier, for as chief orderly in the replacement depot it fell to me to distribute a large package of Monitors that came from the War Relief committee. I became a self-appointed distribution committee. Then the long winter evenings were well spent reading the Monitor and studying the metaphysical article on the Home Forum page.

"Next we were blessed by having a Christian Science chaplain to work with us and for us. During the recent plague not one of the Christian Science boys lost a day from his work. We found that the best protection a Christian Scientist could have is to be active in church work. There is but one way to show true gratitude to God for Christian Science; as the Master has said, 'Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind.' And quoting our revered Leader (Science and Health, p. 497), 'we solemnly promise to watch, and pray for that Mind to be in us which was also in Christ Jesus; to do unto others as we would have them do unto us; and to be merciful, just, and pure.'"

Release the Truth

Falsity has too many advocates and friends. Those whose deeds are evil love to argue that there will always be shadow in the world wherein they can hide. They declare that good men will always be their victims, and that "the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life" will always reap the harvest of other people's sowing—like the Afghan hill tribe marauding the peaceful valleys every year. Jesus characterized this view by saying that "men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil."

Mrs. Eddy says, "The history of our country, like all history, illustrates the might of Mind, and shows human power to be proportionate to its embodiment of right thinking" (Science and Health, p. 225). It must be, therefore, desirable that right thinking should find the widest possible publication. In publishing information we find that the so-called freedom of the press has both benefit and bane. At a time of world crisis, when some God-guided statesman is trying to work the works of God in evil days, then too often is the time for bitterness and cruel misinterpretation to be expressed in print, which the multitude of the thoughtless take at its face value without appraising the motives of the writers. Consequently the good man, who in after years may be looked upon as the savior of his country, is, in his actual labor of saving his countrymen from evil, assailed by every kind of brutality and hindrance; and why? Just because those whom he is working to benefit hold to a belief that a partnership with evil can be beneficial, each one wishing to cherish his own peculiar affection for things beneath, so that he is unready for whole-souled acceptance of good as the reality without any opposite.

Thus to every thinker not exactly true there remains a side door for the tempter, an avenue for the mesmerist, whereby too often one who may be honestly called good can become the enemy of the noblest and best. The misguided people, as Jesus said, kill the prophets and stone the messengers of Mind, and then repenting raise monuments to their rejected benefactors. Mrs. Browning speaks of poets as "the only truth tellers left to God." The insight of the poet has sometimes made him a prophet and a revealer of spiritual good; but again there have been poets who too often have concealed the bitter and poison of lust in a syrup of phraseology, and presented to the imagination of men such mental pictures as they must strive painfully to forget as they progressively awake to true thinking.

For the guidance of the Christian Science movement, Mrs. Eddy has given directions as to the appraisement of what is written by a valuing of the motive and intention of the writer. In the Manual (Art. VIII, Sect. 11), after forbidding the circulation of incorrect literature, she goes on to say: "Also the spirit in which the writer has written his literature shall be definitely considered. His writings must show strict adherence to the Golden Rule, or his literature shall not be adjudged Christian Science."

One can think of many a case in history where the brave man, standing alone in the right, could have been immensely strengthened by writings strictly governed by the Golden Rule,—writings which would thus release truth and counteract a flood of lies. Lying is the scourge which mortal minds use to discourage all righteous endeavor. How true it is, as the Leader of the Christian Science movement says (Science and Health, p. 224), "Cold disdain, stubborn resistance, opposition from church, state laws, and the press, are still the harbingers of truth's full-orbed appearing." We are continually reminded of the truth of Lowell's words:—

> Once to every man and nation comes the moment to decide,
> In the strife of Truth with Falsehood, for the good or evil side;
> . . . . . .
> Then to side with Truth is noble when we share her wretched crust,
> Ere her cause bring fame and profit, and 'tis prosperous to be just;
> Then it is the brave man chooses, while the coward stands aside,
> Doubting in his abject spirit, till his Lord is crucified.

Truth overcomes evil by presenting its illumination of righteousness and goodness in place of the confusion, foolishness, and darkness of evil thinking. Exposure causes the evildoer to be ashamed, but too often he seeks some other dark place wherein to publish again his imaginations until the time comes when he shall find no place. We rejoice in the assurance that the earth will be filled with the light of Truth, and in that light every one shall bow to the Christ, and every tongue confess that Truth divine is the only power.

The Mosaic Decalogue

When God talked with Moses on Mount Sinai there was given the law which will stand as long as time, and of which Jesus said: "Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil. For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled." Mrs. Eddy tells us practically the same thing when she says in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 174): "The thunder of Sinai and the Sermon on the Mount are pursuing and will overtake the ages, rebuking in their course all error and proclaiming the kingdom of heaven on earth."

Although certain Bible scholars have given minor reasons for presentation of the Ten Commandments to the Hebrew people; although these same scholars have endeavored to explain the origin of these commands in such a diversity of ways as would have resulted in explaining them entirely away had their foundation been intellectualism; although they have proclaimed them to have been received by Moses at different periods; the fact still remains that God's people throughout all ages have held to them as a definite rule of conduct for humanity in its relationship to God and to its fellow men. To the present day they continue to be a voice from God uncovering evil, protecting from evil, destroying evil. As we find them stated in the twentieth chapter of Exodus they constitute a moral law which when perfectly obeyed results in the complete overthrow of all the claims of evil.

God's people have always united in the effort to live in obedience to the Ten Commandments, which they have preached from their pulpits and taught to their children. The human code of laws has been largely based upon them. Their ethics have been considered unassailable, even while they have often been held as beyond the possibility of present demonstration. As is the case in whatever is intended to lift thought into conformity with Principle, a misunderstanding of God and of His requirements has always been the chief obstacle to the practical application of His laws. From the Mosaic standpoint of "an eye for an eye" it had seemed almost impossible to put into practice the demands of the Decalogue. Nevertheless, Christians have constantly persevered in their purpose to live in perfect obedience to it and have felt convinced that eventually an understanding would be unfolded which would enable them to accomplish so great a desideratum.

Jesus came explaining fundamentals in such a way as to open a broader outlook on the subject. He not only gave in response to the question, "Which is the great commandment in the law?" the comprehensive grouping of the Commandments when he answered, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets," but he also revealed the great truth that sin is in the thought; as for example when he taught that to hate means to murder, and that the gift to God is valueless without brotherly love in the heart.

All this throws a bright light on the Ten Commandments, but it does not in any way annul the necessity of every one bringing his life into strict conformity to the "Thou shalt nots." For instance, when Jesus said that "the sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath," it is fair to presume that he in no way intended to annul the sacred purpose of the fourth commandment to bring to the human consciousness the helpfulness of a sabbatical sense of reverence and of the importance of setting a time apart for the contemplation of holy things. It is material sense which would to-day brush aside all necessity for quiet observance of one day in seven whereby people, individually and as nations, may continue to turn aside temporarily from material things to a quiet consideration of God and His law. It is all very well to say: I endeavor to make every day a day of holiness. But the world as a world has not yet attained such a sacred sense of things, and does it not still need in some degree its day set apart?

Jesus' purpose in this as in all things was to present a higher, holier model of obedience, lifting thought as he always did to the fulfilling of the law through the gospel of love. Christian Scientists have a responsibility to live in obedience to the Ten Commandments which no other people have had, because through the revelation of Christian Science there has been shown the way to attain a perfect comprehension of the law and the gospel, both of which are necessary to the uncovering, rebuking, and destruction of error. In the Manual of The Mother Church (Art. XX, Sect. 3) when giving instruction for teaching in the Sunday school, Mrs. Eddy points out positively the absolute necessity for basing all the teaching of Christian Science on the Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount. These fundamental teachings as explained in Christian Science must therefore be understood and demonstrated in both the letter and the spirit, in order that the world may be delivered from all belief in evil.

So long as there is a mortal sinner claiming to express materiality, so long as there is a mortal belief still undestroyed, there will remain the necessity to human consciousness of the "Thou shalt nots" of divine law. Then let us thank God that through spiritual perception Mrs. Eddy has given us such interpretation of them as we find in "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 67) where she says: "Above physical wants, lie the higher claims of the law and gospel of healing. First is the law, which saith:—'Thou shalt not commit adultery;' in other words, thou shalt not adulterate Life, Truth, or Love,—mentally, morally, or physically. 'Thou shalt not steal;' that is, thou shalt not rob man of money, which is but trash, compared with his rights of mind and character. 'Thou shalt not kill;' that is, thou shalt not strike at the eternal sense of Life with a malicious aim, but shalt know that by doing thus thine own sense of Life shall be forfeited. 'Thou shalt not bear false witness;' that is, thou shalt not utter a lie, either mentally or audibly, nor cause it to be thought. Obedience to these commandments is indispensable to health, happiness, and length of days."

Among the Churches

Current Notes

DENVER, COLO.—Dedicatory services, signalizing the freeing of Second Church of Christ, Scientist, from debt were held Sunday [July 27] in the new church edifice at South Grant Street and East Bayaud Avenue. The building was completed two years ago. The church building cost $110,000. The cost of furnishings, organ, and building site amounted to $18,600 additional. The seating capacity of the church is 1150.

Second Church of Christ, Scientist, was organized in 1909 to relieve an overcrowded condition of First Church, where additional room was needed for both church and Sunday school services. Members of Second Church met for three and one half years in the South Denver Masonic Temple, moving from that place into the foyer of the new church building, which was occupied pending completion of the edifice.—South Denver Eye and Bulletin.

LONG BEACH, CALIF.—During the month [June 8] the Christian Scientists of Long Beach dedicated their church at 440 Elm Avenue.

First Church of Christ, Scientist, held its first services as a society in 1902 in a small cottage called "The Barnacle" at the corner of Third Street and Cedar Avenue. The attendance at the services outgrew the seating capacity of this building, and Chapel Hall, a room seating three hundred, was provided upon an adjoining lot. In the summer of 1904, incorporation papers for First Church of Christ, Scientist, were obtained, and the church was duly organized. In 1911 the capacity of Chapel Hall proved inadequate and the Congregational Chapel on Fourth Street, with a seating capacity of six hundred, was secured. Again progress dictated a move to larger quarters and in March, 1912, two lots on Elm Avenue were purchased and the contract let for a brick and reinforced concrete structure. The auditorium seats about one thousand, with a basement Sunday school room of equal size. The church edifice, lots, furnishings, and pipe organ cost, when completed, approximately $100,000.

DAVENPORT, IOWA.—The edifice of First Church of Christ, Scientist, will be dedicated on Sunday [June 15]. The structure at Grand Avenue and Kirkwood Boulevard was completed in 1913 at a cost of $50,500. Christian Science churches, however, are not dedicated until they are fully paid for. The first Christian Science healing in Davenport resulting from the teachings of Mary Baker Eddy, the Founder of the church, occurred in 1887. It made such a profound impression that a large number became interested and took up the study of Christian Science. Other remarkable healings followed, and a society was formed, meetings being held in private homes. People came from Rock Island to attend the services.

The church was incorporated in 1892, and in 1895 it moved into Columbian Hall at Third and Brady Streets. Meetings had been held at the old Masonic Hall, but this place was rapidly outgrown. Property at Sixth and Perry Streets was purchased and dedicated in 1908. The capacity of this building became overtaxed and the arrangements were made with the Unitarian church to hold the services in Unity Hall. A building committee was appointed which led to the erection of the present beautiful structure.

Admission to Membership in The Mother Church

The next admission of candidates will take place on November 7, 1919, as provided in Article XIII, Section 2, of the By-laws of The Mother Church. Application blanks may be obtained by addressing the Clerk of The Mother Church, and should be returned to him on or before Friday, October 24, 1919. Consideration of any applications received after that date will be deferred until the June 4, 1920, admission.

An application sent to the Clerk does not constitute the applicant a member. Notice of election will be sent to those who are admitted to membership.

Those who have made application for membership prior to May 30, 1919, and have not received notice of election, may communicate with the Clerk if they so desire, and are especially requested to do so before sending in a second application.

The Lectures

Peoria, Ill. (First Church).—Paul Stark Seeley, lecturer; introduced by G. W. Strich, who said in part:—

About fifty years ago through the study of the Scriptures Mrs. Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, was raised from what the doctors had pronounced her last illness, and was restored to a life of usefulness. For several years subsequent to this experience she did little else but search the Scriptures for the rule whereby this healing was effected. After discovering it and subjecting it to the broadest tests, demonstrating the truth thereof, she eventually gave it to the world through what is known as the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures." Thus primitive Christianity was reestablished and with it the lost element of spiritual healing.

So wisely was this work founded and so well was the seed sown that in the short period of fifty years it has encircled the globe. It is now being taught and demonstrated in the remotest sections of the earth, thereby fast bringing to light the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, even to the degree that we can discern a covenant taking form under which all mankind can dwell together in brotherly unity.

The Peoria Journal.

Yonkers, N. Y. (joint lecture).—Judge Samuel W. Greene, lecturer; introduced by John Wenzel, who said in part:—

During the last two years we have frequently heard it said that the only thing which mattered was that we should win the war. This is the motive that impelled the thoughts and actions of us all after we entered the world conflict. It became apparent that it was our business to prove that right is might, and to disprove the statement that might is right. Millions of people knew that in reality their only business was to make sure that the highest sense of right prevailed. The power of right thinking, and honest thinking, and unselfish thinking, which is spiritual power, was absolutely irresistible, just as it always has been and always will be.

It has been a wonderful thing for the people of this generation to see this demonstration of the power of right thinking. Many men and women are beginning to realize that the same conflict between right and wrong is going on within the consciousness of the individual; and that right thinking, honest thinking, just thinking, and unselfish thinking is just as powerful in winning the war in the consciousness of the individual as it was in the national consciousness.

We have become more accustomed to being actuated by something outside of our own selfish desires, and many are gradually awakening to the fact that even now, after the war is over, we still have but one business, and that is the one which the boy Jesus referred to as "my Father's business." Throughout the history of right thinking, as recorded in the Scriptures, we are shown the practical results which follow the operation of the divine Mind when the human will is put out of the way; for such is the law of Spirit. The Bible is one continuous record of the practical results which follow the operation of spiritual law, and the beautiful part of it all is that spiritual law operates here and now just as it did in Palestine nineteen hundred years ago.

To learn just how to subjugate our own wills so as to let this spiritual law operate; just how to utilize this power of right thinking so that it will win the conflict that is going on within ourselves and is being manifested in all kinds of discordant conditions, such as sick bodies, sick minds, and sick businesses; just how to transform into demonstrable understanding the beliefs that we have had but could not prove; to learn just how the commands of old are now being successfully obeyed and the prophecies of old are being daily fulfilled—that is what has brought us together this afternoon.—Yonkers News.

Richmond, Surrey, England (First Church).—John Sidney Braithwaite, lecturer; introduced by Miss Sarah Woodall, who said in part:—

After the recent years of war and suffering, humanity needs a religion that will comfort the sorrowing, heal the suffering, and guide and help it in the period of reconstruction that lies ahead; and those who have studied Christian Science have proved for themselves that the only way these problems can be really dealt with is through a demonstrable knowledge of God. Christian Science is to-day proving to those who practice it the nothingness of sin and disease and the allness of God. Through this knowledge Christian Scientists are bringing into their experience such an abundance of peace and joy that there is no room for fear and all that fear brings in its train, and they are learning with grateful hearts the real meaning of the words, God is Love.

Clinton, Ill. (First Church).—John C. Lathrop, lecturer; introduced by Judge Frederick C. Hill, who said in part:—

In one of her published works, "Rudimental Divine Science," Mrs. Eddy says that Christian Science is "the law of God, the law of good, interpreting and demonstrating the divine Principle and rule of universal harmony" (p. 1). It is evident, therefore, that the term is used by her to express

"the law of God, the law of good." In her investigation and research she discovered that this law is spiritual and not material, and that a knowledge of it and its operation is of vital interest and importance to mankind in meeting the demands of human existence in our day, just as it did centuries ago; that the sick are healed and the sinning reformed through one and the same process throughout all time. She proved beyond any question that there is no mystery connected with the application of God's law, and no uncertainty of results when it is understandingly and honestly applied, and that the healing from bodily disorders which follows its application and practice, is proof of the right understanding thereof.

Clinton Register.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK. (First Church).—Miss Mary G. Ewing, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Gene Huckaby, who said in part:—

What does it mean for one to have the subject of Christian Science correctly presented to him? Just what it has meant to me and to thousands of others,—the spiritualization of thought, which gives health, strength, holiness, and joy to daily experience by displacing their opposites,—disease, weakness, sin, and sorrow.

KOKOMO, IND. (First Church).—Virgil O. Strickler, lecturer; introduced by James E. Hillis, who said in part:—

The first sentence of the Preface to the Christian Science textbook is this: "To those leaning on the sustaining infinite, to-day is big with blessings." This plain, pointed, positive declaration has caused thousands of sufferers to say to themselves: Upon what am I leaning? and the answer to this question has shown them that they were leaning upon a broken reed, an arm of flesh. This discovery has caused them to seek for a surer foundation, for "the sustaining infinite," the rock Christ Jesus. This they have found by the patient, prayerful, persistent study of the Bible, aided by the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science. Through this study they have come to know Him of whom Jesus spoke when he said, "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." This knowing, or knowledge, or Science, is Christian Science, and its possessors are conscious of having passed from death unto life,—that life to which the Christ referred when he said, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly."—The Kokomo Dispatch.

Testimonies of Healing

When a lad of sixteen I was examined by two reputable physicians, who without conferring with one another pronounced my trouble acute Bright's disease, and in confidence told my parents that it would be a miracle if I lived a year. My mother, who was then just becoming interested in Christian Science, decided to have Science treatment for me. A practitioner was accordingly summoned and went to work on the case immediately. My mother explained the fundamentals of Christian Science to me, and her explanation of God as Principle appealed to me as nothing else ever had. Immediately the Bible had a new meaning for me, and the concept of God as Principle and Love came into my consciousness to fill up the void where before had been no thought of God save a few hazy ideas gleaned from the religious teaching under which I had been reared, and which, being based on material premises, I had never been able to accept.

In less than two months I had a complete healing. A year from the time the physicians had passed sentence upon me I was undergoing strenuous military training with a National Guard unit at one of the Government encampments. During this period we were maneuvering over the hills in full marching equipment and covering an average of fifteen miles a day. The rigors of this training did not affect my health in any way except that at the end of the maneuvers I felt stronger than I had ever felt in my life, due to the realization that God is the source of all strength. Following the encampment I returned to school, where I participated in all the athletics of that and following seasons, and never had a return of the trouble for which I had been treated.

During the three years following my healing I attended a denominational boarding school and in spite of the opposition which was encountered, I continued the study of Christian Science, the results of which manifested in my school work were most gratifying. I became aware of capabilities of which I had never before been conscious. During this period I also met and overcame a great many physical ailments. With the aid of a practitioner appendicitis was successfully overcome; also weak eyes, for which I had worn glasses for some time, were healed and the glasses were laid aside.

During the next three years it seemed as if I had almost every physical ailment to which flesh is heir; but I rejoice to say that every one was overcome by the application of Christian Science. At times the way seemed terribly dark, and I wondered if I would ever be free from sickness in some form or other, but to-day I rejoice, for I am enjoying almost perfect health. I can see that the overcoming of these false beliefs was the greatest blessing in life for me, for it enabled me to prove to my entire satisfaction the unreal nature of error and the real and everlasting perfection of Truth.

I have recently returned from duty with the American Expeditionary Forces in France. It is hardly necessary to state that Christian Science met every need in that experience. Oftentimes when it seemed that physical conditions were almost unbearable, the understanding of Truth brought the conscious realization that we have "an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens," wherein man can rest in peace and harmony, be the physical conditions what they may. When a so-called epidemic was sweeping our camps in Europe, the understanding of Truth enabled me to overcome the belief in and fear of the disease, so that I was able to go in with those suffering from the disease and help them.

Now, whenever a sense of discouragement creeps in, it fortifies my resolve to look back and recount these wonderful blessings which have come to me through the application of truth, and which stand as undeniable witnesses to the efficacy of Christian Science. I am more grateful than words can express for these proofs of God's reality and His great love; and for the wonderfully enlightened understanding, the devout consecration, and the unwavering tenacity of purpose, which enabled our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, to bring this truth to the comprehension of men.

John C. Murdock, San Diego, Calif.

Christian Science is indeed the greatest blessing that has come into my life. It has brought me out of bondage into "the glorious liberty of the children of God." For ten years I had suffered from tubercular disease of the bones of the hand. Every known material remedy was tried, as well as several operations. After twelve months of illness the disease attacked one foot. This condition also materia medica was unable to cure; but through treatment by a physical culture specialist the foot was freed, as the trouble had not reached the bones. Ten years went by, during which every material remedy was tried and four or five doctors were consulted, including a well-known specialist, but my hand was not cured. It was suggested on several occasions that a portion of it should be amputated. I was just on the eve of another operation when I heard of Christian Science. A practitioner came to see me one Monday, and the following Monday the bandage which I had worn for ten years was discarded with all its accompaniments, ointments, et cetera, and a form of treatment which I had been obliged to give the hand each day for many years was never again resorted to. I do not know exactly when the complete healing took place, but it was not very long after hearing of Christian Science. To-day my hands are so unusually strong that the remark is frequently passed as to the immense amount of strength and grip I have.

I am deeply grateful for this healing, and for all that it has meant to me. I am finding every day something more to be grateful for in Christian Science,—for the guidance, love, changed thought of substance, and my better knowledge of God. Words are inadequate to express my gratitude, and I would certainly rather part with anything than my knowledge of this wonderful teaching.—(Miss) Linda Dale Kerridge, Wallasey, Cheshire, England.

I am very grateful to be able to express my thankfulness to God for the many blessings I have received since learning of Christian Science, especially for the healing of my daughter, eighteen years old, who was suffering from ulcer of the stomach. Doctors and medicines seemed to do her no good. After three years of great anxiety, when I was nearly hopeless of her recovery, I met a very dear friend, who told me about Christian Science, of which I had never heard before. She said she would pray for my child, and after three or four days my daughter was completely healed and able to eat the same food as the rest of us, something she had not done for several years. My husband also, who had suffered with his eyes for years, and had to wear glasses constantly, was healed in a few weeks and able to leave off the glasses. Many other healings, including the overcoming of influenza, dysentery, and minor ailments, have been accomplished since then without doctors or medicines; and bruises of the heart of many years' standing have also been healed. What remains of error grows less and less as I gain in the understanding of our Father-Mother God.

No words can express my thankfulness to God and my deep gratitude to our dear Leader, Mrs. Eddy.

(Mrs.) JULIA A. GREENE, Bangkok, Siam.

When I became interested in Christian Science I was suffering from a nervous breakdown and was very miserable and unhappy. I had tried many remedies and was hopeless and discouraged, finding no permanent relief in any of them. Then I turned to Christian Science, and with the help of a friend for a short time was slowly but surely healed. Since then many other ills of the flesh have been overcome, including stomach trouble, headache, toothache, deafness in one ear, and a so-called contagious skin disease. Sometimes the healing seemed very slow in coming, but when it was manifested I found I had made a step upward in the understanding of Christian Science.

Better than the healing of physical ills is the way I am being transformed in thought. Selfishness, hatred, criticism, fear, and sorrow are gradually giving way to unselfishness, more love, a joyous confidence in good, a priceless sense of happiness which has come through helping others and expressing more love and thoughtfulness to those around. I thank God for revealing the truth to us through our dear Leader, Mrs. Eddy, and am most grateful to all those who have helped me so patiently and lovingly; also for the great privilege of membership in The Mother Church and a branch church, and for class instruction, the periodicals, and the Quarterly. This testimony is just a slight expression of gratitude for the good which has come to one through the study of Christian Science. I try to express my appreciation in daily life by reflecting Life, Truth, and Love so as to help others as I have been helped.

(Mrs.) ELIZABETH I. FRASER, Dundee, Scotland.

With a deep sense of gratitude and joy I wish to tell of a blessing which I have received through Christian Science. One day spots appeared on the face of my nine-months-old baby, and the eyes began to discharge. The child was very restless and could not be quieted. My relatives entertained all sorts of fear, especially because a child in the neighborhood was to mortal sense suffering from a contagious disease and I had been in that home. However, I excluded fear from my consciousness and thought only of Love and Truth. The following day the little one seemed worse, and as I was kept busy and therefore could not do the necessary mental work, I requested the assistance of a practitioner. That night the child slept very well, and by the following morning all symptoms of the disease had disappeared, much to the astonishment of my relatives.

Words are inadequate to express our thankfulness to God for His endless love and goodness. We are also grateful to our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, who showed us the right way to Truth and gave us a correct knowledge of God.

(Mrs.) MARTHA SEVERIN, Hamburg, Germany.

For the innumerable blessings that have been brought to view since I first began to see the light of Christian Science, I am deeply grateful. Our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, tells us in Science and Health (p. 3), "Gratitude is much more than a verbal expression of thanks;" and truly to express my gratitude I am daily striving to manifest more the Life, Truth, Love, which is God.

The past seven years have been rich beyond description, —not as the world counts riches, happiness, or success, but rich in the healing, cleansing, purifying, uplifting fires of experience. The teachings of Christian Science plainly instruct us that nothing less than absolute obedience to unchanging Principle is capable of solving life's problems; that God's law, or as Paul puts it, "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus," must be our only standard of living. Notwithstanding the explicit, loving directions given us by our Leader, when the revelation of the Christ first came to me, in my great joy at having found the truth about God and man I sadly forgot my own duty and tried to live in the experience of those who had so lovingly shown the way of Life. In my new joy I did not realize the importance of turning away from the false pleasures as well as the false pains of material sense. Those earlier days in the study of Christian Science were most selfish—I was striving to gain all and give nothing; but Love was leading me into my own in spite of self and I was led through disappointment, failure, and suffering to serve not matter but Spirit. For every belief of pleasure in matter destroyed I am deeply grateful, and the peace and joy of abiding in Truth have speedily obliterated every sorrow and pain. I am rejoicing to-day in somewhat of the freedom promised by our Master and by Christian Science. The truth, when obeyed and rightly applied, has met every need.

Christian Science has healed me of a doubting mind, of love for riches, desire for constant amusement or excitement, false pride, resentment. It has taught me how to know and love God, and how to love my neighbor as myself, be he friend or foe. Every physical disorder has been overcome and harmony promptly restored by reading the textbook and declaring the truth, or by the kindly help of a practitioner.

I thank God for Christian Science and all its activities. I am grateful for membership in The Mother Church and a branch church; also for the privilege of teaching in the Sunday school and of serving in the healing work. I am grateful, too, for my experience as First Reader in a society, in my earlier days in Christian Science. A mere babe in Science, still much engrossed in materiality, I soon learned my great need for "absolute consecration of thought, energy, and desire" (Science and Health, p. 3). With the desire to be helpful came spiritual uplift and more and more liberation from the thralldom of error. I learned to obey. I rejoice to-day in Christian Science. Like Paul, "I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

HARRY F. FAIRFIELD, Rochester, N. Y.

It is nearly six years since I first heard of Christian Science. Now that I understand something of God's law, I look back with dismay at the absurd notions and fears, then so very real to me, which formerly separated me from the understanding of the love of God.

As far back as I can remember, my brother and I were told that we could hardly expect to grow up strong, and when twenty-seven years old he passed on. This increased my fear, and at about the age of twenty-one I became ill with weak lungs, and one internal trouble after another followed. After five years of very bad physical conditions I became much worse in spite of every possible care. For nearly a year I was unable to walk across a room without help. For two consecutive winters I was taken to the Canary Islands, and the summer in between was spent in the Swiss mountains; however, the internal disorders grew worse and an operation was considered necessary, but after nearly three months in a nursing home I was very little better. A year later I became dangerously ill with peritonitis, and another operation was talked of, but, I believe, it was considered too risky. After many weeks in bed I was somewhat better, but was told that I should have to be more careful than ever, as I was liable to another attack. For over four years I had been seldom able to walk, and never without pain; almost always I was lying down or going out only in a Bath chair, and life seemed especially hopeless when, a few months later, I began to suffer great pain caused by an abscess.

It was at this time that a neighbor told me that Christian Science could make me better; and one day my little boy, distressed at seeing me in so much pain, asked me to send for a Christian Scientist. This I did, although I knew nothing whatever of Science. A practitioner came to me and with her loving help the trouble disappeared. In four days I was able to go out in my Bath chair, and after a few days more I was able to walk a little. Soon I took a long journey by train. This recovery seemed so wonderful that both my husband and I then commenced to read Science and Health. For the next few weeks we were in the country, but on the Sunday following our return home we went for the first time to a Christian Science service. I think I may say that from that time I was quite healed. The same week I walked two or three miles in one day, and neither then nor since have I felt the pain which used to trouble me so much. For more than five years I had taken medicine every day. This at first I found very difficult to give up, but after reading part of the third chapter of Colossians, I knew it was not medicine but more charity and love for others that I wanted. Since this realization I have never thought of taking any kind of medicine.

I am now a strong, healthy woman, able to attend to all the ordinary duties of life and even to enjoy a heavy day's work digging potatoes in my garden. I can, moreover, play hockey and other games. For the past six years my life, and also that of my husband, has been entirely changed, mentally as well as physically, and I am very grateful to Mrs. Eddy for a new understanding of the Bible.—(Mrs.) Hilda Gullick, Lichfield, Staffordshire, England.

For some time I have wished to express my gratitude for all the blessings that Christian Science has brought into my life. I have found that it is indeed a "pearl of great price." One healing in particular I wish to mention is that of a very painful and disfiguring boil, which was on my lip. With the help of a practitioner it disappeared overnight, not leaving a scar. This is only one of the many blessings I have received through Christian Science. I am very thankful to God and grateful to Mrs. Eddy for this wonderful truth.

(Mrs.) Ledocia McLelan, Read Island, British Columbia, Canada.

I can find no words to express fully my gratitude toward Christian Science. The study of this beautiful truth has restored my health, which had been in the worst condition since my childhood. I was said to have tubercular disease of the lungs and a weak heart; in fact every organ in my body was disordered, and the care I had to take of it turned my thoughts constantly toward the body. I accepted this condition with resignation, thinking that since so many in this world were suffering, I should not fret at being one of them. Then Christian Science came into my life, and it is wonderful how the reading of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, brought me strength again and the joy of being able to walk once more in the woods and everywhere. Fear and worry have gone gradually, and if they seem to come back on certain occasions, I know where to turn for help. I am thankful to know that divine Love is the creator of all good and the only cause.

I am thankful for our splendid literature and the good it does in the world, and grateful to all those who with kindness have helped me to see the truth. I am thankful for our Lesson-Sermons, and most grateful to our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, who worked so faithfully and lovingly to teach us the love of Christ.

(Mrs.) M. Schenker, Wallingford, Conn.

I had suffered from stomach disorder nearly all my life, till it seemed hardly worth while to try to live any longer. When Christian Science was presented to me, after considerable doubt as to the right or wrong of it I decided to ask for help from a practitioner. I shall never forget the sense of peace I experienced after the second treatment. All pain or suffering was gone, and I felt it was indeed worth while to live. As disease is the manifestation of wrong thinking, when my thoughts were purified the healing of the body followed. Nearly every winter I used to have a severe cold, settling in the bronchial tubes. Now that is gone and many other ills have disappeared, also to a great extent fear and worry.

For all these blessings I am very grateful, as well as for class instruction, for membership in The Mother Church, and for the authorized literature. This great truth which Mrs. Eddy was enabled to bring to us calls forth my deepest gratitude.

(Mrs.) Josephine Peterson, Wessington, S. Dak.

It is with a deep feeling of gratitude for the many blessings enjoyed by me and by my family through the application of Christian Science to our problems that I give this testimony. Over five years ago, while engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery, Christian Science was presented to me by a sister who had a few years before first experienced its healing power. At that time I was a victim of the drink and tobacco habits and wholly incapacitated to continue my professional duties. My desire was, and had been for a long time, to overcome these habits, but I saw no way to obtain this freedom. As a physician I had entertained considerable prejudice against Christian Science; just how much I did not know as it was not at that time very well known in the section where I practiced medicine and therefore did not interfere with my business from the standpoint of competition. Had it done so, there is no doubt that I would have been an active opponent.

When it was presented to me, however, I offered no resistance to Christian Science as I had become thoroughly subdued through mental and physical suffering. The world had given quite liberally of its so-called pleasures, but when called upon through its false doctrines to repair the damage done and restore to a normal condition the wrecked mentality and bring back to the home the happiness of old, it was not equal to the occasion. Still indulging my habits, I began to read Science and Health and in it found food, for it aroused a desire to know something about the works of Jesus; and I seemed from the first to be confident that it contained the truth about God and His creation. It required some time to effect a healing, as I did not accept the help so generously offered as much as I might have done; however, in about three months I gained my freedom and a keen interest in Christian Science, also a determination to progress in the understanding of God and His creation as explained by Mrs. Eddy.

For a while I again engaged in the practice of medicine, but I knew it would not be possible for me to remain long in this practice. At first I felt some regret, but as I grew in the understanding of Christian Science, I found myself looking forward to the day when I would be relieved, and divine Love finally made it possible. For this freedom I am especially grateful, as with it has come growth and active participation in Christian Science work. It would take too much space to relate the many experiences and the seemingly insurmountable obstacles overcome since leaving my old work and preparing myself for the greater work which God has given me.

I am grateful beyond measure for our periodicals. That great international newspaper, The Christian Science Monitor, with its absolutely reliable news of world affairs, fearlessly exposing the evil forces that seek to corrupt all avenues of human activity, is invaluable and indispensable. I am thankful to God for these many blessings and grateful to our Leader, Mrs. Eddy, who with no thought of self stood alone against the prejudice and hate of material sense to give this great blessing to mankind.

FRANCIS I. DODGE, Los Angeles, Calif.

This testimony is given with a desire to express my gratitude for the healing of a long-standing bowel disorder. I had help when I first came to Christian Science, but the fear was so great I could not give up the use of material means for over three years. I knew I should make a stand for the truth, so asked advice of a friend who is a practitioner and he gave me courage to make the effort. With his help and by trusting in divine Love, I was healed of this trouble. The fear was so great that the bowels did not act for thirteen days, but the truth at last made me free. I was so happy to think I trusted in God and had Mrs. Eddy's teachings in Science and Health for my guide.

I came into Christian Science four years ago when all material means had failed to help me. I am very thankful for the great truth Mrs. Eddy brought to us, also for the help that has been given by friends to lead me in the right way. I am truly thankful to God and grateful to our Leader for showing us the way to peace and happiness.

So many blessings have come to me through Christian Science during the past nine years that I wish to give this testimony in grateful acknowledgment. I heard this religion scoffed at and ridiculed in the church to which I belonged until I rebelled and decided to find out the truth about it; and to my great surprise I found it was what I had been seeking for a long time. Each succeeding day has brought added proofs of its wonderful power to solve every kind of problem, and while the pathway has often been rugged and progress very slow, I rejoice that grace has been given me to cling to what I did know until I received more light. I have been healed of many discordant conditions, among them a structural defect of the eyes, for which I had worn glasses two years; goiter, which had caused me many restless nights of discomfort; sore and inflamed feet, from which I suffered every summer; influenza, which kept me in the house at least a few days every winter; a badly sprained ankle, and headaches. With the disappearance of these physical ills has always come the spiritual uplift which accompanies Christian Science healing.

Blessings received from the work of Christian Science practitioners, from our literature, lectures, and church services, can never be enumerated, but the remembrance of them gives me comfort when I am tempted to be discouraged, and stimulates me to try to reflect to others the love that has been so generously reflected to me.

(Miss) NEVA B. LAWRENCE, Chicago, Ill.

The Bible says, "Oh that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!" The proofs of divine Love's healing and protecting power have been so numerous in our home that the hearts of all overflow with gratitude. From childhood the truth expressed in Christian Science has been my only help and guide. When about eight years of age I had an attack of scarlet fever. For some time I was quarantined and confined to my bed, but the ailment was overcome through the help of one who understood that God was my Life and strength.

One of my happiest moments was the first time I was able to overcome a seemingly difficult trouble "alone with God." It was in the fall of 1916, when I was away from home. Error manifested itself in a severe throat affection. My throat was so swollen it was hard to talk, and I could take only liquid nourishment for several days. I knew this condition was not in accordance with God's law and that I must rectify my thoughts. I therefore studied and tried to realize that Love's power is available for each child of God, and that God's reflection can express only health and harmony, with the result that in a short time the discord vanished and I was free.

Each day I love this truth more and desire more earnestly to apply it, because if I am faithful it meets every need. The articles in our periodicals are an inspiration and help me to purify my thinking and view all problems in the true light.

Signs of the Times

[The Living Church]

Nobody would believe without the magnifying glass the things that the magnifying glass proves. The Hindu will not take life for any purpose, and yet takes many microscopic lives each time he drinks a glass of water. American profiteers, doubtless, simply do not know that each time they raise a price they make it more nearly impossible for many women and children to live. "They bind heavy burdens and grievous to be borne, and lay them on men's shoulders; but they themselves will not move them with one of their fingers." All this they cannot see. They are laying up treasures for themselves.

[Cedar Rapids (Iowa) Times]

Some day we will learn that even our school system can be made the center of too many propagandas. There are enthusiasts of all kinds who have been dreaming of making the schoolhouses of the country over into their pet promoters of all their schemes and ideas. One wants this and the other wants that. Medical men, socialists, moralists of all kinds, are invading the schools of the people. They are all like the little foxes that destroy the tender vines.

Some day we will have an awakening of the old-time

common sense and then we will rededicate the schools to the purposes for which they were established. The primary purposes of the schools are to make children able to provide for themselves in the way of reading and thinking. It is not to make them think as this or that set of fellows want them to think.

Reading and writing and arithmetic, with wholesome morals and fervid American patriotism,—these are the fundamentals of common school systems. And what we add more ought to be carefully guarded, or we shall turn out a lopsided generation.

[Rev. William B. Beach, D. D., in The Universalist Leader]

It is in the realm of eschatology that Christians have most strayed from the teachings of Jesus. They have so caricatured the last judgment as to make it absurd, and so destroyed all vital sense of judgment. We know that there must be a future judgment because we see judgment going on every day of our lives, for judgment, according to Jesus, is self-revelation, conscience turning its all-searching light upon our own souls. Jesus gave no geographical description of heaven or hell, and he implied that they are not places but conditions within our own hearts. As he said that "the kingdom of God is within you," so is the kingdom of hell within us. Heaven and hell are not where we are but what we are. If you insist on locating heaven according to the teaching of Jesus, then heaven is where God is, but we must have heaven in the heart or we shall not find it anywhere; in a word, we must have God in the heart or we shall not experience heaven here or hereafter.

Christ never taught eternal punishment for the sins of time, in the sense that there is a never ending torture of mind or body, and if there is not eternal life for all then there must be eternal death for some.

[Lewiston (Maine) Journal]

It may be a daring statement, but is it not to some extent true to-day that social service is taking the place of the work of the church? Now we are not saying what ought to be done or what ought not to be. We are alluding to facts as they are, the actual situation in the world at this time.

In the first place the strongest appeal to men of high moral aim, especially since the outbreak of the war and the superhuman need of succor of many kinds, is that of service —not words uttered behind high pulpits in an environment of flowers and incense, but service in the sense of all that may be termed dynamic ministry. The urge of the times is toward this service in the hearts of worthy men and the demand for it is uttered from pole to pole.

[Miss Maude Royden in The Christian Commonwealth]

He [Christ Jesus] never suggested that there was anything in his miracles out of accordance with the law of God, or that he was doing something we could not do. On the contrary, he expressed the greatest surprise and deepest disappointment that his disciples could not work miracles. He said in effect: In order to work miracles you have only to cooperate with God; to understand the purposes of God (as to-day the scientist understands the laws of the physical world) and you become capable of cooperating with Him. That is what He asks you to do. . . .

Are we not called in this generation to learn to work miracles; to reassert, in the face of the material universe, the spiritual power of a God who worked miracles nineteen hundred years ago, and "with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning"?

Letters of Appreciation

Many letters of appreciation of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR and other Christian Science activities are constantly being received. These letters express what these activities mean to different individuals in various occupations and pursuits. The favorable comment that has been received on those already published indicates that they are welcome and helpful; therefore others will be published under the above heading. Extracts from such letters follow:

I wish I had words to express my love for and appreciation of these periodicals and the unselfed scientific thought back of them.
I really believe I rejoice more for the good they are conveying to the world than for that which I receive personally, great as it is.

A celebrated theologian and author included in a scoffing remark against Christian Science recently, the statement that the editorials in the Monitor were wonderful, proving that he is drinking deep draughts of Christian Science without knowing it. Not only this, but his brilliant, patriotic address imparted to his audience much of both the spirit and letter he has so unconsciously received from his perusals of that newspaper.

I never think of our Publishing House in Boston without a song in my heart for the unswerving faithfulness of all the workers there and the glorious light they are reflecting into even the darkest places on earth.

The Monitor has met many needs for my children and answered many prayers. The Children's Page has given my little nine-year-old boy many happy hours.
He has always loved to draw, and the drawings and instructions have been such a joy and pleasure to him, also the stories.

We look to the Monitor for information in regard to books to read and a good play, and have had so much instruction in many ways. It is a great help to my boy fifteen years of age in his school work. I have learned to thank God and rejoice every day for this international paper that enables us to think and work for the good of our fellow man.

I take one copy of the Monitor through the news stand of the hotel in which I live; my husband takes it through another news stand, and this subscription is for my children.

VOLUME XXII SEPTEMBER 27, 1919 NUMBER 4

Freedom

L. EMMETT SHERRED

THAT the thought of the world is undergoing a change is daily and hourly becoming more apparent to even the most casual observer, and that this change is being manifested in ways some of them good and others not so good is also clearly evident to one who is willing to analyze the reports as they appear day by day. Much mental turmoil is being manifested, some of it in strikes and threatened strikes because of real or fancied restrictions of the rights of the workingmen, while capital protests against the exactions of labor; and thus it may seem that the very foundations of society are being torn as a result of the pull of the contending forces.

To one whose thought is founded on the rock of spiritual understanding, these indications of unrest are far from disquieting. They are but signs of the times, to be studied, certainly, but in no way to be taken as indicative of the breaking up of organized society; indeed, evidence exactly to the contrary may be found in the fact that never before in the history of the world has the operation of the law of Principle been so freely conceded by the leaders of thought among the nations as at the present moment. On page 227 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" Mrs. Eddy says, "Citizens of the world, accept the 'glorious liberty of the children of God,' and be free!" This pregnant statement loses nothing by many repetitions, but emphasizes the fact that our Leader, with prophetic insight, realized that the time was rapidly approaching when God, Principle, would have to be taken into account not only in the affairs of the church but in the family, in society, and in the state.

Since the dawn of history, whenever expression has been possible, freedom has been the desire of all mankind, and there is no good reason to suppose that such a desire was not concurrent with the lives of the most primitive of men. It is not an unreasonable assertion that the desire for unrestrained physical action, common to all, is but a material counterfeit of that desire for freedom which is implanted in each one of God's children. A striving for the continuous unfoldment of freedom has been one of the most effective causes operating for the uplifting of the human race. Freedom of action, in its lowest form, is expressed by physical movement, and the instantaneous attempt to free one's self from any so-called bodily restraint is but typical of the demand which the so-called human mind makes for freedom in the expression of its thought. Is it not a truism, therefore, to say that freedom is an elemental idea which is the heritage of all, from its least forms to its highest mental expression?

In no way can freedom be confused with license; for license represents unbridled indulgence in passion, lust, appetites. These are the exact opposites of freedom, for they mean yielding obedience to the slavery of the senses, which the history of mankind through the centuries invariably has proved brings the certain aftermath of suffering and remorse, and is bondage more complete, galling, and unendurable than was ever the bondage of the galley slave of ancient Rome. True freedom is attained only by constant striving to wrest one's self from the trammels of bondage to matter, alias material sense, and to render obedience to that law of God, good, the observance of which will guarantee freedom from suffering, both mental and physical. In thus yielding humble, unselfish obedience to God's law, one at once places himself in a position to receive the benefits of joy, peace, health, harmony. The calm and quietness of right thinking far outweigh any material pleasures mortal mind may seek to obtain. An unquestioned reliance upon Principle, which we know is adequate to meet every need or condition that can arise, is the most important factor in the continued unfolding of true freedom, relieving men from apprehension, worry, and mental disturbance consequent upon any seeming inharmony that may attempt to manifest itself, either mentally or physically.

The human concept of liberty is wholly inadequate to express or comprise even a minute fraction of the freedom conferred upon man through an understanding of the truth which Jesus said shall make men free. In the ordinary course of daily life men have been wont to set about their duties with a prayer that they might be delivered from the evils that beset them: the merchant, that he might be delivered from the evils of his business; the laborer, from the dangers of his work; the traveler, from the perils which are supposed to be peculiar to travel by land or sea; the soldier, from the particularly terrifying dangers of his calling; and so on through every line of endeavor which is supposed to have its particular phase of trouble or danger that must be guarded against. In addition to all these, there is the constant fear of sickness or disease, judged to be common to all and which claims to be lurking just around the corner ready at any moment to seize its helpless victim.

For uncounted centuries mankind have been praying to be delivered from undesirable things; but can it be said that through their prayers sickness has been effaced from the earth? Have wars and calamities been eliminated from human experience so that men have been freed from a fear of their recurrence? In a very large measure the pitiful answer must be, No. What, then, is the reason that men still are in bondage to these evils? Is prayer useless or has it lost the efficacy which it may have had in the distant past? The prayer of understanding now as always is efficacious beyond the comprehension of the human mind, but the prayer of material, mortal mind falls far short of comprehending the real office of prayer, and in too many instances makes a still greater reality of the thing feared, thus formulating or creating a definite belief of fear and then praying to be delivered from it. Nothing approaching the true idea of liberty or freedom can be found in this mental state.

It is only as the understanding of the unreality of all evil —everything which is unlike good—is made clear in Christian Science, that man is enabled to form the full and complete concept of freedom. When thought has been freed from the self-imposed slavery of fear, man will no longer be bound by the narrow horizon of his senses, and the illimitable possibilities of real freedom will begin to appear. He will hasten to assume his rightful place in his divine inheritance, and he will begin to realize the truth that there is but one infinite God, who, as we read on page 340 of Science and Health, "unifies men and nations; constitutes the brotherhood of man; ends wars; fulfils the Scripture, 'Love thy neighbor as thyself;' annihilates pagan and Christian idolatry,—whatever is wrong in social, civil, criminal, political, and religious codes; equalizes the sexes; annuls the curse on man, and leaves nothing that can sin, suffer, be punished or destroyed."

Faith

MABEL REED

"AS adherents of Truth, we take the inspired Word of the Bible as our sufficient guide to eternal Life." To every faithful student of Christian Science, the above quoted sentence from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 497) means much. The Bible has been found to be an exhaustive textbook on every phase of human experience, and has proved to be a "sufficient guide" all along the way. That our Leader, Mrs. Eddy, constantly leaned upon this same "inspired Word" to guide, direct, and strengthen her is apparent in all of her works and throughout her life. Because of this firm foundation for the teachings of Christian Science which she gave us, the Christian Science movement has proved to be a house founded "upon a rock," and the judgment of future generations will be summed up in the words, "It fell not."

Several years ago a teacher of Christian Science closed a term of primary class teaching by quoting the following: "The prayer that reforms the sinner and heals the sick is an absolute faith that all things are possible to God,—a spiritual understanding of Him, an unselfed love" (Science and Health, p. 1). To one student who heard those words at that time, a new inspiration was born, and in an earnest endeavor to achieve that "absolute faith" the Bible as illumined by the revelation of Christian Science has indeed become a "sufficient guide" by which an ever increasing understanding of "eternal Life" is being gained.

Faith is defined in our textbook (p. 297) as "a chrysalis state of human thought, in which spiritual evidence, contradicting the testimony of material sense, begins to appear, and Truth, the ever-present, is becoming understood." Surely every demonstration of Christian Science, and the solution of every problem according to its rules, is begun in that chrysalis state which includes the beginning of the transformation from the belief in error to the understanding of ever present Truth, which is the unfolding of faith.

A Christian Scientist once passed through an experience of great sorrow. She continued to study daily and, as she thought, put forth her best efforts to rise above the experience and regain a normal capacity for service. She called daily for the services of a practitioner, and listened, although passively, to whatever of the truth was voiced to her; but she had unconsciously determined that in future her service would be less active, and so robbed herself of the peace and healing she might have received.

Among other decisions, she thought she could never again give a testimony in a Wednesday evening meeting. Just at that time this sorrowful one took a very long journey, and upon the first Wednesday evening after arriving at her destination, she was taken to a small Christian Science church to listen to the service. Upon entering the building she experienced at once a great sense of rest and peace. The whole atmosphere, from the simple appointments of the small auditorium to the beauty of the service, appealed to her, and when the opportunity was given she arose to express her gratitude for the teachings of Christian Science.

Immediately after the service she was approached by a friend of former years who, when last they had met at a far distant place, was helpless in a wheel chair, but who now was walking easily with the assistance of only a cane, and who, ignorant of the sad one's affliction, joyfully told of her own healing, then so nearly consummated, through Christian Science treatment. While the mourner listened to this glad story of healing, her gloom was lifted, and she has often thought of what she so nearly missed, and only gained by obedience and gratitude—the fruits of faith. From that moment her inheritance of joy and health and peace began to be manifested.

The eleventh chapter of Hebrews is a never failing source of encouragement and inspiration, setting forth in the opening verse a clear and concise definition of faith, and following it with references to incidents recorded in the Old Testament Scriptures in which the active factor and resultant element was the faith of the prophets and leaders of both very early and later Jewish history. Among the incidents cited, Abraham's faith, expressed in his acts of obedience in not only going out to an unknown land when he was called but dwelling there, enabled him to become the founder of the great Hebrew nation, and is a valuable experience by which we may gauge our actions. Are we willing not only to go out from a false condition but, having arrived at the consciousness of the true situation, to dwell there? Throughout this wonderful chapter are noted the results of faith: Joseph's victory over the flesh, evidenced by his clear vision and gift of prophecy, gained by walking with God in faith; the protection, exaltation, and courage of Moses, first through the faith of his parents and then through his own; the mighty works of Gideon because he had faith to obey unquestioningly as he was led by the angel of the Lord; of Barak's faith in God as revealed to him by the prophetess Deborah, and his subsequent victory over the army of Sisera; and so on through the experiences of those Hebrews listed in this chapter, to whom, no doubt, the temptations to believe in discouragement, defeat, malice, money power, poverty, epidemic, war, loomed as formidable and were as real as to us. We can well consider seriously, then, the Revelator's wonderful prophecy in the words of the Christ, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life," and resolve that our constant prayer shall be, as expressed in one of our hymns (Hymnal, p. 70):—

Oh, give us such a faith as this,
And then, whate'er may come,
We'll taste, e'en here the hallow'd bliss
Of an eternal home.

"Behold, what manner of love"

EDNA B. JOHNSON

THE beloved disciple said, "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." The greatest gift the world has ever known came with the advent of Jesus the Christ. This gift of God to the world is as yet not fully comprehended. The mission of Christ Jesus was to bring healing to a sin-filled world,—healing of mental, moral, and physical ills. The vision of the worldly-minded people was so beclouded by their incarnate false beliefs that the truth of the Christ-teachings could scarcely be understood by them. The beloved Master's vision was deep and far-reaching; every need of mankind was known to him, and throughout his earthly pilgrimage he was faithfully striving to show by precept and parable how this need could be supplied. His love for the children of men was so intense, so pure, so impartial, that no matter how deeply they had plunged into sin, the Christ-element of compassion and forgiveness in the man, Christ Jesus, forever predominated, and for those deepest in sin he could offer the prayer, "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." It was because of his full understanding and knowledge of the love of God that this marvelous prayer was uttered. No one has ever grasped the meaning of this love so fully as did Christ Jesus.

With unmistakable signs the world to-day feels the touch of the Christ-command spoken ages ago: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness." Those who truly seek first the kingdom of God have fulfilled, in a measure, the command, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind." This command, ages old, is to-day being apprehended, and through this understanding human consciousness is undergoing a purifying process which is enabling mankind, little by little, to replace the imperfect concept, the impure and wrong thinking, with the Christ-mind, the Christ-element of goodness and forgiveness. The Magdalene recognized the impurity of her own life and knew that the healing streams of love and forgiveness which flowed from the Master's pure life and teachings could purify her own, and when in her contrition and meekness she went to him the reply was, "Thy sins are forgiven."

The process of correction may be slow, but the refining is refreshing and sure. On page 96 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" our beloved Leader says: "This mental fermentation has begun, and will continue until all errors of belief yield to understanding. Belief is changeable, but spiritual understanding is changeless." We cannot, in the light of Christian Science, deceive ourselves into taking one single step that has not been honestly earned by impartial and consecrated thinking. Christian Science is teaching us to love as Jesus loved, to think as Jesus thought,—in terms of Mind; and this because we are the reflection of divine Mind, which knows no evil. It is therefore the duty of every sincere student of Christian Science to be a transparency for truth, to possess the Christ-spirit, to keep close to God in daily work, and to know that nothing can hinder progress and growth in truth if our motto is "God First." And so we learn, in our attempt to follow the Way-shower, as revealed through the practice of Christian Science, that the keynote of true Christianity is love. We are to-day receiving the benefits of Christ's glorified teaching, bearing to us its rich reward of health, happiness, and an immeasurable sense of reliance on God. Thus we rejoice, as Mrs. Eddy says (Science and Health, p. 569), "in the proof of healing,—in a sweet and certain sense that God is Love."

The standard of Christian Science is high; indeed, Christian Science is the highest expression of Principle in the world to-day, because it is teaching true affection. We are told that such affection is the service of men to each other, wherein each reflects the presence of God. Christian Science is revealing God to mankind as Love; it is revealing the changeless perfection of God and His allness. We know that the greatest need in the world to-day is for a knowledge of God, and Christian Science is supplying that very need. It is giving to a hungering, starving world the spiritual food which is regenerating and reforming men. Our faithful striving and our effort to reflect this love of God is daily rewarded by refreshing draughts of spiritual healing, which fall upon us like showers of blessings.

Paul said, "Be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind." At this point there comes to thought a mental picture, which was clearly beheld in consciousness at one time. In the early experiences of one student of Christian Science, growth had seemed to warrant a feeling of security. In this conclusion, however, there was no doubt a mixture of self, of arrogance, and of criticism. Experiences have disclosed that such belief constitutes an obstruction in the path of true growth and progress, and has revealed the necessity of beginning from the lowest rung of the ladder. Deepest gratitude is felt for this revelation, and the sincere desire of the student is to maintain that mental attitude of correct thinking which made possible the taking of that right step on the first rung of the mental ladder. The individual so touched by the truth of Christian Science is yielding up his false beliefs, criticism, resentment, impatience, unforgiveness, and the Christ-mind is being established in him.

The spiritualized consciousness of our beloved Leader, Mary Baker Eddy, enabled her to present to the world "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," the textbook of Christian Science, and this dispensation of Truth has revealed such an understanding of the Bible that all faithful students are being awakened to a realization of what the beloved Master endured in order that we might know something of the love he bore to humanity. Through spiritualized vision we are learning to know God as Love, and thus to our heart—our purified thought—comes that glorious triumphant song, "Behold, what manner of love."

Illusion

DADA JELLISON CLARK

IN an advanced class in a Christian Science Sunday school, a pupil asked the teacher just what would become of mortal mind when no one any longer believed in it, and the teacher replied that it would always be just what it is now—nothing. Then the teacher asked what became of their belief in Santa Claus when they awakened to the fact that they had only been believing in a myth. Had not their childish fancy been carried away by the vision of a fat, jolly old man, who on Christmas Eve, while they slept, came down the chimney and filled their stockings with good things, which on Christmas morning seemed proof of his visit? As they outgrew this myth, however, what became of their belief? And after the truth became clear to them did there not cease to be even an illusion?

Shortly after this the teacher had a seemingly difficult problem to solve, and in her work this illustration of the mythical nature of a false belief continually recurred to her, until she asked herself just how much of this she was proving, and whether she was actually demonstrating that statement by Mrs. Eddy in "Unity of Good" (p. 9), "By knowing the unreality of disease, sin, and death, you demonstrate the allness of God." With this there came the message to rise to the altitude of thought where there ceased to be an illusion. The argument that the dream was terrifying could not make it any more real in view of the allness of Love. Mortal mind would keep its victim a prisoner even though the door is wide open. Let us stop our fluttering and being "carried about with every wind of doctrine," and calm our thought sufficiently to see the open door and our freedom near at hand.

There is another side of the illusions of mortal mind which we cannot overlook or pass carelessly by. Sometimes we are tempted to believe that because the illusion is pleasant we may cling to it awhile longer, but this is just another subtle phase of the error, and we are only deceiving ourselves. It is of no more advantage to prolong the dream when pleasant, however enticing the arguments it presents, than it is to desire to tarry in the more painful illusions. These varying manifestations of the carnal mind are just robbing us of our divine inheritance as children of the one perfect Mind.

Man has always been in infinite good in spite of what the illusion may testify. Harmony is just as eternal a fact here and now as it ever has been or ever will be. The law which operated in Jesus' time is just as available now as it was then, just as powerful in one place as in another. Harmony is demonstrated by knowing the truth and thus proving the unreality of the illusion. Mrs. Eddy makes this clear on page 218 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," where she says, "When we wake to the truth of being, all disease, pain, weakness, weariness, sorrow, sin, death, will be unknown, and the mortal dream will forever cease."

To Jesus one illusion was as quickly dispelled as another. To him Spirit and things spiritual, Mind and its ideas, were so real, so tangible, so ever accessible, that error in any of its guises met its instant detection, followed by its immediate destruction. Every step we take in proving the unreality of any illusion by knowing the allness of eternal facts, helps to fulfill that wonderful prophecy on page 64 of Science and Health: "Spirit will ultimately claim its own,—all that really is, and the voices of physical sense will be forever hushed."

Fear Powerless

MOLLIE ORR WALDRON

HUMAN existence without a correct understanding of God is devoid of any permanent joy or peace, because mortals are ignorant of the fact that good alone is real and is the only power. Some people are more deeply immersed in the belief that evil has power than are others; and it is with the hope of helping these fearful ones that this article is written. From early childhood I was made miserable by fear. It always seemed natural to me to look on the dark side of things and to be constantly expecting trouble for myself and my loved ones. I had much religious teaching, but it did not afford me any peace or comfort; in fact, the scholastic beliefs about God which were presented to me really made me more afraid of Him than of anything else. I passed many years in this condition of ignorance, "having no hope, and without God in the world," until I was finally led to the study of Christian Science.

My first glimpse of the truth was so satisfying and uplifting that I was transported to the mountain top, dwelling there happy and seemingly fearless for a short time; but I was obliged to come down into the valley and to begin to prove for myself the great fact that good is the only power. Our Leader says in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 569), "The sin, which one has made his bosom companion, comes back to him at last with accelerated force, for the devil knoweth his time is short." This I proved to be true; for when it dawned upon me that the danger lay in the fear of evil conditions and not in the conditions themselves, I became as afraid of fear as I had ever been of the material germ, climate, and so forth. Indeed, it seemed worse; for I could not run away from evil suggestions as I had from things and places, nor could I allow myself to find an outlet by continually voicing error as formerly. This struggle in my thought lasted for many years, and although my progress seemed very slow, I did not get discouraged, but kept continually meeting the suggestions of fear with the affirmation of the truth that good alone is power. I declared the truth over and over again though it often seemed to be a mere repetition of words; for I reasoned that as the child learns to understand the multiplication table by applying the rule over and over again, I could learn the truth about power in the same way if I were sufficiently patient and persistent.

I am grateful to say that my efforts to cling to God were bounteously rewarded; for one day I realized quite clearly that my salvation was being beautifully worked out, that the sick had been healed and the home regenerated despite the fear and trembling. Since then I have never been in such bondage to fear, for I have proved in a small degree what our Leader has said on page 273 of Science and Health, "Science shows that material, conflicting mortal opinions and beliefs emit the effects of error at all times, but this atmosphere of mortal mind cannot be destructive to morals and health when it is opposed promptly and persistently by Christian Science." Let the fearful ones rejoice that we have such comforting assurance. If we cannot at once silence these suggestions of fear, we know that we can finally nullify them by prompt and persistent clinging to the truth.

Spontaneity

E. OLIVE DAVIS

THE writer recently found herself referring rather frequently to spontaneity as a quality of man's thinking. It one day became necessary for her to explain to some one just what she meant by the term, and this led to more thoughtful consideration and study of the word. She was interested to find among other definitions the term "self-activity." Some thought along this line was very illuminating. If spontaneity were a desirable mental quality, how could it be defined as self-activity? The answer came: Man has no self apart from God, the one Ego, the great I AM; for, as Mrs. Eddy says on page 183 of "Miscellaneous Writings," "asserting a selfhood apart from God, is a denial of man's spiritual sonship; for it claims another father." Real self-activity for man then means the reflection of God-activity. This was the explanation; here was the source and spring of spontaneity,—a willingness to let God declare Himself through His idea.

The example set us by Jesus, the Way-shower, came at once to mind. He said: "I can of mine own self do nothing." "The Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works." "I do nothing of myself; but as my Father hath taught me, I speak these things." Even the ignorant and worldly-minded who delivered Jesus over to the rulers, bore witness to the power of his words, for they said of him, "Never man spake like this man." Think of the ease, the freedom, the inspiration with which he taught. His lessons were not read, nor based upon anything previously prepared and carefully thought out, so far as we can judge. Objects which were at hand served him as illustrations,—fishing nets, fig trees, mountains, vineyards; and as for his delivery, did not his listeners' hearts burn within them? All this and more was the content of what he spoke and of which the Master himself said, "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." Think of it! His words were spirit and life, were the expression of God through His Son.

It is of course a belief of separation from God which makes men timid, fearful, and restrained in thought, speech, and act. Curiously enough we say that this mortal, limited, finite self is self-depreciatory; but this is really only the old argument of the serpent in its effort to depreciate God's perfect selfhood and His perfect manifestation by claiming the existence of an evil mind and a man separated from his Maker. It is to be noted that one of the results of such timid, fearful thinking is manifested in such strict adherence to the letter of Christian Science that the freedom and spontaneity of the spirit are lost sight of. Lacking divine inspiration, treatment becomes mere argument, and church work is concerned with fulfilling only the letter of the law; yet Paul has said, "Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty."

Since we know this, let us claim our real inheritance, put mortal self aside, and think and speak only as inspired by God. With the responsibility placed where it properly belongs, we shall have no thought of pride or self-glorification but only the joy of bearing witness to our Father's greatness and goodness. This was surely what Jesus meant when he said, "And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self with the glory which I had with thee before the world was."

What God Hath Done

A CHILD, troubled in the night by error, and tossing in confused fretfulness, was taken up by the mother and comforted with the assurance of Love's presence and that God would take away the ill and give him rest. After a time the boy passed into a state of seemingly troubled sleep. The next morning as the parents were studying the Lesson-Sermon the little fellow came running to them, saying, "Oh, I want to tell you what God did to me: He took away all my headache; it's all gone." The feverish lie had been supplanted by the truth of being, for the freedom of the child was evident. What a precious reminder to the older children of the loving care of the Father, "who healeth all thy diseases."

It is our privilege to attend the Wednesday evening meeting in this same joyous spirit of longing to tell what God hath done, remembering that each true witness has the support of Mind in infinite jurisdiction, bringing home to troubled hearts the actuality of our revered Leader's life purpose, as stated on page 207 of "Miscellaneous Writings": "To impress humanity with the genuine recognition of practical, operative Christian Science."

GRACE HOFFMAN WHITE

FOR the great sky and the great sea
And all the great strong things there be,
We thank Thee, Lord!

For winds adown the mountain side,
That sweep their fragrance far and wide,
We thank Thee, Lord!

And all the leaping joyous things,
The happy birds on happy wings,
We thank Thee, Lord!

For love that comes and never goes,
And e'en for what we deem our woes,
We thank Thee, Lord!

For life itself we needs must praise,
As up to Thee our song we raise
And thank Thee, Lord!

Selected Articles

["'The supremacy of Spirit'"—The Christian Science Monitor, Boston, U. S. A., Aug. 11, 1919]

The careful reader of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," the textbook of Christian Science, can hardly fail to notice the frequency with which Mrs. Eddy uses the phrase, "the supremacy of Spirit." Ten times in the textbook she repeats, as the Concordance shows, that identical phrase, to say nothing of the changes by the substitution of the words Mind, Truth, good, and other variations which in their final analysis amount to the same statement. In her "Miscellaneous Writings" the same phrase occurs no less than five times more. Discounting the criticism of those who have failed utterly to approach Mrs. Eddy's metaphysical standpoint, it may safely be said that she always said exactly what she meant in the best words it was possible to select to express that meaning. When, therefore, we find her using continually the statement of the supremacy of Spirit, we may be very sure that she not only meant what the words imply, but also that the thought therein expressed came from her innermost heart. If this were not so she would hardly have used them so often.

Before the discovery of Christian Science we might have heard the words, supremacy of Spirit, from the pulpit or platform, but they did not carry the living vigor that they do in the light of the Christian Science textbook. Why? one may reasonably ask. Do not the same words always mean the same thing? In this instance the vitality of the expression had been sapped by centuries of "vain repetition" which lacked the demonstration necessary to a living faith. To go on for a lifetime repeating the words "supremacy of Spirit" while nine tenths of that lifetime was given up to proving the exact opposite, namely the supremacy of matter in our lives, was a poor way to embody living force and practical faith in the words we professed to believe.

Here, then, was the situation described in the Scriptures: "Jesus said unto him, If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth. And straightway the father of the child cried out, and said with tears, Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief." And Jesus did help his unbelief, by casting out the "dumb and deaf spirit," and healing the child of the man who had uttered that despairing cry; despairing especially, perhaps, because the disciples of Jesus had failed to make this demonstration of healing. It is to be noted that Jesus did not tell the father of the child that he must believe without receiving; that it was his Father's will that the child should remain afflicted; that such visitations were the evidences of the inscrutable wisdom of God, whose ways man knoweth not, or any other like sophistries into which his later professed followers were misled. His answer was the healing of the child, and he did not wholly excuse the disciples for their failure in this case. Greater humility, more absolute dependence upon the supremacy of Spirit, was what he implied was necessary, in the words, "This kind can come forth by nothing, but by prayer and fasting."

Moses was a great exponent of the supremacy of Spirit. The First Commandment, given to him on the mount, includes the whole of the idea of the supremacy of Spirit in the words, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." In Science and Health we learn that this "me" is Spirit; for example, on page 467: "The first demand of this Science is, 'Thou shalt have no other gods before me.' This me is Spirit. Therefore the command means this: Thou shalt have no intelligence, no life, no substance, no truth, no love, but that which is spiritual." The belief has been permitted to grow up that the so-called material existence of men is reality; that spiritual existence, if there is such a state, is an unknown quantity, to be revealed, if at all, at some future time, after this material existence is over. All this is changed in Christian Science, which shows that material existence is the error not the reality of being; that the only real existence is spiritual and always has been spiritual. Spiritual existence has been lost sight of by mankind through misbelief and ignorance of Spirit. Spirit is not less real than it ever was; Spirit has always been infinite and supreme, existing everywhere, and all that really exists does so now because of the infinitude of Spirit.

Now this statement of spiritual Truth may not at once clear away the misconception from mortal eyes. That is why the average person who first begins the study of Christian Science is prompted to ask: But how about the material universe, the men that we see and deal with, and all the material objects that we are using in our daily lives? These things fall into their natural and only logical place as counterfeits of the spiritual and real as the spiritual viewpoint is gained in Christian Science. Their unreality is gradually proved as the reality of Spirit appears. Nothing that is real can ever be lost or changed; only that which is unreal is put off, and that process is wholly dependent upon a better and higher concept taking the place of the old.

Here arises another question. Some seekers for the truth as revealed in Christian Science, not grasping immediately the fundamental idea of the supremacy of Spirit, may have read and reread the textbook without the benefits following that they had been led to hope for. Why is not every one immediately healed by reading the book? We know that thousands have been so healed, why is this not an invariable rule? Why should some have to study for months, perhaps for years, to gain what others seem to obtain in a much shorter time? Mrs. Eddy explains this in a short paragraph on page 324 of Science and Health, where she says: "Paul writes, 'If Christ [Truth] be not risen, then is our preaching vain.' That is, if the idea of the supremacy of Spirit, which is the true conception of being, come not to your thought, you cannot be benefited by what I say." The only course, then, is to strive to attain "the true conception of being," which Mrs. Eddy says is "the idea of the supremacy of Spirit," knowing in the meantime that the mortal measurement of time spent in the search has nothing to do with Truth's appearing.

The ways of matter have been vain. Centuries of exploration in the fields of so-called material law have yielded so little that the most learned in its lore are to-day found making admissions that should startle the world into an acknowledgment of its mistaken course. Years ago the Discoverer of Christian Science put the matter clearly before all with eyes to see and ears to hear when she wrote (Science and Health, p. 491): "Matter cannot connect mortals with the true origin and facts of being, in which all must end. It is only by acknowledging the supremacy of Spirit, which annuls the claims of matter, that mortals can lay off mortality and find the indissoluble spiritual link which establishes man forever in the divine likeness, inseparable from his creator."

[Ernest C. Moses in Kankakee (Ill.) Republican]

A writer in a recent issue certainly was not correctly informed concerning the practice of Christian Science or he would not have attempted to classify its healing work with the alleged cures of Hindu fakirs and Buddhist priests. It is easy to make such erroneous statements in the absence of definite knowledge of Christian Science, but those who understand and demonstrate this Science know that it is the very opposite of every form of oriental occultism and hypnotism.

Christian Science heals both sin and sickness through a spiritual understanding of God, and its acceptance by the people results from the good it does. This Science declares that sin, sickness, and death were never created by God, and hence from the standpoint of God's perfect creation these abnormalities have neither cause nor reality. They claim to exist as realities in human consciousness, however, and it is the work of Christian Science to destroy the hold of these enemies on humanity.

Christian Science is based on the teachings of the Bible, which is the Word of God; therefore there is light in this Science and it is manifested by those who fully accept the statement of the Master, "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also." Jesus based the whole structure of Christianity on works and not on profession. As Christian Science is a clear explanation of the teachings of Christ Jesus, in strict accord with his divine Principle and rule, it proves its authority in destroying the "works of the devil," and the fruits of this Science of Christianity make it known as God's revelation of truth, welcome to sincere seekers after health and righteousness everywhere.

The works of this Science are explained in a degree in the following statement by Mrs. Eddy in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 270): "If sin makes sinners, Truth and Love alone can unmake them. If a sense of disease produces suffering and a sense of ease antidotes suffering, disease is mental, not material. Hence the fact that the human mind alone suffers, is sick, and that the divine Mind alone heals."

[Peter V. Ross in Emanu-El, San Francisco, Calif.]

Very discerningly, indeed, does a gentleman write of Christian Science in Emanu-El. He is quite right when he says that we cannot banish sin and pain from the world by ignoring them, nor abolish evil by denying its existence. He might have added, with equal truth, that we cannot overcome them while admitting their reality.

We must, so Christian Science insists, go farther than simply to ignore or even deny evil, whether it takes the form of sin or of suffering. It is essential, if we would destroy it, to see evil for what it is; namely, the suppositional absence of good, a false pretension of power, dangerous until faced and overthrown, and susceptible of being overthrown only because, notwithstanding appearances, it is after all without entity or actuality. The denial of evil is important, but likely to be wanting in complete efficacy unless accompanied by the affirmative realization that the omnipresence and omnipotence of God, or the all-presence and the all-power of good, relegates evil to the realm of illusion or unreality, without power or influence except as it is believed or accepted. Ignoring evil is wholly inadmissible, for thereby it is given opportunity to propagate and spread its deception. It must be seen in its true light or nature as a false claim, and then met and uprooted. This becomes possible only as its unreality is recognized, since real things are permanent and enduring.

Our critic errs in supposing that Christian Scientists "would effect cures by the mere recital of Biblical verses." The fact is that Christian Science has imparted a new meaning and vitality to the Scriptures which enables Christian Scientists to utilize the Bible truths and thereby to overcome sickness by spiritual means as promised and illustrated in Holy Writ. This it does, not by reciting verses and formulas, but by a process of spiritual understanding which discerns disease as a mistaken belief or phenomenon of the human mind and displaces it with the idea that health and harmony are everywhere present, even where suffering seems to be. Material sense, with its fears and pains, is thus made to yield to spiritual consciousness, which is cognizant only of the things of God.

In one sense, as this gentleman declares, there is nothing new about Christian Science, for it can all be found in the Bible. But how many were finding it there before Mrs. Eddy discovered it and stated it in such a way as to make it understandable and usable? Electricity has always been right at hand, yet it possessed no utility for mankind until Edison and others discovered and applied its subtle laws. No one would minimize the value of the service of such men, and no one should underestimate the importance of Mrs. Eddy's discovery and demonstration of those spiritual truths which had so long been hidden and unemployed.

The Scriptures contain Christian Science, it is true, and the churches, Jewish or Christian, might have invoked and applied it, but they have not done so to an extent satisfactory to their followers. Neither has medicine met the needs of a suffering people. Hence they have, in large numbers, turned from their medical systems and churches to Christian Science as discovered and founded by Mrs. Eddy. In so doing they have found that their religion has not suffered deterioration, but rather received a new impulse and inspiration.

[Miss M. Scott Till in The Mid-Sussex Times, Brighton, England]

Christian Science presents to suffering humanity the wonderful possibilities of the application of the law of divine Spirit, and Christian Scientists have learned to know that this divine Principle, this divine, unerring law, when understandingly applied, saves and heals; for believing in its efficacy they are going out into all the world, casting out devils and healing all manner of disease. The signs following the application of this law prove it to be "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus," which makes "free from the law of sin and death," prove it to be the law of divine Principle, Love, which has existed through all time, hidden until Mrs. Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, discovered it to be the power which Jesus demonstrated in overcoming the human, man-made laws of sickness, sin, and death, laws which God did not create, for He made all, and it was good.

Christian Science is urging upon a materially thinking world the earnest consideration of this spiritual law. It bade men then, as it bids them now, turn from the contemplation of the flesh, or matter, which is profitless and not pleasing to God, to the contemplation of man made in the image and likeness of Himself, Spirit. To-day Christian Science is thundering Jesus' teachings once again upon the world, with the result that multitudes are listening, and listening are proving the Christ-healing to be the rich legacy Jesus left to all mankind.

[Willard J. Welch in Waukon (Iowa) Republican]

The following news item appeared in a recent issue of the Postville Herald: "Sheriff ——— accompanied Miss —— to the hospital at Independence last Thursday. Her home was formerly Harpers Ferry. The young lady is about twenty-eight years of age, and delving too deeply into the theories of Christian Science is accredited with causing her present regrettable condition, says the Waukon Republican."

Thorough and painstaking investigation into the statement made in the foregoing news item has developed the fact that the cause given for "her present regrettable condition" is a mistake. The young lady came into contact with a spiritualist in Dubuque, and it was the opinion of two of her brothers who live there that this was unfortunate for her under her existing mental condition, for she had manifested a worried and downhearted disposition for some time. The entire family thought that Christian Science and Spiritualism were the same thing. This apparently accounts for the newspaper article. A clear explanation was made of the fact that Christian Science has absolutely nothing in common with Spiritualism, mesmerism, or hypnotism, and never has had, for it is the pure and simple religion preached and practiced by Jesus the Christ. Matters then became clearer and all admitted they had been mistaken.

Extracts from Letters

"I wish to take this opportunity to express my gratitude for Christian Science. Beginning in a camp in the United States, my work as chaplain has taken me to the embarkation port and overseas, through the debarkation camp into a replacement depot in the Intermediate Section of the S. O. S. of the A. E. F., where I have met men on their way to the front lines and coming back from the front. At every stage of my experience I have found proof of the healing work of Christian Science in the demonstrations made by the soldiers. The men in our Army have come into their new conditions from widely differing spheres of life, but the comradeship of Christian Science has brought them together as nothing else would have done, and wherever I have gone I have found these little bands of students discovering their mutual interest in Christian Science, and thereafter working together in most practical Christian fellowship.

"For my own self I have found healing from sickness through reliance solely on Christian Science. In an army camp in the United States I one evening thought myself too sick to keep out of bed, but when one of the soldiers asked me to see him and tell him something of Christian Science, I was recalled to a better understanding of this teaching, and found myself well before our conversation was ended. Again, on the transport when the voyage seemed hard and there was great fear of the epidemic raging on board, I began to find I was feeling as badly as the others; but after one night spent on the deck talking with a boy beginning to be interested in Christian Science, there was never a return of these symptoms. Here in France whenever a sense of sickness has manifested itself, I have found it merely a demand for more earnest work. I can say truly that I have been helped many times, not only in sickness but in times of threatened danger from accident.

"But above all I wish to speak of my gratitude for the sense of protection that I have felt. At times when I have seen new-made friends depart and have felt alone, I have realized that all these new-made friends have been the result of mutual interest in Christian Science, and that they have been friends in every sense, although never acquainted before arriving in France. This is a necessary result of Christian Science, for we are never left alone. Divine Love protects us through every trial, and we will feel this protection everywhere we go. At times when the results of accidents have seemed unfavorable the same sense of protection has comforted me and shown me to look rather for the good results from ever present Love."

In Accord with Mind

Judging by the experience of practitioners to whom the suffering come that they may learn of that divine wisdom or Christian Science which frees mankind from self-imposed sufferings, there are few persons free from a perpetual inward irritation aroused by their disapproval of the actions of others. The individual believing in his own competent mind, thinks harmony possible only if that mind rules. Finding others mentally active but actuated by different motives and illumined by different views, he is unable to find conformity with their good intentions and so wills and desires that all operations shall conform to his imagination of the right process. Hence there arises in many a business what has been kindly termed a benevolent despotism. This, however, to the workers may not seem to be benevolent at all, since natural growth, intuitive energy, and individual vision are all quenched and work becomes formal and the outlook narrow, with no place for invention or ingenuity or for the exercise of prayer whereby one may reach and discover the answer of Mind.

Elihu as the questioner of Job asks, "Should it be according to thy mind?" It is well for every man at intervals to put to himself this question, especially when he finds himself climbing up the steps of the judgment seat to sit there in condemnation of what others do. The translation of this passage in the American Standard Version of 1901 makes the question read: "Shall his recompense be as thou wilt, that thou refusest it?" Is a man to decide how God shall reward him, and choose or refuse according to his own wish? Not if there has been gained some vision of the one Mind concerning whom it may be said, "Thou shalt judge the people righteously, and govern the nations upon earth;" not if the example of Christ Jesus is understood, and there is a following in his steps; for he, even when actually reviled, did not revile again, and when made to suffer, did not threaten; but committed his cause "to him that judgeth righteously." The admonition, then, is pertinent which says (Science and Health, p. 216), "Give up your material belief of mind in matter, and have but one Mind, even God; for this Mind forms its own likeness."

There are cases of healing, for example, where recovery and comfort and recuperation are due to deliverance from resentment, irritation, severity, harsh judgment of one's self and others, through discovery of the perfection of God's government and the peace of heart which follows a willingness to obey divine Mind. The will to make human beings obey the varying theories of conduct emanating from the human brain has to be supported by cruelty. It is illustrated by the brutalities of the slave traffic. The will to power disregards the rights as well as the feelings of others, since domination is looked upon as of supreme importance and the one who can domineer believes he becomes thereby a veritable lord; but hereby discord becomes a raging power in the earth, because mortal mind continually provides "gods many, and lords many." No peace is possible until men yield up their personal ambition to be dominant, forceful, brainy and braggart, and recognizing one Mind, are content to be obedient, pure, and tender-hearted. Then comes true dominion, even as our textbook discloses (Science and Health, p. 307): "The divine Mind is the Soul of man, and gives man dominion over all things. Man was not created from a material basis, nor bidden to obey material laws which Spirit never made; his province is in spiritual statutes, in the higher law of Mind."

The world has learned by its sufferings the insufficiency of personal rule and domination to establish happiness. It has been deceived by fine promises and subdued by threats and fears. Yet all the more is there cherished in the hearts of mankind a hope of better things, a hope of deliverance from the confusing claims of personal rulers and the contentions of many would-be saviors, and the sadness of heart from many disappointments. The only remedy is practical Christianity. Matter has no saving efficacy, although various serums and elixirs may be widely advertised; nor is there any salvation in the human mind, which by its pride and godlessness built up the trouble. What Peter boldly said when he proclaimed the name of Christ Jesus is vitally true to-day: "This is the stone which was set at nought of you builders, which is become the head of the corner. Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." Christian Science shows us exactly why this salvation is available for all. Mrs. Eddy says (Science and Health, p. 316): "Christ presents the indestructible man, whom Spirit creates, constitutes, and governs. Christ illustrates that blending with God, his divine Principle, which gives man dominion over all the earth."

William P. McKenzie.

Overcoming

In John's revelation we find him frequently calling upon men with no uncertain voice, as when he says, "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches." Many times he proclaims the necessity for "overcoming," always coupling therewith some marvelous promise of the good which shall result to those who are thus triumphant. From the first suppositional acceptance of the lie of material sense to the present time, humanity has gained a larger realization of good only through overcoming that opposite lie which it had accepted perhaps all unwittingly. Mankind has always recognized in a general way the necessity for triumphing over evil, and it has struggled long, and often in vain, because of its misunderstanding of fundamentals. Considering evil as real and equal if not superior to good, it has started out to perform what it almost invariably prejudged as a hopeless task. Nevertheless there has constantly been the endeavor to win freedom from the supposititious control of error. All religious history is the portrayal of the struggles and triumphs of the people who have succeeded in overcoming evil by serving God and Him alone.

When Christian Science was given to the world with its illuminating revelation of the allness of God, good, and the consequent nothingness—unreality—of evil, the door of salvation was flung wide open, and can never again be closed. In the first flush of health restored or of sin forgiven (destroyed), the beginner in Christian Science has often felt that all of error had been vanquished so far as he was concerned, and that he would never again have any battles to wage for himself, but would only have the glorious privilege of helping others to find this liberating truth. Frequently it takes some time for him to become willing to face the actual situation. He has seen a great light. He no doubt has had vouchsafed to him a wonderful blessing; but he must take this light and go forward with it from the point where it found him. One sickness destroyed, one claim of sin overcome, is not the destruction of all evil to anyone's consciousness. It prophesies a full deliverance, however, and this must be seen in order that the student of Christian Science may continue to advance in the path from earth to heaven,—from human beliefs to spiritual understanding.

Each one must take up the work very patiently, very humbly, and always keep working at each problem until the overcoming is completed. He must remember that "he that endureth to the end shall be saved,"—he that continueth to the destruction of error shall be saved from each specific and every general claim of evil. It is important that the student of larger experience also should discern clearly that there is no place to stop in the process of overcoming until the last belief of evil has been proved unreal. To see, as Mrs. Eddy tells us in "Retrospection and Introspection," beginning on page 56, that "divine Science demands mighty wrestlings with mortal beliefs, as we sail into the eternal haven over the unfathomable sea of possibilities," is no cause for discouragement. On the contrary, to recognize this necessity is to do away with discouragement; for from this viewpoint the moment an error stands uncovered, there is the grand opportunity to rebuke and destroy evil by demonstrating the power of Truth.

When the Christian Scientist once understands what our Leader also says in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 231), "Unless an ill is rightly met and fairly overcome by Truth, the ill is never conquered," he will no longer spend much time in carelessly making general statements of absolute Truth, but will instead apply mentally and specifically what he understands of Principle and will allow the completed demonstrations to speak for themselves. It is the "bearing witness" of both the spirit and the letter which accomplishes the overcoming, and the spirit is won as the letter is put into practice to the vanquishment of every great or least claim of evil. This demands a deep love and fervent consecration, and if one hesitates to press steadily on to the perfect goal, he would do well to recall the admonition of our beloved Leader, in "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 334), "Because I have uncovered evil, and dis-covered for you divine Science, which saith, 'Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good,' and you have not loved sufficiently to understand this Golden Rule and demonstrate the might of perfect Love that casteth out all fear, shall you turn away from this divine Principle to graven images?"

It is true that heaven is here and now, and that God is as infinite to-day as He always has been, and will eternally continue to be; also that His creation is as present and perfect as is the creator. Every human footstep, however, must be taken in patient perseverance to the overcoming of all evil with Truth and Love. We cannot dwell too constantly in thought with absolute good; but we must at the same time keep awake to the fact that we only know what we have proved, and we have found proof only when we have perfectly triumphed. After all is said, this overcoming is a glad work! We are always certain of success; for Truth has never failed, it never can fail, it is always omnipotent. This overcoming of evil with good is the sweetest, holiest experience possible, and it is a constant succession of triumphs for Principle. Who would not press joyfully on and thus fulfill the glorious promise of our blessed Master, Christ Jesus, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne."

Among the Churches

Current Notes

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—A large group of members of First Church of Christ, Scientist, are taking steps to form a new congregation in this city which will be known as Second Church of Christ, Scientist. Where the church will be situated the committees do not yet know. It may be in almost any part of the city, excepting south of Main Street on the East Side, as the present building is in this section, at East Avenue and Prince Street. The idea is not only to relieve the congestion of this building but to accommodate members of the congregation who do not live in this part of the city.

It is not three years since the Christian Scientists moved from their former building at Alexander and Cobb Streets to the present edifice, completed in December, 1916. The seating capacity of the old church was five hundred and sixteen, that of the new is twelve hundred. The congregation is so large that at many services people are obliged to stand, and two sessions of the Sunday school are held to accommodate all the attendants.—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

BRAZIL, IND.—Ground was staked off to-day [July 18] for the edifice of First Church of Christ, Scientist, which is to be erected on the lot recently purchased from the Episcopal Church opposite the Public Library on North Walnut Street. The new church will be a one-story structure, built of brick in colonial style with an attractive front porch and massive columns. The building will have a frontage of thirty-two feet and a depth of seventy-two feet. The cost will be about ten thousand dollars.—Brazil News.

RIDGEFIELD PARK, N. J.—After the regular Wednesday evening testimony meeting [Aug. 6] in the Municipal Building the local Christian Scientists held a building meeting, which was attended by about forty-five people, some of them representing outside churches. Those present contributed in cash the sum of $5,039 for the new church, which is to be erected on the corner of Main Street and Hackensack Avenue, the ground for which will be broken in a week or ten days.—The Review.

Admission to Membership in The Mother Church

The next admission of candidates will take place on November 7, 1919, as provided in Article XIII, Section 2, of the By-laws of The Mother Church. Application blanks may be obtained by addressing the Clerk of The Mother Church, and should be returned to him on or before Friday, October 24, 1919. Consideration of any applications received after that date will be deferred until the June 4, 1920, admission.

An application sent to the Clerk does not constitute the applicant a member. Notice of election will be sent to those who are admitted to membership.

Those who have made application for membership prior to May 30, 1919, and have not received notice of election, may communicate with the Clerk if they so desire, and are especially requested to do so before sending in a second application.

The Lectures

Ancon, Canal Zone, Panama (Society).—Dr. Walton Hubbard, lecturer; introduced by Miss Myrtis M. Gallup, who said in part:—

The latter part of the nineteenth century, following the great industrial and scientific revolutions, was characterized by deep and widespread religious unrest. Thoughtful people on both sides of the Atlantic questioned honestly and reverently the grounds of faith, and the great writers—for great writers are but mouthpieces for the people—voiced their restless questioning. It is a noteworthy fact that nearly every serious writer of note, poet or prose writer, both in England and in America, contributed something in his characteristic way to this literature of questioning. Matthew Arnold, the great English critic, was one of these questioners,— honest, reverent, and insistent,—who, because he could not find satisfaction for both head and heart, remained comfortless. In 1867, because he could not eliminate the "eternal note of sadness" from his songs and could give no heart-cheering message, he bade farewell to poetry and turned to criticism. In his last volume of poems is "Dover Beach," inexpressibly sad, which closes:—

> The Sea of faith
> Was once, too, at the full, and round earth's shore
> Lay like the folds of a bright girdle furled.
> But now I only hear
> Its melancholy, long, withdrawing roar,
> Retreating, to the breath
> Of the night-winds, down the vast edges drear
> And naked shingles of the world.
> . . . for the world, which seems
> To lie before us like a land of dreams,
> So various, so beautiful, so new,
> Hath really neither joy, nor love, nor light,
> Nor certitude, nor peace, nor help for pain;
> And we are here as on a darkling plain
> Swept with confused alarms of struggle and flight,
> Where ignorant armies clash by night.

During the same years a New England woman was diligently searching for a scientific faith rooted in understanding, and in 1866 she found the secret of the Christ-healing, and an understanding of a God who "forgiveth all thine iniquities" and "healeth all thy diseases."

To-day the world is again inexpressibly weary and heavy-laden, and cries for peace,—peace with justice and freedom, and a knowledge of the truth. Jesus said, "If ye continue in my word, . . . ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." In order to learn to know the truth which makes free and to practice it in daily living, and thus to prove that peace with freedom is a present possibility, the great army of Christian Scientists are daily studying the Bible and "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," and according to their understanding are receiving their reward.

Maricopa, Calif. (Society).—John Randall Dunn, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. E. E. Ballanfante, who said in part:—

Christian Science is the religion, pure and undefiled, taught by Christ Jesus; and the physical healings are a natural result of these teachings and their practical application to everyday living now as aforetime,—the "signs following" that prove their divine origin. Nearly nineteen hundred years have passed since Jesus walked on earth, teaching the truth that would set men free from their self-imposed bondage of sin and disease, proclaiming and explaining the glad tidings of the gospel of a kingdom of heaven at hand, and healing all manner of disease, even finally permitting himself to be crucified that he might prove to an unbelieving world that to know God aright is life eternal. We have strayed far from his teachings; the healing power was lost; and the glad tidings of a kingdom of heaven at hand became a mere promise, pertaining to some future state of existence.

Christian Science, as given to the world by Mrs. Eddy in the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," has restored the primitive teachings of Jesus. Once more the truth is being taught throughout the civilized world, and thousands of persons are willing to testify to the efficacy of this religion in healing sin and disease.

Buckhannon, W. Va. (Society).—Dr. John M. Tutt, lecturer; introduced by Root A. Pascal, who said in part:—

Christian Science, as misunderstood by those who have not carefully looked into its wonderful truth, is thought of only as a religion to heal the sick; but that is not so. Mrs. Eddy plainly states in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 404), "Healing the sick and reforming the sinner are one and the same thing in Christian Science."

Louisville, Ky. (First Church).—The Rev. Andrew J. Graham, lecturer; introduced by W. H. Orrill, who said in part:—

There are hundreds of thousands of people throughout the world who are testifying daily that since taking up the study of Christian Science they are indeed finding God to be all-presence and all-power, a God who heals all their diseases. Too long have we been taught that we must die to see God, that all the blessed promises are only to be claimed after the experience we call death, and that the works of Jesus the Christ were performed for a limited period of time. Jesus said, "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also," meaning anyone who at any time should believe. Our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, who only claims to have rediscovered the Science taught by Jesus the Christ, has opened our eyes to the fact that God is "the same yesterday, and to day, and for ever;" and as Paul says, "In him we live, and move, and have our being."

Liverpool, England (First Church).—John W. Doorly, lecturer; introduced by the Hon. Lady Henniker Heaton, who said in part:—

Doubtless we are all familiar with the words of our Lord, "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also," and "These signs shall follow them that believe; . . . they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover;" but because we have been told even in most of the churches that these sayings and promises do not apply to us, most people have passed them by without qualm or regret, never realizing that unless they at least in some measure do the works, there is absolutely no evidence that they believe. One woman, however, Mrs. Eddy, did realize all this, and felt that the command to heal the sick was inseparably bound up with the command to preach the gospel, and she never rested until she had discovered, tested, and proved for all time the law underlying these physical and mental healings. She named her discovery Christian Science, and explained it to us all in her book "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures."

Lima, Ohio (First Church).—John C. Lathrop, lecturer; introduced by A. C. Eddy, who said in part:—

The subject of Christian Science is meeting the favorable consideration of thinking people in ever increasing numbers throughout the civilized world. The reason for this becomes instantly apparent to anyone who will lay aside his preconceived ideas and prejudices long enough to give the subject intelligent and conscientious study.

No advantage will be taken of your presence here tonight by any effort to convert you, or even to divert you from any religious or medical convictions that may be meeting your needs or satisfying your thought; for Christian Science has not gained its unprecedented growth by proselyting. I am sure that it will be conceded, however, that the world of thought is not satisfied with the prevailing theories regarding man's origin, existence, and destiny. If there is a better way, then surely we can ill afford to allow pride, prejudice, or any other obstruction to close our eyes to the teaching that reveals to us the grand verities, or to hear what Christian Science teaches on the subject of existence.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN. (Fifth Church).—Miss Mary G. Ewing, lecturer; introduced by Lew C. Church, who said in part:—

Christian Science teaches the truth about God and man, and man's relation to God. Through a knowledge and application of its fundamental teachings any and every human problem may be solved. It knows no incurable disease; it admits no discordant circumstance nor condition out of which man may not be delivered. It recognizes no cause or creator, save God. For half a century it has been making men and women healthy, happy, and harmonious. It has proved its efficacy in sickness, in sin, in poverty, in business perplexity,—and more recently in the exigencies and dire distresses of the battle field.

MARSHALL, MO. (First Church).—Virgil O. Strickler, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Nelle S. Newell, who said in part:—

The Christian world has always claimed to believe in prayer; but in time of sickness, epidemic, in trouble,—financial, social, large or small,—has it turned in prayer to God, willing to put all reliance there? Prayer should be the "Christian's vital breath." So it was to Daniel, Elijah, Elisha, to Jesus, who said: "For verily I say unto you, That whosoever shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea; and shall not doubt in his heart, but shall believe that those things which he saith shall come to pass; he shall have whatsoever he saith. Therefore I say unto you, What things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them." Christian Science has brought to the world again this conception of prayer, its efficacy, its action, its palpitating force. To prove that God has power sufficient to meet every need, is the mission of the redemption Christian Science is bringing to the world.

Testimonies of Healing

My heart overflows with gratitude for all the good that has come to me through Christian Science. I was in the depths of despair when this healing truth found me, confined to my bed with a complication of diseases. I had suffered from a peculiar type of throat trouble since I was eight years of age. This would come in paroxysms and my jaws would become locked so that I could not talk or eat. These attacks lasted from five to ten days. The physicians had long before told my loved ones and me that there was nothing they could do for me, and this was very discouraging as I suffered intensely during these attacks.

When a number of other discordant physical conditions were added to this one, and according to materia medica my days were numbered, I turned as a last resort to Christian Science. From the first treatment I began to improve, one disease disappearing, then another. The throat affection was longer in yielding to the truth, and this caused me to study the Christian Science literature more faithfully. With the aid of a practitioner, however, from this trouble, too, I was at last freed.

While my heart overflows with gratitude for the physical healings, for the spiritual uplift words are inadequate to express my gratitude. I had always known the Golden Rule, but with this newborn understanding came the desire to practice it in my daily life. The love for my fellow man became stronger, and I began to see life from a new standpoint. In about five weeks I went back to business, after having been away from it for four months. Financial conditions also improved. All that I have and am I owe to Christian Science. My prayer is that my life may attest my sincerity, my thankfulness to God, and my gratitude to Mrs. Eddy.

(Mrs.) Ida Herring Godbold, Memphis, Tenn.

Christian Science came to me, as to many others, at a time of great need. My wife and I, accompanied by our daughter, had crossed two continents in search of health and fortune. My wife was like the woman who "had suffered many things of many physicians, and had spent all that she had, and was nothing bettered, but rather grew worse." Personally, I am afraid I was a little bitter with the experience of it all and had almost reached the point where I wondered whether life was worth living. It was at this time that Christian Science was mentioned to me, and a copy of the textbook was lent me by a friend. The grain of truth which came to my consciousness was so welcome that I prayed earnestly that if this teaching was the truth I might receive its blessings. I am glad to say that my prayer has been and is being answered daily. Christian Science has enabled us to get a fresh grip on life. It has made life more worth living; in fact, we can truthfully say that we did not seem really to live until we learned how through Christian Science.

One of the things that puzzled me when I first began this new study was the large number of testimonies which told of healing that had resulted from the reading of the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. It was not long, however, before I had this experience myself. I had an attack of influenza just as I had been successful in obtaining a position for which I had been waiting three years. These attacks came regularly every year and were usually severe. I felt very much discouraged that it should have come at a time when it was absolutely necessary that I should be at my new post. Then the thought came to me: Why not try this Science? Why not put it to the test? I asked my wife to bring me the textbook, and after quietly reading for about half an hour I found myself completely healed. I was able to join my family at dinner and go back to my new work the next morning. The healing was permanent.

One more experience I would like to offer. For many years I had suffered from distressing headaches, and I rarely went through a week without one. I would retire at night feeling as "fit as a fiddle;" in the morning I would be prostrated. About two years ago I was elected to a position in our church which made it imperative to be at every service. After the first thought of gratitude for this great privilege, I wondered how I was going to be rid of the problem which had so long troubled me. Then I remembered how much I had been blessed in many ways since coming into Christian Science and I felt confident that as God had called me to this work, He would give me the needed grace and help for it. I am happy to say that not once has it been necessary for me to be absent from my post and the ailment has been entirely overcome.

I am very grateful for these experiences, as well as the overcoming of the smoking and drinking habits. On page 372 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy tells us that "Christian Science and Christianity are one." I am glad to testify to the truth of this statement, for it was its Christianity which made Christian Science acceptable to me and mine; and while we are very grateful for the physical healings, we are most grateful for the spiritual uplift which this teaching has given us, for the better understanding of God and of man's relation to Him. Our daily prayer is that the Mind which was in Christ Jesus may be in us and that we may be worthy Christian Scientists in thought, word, and deed.

Ernest Percy Morgan, Portland, Ore.

I am glad to verify my husband's testimony. It is true in every statement and I am grateful that I not only found health after my long search, but happiness, joy, and peace. We can only show our gratitude for Christian Science by striving each day to live the truth as we gain the understanding.—(Mrs.) Kate Morgan.

The first time Christian Science knocked at my door, I did not let it in, fearing in some way that its teachings were against God's will; but some years later, when it again came to me, I opened my heart wide to receive it. It was in the lovely month of June that I began studying that marvelous book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, and I had a glorious time,—all was just bathing in sunshine without and within, and I longed to share my happiness with the whole world.

I cannot tell of all the blessings that came to us through reading and studying Science and Health; they were innumerable. Christian Science has conquered gout of many years' standing, rheumatism, lung trouble, stomach disorder, colds, and a number of minor ailments. Every time we stuck to Truth, and to Truth alone, the victory was on our side. It has also helped us to realize supply; and during these years when everybody and everything seemed to manifest lack, we have indeed proved to be true the beautiful words of David in the twenty-third psalm, "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want." There has been no lack of anything, good having literally rained on us. In former days I used to fear everything, and when praying, "Thy will be done," I at the same time feared that something dreadful would happen to my loved ones; but now I know that God's will is good and only good, and as His will is ever present and omnipotent, then only good can meet us in every direction. Christian Science has indeed been my rod and my staff and has helped me through many an hour when all seemed dark as night; if I could but be still, there came always one of God's angels and pointed upward, helping me to see that in God's realm there can be no night, no fear, and no doubt, because Love is reigning there.

I am so grateful for all these blessings, and I know that if I abide in this Truth, it will help me to solve all my daily problems, thus enabling me by demonstration to prove my gratitude to God and thankfulness to Mrs. Eddy in the most effectual manner.

(Countess) ANNE SOPHIE HAMILTON, Stockholm, Sweden.

The wonderful help which a relative received from Christian Science treatment, while seemingly under a very great sorrow, led me to inquire of her regarding this religion, and I was lovingly given "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" to read. I read the book eagerly and found it to be the truth about God and man, and I turned to it with all my heart. As a family we have received many physical healings. Whooping cough was overcome with one week's treatment, so-called Spanish influenza with one treatment, and a nervous trouble and other discordant conditions have disappeared.

I would like to tell of a recent experience. While in a near-by city for the day, doing some shopping, I discovered that my purse, which contained my railroad ticket and money, was gone. I had no other money with me and knew that I must trust entirely to Christian Science. After a few minutes of right thinking on my part divine Love led me back to a crowded store, to a counter where I had thoughtlessly laid the purse, and after giving a description of it to the information department it was gladly returned to me. I was indeed overjoyed at this demonstration of Christian Science.

I am deeply grateful for the privilege of class instruction, for membership in The Mother Church and in the local branch church, also for the Christian Science literature; and my gratitude goes out to Mrs. Eddy, that she was good enough and spiritual enough to perceive this wonderful truth and give it to mankind.

(Mrs.) MABEL BOGART, Chatham, Ontario, Canada.

I am pleased to confirm the above testimony in every particular. It is also a pleasure to state that Christian Science has brought peace and love to our home, and has solved many problems in the home life for us. On first reading the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, I was enabled to lay aside glasses, which had been used for many years, and have never needed them since. For this and for many other evidences of the power of divine Love, I am truly grateful.

MILTON R. BOGART.

For the past six years my family and I have enjoyed the blessings of Christian Science, and I wish to give thanks for all the good received and for the many proofs of the tender love of our Father-Mother God. I beg to state the following experience as evidence of my gratitude and of the healing power of Christian Science.

During the so-called influenza epidemic last winter our seventeen-year-old daughter was stricken with the disease. We realized at once that here was our opportunity to prove our knowledge of Christian Science, and so we immediately declared the perfection of God's creation. The condition seemingly becoming serious, we requested the assistance of a Christian Science practitioner and, as we were compelled to report such a case, a doctor was called. We declared the truth constantly, especially since the doctor called the case very serious, even hopeless; and our calmness and confidence did not desert us the following day, although the conditions seemed to become worse. Toward evening the fever left the patient, which was perplexing to the doctor, but for us it was the natural result following the application of the teachings of Christian Science. After that her condition improved from day to day. We owe the life of our daughter, whom the doctor had already given up, to steadfast adherence to the power of divine Love, and to the loving assistance of the practitioner.

Christian Science produces harmony and perfection everywhere. Many business trials have also disappeared through the understanding that God constantly provides for our necessities. We depend upon our loving Father for everything, and the applicability of Christian Science to our daily lives renders it a treasure. It is our endeavor to gain more understanding of this teaching through prayer and work and by leading a life which will please God, and in this way express our thankfulness to God, our creator, and to our Leader, Mrs. Eddy, who was pure enough to bring this truth, revealed by Christ Jesus, to light again.

RUDOLF SCHWARZENBACH, Thalwil, Switzerland.

I could write of many benefits received by me and mine through the knowledge and application of Christian Science, for which a heart full of gratitude pours forth its thankfulness. I was subject to bronchial attacks, which were becoming more severe each time and causing me great suffering as well as loss of sleep, thereby compelling me to absent myself from my work. The last time I called in a doctor, five years ago, he seemed to be uncertain as to the cause of the trouble. As I felt that he was working in the dark, I decided to turn to a Christian Science practitioner for help. This was received and I have not suffered from that ailment since. I have learned to a great extent to overcome fear and nervousness, which were a hindrance in my work. I seemed to have a lack of confidence in my ability to do that which was put before me to do, but am learning that "with God all things are possible."

I am indeed thankful to God for His ever sustaining help and protection, and grateful to our dear Leader for her untiring devotion to the cause of Truth, which is enabling the children of God to come into their rightful inheritance.

(Miss) ANNETTE BERARD, San Francisco, Calif.

Many persons have borne convincing proof that healing is effected by the understanding of divine Principle, as taught in Christian Science. I gratefully acknowledge myself as one of that number, having been healed of a chronic disease in January, 1913. Since that time no material remedy has been used, and there has been no return of the trouble.

A few facts which led to this healing may be of interest. Some years ago a Christian Science reading room was opened near my place of employment. I visited it two or three times, partly out of curiosity, and partly because it offered a place of rest during the noon hour. In rather an indifferent manner I looked over the literature, but felt no interest in it. Not long afterwards the reading room was moved to another building not far away, and the same purpose led me to the new room. Somewhat as a matter of courtesy, in return for the privilege of resting there, I began to read the Bible, but lack of interest, and prejudice as well, kept me from reading the Christian Science literature.

I continued to pass a few moments of each noon hour in this manner, and while doing so I observed one thing which I believed must have a significance unknown to me. It had not seemed strange to find women frequenting such a place; what did seem remarkable was the fact that so many business men with apparently about ten minutes to spare, pored over those books as though they were searching for something on which their lives depended. This done, away they would go, and the next day found them doing the same thing. I thought that if those men were getting anything which did them good I would try it myself. I began to look into the Quarterly, and each day I followed its direction in reading the textbook of Christian Science, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, in connection with the Bible. Sometimes I realized a beneficial result, but more often I was depressed because I seemed unable to understand much that I read. However serene my thoughts became while reading, I returned to the daily routine with the same tangled and often unrighteous thoughts.

One day a friend recommended a Christian Science practitioner to me. I went to her office by appointment, and during the first two weeks' treatment I was healed of chronic bowel trouble, which physicians said had developed into a state of partial paralysis for which there was no remedy. The first realization of this healing brought the dawn of a new day to me. I was confident that God had healed me, but could give no more account of it than could the man born blind whom Jesus healed. I had found it to be a fact, however, that "truth has a healing effect, even when not fully understood," as our Leader says on page 152 of Science and Health. I am indeed thankful to God for this healing, and grateful to Mrs. Eddy, the Founder of Christian Science, for her interpretations of Jesus' teachings, which enable one to understand the truth of being.

I have continued to study, and with the occasional help of a practitioner have experienced other demonstrations of Truth in the overcoming of colds, sore throat, spinal irritation, stomach disorder, financial lack, and other inharmonious conditions. I am often able to help myself in the smaller affairs of daily experience, where once I should have met with continued discouragement. God is no respecter of persons, and what has been done for me can be done for others.

Aside from its efficacy in physical healing I find Christian Science to be a beautiful religion, as it requires implicit trust in God and appreciation of His infinite wisdom and love.—(Miss) Isadore J. Smart, Waverley, Mass.

When Christian Science was first brought to my notice about twelve years ago I, like the majority of mankind, was striving to secure happiness, or at least contentment, in the so-called pleasures of this mortal sense of life, which always ended in bitter disappointment. I knew nothing about Christian Science; I criticized it as "only another new denomination of religious fanatics." Later, however, repeated disappointments made life seem so unbearable and hopeless that at last I secretly went to a practitioner. After she had treated me I was immediately relieved of that miserable, hopeless depression. She advised me to buy "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy and read it, and when I left her office I almost ran to the reading room, everything else forgotten but the one desire to obtain that book. I secured the book and was very soon healed of the liquor habit, and of pipe smoking, which had been indulged in for years. Since then I have experienced a gradual release from my worst mortal enemies, which manifestly were passion, selfishness, envy, hatred, profanity, and fear. Hatred and resentment made me so ill at one time that I kept vomiting for almost a week and was seemingly at the point of passing on, when I was healed through the help of a practitioner.

Once while in bathing I fractured the bones in the toes of my right foot by striking them against a rock. This injury, accompanied with symptoms of a severe chill and the claim that I had stayed in the water too long, also sunburn, seemed to incapacitate me for using my understanding of Christian Science. I was traveling at the time with a company of theatrical performers and knew that I must appear at the performance next day or cause quite a financial loss to the manager and my fellow workers, as I had no understudy. That night I could not walk across my room. I asked for help from a practitioner and soon afterwards went to sleep. The next morning the fever and chill had left me and I was able to walk. A day or two later the open wound was entirely healed. I appeared regularly at each performance without any incapacity whatever. The sunburn took a little longer to heal.

Christian Science is enabling me to know that the material self is nothing more than a supposititious counterfeit of the real man, claiming an existence separate from God, the one and only creator. I am deeply grateful to be living in this age when the "Comforter" has come to humanity in Christian Science, with all its manifold blessings in its Christlike activities, its literature distribution, its Bible Lessons, and its helpful lectures that always carry a healing message. To our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, God's messenger to this age, who worked with unselfish devotion that mankind should be emancipated from their manifold false beliefs, I shall always feel a deep sense of gratitude.

Frank Bertrand, New York, N. Y.

It is about eight years since I received my first healing in Christian Science. At that time I was greatly in need of help physically, mentally, and spiritually. I was suffering from what several physicians had diagnosed as a serious nervous trouble and an incurable affection of the heart. My eldest son, also, had Christian Science treatment. He had always been a very frail child and had suffered all his life from an inactive condition of the bowels, a serious bronchial affection, and later, after a severe illness, he was never free from a most distressing cough, which finally developed into lung trouble. Both he and I were healed, and for the physical freedom we are very grateful; but we are still more grateful for the spiritual healing, and for the understanding it has given us of God's Word and the practical help it is in working out our daily problems. My son has returned home after eight months' service overseas, a very sturdy specimen of young manhood.

I am truly thankful to God and grateful to our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, also to The Christian Science Publishing Society, for the unfolding of this wonderful healing and regenerating truth.

(Mrs.) Anna Winchell, Muskogee, Okla.

I should like to say something of what Christian Science has done for me. As a child I was supposed to be delicate, and then I became ill. We went to various doctors, and I was not allowed to do any of the things girls generally do, or to learn any lessons; so except for what I taught myself, I had practically no education. When my mother was healed by Christian Science in a most wonderful way, I would have nothing to do with it. In spite of this the symptoms of my illness gradually disappeared, and six months after her healing I began to read the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. Since then all the limitations I thought belonged to me are year by year being broken down. It is difficult to express the gratitude I feel. It is wonderful to be able to do things I thought I should never be able to do, to be of some use after all, and to find that the things I had taught myself were the very things that were needed. It seems such a proof that God is Love. "I girded thee, though thou hast not known me," as we read in Isaiah. I am also grateful for the overcoming of the fear of lack.

I feel a sense of gratitude and love to Mrs. Eddy, when I think of what she has done for the world, that is impossible to express, but that every Christian Scientist knows.

(Miss) MARJORIE PLAYFAIR, London, England.

I am very glad to verify my daughter's testimony. She had been delicate from her babyhood, and the acute condition had lasted for five or six years. This condition was relieved after I came into Christian Science, and all the symptoms completely vanished within about a year. No words can be adequate to manifest the gratitude I feel, and nothing we could do would meet our debt to divine Love, or pay what we owe to our dear Leader.

(Mrs.) WINIFRED M. PLAYFAIR.

I want to express my gratitude for Christian Science and for the understanding it has given me of the love, care, and protection of our ever present Father-Mother God. When I turned to it a few years ago, I felt as if surrounded by a huge stone wall. I felt that nobody cared anything for me, and everything seemed all wrong; I was sick, sinful, sensitive, very disagreeable, and altogether miserable. I went to a practitioner and asked for help. In a few days I was healed of rheumatism of three years' standing, and one by one the other discordant conditions were overcome. Now I do not see how I ever got along without Christian Science. I have had so many demonstrations that I could write indefinitely.

I am very grateful to our dear Leader for the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," and other works on Christian Science which she has given us, and for our periodicals. For membership in The Mother Church and in the society here at home, and for the privilege of teaching in the Sunday school, which has been such a help to me, I am likewise deeply grateful.

I wish to express my thankfulness to God for benefits received from the application of the truth, through the understanding of Christian Science, and also desire to express my gratitude to our dear Leader, Mrs. Eddy, who so lovingly showed us by her own demonstration that God is an ever present help.

Some time ago while coming downstairs I slipped and fell to the lower landing. I am heavy and, the fall being severe, I was stunned. On regaining consciousness I found my side badly hurt and my ankle injured, and I had difficulty in reaching the upper floor, although I tried to realize the truth for myself. At this time my daughter was ill and I felt that I must manage to go to her. On arriving at her home I telephoned to a Christian Science practitioner for help, as the pain was intense and I could no longer stand on my foot. A little later a physician called to see my daughter. He noticed that I could not walk around and was told of the accident. He diagnosed the case as a very bad sprain and wished to use the X-ray, but I resisted, for I knew my help lay in Christian Science. He drove me home in his machine, and almost had to carry me into the house.

A short time after the doctor left, the Christian Science practitioner came and gave me a treatment. She called again in the evening, and when she went home, said she would continue to treat me. I was completely healed during the night. Next morning I did a large washing, went down town and did some shopping for my daughter, then went to her house to spend the rest of the day. The doctor had predicted that I would be laid up at least six weeks.

I am certainly thankful to God and grateful to Mrs. Eddy for all that Christian Science has done and is doing every day for me and mine. I hope to improve in my understanding of God and of man's relation to Him, and am truly thankful for the peace which has come to me through this revelation of the truth.

(Mrs.) LOUISA ZACHVRECK, San Francisco, Calif.

I wish to give my testimony as a measure of gratitude for the help received from Christian Science. I had tried all kinds of material remedies for stomach disorder, but without any relief, and had even gone through an operation for what the doctor said was chronic appendicitis and the cause of all the trouble; but I was much worse and in a very weakened condition when friends asked me to try Christian Science, which I finally consented to do. In two treatments the pain was gone and I have been gaining ever since. That was over a year ago and I have not missed a day from my work on account of illness in all this time, whereas before I was absent frequently. Glasses which I had worn for sixteen years have been laid off, as I have no more need of them. The desire for liquor and the use of profanity have also been overcome. I hope this testimony will be a help to others.—FRANK LEE, Terry Island, Fla.

Signs of the Times

[Rocky Mountain News, Denver, Colo.]

Not in generations, if ever before, has there been such a self-searching of hearts and motives in the church; such an inspection, testing, and trying of the gospel ship from bilge pit to royal topmast. As a result, "Christian Unity!" has become a watchword, heralding a great movement whose ultimate end is nothing less than a merger of all Protestant churches. What more eloquent testimony of the loosening of old cements could be given?

Louisville, Kentucky, provides at the present moment [April] a typical example of the strength and direction of this movement. A series of meetings is being held there under the auspices of representative denominations, the leaders of which contribute a weekly discourse on the subject of Christian unity. We have the startling but inspiring spectacle of clergymen and laymen coming together, not to defend the superiority of their peculiar rites, not to justify their respective doctrines, but to survey and plat the common ground upon which they stand; not to outline the barriers but the bonds between themselves.

It is no mere academic discussion. These Louisville clergymen, like other clergymen all over the land, are handling the subject without gloves. They ask themselves and their people how Christians can speak authoritatively of a league of nations when Protestant Christianity is divided into more than one hundred and fifty sects, each speaking its fractional message and impotent to give a free-throated utterance on matters that affect the welfare of the race. They have boldly proclaimed that what divides them is not the spirit but the letter—theological abstractions and metaphysical subtleties; questions of administration and organization; the cradle of traditions in which they have been rocked; and, last but not least, vested interests. And they point out, unflinchingly, that the churches cannot unite on any creed imposed by external, ecclesiastical authority. They can unite, however, and must unite on loyalty to the authority of Christ Jesus as construed by the individual without let or hindrance from any agency.

These are strong words, but wholesome. They will grate upon some ears, but they will fall sweetly upon many more. They are an appeal to reason, not prejudice; to the whole man, not the half. They will strengthen the hands of that vigorous, intelligent element in the church which has long chafed under the doctrinal yoke; of the leaders in secular life who are also leaders in the church and who have no faith in the restraining influence of gyves and shackles forged in the misty past. But, more than all this, these words are an invitation to the man who has hitherto stood on the threshold of the church, conscious of its practical value but balking at its creed.

Church union is still afar, no doubt, in its completeness, but the battle is on. One trench will be taken at a time. Meanwhile, it is an inspiring picture which is being painted for us; and the future glows in contemplation when compared with the past denominational struggles for forms and abstractions which had no real bearing upon the conduct of life or man's relation to God.

[The Universalist Leader]

Admiral Sims at the commencement dinner at Tufts College, in paying a tribute to the college boys who had gone into the naval service, unintentionally perhaps smashed some of the popular notions regarding the sufficiency of technical education. He very frankly said that the men who had received the general all-round culture of the college proved themselves, after a very moderate amount of technical training, to be more efficient than the graduates of the specific naval schools. Of course there are exceptions on both sides, but the point is well taken and maintained by facts, that the mind that is broadened by general culture, that is founded on the verities, stands securely and confidently in the emergency. Practical education that is real is more than an appendix. In view of the educational tendencies of to-day to turn our colleges into vocational schools, it is well to consider the wise suggestions of the Admiral, who speaks from the most practical of practical experience.

[James J. Walsh, M. D., Ph. D., in New York (N. Y.) Medical Journal]

It was a very wise old physician who said originally that the therapeutics of any generation in the history of medicine is always absurd to the second succeeding generation. Sometimes it has happened that the therapeutics of the generation has gone over into the succeeding generation, still in honor and usage, but very rarely has it lasted three generations. There are exceptions, of course. The most important chapter in the history of medicine is the history of the cures that have failed.

Articles and Testimonies

Available articles from members of The Mother Church and good testimonies from those healed by Christian Science are always welcomed for consideration by the Editors. Manuscripts for publication in the Sentinel and Journal, whether articles, poems, or testimonies, and correspondence relating thereto, should not be addressed to individuals, but to the Editorial Department, The Christian Science Publishing Society, Boston, U.S.A.

Announcements

From The Christian Science Publishing Society

Pocket Edition of "Christ and Christmas"

In addition to the regular cloth bound edition of "Christ and Christmas," an illustrated poem by Mary Baker Eddy, there has now been published an illustrated pocket edition of the same poem, bound in black morocco, limp, round corners, gilt edges, uniform in size with the pocket editions of other writings by Mrs. Eddy. The book is now on sale at the following prices: Single copy, $3.00; six or more, each $2.75.

New Vest Pocket Pamphlet in German

"Our Refuge," vest pocket size, printed in German, with alternate pages in English, contains the following articles which have previously appeared in English vest pocket pamphlets: "Safety," "The Effect of Courage," "Home," and is now on sale at four cents a copy.

Orders for, and correspondence relating to, the publications announced herein should be addressed to The Christian Science Publishing Society, Boston, U.S.A.

From the Clerk of The Mother Church

Church Tenets.—The tenets of The First Church of Christ, Scientist,—The Mother Church,—printed on folded sheet for use of the branch Churches of Christ, Scientist, with space for printing their authorized forms of application for membership or extracts from their by-laws, can be had at seventy-five cents a hundred. Orders will not be taken for less than one hundred and postage stamps should not be sent in payment.

Correspondence relative to the tenets or to membership with The Mother Church should be sent to Charles E. Jarvis, Clerk, 236 Huntington Avenue, Back Bay, Boston, Massachusetts.

From the Church Treasurer

Per Capita Tax.—The annual per capita tax for which the Manual provides is due from members of The Mother Church June 1, but may be paid at any time during the year. The per capita tax of those who unite with the church in November is reckoned from the preceding June, for that is the beginning of the church year. If a remittance for church dues exceeds the amount required to balance one's account, the surplus will be credited for the current year, unless otherwise directed by the sender.

Please remit by postal or express money order, bank draft, or check. Do not send paper money through the mail unless registered.

Please advise promptly of any change in name or address.

Per capita taxes and contributions to the Real Estate Fund and to The Christian Science Benevolent Association Fund should be sent to Edward L. Ripley, Treasurer, 236 Huntington Avenue, Back Bay, Boston, Massachusetts.

Letters of Appreciation

Many letters of appreciation of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR and other Christian Science activities are constantly being received. These letters express what these activities mean to different individuals in various occupations and pursuits. The favorable comment that has been received on those already published indicates that they are welcome and helpful; therefore others will be published under the above heading. Extracts from such letters follow:

Every issue of The Christian Science Monitor is a joy and we can never be grateful enough for its healing message to all the world. The fearlessness with which evil is uncovered and destroyed gives me courage and strength. One cannot read it without being filled with admiration for its editorial policy, keen foresight, and well-balanced judgment.

I value highly The Christian Science Monitor and expect not to be without it. Reading it daily means mental expansion; it means healing of prejudice and indifference. The Monitor is surely doing a great work in courageously exposing error and in commending and emphasizing the good. I feel grateful for this paper every time I open a copy.

The article on the editorial page, "Better Pay for Women," of July 7, 1919, delighted my husband, who calls such writings on Labor "Quiet agitation;" and with his consent I am asking you to please send me The Christian Science Monitor for one month, trusting it will always come from now on. It surely is a quiet "monitor," bringing peace to my turbulent thought at times of argument on questions of moment.

I wish to take this opportunity to express again my appreciation and love as well as gratitude for all our periodicals. They are indeed a joy and help. The good that The Christian Science Monitor is doing cannot be told in words, but its fruits are widespread and are truly blessing all mankind.

I would like to express my gratitude for being able to subscribe to such a clean paper, especially because it is a paper suitable in every respect for my young brothers to read.

This is his mother's present to his "new adventure" (practice of law). A successful office minus The Christian Science Monitor does not seem possible.

We need its editorials to give us correct ideas of national and world-wide activities.

Prayer That Is Effectual

ISRAEL PICKENS

TO the student of Christian Science, and especially to the beginner in its study, the first chapter of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," captioned "Prayer," stands out as one of greatest interest. The reason for this is obviously because of its compassionate, ringing appeal to simple faith. It has been frequently said that Mrs. Eddy has given to the world, in the sixteen pages of this chapter, more real information concerning the true modus of prayer than have all the countless volumes of bygone years. The salutary results that have been obtained since the Christian Science textbook was written, have indeed been the marvel of this generation. The Master has said that a tree is known by its fruits. The scope and magnitude of the Christian Science movement are nothing less than the outcome of answered prayer,—the healing of sin and disease in countless thousands of earnest people who have through Christian Science learned how to seek God and to find Him an ever present help.

Throughout the ages mankind, realizing their own helplessness and the limitations and the futility of things material, have frequently turned in prayer to whatever concept of God they may have had, for relief from mortal ills. Long years before the Nazarene Prophet came preaching and proving the truth about God, history tells us of men of all races and climes searching longingly for Truth. Especially do we find this the case with the ancient Jews, whose concept of God as Spirit, and one, brought them into such conscious communion with God that His presence and power were proved in innumerable instances. While such results have been obtained in some degree in all periods of history, it is nevertheless true that the large majority of prayers, even down to the present age, have remained unanswered. Because of this element of uncertainty and ignorance concerning its true modus, prayer has in large measure been a mystery, and such results as have been obtained from time to time have been considered as miraculous. Now even the most casual observer is taking note of the fact that Christian Scientists are highly successful in accomplishing results through prayer; that they are finding health instead of sickness; and that in place of sadness and sorrow and sin their lives are being regenerated and made glad and joyful, and their burdens lifted. Surely there is a reason for such wonderfully satisfying results and for the hope that is within their hearts.

Centuries ago the psalmist reached the very essence of true prayer when he cried, "Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength, and my redeemer." He who is learning to receive answer to prayer in Christian Science, has found that not only do the words of his mouth need to be in accordance with that which is his highest understanding of Truth, but that it is imperative also for his innermost thinking to square with the rule of perfect Principle and perfect idea. The Master said, "A good man out of the good treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is good; and an evil man out of the evil treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is evil: for of the abundance of the heart his mouth speaketh." The Christian Scientist realizes that his outward actions and even his environment are governed by his thinking, and he strives constantly to examine himself in order that he may not give power to error in thought, word, or deed. What a precious privilege it is to know the truth about God, and man as God's image. Every right thought has healing, regenerating, and purifying results, just as surely and just as certainly as the radiation of light dispels darkness.

In Science and Health Mrs. Eddy says (p. 1), "The prayer that reforms the sinner and heals the sick is an absolute faith that all things are possible to God,—a spiritual understanding of Him, an unselfed love." Thus faith, spiritual understanding, and unselfed love are predicated as fundamental tests of true prayer. When faith has gently led us into paths of a larger understanding, and man as the spiritual idea of God is unfolded, human thought lays hold upon the truth that the creation of God is governed by divine law. Then the only progress that can be made is through a loving, humble obedience to divine law. In Hebrews we read of the Master that "though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered." His was an obedience to the vision of perfect God and perfect man. He understood in all its fullness the truth of being, and nothing daunted him in his earnest, loyal, consistent obedience to infinite, divine Principle.

Let us not be discouraged when, in learning obedience to the perfect Principle of being, we seem to find obstructions to our effort. That which strives and resists and disobeys, is not the man of God, but mortal mind. Should not every untoward experience be banished in the heart-quickened effort to pattern after the Master and to learn more of this obedience to Principle? "Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy and my burden is light," said the Master; and this is not a vain promise, but rather is it a compassionate, merciful assurance of safety and protection.

It is the message of the perfect God and perfect man that Christian Science has brought again to weary ears, renewing hope and vitalizing prayer with intelligent faith, a high spiritual understanding, and a love that is indeed unselfed. From the dawn of the tiniest ray of light to the wondrous effulgence of that larger, more glorified illumination in which the revelation of perfect, spiritual man is being brought out in practical demonstration, the divine office of prayer is that of a channel of communication by means of which the Christ, Truth, is made manifest to mankind. It is the Christ that teaches the yearning heart to pray, "Thy kingdom come." Humanity, emerging from its dream state, lays hold upon and appropriates through prayer the veritable things of the Spirit, and is redeemed.

A Christian Science Welfare Room

RUTH POWELL WENBAN

THE meaning of the rooms established by the Christian Science War Relief committees in connection with the various camps and training stations, to the men in the service of the United States and her allies, is only now beginning to be unfolded. Daily we are hearing of healings, many and wonderful, of all sorts of ills and discords, through the work at these rooms. But the purpose of this article is to tell something of the good that has come to one not in uniform, whose great privilege it was to serve as hostess, during certain days of the past winter, in one of these places.

When the opportunity to do this work was presented to this student, she did not at first recognize it as desirable, but rather regarded it as a more or less tiresome duty which she would have shifted, if possible, to others. Material sense argued that home ties, individual problems, and the needs of those who waited to be healed, were so insistent as to make it very hard to give up one whole day a week to this cause. However, the matter was prayerfully taken up for solution according to the requirements of Principle. And, lo, what a changed aspect it immediately took on!

In the first place it was clearly seen that no problem of any sort ever came, in Science, to a human person for solution. Rather does every human problem come to the Christ, Truth, to be solved; and so the student realized that it was the measure of Truth which she, as its humble follower, was attempting to express, that was called upon for service. Humbly she saw that here was an opportunity to enlarge the borders of her home and, as does always a gracious hostess, to spread before her guests whatever she had in the house, be it much or little; for that which was sought by all alike was the food of Truth—spiritual understanding. Gratefully and joyfully now was the work accepted and begun.

The little room, so tastefully and comfortably furnished for reading, writing, or resting, was at first used for distributing the knitted comforts provided for the men in uniform by the Christian Science Comforts Forwarding committees. The hostess knew that as each applicant for knitted goods, whether he realized it or not, was needing spiritual comfort, she must keep her mental home so free from the dust of apathy and the rubbish of selfishness as to be ever eager and willing to satisfy his desire for the hospitality of Spirit. As a comfort was handed out, there went with it a thought of righteousness and love to the seeker; and as this was continued, men who first came for socks and left without making use of the room in any other way, were found to be returning, now and then, to avail themselves of the privilege of reading the periodicals or the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, or of asking for treatment in Christian Science. Thus was the attempt made to keep the work at all times upon a spiritual plane. Soldiers in search of practitioners for loved ones in distant cities were helped to find them. Others with prejudiced or unprincipled views of the world conflict were lovingly provided with free subscriptions to The Christian Science Monitor, and through the reading of its illuminating editorials and news articles were healed in this respect. Sometimes those in search of congenial lodgings were assisted in finding them. Others suffering from the subtle claims of loneliness or discouragement were comforted and uplifted. Sometimes it was only a postage stamp that was provided. Always, however, as the human need was cheerfully met, the response to the loving thought expressed was spontaneous and grateful.

Many times in conversation with soldiers who had been healed through the ministrations of the Camp Welfare worker, the hostess derived a lasting benefit and a great sense of gratitude and thanksgiving. This work was being constantly and effectively carried on in the camp itself, and seemingly insurmountable barriers of pride, resentment, malice, and prejudice against what were considered to be the teachings of Christian Science, were gradually being swept away. The words of a member of the medical staff of a certain camp hospital may be quoted here, not because they express personal praise for the worker, but because they so truly describe the manner in which the wonderful healing work has gone on all over the field. The doctor was asked if he had met the Christian Science worker at that station. He replied: "I should say I have. Say, you know that man has more tact than anyone I have ever met. He went into that hospital against a solid wall of malice, contempt, and prejudice not only against himself but against anything he might try to do. Those of us who were not downright antagonistic were, to say the least, very chilly in our reception of him. But now all that has changed and he is a good fellow among us, one whom we are always glad to meet and to greet. And all because of his wonderful tact." Well may we ask in the words of our Leader (Science and Health, p. 348), "If such are the present fruits, what will the harvest be, when this Science is more generally understood?" Already are the doors of some hospitals, so long and unjustly shut, open at last to the practitioner of Christian Science, and the end is not yet. Truly there is great cause for rejoicing among those who follow the signs of the times with understanding.

One hostess will never cease to be grateful that hers was the blessing of assisting in some measure the great work of the War Relief committee. Her home problems and all those others which she almost allowed to prevent her from accepting this privilege were found solved, and many other benefits, both spiritual and material, were seen to be the direct outcome of the time and thought given to the work at the little room. And is it not all a part of that great calling to which we as Christian Scientists are summoned by Mrs. Eddy in that loving invitation on page 242 of Science and Health, "In patient obedience to a patient God, let us labor to dissolve with the universal solvent of Love the adamant of error,—self-will, self-justification, and self-love,—which wars against spirituality and is the law of sin and death"?

The Scriptures and the Business Man

CHARLES A. BRAYSHAW

A CAREFUL analysis of the published testimonies of those who have been healed by Christian Science, cannot fail to reveal the interesting fact that along with the return to harmonious conditions comes a real and unquenchable desire to study the Scriptures. This is the more noteworthy because the desire is not only experienced by those who are fortunate enough to have ample time in which to make a thorough examination of the Bible, but it also takes a firm grip of the business man. Of course, in a certain sense, it will be readily admitted that the modern business man is no different from anyone else. He has a time-honored reputation, nevertheless, for being so completely wrapped up in his calling and its multiplicity of problems, in imports and exports, politics and finance, that he has barely a moment to spare for what, with characteristic brevity, he is invariably pleased to term "religious affairs."

In certain instances the recognized Sabbath, made tolerably quiet by public consent, is known to provide him with just the opportunity for intelligent study that the week day, with its well-nigh overwhelming conditions, seemingly denies. The plain fact is that commerce and Christianity, in the opinion of most people, have nothing in common, and that before you can succeed in one, you must of necessity drop the other. When, therefore, the business man who is awaking to the understanding of Christian Science lifts from its shelf the family Bible, not with the intention of merely dusting it for the sake of appearances and then at once replacing it, but with the determination of reading it thoroughly, it is our obvious privilege to assume that he has found, and knows he has found, something of a nature that is priceless.

Now the credit for this business man's animated interest, if we have an atom of fairness about us, must be given to Christian Science. We have had precisely the same Bible at our right hand ever since we were given our first peep into the then mysterious characters of the alphabet. We have had, moreover, concordances, expositions, and original translations galore,—some wise and some otherwise, but all laboriously prepared with the object of enhancing our interest in the Book of books. It was not, however, until Mary Baker Eddy perceived the value and personally experienced the lasting triumphs of a spiritual interpretation of the Scriptures and, what is of more consequence to us all, enunciated her discovery in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" and other writings, that individuals in every walk of life, as well as the business man, began to set about the task of working out their own salvation systematically and earnestly. And a fascinating task this is, to be sure.

Once rid of the old beliefs so inconceivable to reason and hopelessly material in their origin, the way opens out before his receptive thought with marvelous precision. He soon forgets, through "the light which Christian Science throws on the Scriptures" (Science and Health, p. 578), his failures of the past,—his failure, for example, to discern the spiritual creation of man as recorded in the first chapter of Genesis until Mrs. Eddy pointed it out; his failure to appreciate that the ninety-first psalm was something more than a magnificent piece of literature, until spiritual understanding read into it a multitude of available promises; his failure to understand that the command of the Way-shower, to preach the gospel and heal the sick, did not mean with the combined aid of scholasticism and materia medica, of priestcraft and antitoxins, until Mrs. Eddy declared that these highly desirable experiences followed the knowing of the truth which makes free.

To bring his studies to an end, to stop in his efforts to prove "the great possibilities of man endued with divine Science" (Science and Health, p. 445) once he has made an enthusiastic start, is utterly impossible. Regardless of everything else, the business man must go ahead and fortify himself for every trial of his faith; for sooner or later will come, as it always does, the testing time,—the time when his bosom friends will turn up, Micawberlike, to discover him engrossed, not, as they anticipated, in the latest novel or in the doings of politicians, but in the Scriptures. Only those who have passed through this experience can have the remotest idea of what it means to be ground between the upper and the nether millstones of masterful and sarcastic criticism. "Whoever introduces the Science of Christianity," says Mrs. Eddy on page 474 of Science and Health, "will be scoffed at." And the business man who is endeavoring to be a Christian Scientist has good reason to know this.

What others may have to say about his altered views, however, need not worry him in the least. Under the influence of Principle other people have seen fit to effect a drastic change in their daily mode of procedure, and the world has benefited as a natural consequence. The writer of the deeply spiritual eighth chapter of Romans, inconceivable though it may appear, was the one-time tyrant who drove his chariot through the followers of "the Holy One of Israel,"—just at a period, too, when they needed all the support, consolation, and assistance that could be offered to them. Did Paul ever apologize to those who knew him—and there must have been many who could lay claim to this distinction—for the remarkable change that had taken place in his character, for the triumph of Truth over error, of Love over hate? "By the grace of God," he said, "I am what I am." And this definite and manly declaration of gratitude the business man may make his own as he becomes a Christian Scientist.

Truth Recognized

KATHERINE E. VARGA

TO those who are eagerly looking forward to the establishment on earth of the universal knowledge of God as omnipotent and omnipresent, there sometimes comes a sense of disappointment when friends and those dear to us show indifference after some study of the authorized literature of Christian Science. We should not, however, be troubled, for they will sooner or later long to know God. Does not the Bible say, "They shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them"? Our work for the hour is to apply to ourselves Jesus' counsel to Peter when he was unwisely concerned about what another should do. "What is that to thee? follow thou me." To wait patiently for the indifferent one to change his attitude is all we can do.

But there is another whom our heart yearns to help and assure, and that is the one who though sincere in his study still doubts whether Christian Science is of God and is the truth promised by Christ Jesus. To many of the students of Christian Science this phase of the mental journey is quite familiar, and when we think of those who are meeting this same condition to-day, it is comforting to read what Mrs. Eddy says on page 127 of "Miscellaneous Writings": "When a hungry heart petitions the divine Father-Mother God for bread, it is not given a stone,—but more grace, obedience, and love. If this heart, humble and trustful, faithfully asks divine Love to feed it with the bread of heaven, health, holiness, it will be conformed to a fitness to receive the answer to its desire." With the earnest hope that it may help some one to find God, who is Life, Truth, and Love, the writer is glad to tell of an experience in this connection which came to her, destroying once and for all the enemy, doubt.

When I commenced the study of Christian Science I was living in a large city in the middle West, but shortly afterwards came home to stay, bringing my books and plenty of enthusiasm but not much understanding, though I studied almost continually. I was an only child but had many near relatives, among whom were a number of uncles and aunts. I loved them dearly and they loved me, so it was the greatest surprise when they one and all not only refused to accept Christian Science, but assured me I was wrong in believing it to be of God. I stoutly maintained that I knew it was the truth, and never failed to take this stand when speaking with others, though in my own heart there was a turmoil going on and I was becoming confused. One day I would feel sure this was the truth which Jesus promised should free all mankind, only to think the next day that perhaps I was straying from God. This struggle kept up for about two weeks, when one day I took the Bible and, going away alone, prayed earnestly to God to show me the way. I knew no other way to receive His counsel than to open the Bible and trust to divine guidance to find the message. The devil did not forget to remind me that I had tried this method on other occasions and it had never led me to anything bearing on the subject, but I put the suggestion away and, feeling that God was with me, opened the book. There was no wondering this time which verse to read, for these words stood out as though the letters were of fire: "Be of good cheer; it is I; be not afraid."

Afterwards in reading the chapter which contained the verse, the fourteenth chapter of Matthew, I found that this was the reply Christ Jesus made to the disciples when he came walking to them on the water one night and they did not recognize the Master but thought it was some strange spirit. Had not I, too, failed to recognize in the teachings of Christian Science the Christ, Truth, and thought it might be some strange doctrine? Then again came the loving assurance to an anxious heart: "Be of good cheer; it is I; be not afraid."

Individual Consecration

DAISY BEDFORD

INTO the experience of each earnest worker, at different stages of spiritual unfoldment, the words of Paul will recur with an ever increasing insistence, "Let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup." Here we pause to ask, What is this bread, this cup, which should necessitate such careful preparation if we would be partakers? To examine means to search into, and the word search implies an active performance which almost might be described as rigorous, an act which may not be stayed until the desired end is attained. This advice of Paul to the Corinthians seems to have been given at the time when the Corinthian church had allowed the human will and carnal mind to violate the regulations of the church and interfere with their orderly observance. The apostle clearly indicates that the church was a condition of mind, not a material building or organization, for he says later, in the same chapter, "Despise ye the church of God?" and again, "For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep." Sleep typifies that condition of mind which is dead to spiritual inspiration. Then, as if he foresaw there might be those who would fain enter into the holy of holies, whose spiritual vision was yet dim or perhaps for the time being obscure, he adds compassionately, "Wherefore, my brethren, when ye come together to eat, tarry one for another."

Mrs. Eddy says in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 518), "The rich in spirit help the poor in one grand brotherhood, all having the same Principle, or Father; and blessed is that man who seeth his brother's need and supplieth it." Here, then, we have the necessity for that earnest searching into consciousness to see whether we are so rich toward God that we possess that which will supply our brother's need. Jesus said, "Preach the gospel," "Heal the sick," and Mrs. Eddy, in the chapter entitled "Christian Science Practice," in Science and Health, gives us some very pertinent questions for examination if we would do this work aright. On page 364, she says: "Do they [Christian Scientists] show their regard for Truth, or Christ, by their genuine repentance, by their broken hearts, expressed by meekness and human affection . . . ?" On page 366, she shows us clearly the way to set about preparing for the healing work of Truth and Love which shall bind up the broken-hearted, cleanse the leper, and set free those who are bound by the subtle mesmerism of materiality in all its forms.

What is consecration but the dedication of one's self to the service of the Most High? All the steps leading up to the surrender of self must be taken. Purification from all that opposes itself to the demands of the Christ will be the first step; the exterior of the building may be fair and seemly, but God requires "truth in the inward parts." Here the faithful student pauses in dismay. So much has to go if this work shall be properly done. Such a crop of weeds of unexpectedly sturdy growth have sprung up, different, it may be, from those that needed uprooting in the early days; self-righteousness, self-justification, may be found blossoming, perchance, beside mental apathy and sloth; a sitting down, as was the case of the disobedient prophet, under the tree of work accomplished, rather than the steadfast pressing forward toward new tasks which will beckon us; self-indulgence along many lines spoils, as do the little foxes, the fruit of the vines, if we do not constantly watch and weed it out on its first appearing. Only in the kingdom of heaven can we drink of the fruit of the vine of earnest purpose accomplished, steadfast endeavor fulfilled.

Then having started to rid ourselves of these errors, what shall replace them? Surely the qualities of love, gentleness, meekness, humility, the pure desire for all that is holy, for the perfection of our Father which is in heaven. Jesus gave us no lesser standard. And how are we to accomplish this task? Have we not in the past wasted time in saying, "Lo here! or, lo there!" instead of realizing Jesus' words, "The kingdom of God is within you"—a present possibility now, not dependent upon others, but dependent upon the faithful work we put into our vineyard? People will say oftentimes, "Why cannot I heal?" Do we pray enough, love enough? Do we study enough those wondrous guides to consecrated living, the Bible and Science and Health? Is there any phase of human belief which God cannot heal? And He is the only healer. In the degree that we let that Mind be in us "which was also in Christ Jesus," in that degree, no more and no less, shall we reflect this healing truth.

Sometimes it would seem as if this period of self-examination leads us into the wilderness, there to be tempted of the devil by discouragement, a sense of loneliness, of responsibility, of fear. So this wilderness experience is not something to fear but rather something to rejoice over, for if we will only learn its lesson of self-effacement and make a more earnest effort to forget those things which are behind and reach forward to greater heights of holiness, then we shall have glimpsed a little of that wondrous privilege of which Jesus spoke in the seventeenth chapter of John, "And for their sakes I sanctify myself, that they also might be sanctified through the truth."

This work cannot be done by relying upon others, by measuring our work by any standard but the standard of divine Mind. So often we stop to look around to see what others are doing, to wonder whether we may not pause to rest a little because of "the burden and heat of the day." Have we laid our all upon the altar? We dare not be satisfied with a lesser performance, and only God can show us how this may be accomplished. The human mind is always craving human sympathy, human encouragement, human support, instead of learning through Christian Science how to depend upon God alone. The student of mathematics would hardly run around asking every one how a problem should be solved. Even among students of the subject he would find each pupil at a different stage of unfoldment, and perhaps the one who could solve it would be wise enough to see that the best way to help that student would be to explain to him the process, and show that this knowledge could only come by the steadfast application of the fundamentals of mathematics; and that his own understanding of the problem had been so gained. No one can gain spiritual understanding for us; others may point out the way, but the actual walking therein must be the individual's own work. We are not left without guidance, however, if we will only be quiet enough to hear the voice of Truth. The arguments of material reasoning, of human hypothesis, may seem so tempting and alluring, such an easy way out; but deep down in consciousness is the firm conviction that each man enters the straight and narrow path alone, through individual consecration and his own understanding of God.

On page 3 of Science and Health our Leader writes, "The Divine Being must be reflected by man,—else man is not the image and likeness of the patient, tender, and true, the One 'altogether lovely;' but to understand God is the work of eternity, and demands absolute consecration of thought, energy, and desire."

Right Activity

EVELYN GLANVILLE

LAST winter when the streets were covered with ice and snow, it seemed rather a difficult task for the writer to go from one place to another without falling or the fear of falling. She realized that error was trying to make itself heard, and that this sense of discord must be overcome. She repeated over and over, "God made man unfallen," but still the word fallen seemed to come to her and hinder her from rising above this erroneous suggestion. A few days ago the city was again covered with ice and snow, and on her way to town the words of a favorite hymn, "Upheld by My gracious, omnipotent hand" (Hymnal, p. 199), kept singing their way into her thought. Then what it meant to be upheld by Truth unfolded to her. She felt herself supported by Love, and all sense of fear was entirely eliminated.

The next morning a friend whom she met remarked, "You walk with more assurance on these slippery streets than I do;" but what was this assurance which made her step buoyant? It was the manifestation of a clearer realization of our Leader's words in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 400), "By lifting thought above error, or disease, and contending persistently for truth, you destroy error." The truth is that man is held in his rightful place by the power of God, and the error which was destroyed was a belief in a power apart from God.

Truth's Prism

CASSIUS M. LOOMIS

IT glistens in the mellow glow of God's unending morn,
A beacon star to light the way for legions yet unborn.
Through Holy Writ, through hearts that serve with loving thought and deed, Truth's healing luster sheds a ray for every human need.

When doubt would seem to dim this light, and error bids us stray,
Have we not God to love us still, and Christ to show the way?
Then gird thy loins and face the heavens, O mortals bent with care.
Truth wins the heart of him who sees the perfect image there.

Selected Articles

["The Forgiveness of Sin"—The Christian Science Monitor, Boston, U. S. A., July 19, 1919]

It is probable that more casuistry has been poured out over the question of the forgiveness of sin than on any other subject of a similar nature. The reason is that the human mind, just because it is human, forms the most erratic and unscientific conceptions of what forgiveness means. The omission to inflict a penalty for sin, for instance, is not necessarily forgiveness at all. The unctuous announcement that a sin has been overlooked, whilst the memory of it is harbored, or whilst the details of it are being industriously and surreptitiously circulated, is a mean kind of sin in itself. It is obvious that true forgiveness wipes the slate clear, and that anything short of this is a mere travesty of one of the grandest words in the English language. When Pope wrote the famous, and now, unfortunately, hackneyed line, which declares that forgiveness is divine, he stated a deep metaphysical fact, probably without much consideration of what was entailed in it. Forgiveness is divine because unless Principle forgives there is no such thing as forgiveness. Yet, contradictorily enough to the human sense, infinite Principle cannot know anything of sin, unless sin is to be regarded as Principle, which is absurd.

That was the question which faced Spinoza, and he answered it in just such a way. And so Mrs. Eddy, who was far too logical to fall into such a trap, and who had proved by Jesus' own test, the metaphysical healing of disease, that she understood the truth as he taught it, repudiated fundamentally the orthodox view of sin and of forgiveness, and proceeded to show that sin being a lie about divine activity could only be forgiven when the lie was proved to be a lie, and so wiped out. If, that were to say, sin was real, sin would be indestructible, and so eternal. The only power, then, that could forgive sin is the fact of the existence of infinite Principle, God. Consequently, therefore, the only way to obtain forgiveness of sin is to stop sinning. In proportion as this is done a man frees himself from the suggestion of mortal mind, and so ceases to identify himself with the sinner, the mortal mind. This is the real man or Christ, appearing through the evaporating nothingness of the mists of the senses, and thus alone is forgiveness attained.

At the same time, it must not for one moment be imagined that exposing sin for the nothingness that it is provides any encouragement to sin. Sin indulged always eventually develops hell to the degree of its indulgence. Sin mastered and destroyed, that is to say forgiven, makes way for heaven. "To assume," Mrs. Eddy writes on page 447 of Science and Health, "that there are no claims of evil and yet to indulge them, is a moral offence." In a way, it is like insisting on the unreality of sickness whilst insisting that you are sick. Of course, there is a very fundamental difference in the way sin and sickness have to be treated, and Mrs. Eddy makes this excessively plain on page 461 of Science and Health: "If you believe that you are sick, should you say, 'I am sick'? No, but you should tell your belief sometimes, if this be requisite to protect others. If you commit a crime, should you acknowledge to yourself that you are a criminal? Yes. Your responses should differ because of the different effects they produce. Usually to admit that you are sick, renders your case less curable, while to recognize your sin, aids in destroying it."

Having thus made it perfectly clear that the unreality of sin constitutes no incitement to sin, since the man giving rein to sin is simply engaged in producing a condition of in-harmony just as real or unreal as the condition of sickness, Mrs. Eddy, in two short, decisive sentences, on page 327 of Science and Health, disposes of the argument that there is any but one way out of sin: "The way to escape the misery of sin is to cease sinning. There is no other way." And this, as has been shown, is the only way in which forgiveness can be attained. The fact, in short, that sin is unreal and that God, good, is the only reality, constitutes the divine mercy. Had God, omnipotent good, created sin,—which is absurd,—or permitted it, knowing in His infinite omniscience that His image would indulge in it, and then forgiven him for doing what He knew, in the circumstances, he must do, divinity would be reduced to a lower moral platform than humanity, and forgiveness would resolve itself into absolving a man from the results of something which he could not have been guilty of without divine connivance. Such a view of forgiveness is a childish travesty of Principle. And yet, extraordinary as it may seem, it is a common enough one in the world to-day.

When the Bible says that God is "of purer eyes than to behold evil," and cannot "look on iniquity," it is surely only another way of saying that Principle, in the very nature of things, is unconscious of evil. Anything else would be to make evil a part of Principle. Therefore, divine forgiveness must lie in the fact that the infinity of good reduces evil to a negation, and so makes forgiveness a whole-hearted actuality and not an unstable product of the human mind. Forgiveness is positively a scientific impossibility to the human mind, because the human mind is itself the expression of evil, and even human wisdom admits that unless the forgiveness is merged with the forgotten it is incomplete. Forgiveness finally, therefore, may be summed up in the fact that God, Principle, never made anything whatever to forgive. This, to the unredeemed human senses, is the mystery of divine Love. "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son [the Christ, Truth], that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Is not this what Jesus is referring to in saying, as recorded by John, "If ye continue in my word, . . . ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free"? And is not this the divine method of forgiveness?

[George C. Palmer in Regina (Saskatchewan) Post]

A clergyman as reported in the Post says, "Christian Scientists say there is no anxiety." It is advisable in criticizing other Christian denominations before the public to be exact. He has never read such a statement in any Christian Science literature. The word anxiety is found but once in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, and that is on page 586, where it is used as a synonym for fear. It certainly seems that except as one conforms to the Christianity Jesus lived and taught there is every cause for anxiety. What Christian Science does teach is, that by forsaking a human, material, or hypothetical basis as a ground for reasoning and acceding to the spiritual standard Jesus exemplified and taught, anxiety may be destroyed here and now. All are familiar with the words: "Take no thought for your life. . . . But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." This is the remedy. Every Christian Scientist knows that only as he succeeds in this, does he become exempt from anxiety, and in this proportion does he prove the truth of Mrs. Eddy's words on page 494 of Science and Health: "Divine Love always has met and always will meet every human need. It is not well to imagine that Jesus demonstrated the divine power to heal only for a select number or for a limited period of time, since to all mankind and in every hour, divine Love supplies all good." Anxiety is a state of perturbed thought peculiar to human sense, and is corrected by understanding the divine antidote of God's unerring and unfailing protection and supply.

[Louis E. Scholl in Spokesman-Review, Spokane, Wash.]

When Mrs. Eddy first gave to the world her remarkable definition of God, found on page 587 of Science and Health, she little suspected probably that one word contained therein would arouse such a storm of protest from the old school theologians, and all because that one word, "Principle." as she used it, is so little understood by them. The definition referred to reads (p. 587): "God. The great I AM; the all-knowing, all-seeing, all-acting, all-wise, all-loving, and eternal; Principle; Mind; Soul; Spirit; Life; Truth; Love; all substance; intelligence."

Now even the most strictly orthodox people find themselves in agreement with the first part of this definition, for being familiar with the Bible they see that the definition is strictly Scriptural; but the theologue always stops at the word "Principle." It sounds new; it is Mrs. Eddy's teaching; therefore, says he, it is wrong.

A bishop in an address before the Fourteenth Annual Convention of Inland Empire Sunday Schools, held in Spokane, as reported said, "I cannot think of one of these social cults in which people have thought seriously of God. The God they thought of was only principle. I don't see what the use is of praying to a principle." The bishop is right from his standpoint. No one could see the use of praying to a principle, or a mind, or a soul, or a spirit, as these words are commonly used, for it is generally believed that there are divers principles, minds, souls, and spirits—good, bad, and indifferent. Mrs. Eddy has used these words, however, as synonyms of God; and when Christian Scientists speak of God as Principle, Mind, Soul, Spirit, and so forth, they speak with the clear understanding that comes with the casting out of the mortal belief in innumerable other principles, minds, souls, and spirits all outside of or opposed to God.

The bishop also lamented the great lack of interest in religion, and made the astounding statement, "I am almost afraid there are just about as many heathen to the square inch in Washington as in Turkey." While it is true, according to the statement of Dr. Charles Stelzle, that membership in the Protestant churches in the United States last year actually decreased, that fact does not necessarily mean that there is a decreased interest in things spiritual. There are many who believe, and with good reason for it, that there are more men to-day who are seeking earnestly and seriously for the truth that makes men free than ever before. The people of this state are as fine a class of people as can be found on the face of the earth, and it is probable that if the bishop had had an understanding of God as Principle, he would not have likened the people of Washington to the Turks.

[A. O. Freel and editorial comment in Corvallis (Ore.) Gazette Times]

On reading your interesting editorial entitled "Fumigation," which makes mention of some peculiar phases of the hopeless tangle of contradictory theories advanced by practitioners of the medical profession, I am impelled to express my thanks for your editorial. There is one statement, however, which is misleading and should not be allowed to pass uncorrected. The statement I refer to is as follows: "Mary Baker Eddy, Bernard McFadden, and other apostles of New Thought have been less convincing in exposing the fallacies of many accepted theories than have honest physicians and scientists themselves."

This statement, while made no doubt unwittingly, is calculated to class Christian Science along with New Thought, when as a matter of fact New Thought is the very opposite of Christian Science. Christian Science claims and is proving itself to be a restoration of primitive Christianity as taught and demonstrated by Christ Jesus. The study of Christian Science gives to its followers an understanding of God which enables them to heal the sick and cast out devils, evils, as Jesus taught us to do, without the use of the human will or of mental suggestions in any form.

[The comment]

Our inclinations are to argue the matter, but the Scientists are always such fine folk that we have not the heart. Besides, a religious argument never settles anything. It was Colton who said that "men will wrangle for religion; write for it; fight for it; die for it; anything but live for it." We refuse to wrangle.

The Scientists have always impressed us as being a most happy and contented people. We have often wished we were good enough to do without a doctor, especially since the medical trust raised the price to three dollars a visit; but we have no hopes of attaining to any such eminence.

But we never knew a Scientist who was not a good friend, a good citizen, a good neighbor. We can't see how they can swallow some of the things they believe, but they seem to get away with it all right. Beecher was not a Scientist, but he pretty nearly expressed what may be the cause of their apparent satisfaction when he stated that "true religion carries health and strength into the soul. It regulates all things; subordinates all things to their just positions; withdraws from men no faculty; ties up no power; extinguishes no instinct; imprisons no part of the mind, but only regulates and directs. Religion is only another word for the rightful use of man's whole self, instead of a use that is wrong and ruinous. It brings men into a harmonious relation with their fellow men; it gives them direction for the achievement of duty; it makes them love whatever is good and abhor whatever is bad; it inspires reverence and obedience; it inculcates justice, mercy, and benevolence; it endows with courage, patience, contentment; it commands industry, frugality, hospitality; it enjoins honesty, truthfulness, uprightness, simplicity, integrity; and reveals the immortality of man's nature and sets before men a perfect Pattern who was tempted in all points as we are, and yet without sin, teaching us both by precept and example to be like him." This we think is the secret of the Scientists' happiness,—when they were vaccinated with the virus of religion, it took. They may be right,—and it is a free country.

[M. Scott Till in Brighton (Sussex, England) Herald]

It would hardly be possible to find a more erroneous version of Christian Science than that given by a critic in a recent attack upon the subject, because Christian Science healing is based solely on the teachings of Jesus, who "beheld in Science the perfect man, who appeared to him where sinning mortal man appears to mortals. In this perfect man the Saviour saw God's own likeness, and this correct view of man healed the sick," as we read on page 476 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. Now because Christian Science reminds us that God, Spirit, made man in His image and likeness, Christian Scientists do not believe that God is material. On the contrary, they are persistently seeking for the man of God's creation, namely, the reflection of Himself, Spirit; and in proportion to the faithfulness of their seeking this reflection, are they witnessing the healing works which Jesus promised should be performed by all those who believe.

Our critic derides Mrs. Eddy's explanation of the way Jesus healed, but gives no proof that he healed in any other way than by the power of divine Mind. That this way is again being utilized as it was for three hundred years after the crucifixion by all those who believed—namely, all those who were letting that Mind be in them "which was also in Christ Jesus"—is being proved beyond all doubt again today; for Christian Science is known by its works, works which are proving that a knowledge of Christ, Truth, does make free, give sight to the blind, hearing to the deaf—in a word, heals all manner of disease.

The critic further states that Christian Scientists do not believe in the atonement. To correct this misstatement I can but quote the fourth tenet of the Christian Science church, from page 497 of Science and Health, which reads: "We acknowledge Jesus' atonement as the evidence of divine, efficacious Love, unfolding man's unity with God through Christ Jesus the Way-shower; and we acknowledge that man is saved through Christ, through Truth, Life, and Love as demonstrated by the Galilean Prophet in healing the sick and overcoming sin and death."

Funds of The Mother Church

"Gratefully do I send the inclosed check for five dollars, which please apply to the Real Estate fund of The Mother Church. Contributing to the activities of the cause of Christian Science is a privilege which I appreciate deeply. The blessings which have come to me and mine through the study of Christian Science are manifold, and each day brings added ones."

"Please apply the amount of the inclosed check in equal shares to The Christian Science Benevolent Association fund and the Real Estate fund of The Mother Church. It has been a joy and privilege to contribute to these funds and has resulted in a broader concept of the meaning of the activities of our movement."

"Inclosed you will find a small donation, to be used as you deem best, for the Real Estate fund or for The Christian Science Benevolent Association fund, or otherwise. This has been given in an attempt to express our appreciation for what Christian Science has done for us. The students of Christian Science in this area have been holding services regularly Sundays and Wednesday evenings. At the Wednesday evening meetings many expressions of gratitude are heard for the help received from Christian Science by the soldiers. Most of us have experienced healing both before and since coming into the Army."

"Inclosed please find my check for ten dollars which is a contribution to The Christian Science Benevolent Association fund. I am making this contribution as a slight return for the many, many blessings I have received through a knowledge of Truth as gained through the study of Christian Science, which I have been pursuing for the past four and one half years. If I can, in this way, help another to receive the benefits of this knowledge of Truth I shall be truly grateful."

Undejected, Undepressed

In music depression is the lowering or flatting of a note; in life it is a lowering of the spirits, sinking of the heart, diminution of the assurance that

. . . somehow good
Will be the final goal of ill.

A while ago to deject was literally to cast down or cast away, but as now used the word means to dispirit or dishearten. Can there be anything true or God-derived in an influence which may cast down the spirit of man, destroy his hope, and break his heart with sadness? Since there cannot be, why submit to anything that depresses and oppresses, when the way has been opened to the enjoyment of "the glorious liberty of the children of God."

Why not rise to the exultancy of Paul when he sets before his friends the stairway of joy, speaking of the Spirit of adoption and then saying, "If children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ." There is a similar message in the epistle to the Hebrews, where the experience of children whom the Father must purify so that they may be worthy of sonship is set forth, and the result of this purification is declared to be "the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby. Wherefore lift up the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees; and make straight paths for your feet, lest that which is lame be turned out of the way; but let it rather be healed." What then have we, viewing such prospects, to do with the trio of errors that Milton mentions, "sorrow and dejection and despair"? We have ever before us the example of our spiritual Leader, who says (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 133): "In the midst of depressing care and labor I turn constantly to divine Love for guidance, and find rest. It affords me great joy to be able to attest to the truth of Jesus' words. Love makes all burdens light, it giveth a peace that passeth understanding, and with 'signs following.' As to the peace, it is unutterable; as to 'signs,' behold the sick who are healed, the sorrowful who are made hopeful, and the sinful and ignorant who have become 'wise unto salvation'!"

If the fact of healing is continually remembered, then there is perpetual reassurance. Why should the honest practitioner who has seen many redemptions be ever made to forget? Does not God remain with him always in spite of dark clouds over him or the raging of the waters he is passing through? His journey is to the desired haven, the shore of peace with sunlit fields beyond; why not keep in mind the purpose of the journey and maintain the assurance of the heavenly reward? Mrs. Eddy gives continual comfort to her followers because of her own example. In "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 426) we find her saying: "The discoverer of Christian Science finds the path less difficult when she has the high goal always before her thoughts, than when she counts her footsteps in endeavoring to reach it. When the destination is desirable, expectation speeds our progress. The struggle for Truth makes one strong instead of weak, resting instead of wearying one."

Of what are we afraid when the chill of doubt assails us and the spiritual thermometer goes down? Is it disease that we fear? No; that is not a power in and of itself,—it is only human fear and false belief entertained and so manifested, and it fades away quickly before the divine "comfort of love." Well then, is it sin that dejects and saddens? To be so affected by the sin of the world is to believe wrongly, to start life's music with a wrong note, to substitute human tears and wailings for legitimate joy—that "joy of the Lord" which Nehemiah assured the people was their actual strength.

Though we may sometimes have to admit perplexities at this hour when unrest is everywhere in the world and war having ceased to be national is become civil, class contending against class, one self-interest trying to exhaust and consume another, nevertheless there is always remedy and comfort. The advice and promise set forth in the book of Job may well be pondered: "Acquaint now thyself with him [with God], and be at peace: thereby good shall come unto thee." Eliphaz indicates that Principle is the true source of good, saying, "If thou return to the Almighty, thou shalt be built up." He says also: "Yea, the Almighty shall be thy defence, and thou shalt have plenty of silver. For then shalt thou have thy delight in the Almighty, and shalt lift up thy face unto God." More than this, the one who has found help and resource from God is enabled to bring confidence and courage to others, for the promise continues: "Thou shalt also decree a thing, and it shall be established unto thee: and the light shall shine upon thy ways. When men are cast down, then thou shalt say, There is lifting up." While it may be true that in blind ignorance many men think only of casting down their neighbors, the encouraging feature of the hour is the emphasis placed upon faith by every thinker. Men look up with unquenchable hope, actually believing that God's salvation is nigh. Furthermore, we have this assurance from the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 328): "Whatever obstructs the way,—causing to stumble, fall, or faint, those mortals who are striving to enter the path,—divine Love will remove; and uplift the fallen and strengthen the weak."

William P. McKenzie.

"Loose him, and let him go"

There is an insistent cry in every human heart for freedom. Every mortal feels an inherent demand that he break loose from fetters which seem to limit him in every direction and which clog his every step toward progress. The great difficulty through the ages has been that mankind has conceived of its bonds as material. Always looking to matter for both good and evil, it has been continually tossed back and forth between mistaken concepts of supposed pain and pleasure, of disaster and success, of loss and gain. It has attempted to erect its false hopes and satisfactions, only to have them crumble to dust while they were still in the making. Then, too, human belief has almost invariably insisted that its fetters have been forged by something outside of itself, by this hampering circumstance, by that limiting relationship. Its difficulties have been thus credited to influences from without, and because of inability to control apparently extraneous conditions men have either given up all effort in despair, excusing themselves for their dissatisfactions, mistakes, and failures by blaming somebody or something other than themselves, or they have found their struggles well-nigh endless and their accomplishments, at best, little more than a transitory sense of good.

To this as to all human problems Christian Science comes with its illuminating message of divine intelligence and love. When it elucidates the truth that God is infinite Spirit, divine Mind, and that His creation therefore is—must be—spiritual, divinely mental, it opens the door of freedom to each and every one. From this truth the conclusion may be quickly drawn that the thing which binds and limits, which hampers and obstructs, is always the belief in a selfhood apart from God,—the belief in a selfhood in matter.

Then the only way one can ever be loosed from evil is for him to learn that he exists as an individual child of God and that the loosing must be accomplished by his own relinquishment, in his own consciousness, of the opposite testimony. There is where the destruction of the claims of bondage must occur so far as he is concerned. There is where he must refuse to entertain the beliefs which testify to limitations and to control by something less than God Himself. When he once lays hold of this glorious truth and really begins to put it into practice he has started on the way to complete emancipation from belief in bondage of any name or nature.

This truth of man as the child of God, which Christ Jesus taught and lived, when explained in Christian Science becomes possible of demonstration by all mankind, and when demonstrated becomes the way of escape from all subjection to error. And Jesus did his own work! In Science and Health (p. 18) Mrs. Eddy says: "Jesus of Nazareth taught and demonstrated man's oneness with the Father, and for this we owe him endless homage. His mission was both individual and collective. He did life's work aright not only in justice to himself, but in mercy to mortals,—to show them how to do theirs, but not to do it for them nor to relieve them of a single responsibility." Jesus never blamed others for his trials and difficulties. He proved that through understanding and using his divine sonship he became master over every belief in materiality, and if we are to follow in his footsteps it is the privilege and necessity of every one of us to do the same. Neither did he ever assume the control of others. He always presented the demands of God both by precept and practice, encouraging all to accept and obey them even as he did.

There are no human relationships wherein this blessed rule of trusting all to the care, guidance, and control of divine Principle will not bring harmonious and gratifying results. Freedom to all concerned will be manifest and the unfolding of spiritual good will appear in ever increasing measure. The very fact that one can be freed from all false sense of responsibility so far as others are concerned is a cause for deep gratitude. Think of what a wonderful world this would be if every one knew just how to trust every one else, as well as himself, to the government of God, divine Principle, because each had learned that all are the children of God and that He alone is responsible for each and every one. And this is not only possible, but imperative of demonstration in Christian Science. This by no means lessens sweet solicitude for each other's welfare; on the contrary, because it expresses the divine method whereby to "loose him, and let him go," every false fetter is thereby broken, every galling belief of bondage shall be done away, and

> Man in the sunshine of the world's new spring,
> Shall walk transparent like some holy thing.

May each and every Christian Scientist so live that this glorious day may be hastened!

Special Announcement

The Christian Science Publishing Society has received inquiries with regard to circular letters recently sent out from Worcester, Massachusetts, in relation to a book to be issued describing "The War Time Activities of the Christian Science Movement."

In times past the branch churches and reading rooms have encountered embarrassments in connection with unauthorized literature sent out either by those seeking profit or by those acting, we assume unwittingly, in violation of the wishes and directions of our beloved Leader, Mrs. Eddy, to whom the authorization of Christian Science literature was a matter of supreme moment. The circulars regarding which inquiries have been made undoubtedly represent an enterprise of the latter class.

We print herewith, for the information of the Field, the correspondence on the subject which has passed between the Christian Science Board of Directors and the Board of Trustees of the Publishing Society:

September 18, 1919.

Christian Science Board of Directors,
The First Church of Christ, Scientist,
Boston, Massachusetts.

Dear Friends:

Our attention has been called to circular letters purporting to come from the "office of the Corresponding and Financial Secretary" of the "Christian Science War Relief Committee," in relation to a book to be issued describing "The War Time Activities of the Christian Science Movement."

The circulars, which state that the book is being printed by the "Yale University Press, New Haven, Connecticut," are apparently sent out from Worcester, Mass., although they bear the heading of the "Christian Science War Relief Committee," having offices in the Little Building, in Boston.

The circulars state that the book "is gotten out by The Mother Church War Relief Committee," and the local committees for War Relief work are solicited to undertake to sell these books. The suggestion is made that informal meetings of the congregations should be called after Wednesday evening meetings, at which the book shall be explained, and members of the Church and congregations solicited to purchase it.

Nothing is said in the circular as to where the net profits of the undertaking are going, but the Field are left to assume, apparently erroneously, that they will go to The Mother Church. The circulars are equally consistent with the profits going to individuals masquerading under the authority of The Mother Church and purporting to act in its behalf.

If this undertaking were really an activity of The Mother Church, of course it would come to the Publishing Society and be issued authoritatively and in a way to make it admissible to Christian Science reading rooms. The fact that it is not so issued is a clear indication that the publication is spurious.

At first reading, it occurred to us that you might have authorized this undertaking, but upon reflection it was clear that you could not have done it. In the first place, the circular lacks that dignity of expression coming from The Mother Church. You would scarcely have authorized the huckstering of a book at sacred meetings of worship, especially a book which, under the Manual, could not be admitted to our reading rooms. Furthermore, you, of course, would never have authorized a proceeding so clearly in violation of the injunction which has been issued in the pending suit. It is so clear that this undertaking would be construed as a step in carrying out the threat alleged in the bill to make the Publishing House an "empty shell," that we could not for a moment continue to entertain the thought that you would be guilty of an action so plainly in contempt.

It is clear that something should be done to let the Field know that this proposition is entirely without the authority of the

Digitized by Google

Christian Science Board of Directors or of the Trustees of the Publishing Society; that the publication therefore is spurious, and that the Field should be on their guard against it.

It is a matter that you are interested in alike with the Trustees. May we depend upon you to take this action, or would you recommend that we do it? Sincerely yours,

BOARD OF TRUSTEES,
(Signed) HERBERT W. EUSTACE, Secretary.

Board of Trustees, September 22, 1919.
The Christian Science Publishing Society,

Gentlemen:

The Christian Science Board of Directors instructs me to say in reply to your favor of September 18, relative to the report of the Christian Science War Relief Committee, that a letter on the subject will reach you at an early date.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Friends:

The Christian Science Board of Directors instructs me to send you this letter in answer to your letter of last Thursday.

The Directors of The Mother Church have not approved any circular letter pertaining to the report in book form to which your letter refers. They have requested the withdrawal of all such circular letters, and have asked Mr. Harsch to come to Boston for a conference on the subject in question.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) CHAS. E. JARVIS,
Corresponding Secretary for
The Christian Science Board of Directors.

Board of Trustees, September 25, 1919.
The Christian Science Publishing Society,
107 Falmouth Street, Boston, Massachusetts.

Dear Friends:

The Christian Science Board of Directors instructs me to say in further reply to your favor of September 18 that it has been decided that the report of the War Relief Committee of The Mother Church will not be issued in book form now.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) CHAS. E. JARVIS,
Corresponding Secretary for
The Christian Science Board of Directors.

The above letters will serve to indicate the unanimous action of the two Boards in conforming to the wishes and directions of our Leader.

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE PUBLISHING SOCIETY.

After the above announcement was ready for the press the following correspondence took place between the two Boards:

Christian Science Board of Directors, September 25, 1919.
The First Church of Christ, Scientist,
Boston, Massachusetts.

Dear Friends:

We acknowledge receipt of Mr. Jarvis' letters of the 22nd, 24th and 25th instant, in reply to our letter of the 18th instant on the subject of the proposed publication of "The War Time Activities of the Christian Science Movement."

Inquiries have already been received regarding this proposed publication. We feel that something authoritative ought to be published in relation to it, giving a reason why the publication is not to be issued in accordance with the circulars sent to committees and also with announcements made at branch church meetings.

As we have no doubt that this course will meet with your approval, we intend to publish in the next Sentinel a special announcement, a proof of which we inclose herewith. We cannot conceive that you will have any objection to our publishing the correspondence, but if anything occurs to you, kindly let us know before eleven o'clock tomorrow morning, at which time the Sentinel presses will begin running.

Sincerely yours,
BOARD OF TRUSTEES,
(Signed) HERBERT W. EUSTACE, Secretary.

Board of Trustees, September 26, 1919.
The Christian Science Publishing Society,
Boston, Massachusetts.

Dear Friends:

The Christian Science Board of Directors has just had read to them your letter of last night, and instructs me to ask that you kindly hold your presses until twelve o'clock noon to-day so as to give them an opportunity to prepare a reply.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) CHAS. E. JARVIS,
Corresponding Secretary for
The Christian Science Board of Directors.

Christian Science Board of Directors, September 26, 1919.
The First Church of Christ, Scientist,
Boston, Massachusetts.

Dear Friends:

Complying with the request in your letter of this morning just received, we have requested the business manager to hold the presses until twelve o'clock noon to-day.

With best wishes, Yours sincerely,
BOARD OF TRUSTEES,
(Signed) HERBERT W. EUSTACE, Secretary.

Board of Trustees, September 26, 1919.
The Christian Science Publishing Society,
Boston, Massachusetts.

Dear Friends:

With reference to the letter dated yesterday and the proof sheet of an article prepared for the Christian Science Sentinel, which were delivered to me for the Christian Science Board of Directors at a late hour last night, this Board has instructed me at a meeting held this morning to reply as follows:

The Directors of The Mother Church regard the above mentioned article as wholly uncalled for and as entirely improper. In at least four particulars it is mistaken, misleading, and unjust.

The Directors regard the book "Christian Science War Time Activities" as a perfectly proper report on the subjects within the scope of its contents. The reason why its publication has been suspended for the present is because your letter of September 18 intimated that you think the publication of this book by the Yale University Press would violate the temporary injunction issued in the present suit.

The Directors do not take this view, but as you have raised the question, they have suspended the publication of the book for the present, it being their intention to comply with both the letter and the spirit of the Court's order.

It would appear from your letter that you are of the opinion that this report should be published by you. If that is your desire the Directors ask that you kindly so inform them, and possibly that arrangement can be made.

The Directors also instruct me to declare their opinion that publication of your proposed article would constitute a wrongful and detrimental interference with the business of The Mother Church and with an undertaking in which its members are greatly interested.

If you persist in publishing the article in question, please add this letter to it.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) CHAS. E. JARVIS,
Corresponding Secretary for
The Christian Science Board of Directors.

Christian Science Board of Directors, September 26, 1919.
The First Church of Christ, Scientist,
Boston, Massachusetts.

Dear Friends:

In your letter of to-day you ask to be informed whether we feel that the book in question should be published by The Christian Science Publishing Society. At the moment we have no opinion on the subject. We have had in the previous correspondence no intimation that the Directors had really authorized this undertaking.

A different situation is now presented. Before passing upon the question we should desire to see the manuscript, to be informed of the purposes for which the book is to be put out, whether purely for profit or not, to whom the profit is to go, and other similar questions, before reaching a decision. If the proposition of its publication is submitted, we will give it prompt and careful consideration.

We will, however, now say that if the book is to be published as authorized Christian Science literature, it should be issued by The Christian Science Publishing Society and by no other. It was the distinct purpose of our Leader in creating the Publishing Society trust to have that organization alone publish authorized Christian Science literature.

The Manual provides:

Article XXV, Section 8, under the heading "Books to be Published," "Only the Publishing Society of The Mother Church selects, approves, and publishes the books and literature it sends forth."

Article XXI, Section 3, under the heading "Literature in Reading Rooms," "The literature sold or exhibited in the reading rooms of Christian Science Churches shall consist only of 'Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures,' by Mary Baker Eddy, and other writings by this author; also the literature published or sold by The Christian Science Publishing Society."

It would indeed be a strange and startling situation if a book to be sold to members of Christian Science Churches and congregations could not, under the Manual, be placed in the Christian Science Reading Rooms.

As to your suggestion that we refrain from printing our letters on this subject, we can see no sound basis for such a request. The Field are entitled to know the whole truth on this as on every other subject. Secrecy serves no useful purpose.

In accordance with your request we shall add to the Special Announcement your last letter; we shall also add our subsequent correspondence.

Sincerely yours,

BOARD OF TRUSTEES,

(Signed) HERBERT W. EUSTACE, Secretary.

Testimonies of Healing

It is with great thankfulness that I testify to the healing that has taken place in my home through Christian Science. Seventeen years have elapsed since we decided to give up all material means of healing, and in looking back over that time my heart overflows with thankfulness to God and gratitude to our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, who has so clearly opened up for us the way to health and happiness through a correct understanding of God and of man made in His image and likeness. I am particularly grateful for the removal of fear, which up to the time I commenced reading "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, seemed to possess my whole life.

Our eldest daughter's instantaneous healing of croup first brought us to take up the study of Christian Science in earnest. Since then we have relied on divine Principle alone for healing. When our youngest daughter was suffering from an internal growth we had the help of a practitioner, but without apparent change for some time. Feeling confident that Truth would make free, however, and resting on the many promises in the Bible which have been made so clear through the light thrown upon them by our textbook, we had no fear as to the final result. It seemed hard at times to follow the Scriptural advice, "Let patience have her perfect work," but we held on; and after two years we had the joy of seeing our reliance on Truth rewarded, for the growth came away completely and the healing was perfect, there being no after effects.

Words fail me when I try to express the joy this healing brought into our home, but the greatest satisfaction we have realized has been the spiritual uplift and the removal of the sense of fear which so often surrounds the home life where there are children. I desire further to express my thanks for the literature so abundantly provided, and for the services which have been so lovingly arranged for us by our revered Leader.—Thomas E. Cooper, Sydney, Australia.

My earnest desire is that this testimony may bring strength and courage to some one who is sad at heart or suffering. Four years ago I was in the depths of mental and physical distress. For fourteen years I had been a sufferer from one of the worst forms of stomach trouble, and at the end of that period paralysis of the bowels, severe bilious attacks, sick headache, neuritis, nervous prostration, and sleeplessness were holding me in such bondage that I longed for death. Doctors, sanitariums, and diets had all been tried in vain. Steadily I grew weaker and weaker, practically living on milk. The climax seemed to be reached when my so-called optimistic nature failed me, proving itself void of any lasting foundation, and I became extremely melancholy.

Christian Science was brought to my attention just at this time, and with no understanding and no particular faith I turned for help to this religion of Love. I have no special recollection of what the practitioner said to me on my first visit, but the great burdens and responsibilities and cares that I had carried so many years seemed to be lifted, and when I was told to eat anything that was put before me and thank God, I did so without any sense of fear. In ten days I was healed of all these troubles. My husband was greatly impressed at the change in me and said that if it was God that had healed me, he had the same right to His protection and love as I had, and in one visit to a practitioner he was instantaneously healed of the drink habit, which had steadily been growing worse and which had been one of my greatest sorrows. A year after this I was healed of a severe attack of influenza in twelve hours by absent treatment. The next day when putting on my glasses, which I had used sixteen years for reading and close work, at times being obliged to wear them constantly, I found that I could not see through them, and have not needed glasses since.

For all these healings I am sincerely grateful, but much more so for the overcoming of lack. For the past four years my husband and I have been striving to break this mental bondage. Time after time when we thought we were at the pinnacle of success, everything has seemingly been swept from us. Time after time we have had to learn to have more humility, more faith, and above all more understanding of God and of man's relationship to Him. We have had to learn through "bleeding footsteps" (Science and Health, p. 10) that God alone is our supply. At the present time our every need is more than being met, and we rejoice in the knowledge of God's allness.

I want to express my deep gratitude to Mrs. Eddy for her writings and all the Christian Science literature, for through the reading and conscientious study of these wonderful and inspiring messengers of Love I have begun to see my fellow man as he really is, God's image and likeness.

(Mrs.) Emilie Stanly, Wynnewood, Pa.

I wish to tell of the healing efficacy of Christian Science, for it has been proved to me that God is the best physician. I had been ill a number of years when finally I took to my bed with a serious internal disorder. Nothing could be done for me and it was claimed that without an operation I would never be on my feet again. I would not submit to an operation and in my extremity turned to God for help, and with the aid of a Christian Science practitioner I was healed. My husband was healed of sciatic rheumatism in its worst form. He had taken so much medicine that seemingly it had eaten into his vocal cords and he could not speak above a whisper. This difficulty too was overcome in Christian Science. I know there is nothing impossible with God; and our Leader says (Science and Health, p. 231), "What God cannot do, man need not attempt."

This testimony is sent in gratitude for and appreciation of the wonderful privilege afforded to prove God's love and allness through Mrs. Eddy's revelation of the truth. I am also grateful for the authorized periodicals.

(Mrs.) Lillian B. Williams, San Francisco, Calif.

It is with sincere gratitude for the many blessings received from Christian Science that I wish to add a few words to the above testimony by my wife. At the time she took up Christian Science I had suffered from sciatic rheumatism for over three years, not knowing what a moment's peace meant night or day. I was completely healed after the third treatment. This was four years ago.—Royal G. Williams.

While I have known of Christian Science and something of its Founder for many years in a vague way, I had always looked upon it with much skepticism. About four years ago, however, I experienced a complete change of opinion. My wife had been under a physician's care for a long time, and we were advised that she must undergo an operation at once; but on the recommendation of a friend she decided to try Christian Science and was healed. This healing to me seemed miraculous, but even then I was not willing to admit the healing power of Christian Science.

I had been under medical treatment for a long time, owing to a rundown condition, and was suffering from so-called nervous indigestion. I got no permanent relief, so finally decided to give Christian Science a trial, and after two months' treatment I was completely healed. Since that time the tobacco habit, to which I had been in bondage for fourteen years, has dropped away. The almost constant use of profanity has been left behind, while a bad temper, conceit, prejudice, and many other shortcomings are being overcome as I gain in understanding of divine Love.

My heart is full of gratitude to that good woman, Mrs. Eddy, who so lived that she was able to rediscover this new-old truth that is giving health and happiness to ever increasing numbers.—Walter W. Morse, Portland, Maine.

I am very grateful for what Christian Science has done for me and mine. For many years I suffered from what the doctors called incurable chronic bowel trouble, and I underwent three operations by the best doctors we could get. They also claimed I had tubercular disease of the lungs, and that the left lung was badly affected. For years I continually took medicine, but was never free from suffering.

In this darkest hour a dear neighbor gave me two copies of the Sentinel, and after reading them I was sure I had found the real Physician. Very soon another friend lent me Science and Health, and great joy came to me. I was healed completely before I read this precious book half through. That was about ten years ago. My husband and I could not get along now without this healing truth. Rheumatism and other ills have also been overcome. I am very grateful for all that this teaching means to me and mine, for all our periodicals, and for class instruction. More than all else I am thankful to God, and grateful to our beloved Leader for her faithful work in making this teaching so plain to mankind and for her unselfed love.

(Mrs.) Jennie Johnson, Rochester, Minn.

Christian Science came to me in a time of great need. I had never been well, and had been quite ill for some years when it was presented to me. I lived in the western part of the state and was so situated that I could not attend church or be with those interested in the subject. My healing was very slow, but after studying "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy and having absent treatment from a practitioner, I was freed from a tapeworm and from that time began to improve in health. It has been seventeen years since I became interested in this teaching. At that time I was an invalid and unable to wait on myself; now I am a well woman, able to support myself and help others. Christian Science is so practical and is a great help to me in my business life.

I especially want to express my gratitude for the Sentinel, for in the earlier years of my interest in Christian Science this periodical was a wonderful help. It was such an awakening to realize that God is Mind. I am grateful for the physical healing which followed, but more grateful to know each day that God is my Life. During the long illness and the passing on of my mother I was lifted somewhat above the human sense of death and was able to know that there is no separation in Truth. Later, when it became necessary for my father and myself to break up our home, Christian Science met all my needs.

My greatest enemy has been fear, and Jesus' words, "Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom," have been of great help to me. I find that as I love my neighbor as myself, this fear is being eliminated. I am thankful to God and grateful to Mrs. Eddy and to all those who have helped me.

(Miss) Irma Bell Smith, Lakewood, Ohio.

I should like to express my gratitude for the benefits received from Christian Science. I have had many demonstrations during the past six years, some alone and others with the aid of practitioners. Since taking up the study of Christian Science my home has been abroad, and unfortunately there has never been anyone in the town where we have been stationed who was even interested in this beautiful religion. Both of my children were born under absent treatment, and at the birth of my little girl, now three years and a half old, there was neither doctor nor nurse in attendance. Every condition was perfectly harmonious. The child is so very healthy that everywhere she goes there are comments to the effect that it is impossible to believe that she could have been born and raised in such a hot tropical post as this.

We all owe Mrs. Eddy a debt of gratitude for having given us again the demonstrable religion which Christ Jesus taught centuries ago. This debt can only be paid by daily living up to the standard given us.

(Mrs.) Ona Wellborn Brett, La Guaira, Venezuela.

It is with a heart overflowing with gratitude to God for the many blessings I have received through Christian Science that I send this testimony. At a time of great physical and mental distress I turned to Christian Science, because fear of a very serious operation, from which there seemed no escape, induced me to try that which I had scorned and scoffed at. This healing alone saved my life. I have also been healed of heart trouble, of frequent and severe headaches, and of an acute throat trouble, which for the greater part of my life had kept me confined to the house for days and sometimes weeks every winter. Through learning to know God as Life, Truth, and Love my thought is changing and I am learning to see myself and others as God's children, "individual, perfect, eternal" (Science and Health, p. 115). This has changed me from a delicate to a healthy woman. From childhood I suffered intensely from fear in almost every way, but the knowledge that "perfect love casteth out fear" is overcoming that condition also.

While I turned to Christian Science for physical healing, it has brought me much more. It has made me a grateful, happy woman, and many times has brought to me a peace which indeed "passeth all understanding." That I can trust God with every problem and that God, divine Love, is caring for and protecting His creation, I have had abundant and positive proof. I am most grateful to our beloved Leader, Mrs. Eddy, for the revelation of this wonderful truth.

(Mrs.) Jessie Turner, Darien, Wis.

For eight years I have depended upon Christian Science to help me out of trouble of all sorts, and it has never failed. Some of the healings have been instantaneous. For years I suffered from many physical maladies and almost constant mental torment. Neuralgia, nervous prostration, and heart trouble were daily companions, as were fear of debt, grief for those who had passed on, and heartache because of the habits of some who were living. The heart disease seemed to be the most serious affliction, for it returned frequently, accompanied by distressing symptoms.

My case was observed closely by my husband, who was a regular physician, and was acquainted with the most intelligent physicians in this country. The teachings of materia medica did not include this type of heart disease. Doctors could not understand the cause of my suffering, and did not afford me any permanent relief. After years of endurance I resorted to other systems of healing, without receiving benefit. At length I seemed to have exhausted every source of help, and when a severe attack prostrated me I gave up the fight for life. To satisfy some members of the family I consented to go to a Christian Science practitioner, although I took no interest whatever in doing so. That visit was "the parting of the ways." I became interested in the study of Christian Science and was healed of discouragement, fear, and pain. The thought of death left me during my first visit. This spiritual healing caused me to awake to the existence of God. I realized divine Love's ever presence and was satisfied.

I have experienced many healings, which prove to me the words of Mrs. Eddy on page 162 of Science and Health, "Christian Science brings to the body the sunlight of Truth, which invigorates and purifies."

(Mrs.) Florence Hawley Goffe, Medford, Ore.

About two years ago I awoke one morning to find myself unable to see out of one eye. It was badly crossed and I could not raise the eyelid. The muscles and nerves seemed paralyzed, and I was terrified with the thought that I had been stricken blind. I even feared permanent affliction. However, a Christian Science practitioner was quickly called and I soon became composed and settled down to work out my problem. Sometimes discouragement, doubt, and a strong desire for an examination by an eye specialist assailed me, but in due time, and solely through the patient work of this faithful practitioner and the steadfast assurance of several staunch friends, the eyelid began to raise; and then one day as the practitioner was treating me the crossed eye went back into its right position. A few days after that I was completely healed. My eyes to-day are stronger than before this experience, for I can read finer print.

I cannot find words to express the gratitude I feel to God, and also to Mrs. Eddy and the loving friends who through their understanding of Christian Science were enabled, and so well qualified, to help me.

Albert Edholm, Omaha, Neb.

Manifold are the blessings that have come to me since taking up the study of Christian Science a number of years ago. When I began studying "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, I was practically an invalid. While under a sense of distressing fear and discouragement as to my future, I found the textbook among several other books I had picked up to place by my bed to read. I began to read it rather curiously, but as the Christ-element unfolded in my thought a buoyancy accompanied the reading and my physical condition underwent a decided change for the better. Before long I could walk some distance; indeed, strength was noticeably regained from the first.

The understanding of Christian Science, even in a degree, does rob the grave of victory. At one time there was a struggle with the "last enemy" for several months, but a greater understanding of Life was my reward for holding steadfast. As a further consequence I was wonderfully comforted while passing through the greatest sorrow of my life, the loss of a dear one. My healing has been permanent and I am now better in every way. The daily study of Mrs. Eddy's works and other authorized literature is constantly clearing my thought of questionings. The interpretation of the Scriptures through the understanding of Christian Science is the pleasantest experience of my life. Recently a problem was happily solved by understanding the references to light as meaning enlightenment, and truly Jesus' constant endeavor was to enlighten mankind about God and man's relation to Him. This same light is with us to-day. Mrs. Eddy has relighted the pathway to harmony by enlightening us as to the meaning of truth.

(Mrs.) Carrie D. Galbraith, Carbondale, Ill.

My little daughter had trouble with her ear from the time she was a baby. We had three physicians and the last one after removing the adenoids told me that nothing could be done. When she was seven she became deaf in that ear, could not hear a sound. The physician examined her and said there were two perforations in the drum of the ear. A friend then advised me to try Christian Science, so I wrote to a cousin whom I knew to be interested in Science, and asked him to treat the child. One morning about six weeks later she was in an adjoining room, and when I spoke to her quite loudly, she looked out at me and laughingly said, "Don't speak loud to me; I can hear as well as anyone,"—and she could. That was over three years ago and she has heard perfectly ever since.

We are indeed grateful for this healing and for many other blessings received through Christian Science.

Paul tells us to "owe no man any thing, but to love one another," and the other day I realized that there was a debt of love I had not yet paid, and that was to send a few words of thanks to the Sentinel, which Mrs. Eddy started so that those who have received blessings from Christian Science may have the privilege of giving to those who want to hear.

Christian Science has indeed been a very great blessing to me. When I turned to it I was hungry, thirsty, and weary. Life seemed to be an unsatisfactory affair, an unsolved problem. I began to study "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy and a great burden fell from me. Ever since I have steadily gained in health, joy, peace, and strength as I have increased in the understanding of Christian Science. I soon knew and proved that I had found a demonstrable religion which pays us back tenfold whatever we put into its study and application. It has healed me of rheumatism, headache, depression, and a great deal of fear and worry. For the last fourteen years it has been my only medicine, my help in all difficulties.

I am thankful beyond measure for the privilege of class instruction, and my only desire is that I may be more worthy of the great blessings which Christian Science daily brings to me.—(Miss) Dorothy Knight, Ilkley, England.

I have known of Christian Science ever since I was about twelve years of age, but as I thought it was mostly for healing sickness, and I was never sick, little attention was paid to it. The time came, however, when I was to learn that I needed the light of Truth every moment.

In May, 1917, our little son, then three years old, became ill with what seemed to be measles, and grew worse rapidly. My husband, who had no faith in Christian Science, finally consented to try it, and absent treatment was asked for from a practitioner three hundred miles away.

Digitized by Google

The little boy seemed to grow much worse and finally reached the stage of stupor and remained in that condition for nearly two weeks. I could not begin to tell the many ways in which divine Love met our every need in those dark hours. A physician has since diagnosed the case as spinal meningitis. The healing seemed slow, but God's law of Life healed the child perfectly. I am grateful for the loving help received during this experience from my mother, who has been in Science some time.

We have been helped in many other ways by Christian Science. Badly swollen feet were healed in one treatment, and a bowel trouble of many years' standing was overcome. I am thankful to God and grateful to Mrs. Eddy for this healing truth, also for our periodicals, which always bring the needed help. My greatest desire is to learn more of Truth.—(Mrs.) ALTA D. FOLTZ, Prairie Grove, Ark.

I gladly verify the testimony of my daughter. I was with her at the time of my little grandson's illness and saw the power of God break every material law. The child is in perfect health, and the nine-months-old baby was protected from contagion. Christian Science is to me the "pearl of great price," the increasing joy of my life. I respect and revere Mrs. Eddy. I am grateful for all the authorized literature and for the lectures; they have been a wonderful help to me.—(Mrs.) JESSIE M. DAVIS.

I would like to tell of the beautiful healing I received through Christian Science. There was a growth on my foot for a year or more and it pained continually. The foot was so badly swollen that at times shoes could not be worn. Christian Science help was asked for, and immediately I could feel the healing taking place. In three days the foot was completely healed. Chronic bronchitis, severe headaches, colds, burns, sensitiveness, sorrow, and worry have also been overcome. Many other blessings have come to me and to my family through the study of Christian Science, and I have learned to love the Bible.

(Mrs.) GLESSIE A. DODD, Olympia, Wash.

It was about eleven years ago that Christian Science was first called to my attention; and about three years later, after I had gone through many hard experiences, traveling about, living off and on the life of a tramp, it was again brought to my notice. At this time I was a mental and physical wreck. Some dear friends with whom I boarded directed me to the Christian Science reading room, where a copy of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy was secured. Shortly after I had begun to read this book all medicines and material appliances were given up, and a little later I found myself perfectly healed of a constant sense of hunger of three years' standing. This healing came just through reading Science and Health. My appetite has been normal for eight years.

I learned that this book was the word of God, and that divine Love had accomplished the healing through my reading of the book. Later, by trusting God, I was healed of a venereal disease in six days. A large cut on the chin, smoking, chewing, drinking, profanity, have also been overcome during the past four years; and many other sins, such as vainglory, anger, hatred, revenge, selfishness, have been overcome in a large degree. Mentally, and physically, and in the overcoming of lack I have been wonderfully blessed. Words cannot say where I would be to-day if Christian Science had not come into my life. It is a preventive and has been my only physician for eight years.

I am very glad to have the privilege of being a member of the branch church of this city and of The Mother Church, and to participate in the church work. This has brought healing and many beautiful experiences to me. It is also a privilege to have all our periodicals; they are so wonderfully helpful.

It is my wish that this testimony may help others as much as others have helped me. Christian Science has brought peace, comfort, grace, joy, and calmness into my life. It has brought me from death in trespasses into the living spirit of Truth, Life, and Love. It has made me a living witness to the benefits of Christian Science. I am thankful to God and to Christ Jesus, and grateful to Mrs. Eddy and all those who have kindly helped me along the way. I am indeed grateful to Christian Science for all it has done and is doing for me every day, and I want to learn more of it that I may be able to help others. I thank God for Mrs. Eddy and for her wonderful and priceless writings.

BERT B. HATCH, Rochester, N. Y.

Over nine years ago Christian Science was brought to my notice by a friend. At that time I suffered from headaches that sometimes laid me up for a few days. I had worn glasses for eighteen years, suffering agony at times from inflammation of the eyes, and was told I could never go without them. Soon after I took up the study of Christian Science the headaches disappeared, and one year later the glasses were put aside. I have no trouble with my eyes now, and can use them for work I could not do before.

Three years ago I had a severe attack of stomach trouble and was healed by absent treatment in a few days, not being away from work one day. I was greatly uplifted as a result of this healing. A bee sting was overcome by holding to the truth. Those about me awaiting the usual results from a sting were surprised to find no trace of it in a short time. In my work as a children's nurse I have seen temper and disobedience give place to love and obedience after a few minutes' realization of Truth. A few months ago influenza attacked me. Absent treatment was asked for and the healing though slow was perfect.

There is no church and there are no Christian Scientists near where my work keeps me, so it is a great joy when an opportunity comes to be present at a service or lecture. I am thankful to God for all the blessings and happiness experienced, also grateful to Mrs. Eddy.

(Miss) MOLLY MILNE, Melrose, Scotland.

It is with a heart full of loving gratitude that I give this testimony of my healing in Christian Science. Six years ago I was full of despair, for my future seemed so hopeless. Materia medica could do no more for me. I had undergone two major operations, but each one left me in a worse condition. I turned to Christian Science at the request of my husband and only as a last resort, with no hope of being really benefited. In three months I was happier than ever before, for I had learned that my body does not rule my life, that I do not need to fear it; and I was free. Kidney and bladder trouble of a serious nature, a nervous disease, and the need of glasses then disappeared. This is only the first of many beautiful healings we have had through reliance on divine Love.

I am thankful to God for Mrs. Eddy, for her love for all mankind, and for her understanding of the all-power of Truth that caused her to stand steadfast and firm when the whole world seemed against her. I am also grateful for the workers in the field, and for the loving patience that has helped me all the way.

Signs of the Times

[The Jackson (Mich.) News]

There are various opinions and numerous surmises as to the underlying cause of all the ferment, unrest, and discontent which are everywhere manifesting themselves at the present time, and which have never been entirely absent from human society so far as we have any records concerning it. In one of the most comprehensive statements the great Teacher made of the reason for his mission, he said: "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly."

By this he could not have meant that he would increase mere physical vitality, which is life in the human sense of the word, but that his teachings, entering into the hearts and minds and conduct of men, would so broaden and sweeten existence that living would be richer and more abounding. He came to bring "life and immortality to light." The Advent was a birthday of a new era for humanity, shining at the point of its lowest descent in the darkest night of time, and letting the eternal daylight, spiritual and not physical, into the minds of men.

That more abundant life was manifest in healing the sick and preaching the gospel of glad tidings during the first three hundred years of Christianity, then was eclipsed for the thousand years of materialism known as the Dark Ages, but is again coming to light. As it dawns womanhood feels its spirit, and childhood is relieved of its toilsome burdens. It brings relief to the toiler, the burden bearer, the plebeian. The life of the Redeemer is pervading the world as fast as the world opens to receive it. It appears in the efforts to achieve the League of Nations for the promotion of "on earth peace, good will toward men." This is evidence of the more abundant life.

[The Continent]

The church to-day would be lifted above much pettiness and pettifogging that still afflicts it if it were but blessed with a baptism of Pauline thinking on this subject. The contentious spirit in which multitudes discuss theology, casting anathemas on all who do not voice faith in terms identical with their own preferences, and defaming the religion of those who adopt an interpretation of Scripture more liberal than their own minds indorse, could not survive in an atmosphere where love was rated as superlatively as Paul rated it. And when the first and weightiest question asked about any man seeking fellowship, or sought for service, within the Christian communion, is simply this, "How much does he love?" a day of both juster and sounder religion will have come to the church. It will then be truly Pauline.

[Pittsburg (Pa.) Press]

"Nothing is so practical," to quote a writer, "as the man with a vision. We call the dreamer mad, and his madness saves the city and the state. Witness Emerson—resigning his salary and going out to Concord to live on six hundred dollars a year. His friends called him crazy when he gave up the great pulpit in Boston; they did not know that at six hundred dollars a year he was to climb into every pulpit in the land, and though there were thousands of preachers that there was to be one sermon. Who can measure the loss that would have overtaken the art of France had Millet not struggled on, and starved himself, until he could paint the Angelus? What a loss to English literature had Wordsworth not turned his back upon promotion, and accepted poverty in a little cottage at Grasmere? One noble youth with a dream is worth ten thousand men raking gold out of the filth. Jesus was called mad, but he was the most practical man of his era. Men scoffed when he bade the rich young ruler sell all his goods and give to the poor, but the rich young ruler lost his chance and Jesus won his saviorhood and his immortal renown."

Orders for, and correspondence relating to, the publications announced herein should be addressed to The Christian Science Publishing Society, Boston, U.S.A.

From the Clerk of The Mother Church

Church Tenets.—The tenets of The First Church of Christ, Scientist,—The Mother Church,—printed on folded sheet for use of the branch Churches of Christ, Scientist, with space for printing their authorized forms of application for membership or extracts from their by-laws, can be had at seventy-five cents a hundred. Orders will not be taken for less than one hundred and postage stamps should not be sent in payment.

Correspondence relative to the tenets or to membership with The Mother Church should be sent to Charles E. Jarvis, Clerk, 236 Huntington Avenue, Back Bay, Boston, Massachusetts.

From the Church Treasurer

Per Capita Tax.—The annual per capita tax for which the Manual provides is due from members of The Mother Church June 1, but may be paid at any time during the year. The per capita tax of those who unite with the church in November is reckoned from the preceding June, for that is the beginning of the church year. If a remittance for church dues exceeds the amount required to balance one's account, the surplus will be credited for the current year, unless otherwise directed by the sender.

Please remit by postal or express money order, bank draft, or check. Do not send paper money through the mail unless registered.

Please advise promptly of any change in name or address.

Per capita taxes and contributions to the Real Estate Fund and to The Christian Science Benevolent Association Fund should be sent to Edward L. Ripley, Treasurer, 236 Huntington Avenue, Back Bay, Boston, Massachusetts.

Letters of Appreciation

Many letters of appreciation of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR and other Christian Science activities are constantly being received. These letters express what these activities mean to different individuals in various occupations and pursuits. The favorable comment that has been received on those already published indicates that they are welcome and helpful; therefore others will be published under the above heading. Extracts from such letters follow:

HAVING no local newspaper to tell us of the world's doings, The Christian Science Monitor is eagerly read by all into whose hands a copy of it may fall, and there are those who even ask for it. Though the Monitor comes to us oftentimes weeks and weeks old we are grateful to receive it so that others may enjoy it with us; for it has caused those who have never known of the movement to ask, "Why, what is this thing, Christian Science?" and, as one man who has no religious belief whatever, asked me yesterday, "Why, when there are so many creeds and denominations, do you accept Christian Science as the only religious belief for you?" And so it was, that in answering this question and others that were asked it was found that here was a man hungering for the truth.

I WISH to add just a thought of appreciation for this most constructive paper of the day. As a student of history I have been intensely interested in the progress of the human race; but before studying Christian Science, which of course includes a study of The Christian Science Monitor, I failed to see where the theories advanced for the uplift of the people were truly successful. Now, however, as I study our wonderful paper, I note with joy that humanity has found the true understanding of Principle to build upon, and consequently every problem of evil will be solved. I am truly grateful for this knowledge.

"What I say unto you I say unto all, WATCH." Jesus

VOLUME XXII OCTOBER 11, 1919 NUMBER 6

White Robes

JULIA S. KINNEY

THE Scriptures make many allusions to dress. The full significance of these allusions cannot, however, be grasped without an understanding of the allness of Mind, which is the fundamental basis upon which the Scriptures were written. The subject of dress takes on a new aspect when considered from the viewpoint that "all is infinite Mind and its infinite manifestation, for God is All-in-all" (Science and Health, p. 468). Moreover, it is from this viewpoint alone that one can "consider the lilies" in the way in which the Master intended they should be considered when he pointed to the ease of its attainment as well as to the beauty of their array. Regarded from a material basis, however, the subject of dress is frequently associated with worry and fear. All through its pages the Scriptures teach the lesson of humanity's great need for changing its mode of thinking on this subject.

The word dress is derived from the Latin word dirigere, which means to direct. Humanity's need, then, is seen to be a need for directing aright, or correcting, its thoughts about God and also its concept of man's relation to God and to his fellow man. On page 452 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy states: "We soil our garments with conservatism, and afterwards we must wash them clean. When the spiritual sense of Truth unfolds its harmonies, you take no risks in the policy of error. Expect to heal simply by repeating the author's words, by right talking and wrong acting, and you will be disappointed. Such a practice does not demonstrate the Science by which divine Mind heals the sick." Suitable robes are needed for the healing of the sick, and these robes are right thoughts,—thoughts fashioned after the model shown by Christ Jesus, to touch the hem of whose garment brought health.

The question, What are these healing garments and how are they to be won and worn, is uppermost in the thought of many to-day. One of the first things to be recognized is the fact that mortal mind is always clothed in "filthy rags," to use a term employed by Isaiah. Greed, avarice, vanity, selfishness, sensuality, comprise part of its wearing apparel. Then it is important to understand the clear distinction made by the teachings of Christian Science between the real man and mortal mind. These teachings show that man is never mortal or material, and that man and mortality have no more in common than have light and darkness. Man is forever clothed in the qualities of the divine Mind, just as the sun's rays forever express the light of the sun. Just as it is impossible to separate the sun's rays from the sun so is it impossible to separate man from the Mind which is the source of his being.

As one can, however, by intercepting the rays of the sun prevent them from shining on a certain object, so can one seemingly prevent right ideas from reaching his own human problem by intercepting the light of Truth which would correct his wrong concepts. By means of fear, suspicion, resentment, entertained toward a brother, one may, for instance, intercept the blessings that would accrue to him from entertaining thoughts of kindness, confidence, and love, which thoughts when based on the allness of Mind are right ideas. The first question the human mind always presents in this connection is, Should one allow himself to be imposed upon? Wherever the rays of the sun may fall or may not fall, their relation to the sun is never changed; they always reflect light; no form of darkness touches them. This illustrates as well as anything mundane can how one must maintain his unity with divine Love. Having one fixed desire to reflect toward his fellow man nothing but honesty, justice, and all the qualities of the divine Mind, one can refuse to let suspicion, hate, distrust, or any other shadow of sense testimony, impose upon him a sense of separation from God's government.

This attitude maintained toward one's fellow man makes it possible here and now to experience the joy and peace that result from a clear realization of man's unity with his Maker. This fact gives significance to the symbolical figure which John described as a woman clothed with the sun. Our Leader's works, with their light of spiritual understanding, show the rich apparel which the Scriptures provide for all. This apparel is essential in entering the kingdom of heaven, which is within and can only be reached by pure, spiritual thoughts based on absolute Truth.

Spiritually interpreted, Joseph's coat of many colors which aroused the envy of his brothers was the garment of right ideas reflected by Joseph. His brothers' acts were based on their belief in the reality of matter, which clothed them in envy and hate. These very acts on their part, however, gave to Joseph an opportunity to prove the practical nature of his vesture or attitude of thought; for when his brothers' false concepts finally led them into a condition of lack, Joseph's understanding of God was sufficient to supply their need. Having proved divine Love to be a complete protection from hate, he brought about the reunion of his family on the basis of this Love. Forgiveness, generosity, kindness, were the dyes that gave such gorgeous hue to his apparel, and Joseph's coat, together with the dominion he exercised, may be had by anyone who will make these Godlike qualities of thought his own.

Hidden resentments, deep sorrows, even a seemingly settled disposition to worry—in fact, every habit of evil thinking,—like an old garment, can be rolled up and cast away; for the promise reads, "As a vesture shalt thou change them, and they shall be changed." All that is unjust, unlovely, or evil, lacks Principle and therefore shall perish; but all that is based on Principle shall endure. The evidence of the physical senses ceases to deceive those who, on the basis of the allness of Principle, refuse to put on the garment of its lies, and can consequently demonstrate the truthfulness of God's promises. No confusion concerning the right raiment remains long with one whose first desire is to keep his thoughts untainted by any belief in or dependence upon matter. It is because, as Mrs. Eddy explains on page 242 of Science and Health, "the divine Science of man is woven into one web of consistency without seam or rent," that one must base all his thoughts and acts on Principle; else, casting lots for his vesture—seeking the benefits of Truth without being obedient to Principle in the overcoming of the human mind and the pleasures and pains of sense—will bring its inevitable result of sorrow and shame.

Christian Scientists rejoice that through the study of the Bible in connection with the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," they are learning how to wash their robes white "in the blood of the Lamb." Day by day, hour by hour, joyfully they grasp each opportunity to replace wrong thoughts with right ones. Carefully they wipe out each stain of sense testimony with the affirmation of God's ever present, ever operative law of justice, joy, and peace, thus demonstrating the power of God to heal every form of sin and disease. Finding their own way out of all tribulation, they can assist others to see God's law and its practical operation in every human problem. Then when clad in white robes, the palm of victory in their hands, they can join with the great multitude spoken of by the Revelator as crying with a loud voice, "Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb."

Courage

AVIS LOBDELL

COURAGE is defined in the dictionary as that quality of mind which meets dangers and difficulties without fear. Mrs. Eddy says, "Moral courage is 'the lion of the tribe of Juda,' the king of the mental realm" (Science and Health, p. 514). Without moral courage there is small progress heavenward. Its acquisition comes in ever increasing measure as the student of Christian Science glimpses the reality of perfect God, man, and universe, and realizes proportionately the unreality of the human concepts,—sin, disease, and death. Lack of moral courage means fear entertained, and to be afraid proclaims belief in evil and ascribes power elsewhere than to omniscient, omnipresent, and omnipotent God. The remedy for fear is understanding, spiritual knowing of God and His man. This is the great work for all time, but each thought and desire that forsakes matter as its basis and finds God, has pierced the tatters of misconception that cloak evil and has helped to destroy the seeming reality of error's favorite scarecrow—fear.

Fear presents its claims to human thought in multitudinous guises, each appearing legitimate until tested in the light of Christian Science. Without this test constantly applied, human experience is fraught with ups and downs, chance and change, fortune and misfortune, comings and goings, luck and fate, sin and sickness, and countless other equally fearful uncertainties—all apparently brought about through circumstances largely external to the individual and beyond his control. Such were the conditions into which Jesus came. Because he knew God, however, he knew that evil's claims, presented as a matter-man and universe, were unlike God and no part of His handiwork; consequently they should not be feared as realities but recognized and dealt with as illusions. He encountered every temptation that humanity is beset with to-day to believe in discordant, material sense testimony, but he did not believe evil—he knew good; and with the consummate courage born of knowing God and spiritual man's relation to Him, he fearlessly faced every possible danger and difficulty and proved them powerless to affect the harmony of man governed by Principle.

Jesus proved by his experiences in the flesh that as a man "thinketh in his heart, so is he." To walk unafraid and repeat the demonstration of the Way-shower, mankind must have the same Mind that was in him. This necessitates turning the searching light of Truth upon the human self and seeing it for what it is. Courage is needed to do this, and still more courage is needed to accept what Truth reveals and to act upon it. Nothing short of the moral courage attained through some understanding of God and the consecrated desire for the Mind of the Christ enables one to begin renouncing the human self and replacing dishonesty with honesty, lying with truthfulness, disloyalty with loyalty to Principle, selfishness with unselfishness, impatience with patience, arrogance with meekness, hatred with love, impurity with purity, ingratitude with gratitude, criticism and condemnation with righteous judgment, idleness with diligence. Thus he begins to follow the Golden Rule, to be dauntless for right, and joyously to take each step of the way that Jesus pointed out, as fast as it appears.

As the human self is put off by casting out the false beliefs that constitute the carnal mind, it becomes apparent that God, being omniscient, knows all, and knows nothing unlike Himself—good. All that God's man knows is through reflection of the one Mind, God; and since evil is no part of the divine knowledge, fear vanishes before the truth that God is "of purer eyes than to behold evil." Omnipresent God, good, is everywhere, and there is no room for evil in the all-presence of good. The real man lives and moves and has his being in God. He is never for an instant outside the realm of omnipresent good, where evil has no place and fear does not appear. Since God, good, is omnipotent, He is all-power. The only potency, then, is good; evil, not being good, is no part of omnipotence and is without power. What, then, is there to fear? Spiritual man and universe are governed only by God, the power that created and sustains all that is.

The full glory of this revelation will come only when all false belief is known for what it is,—a lie. Each day brings new demands and opportunities for proof of more spiritual thinking and living. Armed with the understanding of God, His nature, presence, and power; recognizing the man of His creating as maintained and sustained by God, his perfect Principle; and reflecting all that God is, we are supplied with moral courage to stand for the highest right discernible, regardless of circumstance, place, or condition, knowing, as our Leader wrote on page 71 of Science and Health, that "evil has no reality. It is neither person, place, nor thing, but is simply a belief, an illusion of material sense."

As We Forgive

SILAS COBB

IN the eleventh chapter of Mark are these deeply significant words of the Master: "When ye stand praying, forgive, if ye have ought against any: that your Father also which is in heaven may forgive you your trespasses. But if ye do not forgive, neither will your Father which is in heaven forgive your trespasses." Has some person committed a great wrong against you? Has he been unchristian? You think so, and you ask if you should complacently accept it. Should you not tell the offender his flagrant faults? We may always recognize the truth which destroys the error, and reason with the one who has to our sense given the offense. Should you criticize him to others? No! Jesus was perhaps the best critic the world ever knew, and this was because of his spiritual understanding. Mrs. Eddy was also a wonderful critic; but such criticism was always expressed for some good purpose. It separated the good from the bad, showing the good as real and the evil as nothing. In fact, no person can himself be true and right and not be a good critic. That is, he must discern the difference between right and wrong. This must, however, be done primarily and largely in one's own thinking, and not by attacking or talking about some person. Evil is not a person; it is not a thing. Although we are not to expose a person's faults to our neighbors, to our fellow churchmen, or indeed to anyone, yet, if our thoughts are filled with love we can always help to correct the faults of the world, whether it be by open counsel or by simply knowing the truth and thinking it.

Jesus taught us to pray, "Deliver us from evil." He did not say we should pray to be delivered from certain persons. It is malice, resentment, sensitiveness, or error of some kind which brings sickness and trouble. Jesus did not let sin or the devil, as it was so often called, enter his thought as real or as something. His clear perception of the unreality of the disease or the sin destroyed it, and he commanded its destruction with perfect authority over it. His destruction of sin in thought was true pardon and true forgiveness; for the sin and the disease did not exist in reality, but only in belief. When he destroyed this the patient was forgiven of his sins and he was well, for his sins were blotted out,—including the sin which brought the disease.

The destruction of sin is true forgiveness and true pardon. If one says, "I forgive you," and yet continues to make a reality of the evil, he is not forgiving it. If one resents a wrong that another has done him, he is making the wrong real to himself, and he may sooner or later suffer more than the one who has committed the sin against him. "For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged: and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again." All can see the open sins, especially in the other person; but it is the secret faults, the hidden sins in ourselves that are not so easily seen, unless we are living very close to the heart of Love. These secret sins may poison our thinking before we know it. Then we may wonder why our patients are not healed, or why we ourselves are not freed from some disease or trouble. This evil of not forgiving as we would be forgiven is a subtle one. It may seem a small thing to condemn our neighbor, but it is a dangerous sin, one which all mankind, more or less, have fallen prey to, and unless we avoid it we shall go upon the breakers and suffer shipwreck.

When tempted to condemn harshly let us ask ourselves: Would I like anyone to have such a thought as that about me, or to say such a thing about me? Then let us remember that we may be indulging some sin, and mayhap many sins, which are as bad as that of the brother we condemn; and then let us hold the tongue and remember Paul's words in Romans: "Therefore thou art inexcusable, O man, whosoever thou art that judgest: for wherein thou judgest another, thou condemnest thyself; for thou that judgest doest the same things." Condemnation of others not only causes the error to seem a reality to us but binds the burden more firmly upon our brother and tends to keep evil beliefs alive throughout the world. The expression of a harsh thought may be condemnation, and may be the result of a wrong opinion, while our brother may be entirely innocent.

Jesus once said, "Whose soever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whose soever sins ye retain, they are retained." In other words, those whom we forgive by realizing that their sin is unreal, thereby helping to loose them from their troubles, have those sins remitted to them, that is, destroyed; and this is in proportion to our understanding of Truth and Love. If we do this we are ascending spiritually and helping to free the world. We cannot spare a moment of our precious time to talk error except for the purpose of destroying it. If the time that is used in discussing the faults of a friend or a neighbor were used in recognizing his good qualities, the world would be happier and healthier. Would it not be well to endeavor to the utmost to be guided by our Father and to forgive as we would be forgiven?

It is in proportion to our faithfulness along this line, that is, as we are instant in denying every evil suggestion and realizing the nothingness of evil in any and every form, that we are freeing ourselves as well as the whole world from sin, disease, and death. In that proportion can we truly pray, "Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors," and in that proportion our sins and sickness are forgiven, or destroyed, by God. We should often recall Mrs. Eddy's words in "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 107): "More love is the great need of mankind. A pure affection, concentric, forgetting self, forgiving wrongs and forestalling them, should swell the lyre of human love."

Protection Proved

SARAH G. GALBRAITH

THE so-called influenza epidemic brought varied experiences to many; and to those who are studying Christian Science came repeated opportunities for proving the power of Truth as interpreted by Mrs. Eddy in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," and her other writings.

The writer's thought is still filled with gratitude and the great joy that came to her through witnessing a wonderful healing, and through the absolute protection realized for herself and son during what would have been, lacking an understanding of Truth, a trying time. To begin with, it may be well to state that we live in a small neighborhood where there is neither church nor store. A school we have, but this was closed for a number of weeks in accordance with the general closing order. In the little community there are several who are more or less interested in studying Christian Science, and one other family together with the writer's have been meeting quite regularly for the reading of the Lesson-Sermon, others in the neighborhood sometimes coming in to join in the service.

Though seemingly enough isolated to have eliminated the possibility of contagion from the materia medica standpoint, the thought of it proved sufficient, and the epidemic finally developed in the neighborhood. There were a number of cases more or less severe, but the writer, exceedingly busy with a year's-end office work at the time, while feeling it needful to be on the alert mentally was not conscious of any fear. We had continued our Sunday lessons, and the other family previously mentioned was certainly not "looking for trouble" either; but quite unexpectedly it presented itself, each member of this family becoming affected. The two children responded to treatment readily, but with the parents it seemed more real, and after some days of battling on their own part it was deemed advisable to telephone for the help of an experienced practitioner, which was accordingly done. In a short time the mother was rapidly improving, but the father had, indeed, from the human standpoint, a hard fight with the last enemy. There were several days when mortal mind would have had us doubtful of the outcome; but, thank God, mortal mind wisdom is indeed "foolishness,"—and the father, too, fully recovered.

During the most of this time—about four weeks—the weather was quite severe, and the neighbors felt it unwise to visit the house lest the disease spread, though they were glad to render any possible assistance from the outside. The writer and her son, however, had no such fear. The son, a boy of thirteen, helped with the children and the woodpile, being in and out of the house freely with an entire absence of fear; and the writer, not at liberty to give as much of her time as she would have desired, watched this manifestation of the child's certainty of Love's protection with joyful gratitude impossible to describe. This, indeed, was a glimpse of the harvest to be garnered from the endeavor to give our children true education. Does it not foretell the dawn of a new day?

Needless to say, neither the boy nor the writer suffered in the least from this test, although both were thoroughly "exposed," mentally as well as physically, from the carnal mind point of view; but to all concerned the understanding of assured protection to those leaning upon divine Love became clearer, and the idea of the Christ-child blotted out the disease images from thought. This would be incomplete without some word of praise for our loyal practitioners, who are so ready to respond to the call for help from wherever it may come, and however it may come,—by word over the telephone, by message, or by letter,—and who are never discouraged in the face of any situation, knowing the ever presence of our Father-Mother God.

Pharaoh

ROSS S. PILLSBURY

THE writer remembers how when quite a small boy he used to wonder at the story of the deliverance of the children of Israel from the hands of the Egyptians, and especially why it was, after all the signs and wonders wrought by Moses, that Pharaoh repeatedly repented his promise and "hardened his heart." There came a time, however, when the sincere, prayerful study of Christian Science revealed the hitherto unseen lessons taught therein, together with their application to present everyday life.

It has been stated, and truthfully so, that if every copy of the Bible were to be destroyed, its substance would eventually be rewritten. That this would be the case is plainly apparent to the spiritually enlightened thought; for, spiritually discerned, the Bible but portrays the many and varied experiences of the human mind in its struggle upward out of the darkness of ignorance and bondage into spiritual understanding, freedom, and the glorious light of Truth. Time has not changed or softened the condition of those children of Israel who are still in bondage to the Egyptians—to material sense. The Pharaohs and taskmasters of to-day are no more and no less real than those of the days of Moses, and even as God, ever present good, heard the cry of the children of Israel and sent Moses and Aaron, so to-day has Christian Science come to reveal to mankind the way of deliverance from the cruel bondage of sin, sickness, and death, and to guide us into the promised land of perfect spiritual understanding.

It took many proofs of God's allness and power, and much self-imposed suffering on the part of Pharaoh, before he would let the children of Israel go up out of Egypt. Now we know that "Egypt" stands for materialism, with Pharaoh as the dominant power thereof; also, that the flesh-pots of Egypt, which the children of Israel longed for at times during their sojourn in the wilderness, were and still are neither more nor less than the unrestrained indulgence of the material senses, "the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life." As plague after plague came upon them as the result of their unbelief and unwillingness to seek after God, Spirit, in the way of His appointing, it caused them to turn in their extremity to Principle, God, as represented by Moses, for relief and healing; notwithstanding which "Pharaoh's heart was hardened, neither did he hearken unto them." In other words, after relief from the particular discordant condition had been obtained, Pharaoh, or the mesmeric belief of life and pleasure in and of matter, was allowed again to assume the ascendancy; and thrusting aside the good resolves and intentions, they dropped back to a life of ease in matter and the gratification of the material senses, until the self-imposed agony of suffering once more awakened them.

Our Leader writes on page 6 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," that "every supposed pleasure in sin will furnish more than its equivalent of pain, until belief in material life and sin is destroyed." It was not until divine Love had revealed to them the falsity of their most deep-seated belief of reality and life in matter, a belief cherished even as a first-born, that the children of Israel were willing to be guided by Moses and seek after the one true God.

So it is to-day. Pharaoh still seeks to keep us in bondage to the Egyptians. After one has found healing and relief in Christian Science from disease or suffering, does not mortal mind seek to suggest again the reality of life and pleasure in matter? We have but to read the book of Exodus with the seeing eye, however, to learn the result of listening and submitting to such suggestions; for many were destroyed in the wilderness—the wilderness of human beliefs. Each so-called problem, each seeming trial, temptation, or suggestion of mortal mind which might seem to confront the student of Christian Science, has its duplicate somewhere along the journey of the children of Israel from Egypt to the promised land of spiritual understanding, as recorded in the Scriptures.

How we do rejoice that in these latter days we have the full revelation of Christ, Truth, in Christian Science, the understanding of which gives man dominion and power now to enter into the promised land where "neither moth nor rust doth corrupt," and where nothing can enter "that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie." We can indeed sing the song of Moses and the children of Israel, "Pharaoh's chariots and his host hath he cast into the sea . . . The depths have covered them: they sank into the bottom as a stone." As Truth spake through Moses when they came to the waters of Marah, even so to-day does divine Love in infinite wisdom speak to all who have glimpsed the eternal light of Truth in Christian Science, "If thou wilt diligently hearken to the voice of the Lord thy God, and wilt do that which is right in his sight, and wilt give ear to his commandments, and keep all his statutes, I will put none of these diseases upon thee, which I have brought upon the Egyptians: for I am the Lord that healeth thee."

As we are grateful for and individually grasp the lessons taught us in the passage of the children of Israel from a material to a spiritual sense of existence, does not the horizon of our view extend until we are enabled to see the significance of the past few years, during which the plague of war has partially aroused a sleeping world, as it were, to an acknowledgment of its utter lack of ability to ward off a seeming impending doom, and which has resulted in a universal reaching out for a higher understanding of Principle, a certain attitude of receptivity to Truth? "And the Lord said unto Moses, Yet will I bring one plague more upon Pharaoh, and upon Egypt; afterwards he will let you go hence." Let us obey the words of the Master, "Arise, let us go hence." And Paul reminds us, "Behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation."

Daydreams

CHRISTINE WONDERLY

SOMETIMES one of the most subtle obstacles to steady growth and fuller unfoldment in Christian Science is the tendency of the human mind to indulge in daydreams. The desire which seeks satisfaction in daydreams always proceeds from a sense of lack, and is a false sense of desire,—a longing for something one does not seem to have; whereas the truth is that God has given to His child all good, everything needed for his happiness and health, and there is no power which can prevent his bringing these very good works of God into full expression.

A daydream may be defined as "a delusional experience, as of unsubstantial happiness or unfounded hope," and the word delusion we find defined as "false belief, or a persistent error of perception occasioned by false belief." It is therefore very easy to see that anything proceeding from such a basis, and perhaps fostered by self-will, self-love, or self-pity, is by no means the harmless pastime it might appear on the surface. Not only are minutely planned schemes or designs, or extravagant fancies daydreams, but any human planning or outlining which implies an absence of the very good works of God and the visible evidence thereof, is an offspring of this false sense.

On page 1 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" Mrs. Eddy has written: "Desire is prayer; and no loss can occur from trusting God with our desires, that they may be moulded and exalted before they take form in words and in deeds." The true sense, then, of desire really means bringing into expression that which we already have, and the molding and exalting by divine unfoldment will destroy everything which savors of materiality and will reveal in place thereof the abundance, goodness, and greatness which are of God and like God, and these properties of infinite Love, blossoming forth into outward manifestation, completely satisfy all that seems to need satisfying, and never fail to bless all in blessing one. Then the only reason one could have for indulging in daydreams would be ignorance of their nature, or the willful cherishing of some human desire which he is unwilling to measure by Principle.

In the Glossary to Science and Health we find desire given as one of the definitions of fear. A Christian Scientist, turning to Principle with every desire, soon begins to find confidence in good replacing any sense of fear and learns that the only thing he can lose is the erroneous belief that there is another power besides God which can have any place or influence in his affairs. If one resolutely refuses at all times to indulge desire as lack or fear, but views it rather as an opportunity to prove more of the goodness of God, he will grow less and less prone to wander off into the enticing by-paths of the deceiver through daydreams, and they will cease to allure. He can then say with the psalmist, "Incline not my heart to any evil thing, to practise wicked works with men that work iniquity: and let me not eat of their dainties," for the dainties of materiality with their flattery would, if undetected, tend to hold man in bondage to a false sense of existence and thereby shut out the spiritual sense, which is alone to be desired—the only real.

Selected Articles

["'None of these things move me'"—The Christian Science Monitor, Boston, U. S. A., April 19, 1919]

The man who has learned to trust scientifically has gone far toward placing himself beyond the effort of anger, of malice, or of fear, in short of evil of any kind, to injure him. Jesus of Nazareth knew this perfectly when he said to Peter, in all the agony of the garden of Gethsemane, "Thinkest thou that I cannot now pray to my Father, and he shall presently give me more than twelve legions of angels?" A few years later, Paul, speaking to the elders of the Ephesian Church, at Miletus, declared of the persecutions he saw around him, "None of these things move me," insisting that it was not a man's business to trouble about the future, but to keep himself every whit clean in the present, remembering only of his neighbors that Jesus had taught them how "it is more blessed to give than to receive."

What all this means Mrs. Eddy has made abundantly clear in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures." On page 79 she writes: "Mind-science teaches that mortals need 'not be weary in well doing.' It dissipates fatigue in doing good. Giving does not impoverish us in the service of our Maker, neither does withholding enrich us. We have strength in proportion to our apprehension of the truth, and our strength is not lessened by giving utterance to truth." At the same time the only way in which we can renew and maintain this strength is in the way Christ Jesus explained to Peter. It is by surrounding ourselves with God's angels, with an unfaltering reliance on divine Love, with a truly metaphysical understanding of Principle. Angels, however, be it said, are not super men and women poised on wings. Angels, in the definition of Mrs. Eddy, on page 581 of Science and Health, are "God's thoughts passing to man; spiritual intuitions, pure and perfect; the inspiration of goodness, purity, and immortality, counteracting all evil, sensuality, and mortality."

Now the whole of Christian Science consists, first, in gaining a scientific understanding of God, as the New Testament puts it, and then in demonstrating this understanding, again as the New Testament insists, through mighty works or signs, terms the Greek originals of which are translated in the English version as miracles. It is evident, therefore, that as an understanding of Principle comes to a man, as he banishes sensuality and materiality from his mind, he surrounds himself with angels, with true or scientific thoughts, through which the fears and temptations of the flesh cannot pass. This shows how true is Mrs. Eddy's saying on page 10 of "Miscellaneous Writings," that "even in belief you have but one (that, not in reality), and this one enemy is yourself —your erroneous belief that you have enemies; that evil is real; that aught but good exists in Science." When a man, in other words, fences himself about with right thinking, how is it possible for evil to befall him or come nigh his dwelling, which is in divine Mind? If he fails to do this, whose fault is it, and who except himself can he accuse as his enemy?

It is on this basis, surely, that all true metaphysical healing is done. The practitioner knows that the image and likeness of God is not the sick or sinning human being. The sick or sinning human being is his own enemy because, instead of surrounding himself with the angels of God, he has allowed pictures of sickness or sin to occupy his mind. These pictures constitute the suggestions of evil, and the practitioner consequently takes the side of the patient against the suggestions, and endeavors to teach him how to entertain angels instead of sensual and material ideals. This is made possible to the practitioner in proportion to his own entertainment of angels; in the proportion, that is to say, in which he rejects the suggestion of a self apart from God—a man in the image and likeness, not of God, but of flesh—and gains instead the vision of the true man or the Christ. "Jesus," Mrs. Eddy writes, beginning on page 476 of Science and Health, "beheld in Science the perfect man, who appeared to him where sinning mortal man appears to mortals. In this perfect man the Saviour saw God's own likeness, and this correct view of man healed the sick."

The lepers, for instance, whom Christ Jesus healed, were surely cleansed precisely in this way. When, coming down from the Mount after preaching his marvelous Sermon, he met the leper, and, at his request, spoke the word that healed him, he also put forth his hand and touched him. Jesus was able to do this without fear, and so without danger of contagion, not merely because he knew that matter was purely a manifestation of the mortal mind, but because he "beheld in Science the perfect man," because he had so banished fear, with its belief in materiality and mortality, from his mind, that he knew that nothing existed except the image and likeness of God. Brought face to face with this dread belief of leprosy, it moved him no more than the presence of the dead man in the tomb at Bethany, or the boast of the Roman, Pilate, that he had power to crucify him or to let him go. The legions of angels which surrounded him in the garden at Gethsemane were still around him in Pilate's house, on the hill of Calvary, and in the garden on the morning of the resurrection.

So it is with any and every man who sincerely attempts to hold to the vision of the Christ. He may stray grievously out of the footsteps of Christ Jesus, as Paul indicated when he wrote, "The evil which I would not, that I do," or again when, alluding to the strength of a man's belief in the senses, he asked, "Who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" But he knows that by persistence he can always recover his lost way, since he has no enemy but himself. Why, then, should anything move him, if he is steadily pursuing the straight path of his highest understanding of Principle? It is not his to judge, lest he be judged; but it is his to "judge righteous judgment," to endeavor always to separate Truth from error. This effort of separation can, however, only safely be undertaken as a man surrounds himself with angels, as he gains a metaphysical understanding of Principle. And the only guaranty he has of the possession of this understanding is the ability with which he destroys sickness, and the success with which he overcomes sin.

In an article entitled "Talks on Health" appearing in a recent issue, the writer shows an absolute ignorance of what Christian Science is. In one sentence he confuses it with "faith cures," in another with will power; and later he implies that Christian Scientists regard all disease as imagination. In their denominational textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, it is stated on page 460, "Sickness is neither imaginary nor unreal,—that is, to the frightened, false sense of the patient." It is this "false sense" that Christian Science corrects by teaching, as the Bible does, that "the old man with his deeds" must be put off and "the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him," must be put on. Christian Science reiterates the Scriptural declaration that man is made in God's own image and likeness and reflects all good, health included. It is the teaching and healing of Jesus made practical in this age, in obedience to the injunction, "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also." To the fact that Christian Science does heal all manner of diseases, whether termed functional or organic, thousands of men and women all over the world are bearing grateful testimony.

[C. W. Hale in The Elkhart (Ind.) Truth]

It is becoming more and more apparent to thinking people that a material viewpoint of the Bible brings to the reader uncertainty, confusion, and, frequently, contradictory statements. Spiritually interpreted, the Bible proves to be wholly consistent, and enables the student to apply its teachings and prove the law of God given therein in the way Christ Jesus did and commanded his followers to do.

The statement that "no Christian ever becomes a Christian Scientist," is pretty arbitrary, and would give the inference that students of Christian Science are not Christians. Webster defines a Christian as "one who believes, or professes . . . to believe, in Jesus Christ, and the truth as taught by Him; . . . especially, one whose inward and outward life is conformed to the doctrines of Christ." This indicates clearly enough what a Christian is, and Christian Science is teaching its adherents that to be Christians they must conform strictly and fully to the standard established by Christ Jesus. That standard, which is clear and cannot be misunderstood, is given in Mark: "These signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover;" and in John we read, "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto my Father." There is no mistaking this standard, and Christian Science accepts it without reservation, and is willing to be judged by its "fruits."

In answer to the assertion that "any true Christian Scientist will admit he does not believe in the actual deity of Jesus; he will tell you that he believes in the divinity of Jesus, but not in him as Deity, making him essentially and absolutely equal with God," let me say that Christian Science teaches that Christ Jesus himself made it perfectly plain that he was not God, and no one needs any clearer statement than he made when he rebuked the young ruler, and said, "Why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is, God." Then again he said, "I can of mine own self do nothing . . . I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent me," and, "There is another that beareth witness of me; and I know that the witness which he witnesseth of me is true."

Christian Science teaches that there is but one God and Father of all, as taught in the First Commandment, and does not accept the theory that Christ Jesus was God, but accepts his own statement that he is the Son of God, and, according to Hebrews, "the express image of his person." Mrs. Eddy says on page 589 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" that Jesus was "the highest human corporeal concept of the divine idea, rebuking and destroying error and bringing to light man's immortality;" and on page 583 Christ is defined as "the divine manifestation of God, which comes to the flesh to destroy incarnate error." In further explanation of this the following is given on page 333: "The word Christ is not properly a synonym for Jesus, though it is commonly so used. Jesus was a human name, which belonged to him in common with other Hebrew boys and men, for it is identical with the name Joshua, the renowned Hebrew leader.

Digitized by Google

On the other hand, Christ is not a name so much as the divine title of Jesus. Christ expresses God's spiritual, eternal nature. The name is synonymous with Messiah, and alludes to the spirituality which is taught, illustrated, and demonstrated in the life of which Christ Jesus was the embodiment." This is strictly in accord with the original meaning as is evidenced in the definition of the word Christ found in the Century dictionary: "Christ . . . originally used with the definite article strictly as a title, the Christ (that is, the Anointed), but from an early period used without the article as a part of the proper name Jesus Christ."

Christian Science does not deny the atonement of Christ Jesus, but goes farther in claiming that his work in proving man's at-one-ment with God was to show us the way, that we too might prove our real relationship with God and overcome all phases of evil. In answer to the question, "Do I believe in the atonement of Christ?" Mrs. Eddy says (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 96): "I do; and this atonement becomes more to me since it includes man's redemption from sickness as well as from sin. I reverence and adore Christ as never before. It brings to my sense, and to the sense of all who entertain this understanding of the Science of God, a whole salvation."

The statement made that one does not need any books explanatory of the Scriptures, or to quote exactly, "any special keys to unlock a book that is wide open," sounds strange in coming from a theologian who probably spent several years studying commentaries on the Bible in a theological school. Every one knows that in those commentaries on the Bible, based upon a material interpretation of its teachings, there are countless contradictions and inconsistencies, and many of the most vital parts are set aside as beyond the understanding of human beings and to be comprehended only in a future existence. In the textbook of Christian Science, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, which our good friend criticizes so severely and seems to understand so little, there are no contradictions, and its teachings and interpretations have been proved true in hundreds of thousands of cases by the test applied by Christ Jesus himself, in the healing of sickness, the cleansing of sin, and in an ever increasing measure overcoming the power of death.

In the statement that "a church is founded on two things, the preaching of the gospel and the observing of the Sacrament," and that Christian Science is not a church, the definite, absolute, and irrevocable command of Jesus is wholly ignored. He not only said, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature," but also commanded his followers to cast out devils and heal the sick. The Christian Science church is founded on the rock, Truth. It is continually endeavoring to fulfill all of Christ Jesus' commands, and to demonstrate the whole truth that he taught; and its work is confirmed with "signs following."

It is surprising that anyone claiming to be a Christian and a Bible student should assert: "If the truthfulness of any system of religion is demonstrated by physical healing, any system that does healing is therefore demonstrated to be divine and a religion. Then we ought to have a Christian Pow Wow Church, a Christian Surgery Church, etc." This statement would bring into question the inspired mission of Christ Jesus, and would assert that he did not heal the sick by the power of God, or that he healed by some material method not a part of his mission to mankind, or that he did not heal at all. If this were true, then all the work and sacrifice of Christ Jesus would have been a vain imposition and his whole mission a mockery. Christian Science accepts the teachings of Christ Jesus as true, and joyfully obeys his commands by proclaiming the truth and demonstrating its power by healing sickness, sin, and death.

The claim that "to fail in one case would be to unseat the claim of scientific demonstration," is met by the incident where the disciples of Jesus failed to heal the lunatic boy. This did not "unseat" the demonstration of the power of Truth taught by Christ Jesus, but was simply due to the fact that the students, disciples, of his teachings had not yet reached a full understanding of what he taught. It was a self-evident and fully proved fact then, as it is now, that the truth he taught healed all manner of diseases without resort to material methods, and it was and is within the power of man to demonstrate it.

It is being proved daily and hourly that every phase of discord is being overcome by the operation of the truth as taught by Christ Jesus and demonstrated by Christian Science to-day, and that it is not an incident to the teachings, but the definite and provable result of the understanding of its teachings.

Extracts from Letters

"It may be of interest to you to know a few details of the activities of Cour-Cheverny, headquarters of the Signal Corps Replacement Depot in France, now that our meetings here are at an end, due to return of troops to the United States. We were fortunate in having a Christian Science chaplain attached to our organization. . . .

"Meetings have been held regularly at his office on Sundays and Wednesday evenings, services being held in accordance with the Manual of The Mother Church, since November. A committee of three, consisting of two corporals and one private were elected as an executive board, who arranged the details of the meetings and designated the Readers. Readers were changed each week, the First Reader officiating at the Wednesday evening service. The first meetings were held without music, in the chaplain's room, but later the committee obtained the use of a comfortable room with a piano, and later discovered a soloist among the members, thus having 'regular' services. Many benefits, too numerous for detail (including many healings), have been experienced by the members, who gave testimony thereof."

"It has been my good fortune to enjoy many blessings through Christian Science. During my experiences in the Army of our country, Christian Science has meant more to me than ever before. And it is in appreciation of the work done through Christian Science for soldiers that I write this. On arriving in France I was suffering from a severe attack of influenza, then epidemic, and I am very grateful for my healing through Christian Science without medical treatment. Other inharmonious conditions were overcome, such as bad quarters and seemingly being treated unjustly. I feel that my experience in France has been much pleasanter in every way because of making use of my knowledge of Christian Science. Through searching and striving with right motives, better quarters where I could read and study were obtained, many good comrades were met, and all feeling of injustice was removed. It was my good fortune while in France to be stationed in the same district with one of the Christian Science chaplains, where we had services Sundays and Wednesdays regularly. I am indeed grateful for Christian Science and its activities and that we had in this war such men as our chaplains."

Gossip and Conversation

When Paul said, "Our conversation is in heaven," and when Peter counseled, "As he which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation," the reference in each case was to behavior and conduct or manner of living. In familiar usage, however, conversing is interchanging thoughts and views, and when used of speech directly infers talking "in an intelligent or sustained manner." When the heavenly minded converse together they are unfolding the mystery of godliness and declaring the righteousness of the kingdom of heaven. Conversation, then, can be a medium for the revelation of man to man by those who understand what man's creator truly is.

Gossip, on the other hand, is usually based on a determination to hold man in the bonds of matter and to deny spirituality. Long ago a gossip was the sponsor at a baptism, and as fellow sponsors met at christening feasts or similar merrymakings there was a special intimacy in the chat; many idle tales were told, and often groundless rumors were started, so that gossip now implies "idle personal talk." Sometimes it may be amusing and harmless, but quite often even this phase of it is like a syrup in which the drop of poison is administered; for thoughtless gossip will often poison other minds with envy and resentment and so make them judge unrighteous judgment. A carnivorous animal makes no difference between individuals on whom it preys due to any appreciation of their intellectual attainment or usefulness to the world; it is thinking only of its own appetite. The gossip can be likewise as merciless, and every great man, burdened with vast duties for the welfare of his country and nation, has to guard against attacks of the poisoned serpent's tooth or the claws and jaws of liars.

Mrs. Eddy, speaking about the necessity of improving time, says in "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 230): "Three ways of wasting time, one of which is contemptible, are gossiping mischief, making lingering calls, and mere motion when at work, thinking of nothing or planning for some amusement,—travel of limb more than mind. Rushing around smartly is no proof of accomplishing much. All successful individuals have become such by hard work; by improving moments before they pass into hours, and hours that other people may occupy in the pursuit of pleasure. They spend no time in sheer idleness, in talking when they have nothing to say, in building air-castles or floating off on the wings of sense: all of which drop human life into the ditch of nonsense, and worse than waste its years."

Thinking of such a man as Lincoln, unrecognized by most at the time of his greatest service, unhonored by many in his own day, we recognize how clearly he knew what his country was, and that he maintained his vision amid the smoke of calumny. What he saw is now the ideal with which there is common agreement. The defamatory noise of gossipers, the malevolence of whisperers, the treachery of the secret plotters who believed they could destroy the body, accomplished nothing, because the vision and reality of the man has marched on indestructible, and other nations look now upon the land where his life was sacrificed, in the light of his wonderful vision.

Great men and women are inwardly humble, thinking as they do about the greatness of God; and their own work and effort, though wonderful in the view of men, may seem to them insignificant. They do not dwell on things accomplished in the past, nor boast of past glories. In fact, Paul puts the matter exactly when he says, "Forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus;" and we have the beautiful expression of this modest behavior in Mrs. Eddy's life. This statement we find, for example, in the Preface to "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. ix), "To-day, though rejoicing in some progress, she still finds herself a willing disciple at the heavenly gate, waiting for the Mind of Christ."

Humility, then, is simplicity, directness, kindness; and such thought should characterize conversation. An analysis of unkind gossip may help toward a cure of the habit. It is the wise householder who takes out of his treasure things new and old. The implication here is of labor, study, thought, investigation, and the laying up of treasure. There are people whose conversation is brilliant with choice thoughts from the wisdom of the ages, quotations, references, illustrations, so that when they speak they are teachers of wisdom and kindly views. This requires work, just as any treasure in life should be earned. When the idle desire honor without willingness to earn it, or seek prominence without doing service, a simple way to achieve notice appears to be to discredit others, and mortal mind is rich in evil motives through whose smoke and darkness it can look upon the acts of others. In an old-fashioned house this motto was framed and hung by the door for both incomers and outgoers to see and consider: "Bring here no tattle in nor take none out; so may the love of God dwell in this house."

When we read the statement (Science and Health, p. 15), "The Father in secret is unseen to the physical senses, but He knows all things and rewards according to motives, not according to speech," we learn how safe with God is the good man. His reward is absolutely sure, and yet he must rise above some forms of tribulation. Jesus said to his disciples when he spoke his words of comfort: "These things I have spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation: but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." Thinking of all the antagonism which he had to meet, Paul for a moment looked upon it as real, quoting the old saying, "For thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter," but he very quickly rose above this discouragement, correcting himself with the words, "Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us."

Purity

No divine quality is more to be desired than purity. The very word brings visions of loveliness and of things desirable; but because it presents, even to the human thought, so high a standard, mankind has generally relegated it to the realm of the impossible. And yet Jesus classed it as among the things attainable when he said, "Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God." When he so spake, he presented to us an assurance, a demand and a fulfillment. All the world is seeking for blessedness, and most of the world is wondering why it does not obtain it. It does not stop to consider that there are conditions to be fulfilled before blessing can be apprehended. It is always true that since whatever is good comes from God, nothing that is really desirable can ever be realized until the demands of God are complied with. In "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 241) Mrs. Eddy writes: "One's aim, a point beyond faith, should be to find the footsteps of Truth, the way to health and holiness. We should strive to reach the Horeb height where God is revealed; and the corner-stone of all spiritual building is purity. The baptism of Spirit, washing the body of all the impurities of the flesh, signifies that the pure in heart see God and are approaching spiritual Life and its demonstration."

Christian Science approaches the problem of purification of thought, word, and deed from the unalterable standpoint of the allness of the one infinite God, good, and the consequent unreality, nothingness of all supposititious claims to an opposite. At the same time it shows conclusively that this truth in its operation in the human consciousness inevitably uncovers sin before it can prove sin's unreality. While this uncovering of sin as falsity, illusion, offers instant deliverance to the one weary of sin and longing to be delivered from its outrageous bondage, it comes to the satisfied sinner to attack his belief that sin has any pleasure whatsoever. In "Retrospection and Introspection" (p. 63) we find, "We attack the sinner's belief in the pleasure of sin, alias the reality of sin, which makes him a sinner, in order to destroy this belief and save him from sin." Then through Christian Science the way is always marked out for deliverance from sin; for to deny its satisfaction is to sap its only claim to a foundation even in a mortal so-called mind. No one will be found long indulging that in which he finds no pleasure.

Now this shows very plainly that all sin is both primarily and secondarily mental. If anyone should be guilty of cherishing a sinful thought, believing there is pleasure and satisfaction in so doing, even though he may not express it physically, he need not imagine he can escape the punishment which every sin metes out to itself. Hidden sin—even though it be only in the secret recesses of one's own thought—is, if possible, more dangerous than its more open expression. One who has named the name of Christian Science and goes forth cherishing evil in his heart, if he does not quickly awake and repent of the wrong, will without doubt reap the result of the heinousness of such secret sin.

After having once accepted the truth that all is God, divine Mind and its manifestation, then to dwell consciously and intentionally with mental sin is certainly to deny the power and presence of the holy God in a terrible way. To misuse mentality after one has professed allegiance to God, divine Mind, as revealed in Christian Science is a crime that should be so quickly detected and rejected that it should never have a chance even to whisper its lies. Who that has touched the understanding of the power of pure, holy thoughts with their blissful peace and harmony, would sacrifice such blessedness and turn to the revolting, detestable practice of sinful thinking? In "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 115) our Leader says, "Know this: that you cannot overcome the baneful effects of sin on yourself, if you in any way indulge in sin; for, sooner or later, you will fall the victim of your own as well as of others' sins."

It is inconceivable that one who has glimpsed even in a limited degree the wonder of man's being the image and likeness of divine Mind, could turn from such possibility and make companionship with impure, unholy thinking. It is good, and the love of good, which will finally deliver men from all evil. Good alone can satisfy, good alone is desirable. As one obeys the Bible injunction to "taste and see that the Lord is good," the temptation to seek for satisfaction in a deceiving, lying counterfeit will diminish, until it finally will disappear. All mortals must eventually accept in every way the purifying ministrations of Christian Science. We cannot be too thankful that this work is already begun and will go on until there shall be sin no longer. Happy is he who, with a consecrated love for good, presses constantly forward, steadfast in his determination to worship and serve alone the God who is all-good. He "that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure."

Among the Churches

Current Notes

Manistee, Mich.—To enable its members to have a meeting place of their own, the Christian Science Society recently purchased the property at 111 Maple Street. The home has been remodeled, providing a small auditorium for church services in conjunction with a pleasant reading room.

Several years ago, through a case of healing, a few people in Parkdale became interested in Christian Science and began reading the Christian Science Lesson-Sermons at one of the homes there. Later, to accommodate friends in the city, regular Sunday services were held at a private home on Washington Street. In 1909, at the suggestion of a visiting Scientist that strangers would feel more free to come if services were held in a public place, rooms were rented and furnished at 67 Maple Street. The same year those who were attending regularly adopted a constitution and by-laws. In the year 1911, through the courtesy of the board of directors of the Unitarian Church, the Christian Science Society was given the privilege of holding services in their beautiful church edifice on Fifth Street. Although deeply appreciating these comfortable quarters which it enjoyed for several years, the society looked forward to the time when it would have a church home of its own, more centrally located, where a reading room could be maintained. This aspiration has been attained.—The News-Advocate.

New York, N. Y.—Old St. Bartholomew's, one of the famous churches of the city, at the southwest corner of Madison Avenue and Forty-fourth Street, which was abandoned by the congregation about a year ago for their new edifice in Park Avenue, has been sold to Fifth Church of Christ, Scientist. This congregation acquires the property for the purpose of building a new church on the site.—New York Post.

Lorain, Ohio.—First Church of Christ, Scientist, is planning to build a church in the near future. The organization has purchased a lot on Fifth Street between Hamilton and Washington Avenues. It has a frontage of 61 feet. The lot cost two thousand dollars.—Lorain Times-Herald.

Admission to Membership in The Mother Church

The next admission of candidates will take place on November 7, 1919, as provided in Article XIII, Section 2, of the By-laws of The Mother Church. Application blanks may be obtained by addressing the Clerk of The Mother Church, and should be returned to him on or before Friday, October 24, 1919. Consideration of any applications received after that date will be deferred until the June 4, 1920, admission.

An application sent to the Clerk does not constitute the applicant a member. Notice of election will be sent to those who are admitted to membership.

Those who have made application for membership prior to May 30, 1919, and have not received notice of election, may communicate with the Clerk if they so desire, and are especially requested to do so before sending in a second application.

Charles E. Jarvis, Clerk,
236 Huntington Avenue, Back Bay, Boston, Mass.

The Lectures

Calgary, Alberta, Canada (First Church).—Paul Stark Seeley, lecturer; introduced by A. H. Stowell, who said in part:—

Mankind is always desirous of knowing more about God and His relation to man; but so very much has been taught on this subject which could not be satisfactorily proved, that it is hardly to be wondered at that in the minds of many there is at least some skepticism. How then are we to know the right teaching from the wrong? Jesus the Christ answered this question for all men for all time. He said, "By their fruits ye shall know them." By the fruits of his teaching, the healing of all manner of sickness and sin, he proved the whole of his teaching to be true. Christian Scientists are therefore amply justified in the adoption of this same rule to prove true this same teaching now; and this is exactly the standard by which Christian Science demands to be measured. When we see the proofs, the fruits, of Christian Science teaching,—the healing of sickness, the restoration of mankind from obedience to all kinds of false laws; when we note that thousands upon thousands have beyond the least shadow of doubt been freed from fears, from sin, from sickness, from error of many sorts, through this ministry, can we not safely conclude that the teaching which is based on this healing, regenerating law is true and that it has proved its way back into the thoughts of men?

Oshkosh, Wis. (First Church).—Dr. Walton Hubbard, lecturer; introduced by Miss Mary Ellen Pollock, who said in part:—

In all ages there have been messengers who have prepared the way for a better understanding of the Christ. As Christian Scientists we believe that Mrs. Eddy was one of these messengers with a wonderful message,—a message with healing in its wings.

Hoboken, N. J. (First Church).—Dr. John M. Tutt, lecturer; introduced by O. Edward Smith, who said in part:—

In our everyday life many problems confront us that are not always easy to solve but which must be worked out, —problems in our relations with our fellow man in business and social life, problems in religious and civic life, as well as problems in our home life. The doctrine of Christian Science holds out to humanity the solution of every problem through gaining a more scientific understanding of God and of man's relation to Him. How to know God aright has puzzled mankind for ages. To a great many He seems far off and unknowable; and yet our Master said, "This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." Christian Scientists are therefore profoundly grateful to Mrs. Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, for the teaching that has shown them how to gain an understanding that enables them to know God and His Christ, and in a measure to realize that peace "which passeth all understanding."

Chicago, Ill. (Ninth Church).—John Sidney Braithwaite, lecturer; introduced by Edward G. Carter, who said in part:—

The highest idea of joy and hope in man is embraced in the single word heaven, and it is toward some conception of heaven that man, in his earnest desires, is generally assumed to be bending his efforts. It would seem important, then, to ascertain, if possible, what is this wonderful goal that is the hope and inspiration of mankind. Deeply rooted in the human thought is the tendency to believe that heaven is a place and, because of the evidences about us of all that is unlike what heaven should be, the conviction follows that it is very far away, so remote indeed that we cannot hope to experience any enjoyment of it in the present. Whatever may be admitted of the remoteness of heaven from our present states and stages of thought and development, it has been shown with certainty that this remoteness is not one of distance or space, and that its remoteness in time is not to be overcome by mere waiting; in other words, that we must look for heaven in something besides locality.

Naturally the Bible is filled with references to heaven, the word itself occurring about five hundred times, so that there would appear to be much opportunity for a study of the meaning of the promise contained in the Scriptures. It follows also that in the writings of Mrs. Eddy on Christian Science much thought has been given to heaven and its interpretation; and, indeed, it is here that we learn that heaven and God are inseparable; that heaven is "a divine state of Mind" (Science and Health, p. 291), and as such to be attained only by the mental effort to be like Him or, more simply, to think only good.

Rockville, Ind. (Society).—Virgil O. Strickler, lecturer; introduced by Joe Blankenship Disher, who said in part:—

In the latter part of his ministry Jesus said to his disciples, "If I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you." Since the time he uttered those words, expectant humanity has been eagerly awaiting the coming of this Comforter or Holy Ghost. Some of those watching have made the mistake the Jews made, who thought the Messiah would come as a king unto his kingdom, by expecting this divine manifestation to be ushered in with pomp and great display. Thus it was that they were not able to see in the teachings of a humble New England woman the same simple doctrine which Jesus had taught among the hills of Judea and on the shores of the Galilean Sea; nor in her healing works, the fulfilling of Jesus' promise, "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto my Father."

Aberdeen, S. Dak. (First Church).—Miss Mary G. Ewing, lecturer; introduced by H. S. Holby, who said in part:—

There never has been a time when the world has been so anxious for the truth as to-day; neither has there ever been a time when we have needed a truth that we could demonstrate more than we need it now. Christian Science is not only the truth but a demonstrable truth. The world is hungering, even though unconsciously in many cases, not for matter, but for a true understanding of God and man, and Christian Science is the "bread of life" to all mankind. Everywhere mankind is seeking the truth, and Christian Science is helping them find it. Truth comes to us to-day as it came to the shepherds of old, bringing a message of comfort and hope, of joy and peace, to all who are willing to receive it.—The Aberdeen American.

TROY, OHIO (Society).—William D. Kilpatrick, lecturer; introduced by William B. Wright, who said in part:—

Jesus of Nazareth, the master Christian, showed the way for all mankind throughout all the ages, and Christian Scientists are striving to emulate his example by obeying all of his commands, which include not only the preaching of the gospel but also the healing of the sick as well as the sinning. That they have been able to accomplish wonderful things, as attested by their works, is now quite generally known.

ARKANSAS CITY, KAN. (First Church).—John W. Doorly, lecturer; introduced by Gustav E. Newfield, who said in part:—

When understood, Christian Science offers a solution for all problems of human existence. It is the practice of the gospel of Christ Jesus, who plainly said, "If ye continue in my word, . . . ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." As a result of this knowing, he healed all manner of disease and every form of sin. Christian Science imparts to its followers this healing message.

Testimonies of Healing

I wish to testify to the healing efficacy of Christian Science. In the spring of 1914 I was told by one of the best medical men in London that it would be many years before I could ever lead a normal life, that my spirit and vitality would wear me out. At that time I had been in bed more or less for eight months and tired for eight years. I got my healing in Christian Science, and when the war came on in August I started a life of activity which has gone on without ceasing, for five years. We have had a military hospital on our place and twenty-four hundred wounded have passed through it. The chief surgeon told me before sailing for Canada that in all of his experience he had never seen a woman able to do more.

The last baby was born with only the help of a loving Christian Science practitioner. A doctor was in the house but he was not needed and only came in after the child arrived. I should like for the sake of others to say that this birth was entirely without pain. I have six children and the others were born with the usual suffering.

The joy of knowing that God is good, and the spiritual knowledge, are of course far greater than any physical healings. Above all is that wonderful sense of knowing that through our understanding of Christian Science we can help the whole world. I am indeed grateful to our Leader, Mrs. Eddy.—(Mrs.) Nancy Langhorne Astor, Taplow, Bucks, England.

Christian Science has sustained me through many varying experiences, and at the same time it is giving me a wholesome and sane outlook on life. Within the past few months it has again delivered and preserved me under circumstances that were, to say the least, remarkable.

One morning, in the center of the city, I was struck upon the forehead and knocked down by a falling arc light, which cut its way to the bone in several places. Upon being picked up, my first conscious thought was a rebuke to the moans escaping, knowing that there was in reality no pain and nothing to moan about. Then, finding myself supported by a man and a woman, I was upheld by the protecting thought that the man and woman of God's creating are ever present and ever helpful; and I felt so glad to find that the truth about God and man, which Mrs. Eddy labored so faithfully and well to demonstrate and teach, was striving for the right of way in my thought.

When we reached the waiting place where some of my coworkers were assembled, the lady with me called my daughter over the telephone and asked her to get the help of a Christian Science practitioner whom I named. A taxi was then secured and I was taken to see the practitioner for a few minutes, and afterwards to a hospital to have the wounds dressed. All through the surgical work Mrs. Eddy's interpretation of the close of the twenty-third psalm (Science and Health, p. 578), "Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life; and I will dwell in the house [the consciousness] of [Love] for ever," ran like a golden thread through my thought. When I learned later that the practitioner was with my daughters in the waiting room of the sanatorium while I was in the operating room, I understood even better that pæan of praise for the steadying force of everlasting Love.

It seemed best to remain at the hospital for a few days, and the words of a consecrated young Christian Scientist to me there, "God is right here, God is in this place," were proved true. Owing to my condition it was thought advisable to have X-ray photographs made of the skull and jaw bone. The practitioner was told of this, and her encouraging clarity of thought was indeed a tower of strength. While these plates were being made, the act of bodily submission was wholly lost sight of in the thought that came so surely, that God's ideas could not have the mark of the beast either in their foreheads or in their hands. The doctor stated that the X-rays revealed no injuries whatever, other than were known before. The dentist who later examined the teeth, said it was quite remarkable that their structure was literally unharmed. The eyeball soon recovered its normal appearance, and the scars are now disappearing more and more rapidly. The doctor's statement that "the wounds healed by first intention," expresses the most perfect healing known to the medical profession. Medicine was brought to me a few times, but when I explained that I had taken none for fourteen years, it was not insisted upon that I take it.

We can never be grateful enough to Mrs. Eddy for this understanding of divine Truth which is drawing all mankind together in the bonds of faith and of the knowledge of the sons of God.—(Mrs.) Martha L. H. Candler, Atlanta, Ga.

For the many benefits received through Christian Science during my service with the Australian forces I am indeed thankful. Many times when in places of danger I was strengthened and comforted by a verse from the Bible, or by a quotation from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. Daily I repeated the ninety-first psalm, and also the "scientific statement of being," as found on page 468 of our textbook, with its correlative Scripture from I John. It was very beautiful how I was enabled to study the Lesson-Sermon almost daily, either in or out of the trenches. Rheumatism, colds, and other minor troubles were quickly overcome by holding to the truth. On one occasion while under shell fire the verse, "There shall not an hair of your head perish," restored confidence. Christian Science helped me to have absolute assurance that I should come back as I left. I consider that by holding to Love as all and destroying any sense of hate as it appeared, also by striving to realize spiritual man's inviolability, I was preserved many times.

The way in which the Christian Science literature turned up was certainly wonderful. I always received mine no matter where we were. The Christian Science Monitor was very useful in giving authentic information, and the Home Forum page was appreciated. The Christian Science Sentinel was wonderfully illuminating on many problems. We indeed owe a great debt to Mrs. Eddy for this healing truth. I desire to express my appreciation of the way in which the Publishing Society performed its work during the stress of war. The small edition of Science and Health and of the Quarterly met a decided need, and the selection of hymns in the small hymnal is very choice. I thank God for Christian Science and hope with joy to point the way to others when practical.

A. E. Cunningham, Kalgoorlie, West Australia.

It is with a heart filled with gratitude that I give my testimony to the wonderful power of Truth. Seven years and a half ago I became interested in Christian Science through a friend, who was untiring in helping me at every opportunity. I was at that time employed in a large factory, and advanced rapidly in my work, realizing that man is the reflection of divine intelligence, also that God gave me my work to do and strength and understanding to do it with. In about a year I made a change with higher and better opportunities following. About five years and a half later I became a Christian Science practical nurse, and this has promoted my growth more than any other work.

Through the realization of God's tender care and love for His children I have been gradually uplifted, and have been healed, to a great extent, of the sense of discouragement. Before coming into Science I had very little to live for; existence seemed a severe struggle in my young girlhood. Christian Science has given me more happiness than I ever thought was possible; and I have found that being grateful for what we have and striving to make others happy, increases our own happiness. I have been healed of colds, sore throat, aching and sore feet, ptomaine poisoning, and a very severe attack of influenza. Christian Science proves that the word of Truth is quick and powerful; for in seven years and a half I was only absent from work a day and a half until the influenza attack, and that was overcome in a week.

I am indeed grateful for all our Christian Science literature. I have never gone to it for help without finding some message of love that has been a comfort and a benefit to me. I am sincerely grateful to our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, who was pure enough to present this great healing truth to the world in so simple a form that all may understand it. For all my blessings I am sincerely grateful.

(Miss) AMELIA BEATRICE GREEN, New Rochelle, N. Y.

I wish to give my testimony as a measure of gratitude for the help received from Christian Science. I had tried all kinds of material remedies for stomach disorder, but without any relief, and had even gone through an operation for what the doctor said was chronic appendicitis and the cause of all the trouble; but I was much worse and in a very weakened condition when friends asked me to try Christian Science, which I finally consented to do. In two treatments the pain was gone and I have been gaining ever since. That was over a year ago and I have not missed a day from my work on account of illness in all this time, whereas before I was absent frequently. Glasses which I had worn for sixteen years have been laid off, as I have no more need of them. The desire for liquor and the use of profanity have also been overcome. I hope this testimony will be a help to others.—FRANK LEE, Torry Island, Fla. (Corrected address.)

Many times before the first rays of truth began to dawn on my darkened thought, I have read the testimonies in the Sentinel, hoping that I might see in the solution of another's problem the answer to my own; and perhaps the expression of my gratitude may help some one who, like myself, is seeking mental rest, rather than physical healing. Many times I have read Science and Health with but little comprehension, and my world seemed indeed dark, but I clung to the thought that God is Love and that in His universe all is harmony. As even a little light reveals the objects in a darkened room, so the dawning of this truth gradually revealed the error in my thought, and for this revelation I am indeed thankful, since the discovery of error must precede its destruction.

As erroneous concepts have been destroyed by a knowledge of Truth, physical harmony has been manifested in many unthought-of ways. I have greater endurance and strength, and my eyesight has greatly improved. Through an understanding of my household duties as loving service, rather than servitude, I have experienced relief from callosities on the soles of my feet, the trouble having almost entirely disappeared. The mental rest I so desired has been found, though spiritual uplift seems the more adequate expression now; and through the understanding of the ever presence of God, divine Love, our home has become more harmonious.

I am grateful to the pure woman, Mrs. Eddy, who pointed out to this age the fact that what Jesus taught is just as available now as nineteen centuries ago. I am grateful for our helpful literature and Lesson-Sermons, and for the wonderful opportunity of broadening our education and understanding world affairs in their true significance, as presented through The Christian Science Monitor.

(Mrs.) LELA DODSON KERMODE, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is with a sense of deep gratitude for Christian Science that I write this testimony. I am grateful for having had the privilege of serving in the United States Army during the past struggle and for the privilege of serving in the trenches. On the second night after going into the trenches we had a gas attack. I was a gas guard that night, and although I had my mask off a great deal of the time in order to determine when the gas was gone, I did not feel any ill effects. I was carried safely through battles, raids, and patrols by realizing that God is Love and that He is All-in-all. On many occasions of seemingly great danger the ninety-first psalm would come to me and by the time I had repeated it the danger would be over. Through Christian Science my wife and I were able to overcome the sense of separation while I was away from home.

What I am most grateful for is that I have learned to go straight to God with all my seeming troubles. Before entering the service I would run to a practitioner for help when any little discord came up. While in the trenches I could not do this, but I soon learned that when I earnestly declared and realized the truth error was overcome. I am most thankful to God and grateful to Mrs. Eddy for Christian Science.

I have gained so much from the testimonies in the Sentinel that I wish to express my thankfulness to God, also my gratitude to Mrs. Eddy for her gift to all who wish to learn from her writings. I have been healed of an abscess on the knee, bowel disorder, throat trouble, and many other ills through the work of a practitioner, and no material remedy has been used in the six years that I have been interested in Christian Science. The sense of divine protection gained through the study of this healing truth is worth much to me. I am very grateful that I have been able to help others.

In May, 1916, I was in the employ of a western city as a fireman, and one day when we were responding to an alarm of fire, a collision occurred. We were going at a very rapid rate and I was thrown violently to the pavement, striking on my head and left side. I was rendered unconscious, and was taken to a hospital, where I was examined by four surgeons. They considered my condition desperate, there being many and complicated fractures, as well as paralysis of the side. After the first day the doctors held out no hope of my recovery, and my mother, a Christian Scientist, then placed my case entirely in the hands of a practitioner. A Christian Science nurse was installed and all material remedies were discontinued. At the end of a week I was removed to my home, where I continued under treatment for a number of weeks. The surgical work on my jaw and teeth proved delicate and difficult, but through the loving assistance of friends and my dear mother's abiding faith in the saving and healing power of Truth as practiced in Christian Science, I was restored to health and strength. In the accident two of my teeth were broken off. Later the dental surgeon pivoted two teeth upon the stumps, doing the necessary work on them without causing me the slightest pain, a fact that seemed to astonish him greatly.

Before this accident I had been addicted to the excessive use of tobacco. Upon recovering consciousness I found that the desire for this indulgence had vanished, and I have never used the weed since. While before my injury I had not been a student of Christian Science, this evidence of God's protecting power was so convincing to me that I have earnestly tried to prove my gratitude by daily study of the Bible and the writings of Mrs. Eddy.

George Wright, Long Beach, Calif.

I am familiar with all the foregoing facts and can vouch for their correctness. Nearly four years ago I was healed of heart trouble, from which I had suffered for nearly forty years. I became a student of Christian Science, and when my son met with this accident my faith in God was so strong that when the doctors told me they could do nothing more for him and that he could not recover, I strongly denied the correctness of their judgment and turned wholly to Christian Science for his healing. Our joy over his recovery and the gratitude that we feel to God and to Mrs. Eddy for these evidences of the infinite power of divine Love are beyond measure.—(Mrs.) Mary Wright Baker.

For seven or eight years after I became a student of Christian Science, my demonstrations were for the most part made so quickly and so beautifully that it was easy for me to say and to believe that I was a Christian Scientist. Then came a time when I was compelled to obey the command, "Be still, and know that I am God." During this testing season I seemed to lose everything that I had financially, every home tie was shattered, and I found myself among strangers, without money, home, or position.

One hard experience after another came to me and many times I was almost heartsick and discouraged. Had it not been for two or three friends who were loyal Christian Scientists, and who sustained me throughout in every way they could, I think I should have yielded to discouragement. Finally, I found myself face to face with the most appalling condition that had ever yet come into my experience. As I looked before me, and to the right of me, and to the left of me, I could see not one single step. The only way that seemed open was to turn and go back, and this way seemed to offer again all that I thought was lost. My little daughter was out of school and had been for some time, and for the first time in her life she was being denied not only the little luxuries that make child life so sweet, but also the necessities of life. The mother love went out for the welfare of my child and held me at the point of indecision for I do not know how long—perhaps only a moment, but if so, eternity must have unfolded to me in that moment of time, for although I could see not one step in the way which I chose, I chose again for Christian Science, and reaching out my hand in the darkness about me I cried from the depth of my heart, "O God, lead me as a little child." I spent most of that night praying that God would lead me, and He did, for the seemingly impenetrable wall before me became a wall of defense to the rearward. Thus I was enabled to prove true the words of our dear Leader, Mrs. Eddy (Science and Health, p. 444), "Step by step will those who trust Him find that 'God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble.'"

I write this testimony with the faith that it will help some one to see the light shining through the clouds of mortal sense. These trials when overcome help us to be stronger and more loving and humble, and all must drink of this cup if we would follow in the steps of the Master and have that Mind in us "which was also in Christ Jesus."

(Mrs.) Jennie L. Barto, San Antonio, Texas.

At a very early period in my life I joined a church; but finding little comfort in its doctrines and many flaws in its teachings, I finally became agnostic. Right and wrong seemed to be mere matters of opinion, and I became hopelessly mixed in trying to reason out a philosophy whereby to live. During the same period I was rapidly learning that material means of healing were of no avail in curing me of the numerous ills that kept me a semi-invalid. After one last series of treatments from an eminent nerve specialist, followed by a change of climate, with no beneficial result, I went to a Christian Science practitioner for help. I shall never forget the joy that came to me that day as I grasped somewhat the idea of the power of good and the nothingness of evil. The first line in the Preface to "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, kept fairly singing through my thoughts: "To those leaning on the sustaining infinite, to-day is big with blessings." And so it proved; for throughout more than twenty years this great truth has never failed me. At one time, when I seemed to be at death's door, it restored me to perfect health inside of five hours.

I have seen some marvelous healings effected by Christian Science in my own and other families; but I believe the greatest miracle to my sense is the never ending operation of divine Love when put into practice in our commonplace, everyday affairs. It positively has no confines, but reaches to the remotest borders, blessing all who come under its beneficent touch.

I am more grateful for some understanding of Christian Science than words can tell. From childhood I was an enthusiastic worker in an orthodox church, and earnestly sought the kingdom of heaven, but my work in the church did not satisfy me. Trials and sorrows came, and I had nothing to meet them with but a belief that I must bear them bravely.

My seeking was rewarded when a friend recommended that I read "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. From the day I began to read this book my life has been changing from darkness to light, from bondage to freedom. Just by reading I was healed of chronic bowel trouble. I have also been healed of severe sick headaches and a belief that they were hereditary. I was told by a doctor that if I ever had cold in my head again I could not live. Shortly after beginning to read the Christian Science textbook I took a very bad cold. I could do nothing for myself, so asked for help from a practitioner. The cold was completely destroyed. During the three years and a half since then I have had need to break every material law about colds and have not even had a hint of one. Formerly I suffered much from nervous troubles. Many doctors treated me and I tried change of climate and surroundings, but only grew worse, until I came into Christian Science and was freed from these ills.

I am grateful for all these healings, but my joy at being healed of worry, doubt, fear, and lack of supply is even greater. I am very grateful for all the Christian Science literature. My heart sings all the while, that God is good.

Four years ago I began the study of Christian Science, earnestly seeking a better understanding of God, and I am deeply grateful for the glimpse of Truth that has been revealed to me. This vision has brought love, joy, and peace into my life, with many beautiful healings. The first healing came unsought, for after a few hours' reading of the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, I was able to lay aside glasses, which had been worn for more than fifteen years. A sense of grief has been overcome, and burdensome beliefs of limitation are disappearing as the apprehension of God's allness is unfolded to my consciousness. For these proofs I am truly grateful, because since learning in Christian Science that progress is the ever operative law of God, they become signs of the dawn of the day of spiritual understanding, making new the promise recorded in Isaiah, "The path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

For the "Key to the Scriptures," the loving help of practitioners, the ministry of our periodicals, and many other blessings my debt to our inspired Leader is unspeakable, and my sincere desire is to live up to the high calling of one enlisted in the service of mankind.

I have had ample time to meditate on the many healings and wonderful blessings that I have experienced through the study of Christian Science. When sorrow came into our home I knew that no physician even pretended to heal a broken heart, and that to me was the worst suffering I had ever endured. I thought I must suffer on, and wondered how I could stand it. While I was visiting my sister in Oregon we met a friend of hers, a Christian Scientist, on our way down town one day, and I shall always remember the lady's sweet face as she said to me when told of my sorrow, "You know the Bible tells us that God will wipe all our tears away." That was the first gleam of hope or comfort that had come to me. We had talked Christian Science in our home, were sure it was what we believed, and a son had been wonderfully helped by it, but our interest had lagged, and not until we had a terrible awakening did I realize what I needed.

Since then Christian Science has been my only reliance. I have been healed of chronic throat trouble, bilious attacks, sick headaches, gallstones, lame back, and many other ailments. An experience I had while in bathing proved to me God's ever presence. One afternoon I went to the beach with friends and one of them asked me to go in bathing. I refused at first, as I always had such a fear of water, and expressed myself so; but finally I was persuaded, thinking I would wade in a little way and enjoy the cool water, as it was a very warm day. My friend, however, was joined by another friend and soon they were swimming quite a way from me. I saw as I waded out that the cement bottom (it was a made lake) was sloping downward and was slick and slimy, and that if I did not return to the bank I might drown, for I knew nothing about swimming; but as I turned to go back my feet slipped and I went down. I came up farther out and was terribly frightened. Then I went down again, still farther out. I could only struggle, although I could clearly think, and I wondered why those stragglers on the bank could not see that I needed help. I was going down for the third time when these words came clear and distinct: "God is all." I heard the waters closing over me, but was calm and happy. The next thing I realized was that I was on the bank, my feet in shallow water. I could scarcely speak when my friends came up. I only wanted to look up and thank God; in fact, I said to them that if it had not been for my understanding of Christian Science I would not have been there.

I feel more grateful for this experience than any other that I have had. We read in Psalms, "The Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon him, to all that call upon him in truth." I am indeed grateful to our Leader, whose works show us the way out of all inharmony into the truth that makes free.—MRS. E. C. STEFFEN, Lincoln, Neb.

Not having the opportunity to attend the Wednesday evening meetings, as I live in the mountains, I want to express my gratitude through our periodicals for what Christian Science has done for me and mine. My brother, who had been much benefited both physically and mentally through Christian Science while in the West, first brought it to our notice, and was very desirous that I should try it. Treatment was accordingly asked for, and in March, 1916, I was healed of a severe throat difficulty of eighteen years' duration, which the best medical skill could help only temporarily; also glasses, which had been worn for the same length of time, were laid aside. My mother, too, is much interested in this teaching. In the fall of 1916, through the faithful work of a practitioner, she was healed of what material sense terms hardening of the arteries. She is now over seventy years of age, able to attend to household duties, and in good health.

There is no Christian Science church within sixty-three miles of my home, but with the Lesson-Sermons to guide me each day, as well as Mrs. Eddy's works, and the authorized periodicals, including The Christian Science Monitor, I have the much needed help, and every spare moment is filled. We are a happy family, having one Mind, and are striving to attain more of the spiritual understanding of God through the application of Christian Science. I am exceedingly grateful for the spiritual uplift that has come from following Mrs. Eddy's teachings, and for the many healings. I am thankful to God, and know that His protecting care is with me no matter where I am. My hope is some day to be able to take class instruction, so as to be better prepared to help not only myself but others.

Last year I became a member of a branch church, also of The Mother Church. My constant prayer is that I may so live as to reflect the allness of Life, Truth, and Love.

In writing this testimony I desire to express, to some extent, my gratitude for what Christian Science has brought into my life during the ten years that I have been a student of its teachings. After some grasp of its Principle I realized that it was the truth about God and about man's relation to Him, and that, therefore, His divine law, if faithfully applied, could be depended upon to prevent discord from expressing itself through me and mine. Reasoning along this line I have continually tried to place myself and my family in His loving care and protection, and feel that I have been amply repaid for that effort to know God, as my children have experienced little sickness of any severity and have been very free from even slight accidents. I know that this harmony is due to the fact that I have daily striven to avail myself of God's ever present care.

I came to Christian Science because of serious nervous trouble. I had always had a morbid disposition and was subject to frequent attacks of "the blues." My outlook on life, my disposition, and my health have so changed for the better that I know that I have acquired to some extent that Mind "which was also in Christ Jesus." I am so sure of God's presence and power that it would be impossible for me to be less than happy and hopeful.

After some progress in the study of Christian Science I realize that Truth requires absolute truthfulness and honesty; Life expresses itself in a spiritual understanding which is indestructible, and Love knows no man but the image and likeness of God. That Mrs. Eddy was God-directed has certainly been proved by a vast number of people, and I am thankful that I am one of the happy throng.

I saw your story in the paper and also the cartoon, setting forth the glad tidings that the time is about here for the return engagement of the influenza. Immediately I was taken with my second attack of the malady, and now I am about ready for something else you may have overlooked. I suggest you spring it at once, so I can get it over with in time to take my summer vacation.

If I get myself elected to the legislature, I am going to put a crimp into such methods of press agency for the M. D.'s. Thoughts are things as real and as tangible as the nose on your face, and any person guilty of scattering disease thoughts about should be dealt with in the same manner as one scattering disease germs about.

[Chicago (Ill.) News]

If a sound mind and rational habits do so much to keep the body sound, and if nature unaided can cure most of our curable ills, life is a fairer deal for all of us than it has sometimes seemed. Of course, it is not so easy as it sounds to put fear and worry, harrowing love affairs and destructive emotions, hatred and envy, out of mind. But if this is done we must do it ourselves. Doctors cannot do it for us, and realization that the matter of health is largely in our own hands must contribute to the wiser ordering of life.

[Erith Observer, London, England]

There is contagion in a sweet and beautiful character, for health is contagious as well as disease. We are all the time giving to others either wholesome or unwholesome moods—poisoning their atmosphere with doubt and suspicion or clearing it with helpfulness and good cheer.

[Christian Work]

The supreme teachings of Christ are of love and brotherhood. These express themselves, in a democracy, in the cooperation of every citizen, for the good of each and all. This results ideally in a noble mutualism and in equal and world-wide justice, which constitute the highest goal of human endeavor. The doctrine of the class conscious struggle is opposed to this ideal. It is a reversion to earlier forms of competitive struggle. It not only strikes at injustice by greater and more savage injustice, but tends in practice to the breaking up of society, even of radical groups, into bitterly antagonistic factions, thus defeating its own ends. The dictatorship of the proletariat in practice is a new absolutism in the hands of a few men, and is as abhorrent as any other dictatorship. The hope of the world is in the cooperation of individuals and classes and the final elimination of classes in the brotherhood of a Christian society. To build up this cooperation should be the supreme endeavor of the churches.

Announcements

Letters of Appreciation

Many letters of appreciation of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR and other Christian Science activities are constantly being received. These letters express what these activities mean to different individuals in various occupations and pursuits. The favorable comment that has been received on those already published indicates that they are welcome and helpful; therefore others will be published under the above heading. Extracts from such letters follow:

I WISH in the frankest possible way to indicate to you my great appreciation of The Christian Science Monitor. The desire to be fair, to give a hearing to every cause, to sympathize with those who are weary and heavy-laden and at the same time to conserve the benefits already gained by the efforts of those who have worked in the past are so manifest in your columns that it puts your paper among the very best in the country. It seems to me quite clear that the Monitor is among those newspapers (I could mention others) which have at heart all that is sweetest and best in American life and tradition. I have read more than one editorial article for which I was really grateful and was tempted to write you at once and confess my obligation to you.

AT a recent meeting of women interested in the national betterment of conditions of wage earning women, the editorials and reports which have been appearing in The Christian Science Monitor were commended highly both from the fairness and truth of the data, and the sound interpretation and presentation of conclusions arising from the same.

—— ——— ———, of the Women in Industry Service, felt that the labor news in The Christian Science Monitor was the most authentic and fairest presentation of the subject in any public newspaper in the country.

"What I say unto you I say unto all, WATCH." Jesus

VOLUME XXII OCTOBER 18, 1919 NUMBER 7

The Beginner in Christian Science

DUNCAN SINCLAIR

THE beginner in Christian Science is one who has just begun to understand something about divine Principle, about the truth revealed by Mrs. Eddy in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures." He has heard, perhaps, of the healing of some one he knows from sickness or from evil habits through Christian Science, and this has induced him to take up the study of this subject "to see if there be any truth in it," as he may put it to himself. One has only to reflect where the majority of people stand with regard to spiritual issues when Christian Science is first presented to them, to form some slight notion of the variety of problems brought before a Christian Science practitioner by such as come for treatment. Up to this point matter has been very real to them; sickness they have believed to be the inevitable effect of material law; the passions which surge, at times like a tempest, through the human mind, they have considered to be real states of consciousness; while truth has been to them almost altogether if not wholly, an enigma.

On page 275 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy has stated the mental attitude required of the beginner: "To grasp the reality and order of being in its Science, you must begin by reckoning God as the divine Principle of all that really is. Spirit, Life, Truth, Love, combine as one,—and are the Scriptural names for God."

Now in endeavoring to help the beginner the Christian Science practitioner can never forget the words of the Master, "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets." The Christian Scientist remembers his own early efforts as a seeker after God, and how he used to be so greatly helped by the kindly encouragement of those who knew more about the subject than he did. And always he is patient as doubts arise. Then, too, his thoughts turn to and dwell on the great truths of being, even while the beginner disburdens himself of his fears, or sorrows, or sins, or physical distresses. Far more than aught else does the practitioner's understanding of divine Truth help. Words are empty without this understanding. To know the truth that man is God's image and likeness, that man is never separate from God, his divine Principle, and therefore that man is absolutely protected and cared for, is to love one's fellow man. In so doing one is helping to destroy the false material sense of man, which is at all times synonymous with human suffering. In other words, healing is being done through spiritual understanding. The Christian Scientist who possesses spiritual understanding sufficient to detect the error in the thought of the one who has approached him for help, and perceives the spiritual truth which the error is counterfeiting, actually heals the case while it is yet declaring itself.

A Christian Scientist does not practice healing long until it becomes plain to him that those who come to him for treatment differ greatly in their attitude to Christian Science. Therefore he does not speak to all along the same lines. If he did he would be talking over the heads of some or below the level of others. But to all he can be kindly, to all he can listen with considerateness, the while he endeavors to detect the error and, through his more enlightened spiritual understanding, to destroy it with the truth. "I endeavor to accommodate my instructions to the present capability of the learner," Mrs. Eddy has written in "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 66), "and to support the liberated thought until its altitude reaches beyond the mere alphabet of Mind-healing."

What a lesson in patience the words convey! What a lesson in kindly interest for the progress of one just beginning to be liberated! Every Christian Scientist knows the position; for did he not himself need all the encouragement and admonition which were extended to him when what he had learned of Christian Science but served to reveal to him how little he as yet comprehended? It was then he appreciated the help of those who knew more than he, as they gently and persistently urged him to put into practice at every possible opportunity whatever he understood of Principle in order to prove the power of Truth over error, and to learn thereby to put his trust more fully in Principle in handling all of life's problems. In Christian Science practice the patience of the practitioner may sometimes be sorely tried as sin seeks to urge its false claims for recognition, or disease tries to convince him that its mesmerism is real. He stands fast, however, realizing in his own experience Paul's words to the Philippians, "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus." He affirms the truth of God's allness and the perfection of spiritual man, knowing that Truth destroys the falsity called evil and dispels the illusion named disease.

It is of the utmost importance that beginners in Christian Science should be correctly instructed. They of course never can go wrong if they abide by the teachings of Science and Health and Mrs. Eddy's other writings. These in conjunction with the Bible supply food for every stage in spiritual development. It is necessary to be ever on guard, however, not to allow human opinions to usurp, even temporarily, the truth as revealed by divine Science, for human opinions confuse and prevent healing. It has been the experience of many that time and again erroneous opinions have hindered the progress of the student. The Christian Scientist should himself be quite clear about any particular phase of the truth before he tries to elucidate it to others; otherwise the effect will be far from satisfactory, confusion almost certainly resulting. "Let there be milk for babes, but let not the milk be adulterated," is what Mrs. Eddy admonishes in her book "Retrospection and Introspection" (p. 61). The words are wise indeed, and should never be disregarded by any Christian Scientist who has the beginner's welfare at heart.

Simplicity, too, should never be wanting in the mental attitude toward beginners. Jesus on one occasion when his disciples had put to him the question, "Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven?" replied, "Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven." The Master was conveying the lesson of simplicity and purity. It is the pure and childlike in heart who enter into the spiritual understanding of the omnipresence of Love as God. It is the same understanding of the omnipotence of divine Principle, Love, that alone can help those who, sometimes out of great tribulation, are beginning to awaken to the nature of man as the perfect spiritual idea of perfect Mind.

From Day to Day

HARRIET MITTS ROSS

IN 1910, a short time before we were married, my husband and I became interested in Christian Science. He had drawn forty acres of government land and we were planning to be married and to make our home there. His land was covered with timber and lay close to the Colorado River, and it was necessary to clear and level it to prepare it for irrigation farming; and he was required by the Government to live on it five years before title could be obtained. Neither of us knew anything about farming, but we both wanted to live on a farm, and it seemed the right thing to do, so we made our plans to go. We had a little loose capital and some money invested in Los Angeles real estate, which, all told, would have been ample for our needs; but no matter how we tried, we could not dispose of our property without a very great sacrifice, and so we determined to go ahead demonstrating our way. We moved on to the land in December, built a little house, cleared and leveled ten acres, and had spent all we had. From that time on we were forced to make one demonstration after another for daily supplies, and no matter what the need Truth has never failed.

One time it was necessary for us to have something that cost, I think, two dollars and seventy-five cents. We did not have it, nor the seventy-five cents ferry charge which was necessary to go across the river and get the article. We both began declaring, "Divine Love always has met and always will meet every human need" (Science and Health, p. 494), and still doing his mental work my husband walked out into the front yard. Just then a neighbor came driving by and called to know if my husband was going to town; because, he said, he needed something badly and it was worth three dollars to him to have it brought out, and he would pay the ferry charge.

Another time we needed twenty-five cents for the Sunday collection. The Christian Scientists of the locality had organized a society, and we were giving fifty cents a week. Late Saturday afternoon, while I was thinking how infinite God is and how we would surely have the money—somehow I wanted our church collection money more than other things—again a neighbor came. This time it was a girl who was finishing a piece of embroidery, and as she had run out of thread, she wanted to ask if I had any of a certain size, and I looked and found just what she wanted. Then she offered to pay for it and although I told her she was welcome to it, she insisted and paid twenty cents. Then she asked if I could lend her a box of matches. I gave them to her and she said, "I'll just pay for them, too, and then we won't have to bother returning them." It was after she had gone and I turned my thought again to my problem that I realized I had the needed money.

Another time a man we had working for us finished his work while my husband was away, and I had to pay him. When I counted the money I found I had to pay the last five cents in pennies. In the West we do not use pennies, and I did not want to give them to him. To gain time I walked into the next room, and a sentence in a recent Sunday Lesson-Sermon flashed into my thought, "My people shall never be ashamed." Without thinking what I was doing I opened the dresser drawer, and there lay a five-cent piece before my eyes. I rejoiced again over Love's ever presence.

One spring we planted an acre of watermelons. We had thoroughly prepared the soil and planted them early, and had spared no pains to obtain an early crop, which is quite profitable in this country. Then error appeared as mice eating the seed out of the ground. Hill after hill all over the field was robbed until we could not find a seed. We replanted, and they took the seed again. Then we called on a Scientist friend who had many times so lovingly helped us. She did some mental work for us and gave us this reference to ponder from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 508): "The only intelligence or substance of a thought, a seed, or a flower is God, the creator of it." My husband had other work to do, so it fell to me to replant the melons. Seven times I replanted, and with each hill I tried to realize this truth; but when it was too late to plant any more I stopped, and there was about a third of an acre growing. We supposed we had failed to make the demonstration; but it was not so, for what few vines we had were the marvel of the neighborhood, they were so full of melons, and furthermore they were so early that the last load was hauled to town on the day the first loads came from other fields. Ours were all large and thoroughly ripe when sold. We kept an account of what we sold until it amounted to one hundred and twenty-five dollars, which was a pretty fair income for a third of an acre or even the whole acre. These are only a few of many experiences.

Another time it was not a question of money but still one of obtaining supply. My husband was working, only coming home for the week-end, and one day I found I was out of feed for my chickens. We had been getting it at a ranch about six miles away, but I had no way of going after it. Finally I came to the last feed in the sack, and error said, "Better divide it and save at least a little for morning, for that is all you have;" but I said, "No; divine Love can feed my chickens, for there is nothing outside of His loving care." Then I emptied the sack. That evening, quite late, the man from whom we had been buying drove in. He said he was coming by and threw on a sack of wheat, thinking we might need some. He never had delivered any before nor has he since, and my expression of thanks was for more than the wheat; for I was very grateful indeed that I had taken my stand and proved the allness of Principle once more.

We have always tried to realize that we are not working for money but to demonstrate abundance, and have seen that our crops are primarily to supply the needs of others, the money being only a medium of exchange. To say what helped us would be almost to rewrite the Lesson-Sermons and the periodicals issued during the eight years, but one of the great helps was the book, "The Mother Church," an account of the erection of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, and the letter from Mrs. Eddy so lovingly included in it. We certainly appreciate the work of all those earlier students who proved the Principle of Christian Science, many times under such difficult circumstances with fear and trembling.

My husband and I both were church members and Bible students before we became interested in Christian Science, and my sense of appreciation goes clear back through the ages to Abraham, who first glimpsed spiritual truth; to Moses, and all the others who so steadfastly adhered to what they knew; down through the centuries to Jesus who, "though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered;" to the early Christians and those who since that time have preserved the Bible for us, regardless of any cost to themselves; and finally to our revered Leader, Mary Baker Eddy, who lived close enough to God to receive the "Key to the Scriptures," which she gave to the world. I was one of those who at first had a sense of antagonism toward Mrs. Eddy, but now no one could have a more loving thought for her or appreciate more than I do what she has done for mankind.

The Open Road to Freedom

THOMAS A. ELLIS

OF all the personal devils that seem to beset the human race, there is none more persistent than the imp called worry. The man who said, "I have lived a long life and had a great deal of trouble, though most of it never happened," made a statement which contains food for serious thought. To those who are submitting their life problems to the rules laid down by Christian Science, the analysis of worry brings enlightenment. Worry is fear,—fear of the consequences of past actions or misfortunes, or apprehension of what may happen in the future. Fear of course implies uncertainty or ignorance, and unquestionably the cure of ignorance lies in the acquirement of knowledge, which must resolve ignorance into nothingness, exactly as light does darkness.

Every action manifested in human experience comes as a result of an impulse of mind. To make the scientific continuation of this statement is to say that good actions are impulses of the divine Mind made manifest, and that all evil actions are emanations of the mortal or carnal mind, which "is enmity against God." For a space, however, let us consider the human problem. The human mind is concerned with two things, the past and the future. In matters of the present it is wholly unconcerned. Every thought legacy from the past may be resolved into two elements, sorrow or joy,—sorrow, a negation, the absence of joy, no thing; joy, the divine gift, the emblem and proof of infinite good. It is not difficult to credit each of these mementos of the past to its proper source.

Humanity faces the future with confidence or doubt, with sensations which may be analyzed into the two opposites, hope or fear, and it may be asserted as a foregone conclusion that as long as one relies on the mind which has up to now brought sorrow, he will realize the only possible results,—fear, failure, sickness, defeat, dishonor, death; which unpleasant terms are components of hell. Reliance on the divine Mind, which has given us all our lasting joy, brings hope, success, health, victory, honor, life,—the myriad blessings which are heaven.

"How, then, shall we be saved," repeats humanity. "We have been sinful, sick, unfortunate; we fear the consequences of the past, we worry about what the future may bring. We doubt, and we fear that which may come upon us." Christian Science comes to each at exactly the same time,—now. It offers the solution of each and all of our problems now. It does not say, "If you had accepted me years ago you might have been happy and care free all this time;" nor does it say, "If you will follow my teachings you will be happy next year or the year after," but reiterates the Scripture, "Behold, now is the day of salvation."

It is a safe rule in the overcoming of mortal beliefs to consider that of greatest importance which mortal mind affirms to be of the least; so let each one ask himself: Was it ever any other time than now in my consciousness? And what a small part of your thoughts are the worries of the present moment! Mortal mind keeps us so busily occupied in regretting unforgettable yesterdays and dreading wholly supposititious to-morrows that multitudes live wholly oblivious of the eternal verity that Life is I AM, not I was or I may be. Happiness, harmony, heaven, is at hand as we apprehend God's law of life and apply it to each problem we have now. At the present moment, and at no other, the real man is free to act; for now is the only real time and opportunity to turn from evil beliefs to the realization of good.

To Christian Scientists the way is indeed open. We have at hand the truth which reverses evil, and blessing appears. Our understanding is sufficient to solve any problem with which we have to contend when we actively apply that understanding. We have only the present problem to consider. The universe is controlled by God, infinite Love, omnipresent Life, omniscient justice, divine Love. Is it conceivable that worry, fear, doubt, the vagaries of mortal mind, can endure as realities in defiance of such law? The apostle Paul tells us, "The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law."

True Worship

STELLA WILKINSON

MANY times young students of Christian Science find themselves eagerly scanning the testimonies of the Christian Science periodicals hoping to find an account of some one who has solved a problem similar to theirs. The demonstration of Jesus at Jacob's well has been an inspiration to the writer, and the study of it has lifted her many times above limitation. Every reader knows the story, but we cannot become too familiar with it. When the Samaritan woman came to draw water out of this well, she found Jesus there resting from his journey. Jesus' conversation with her brought forth remarks which revealed her lack of spiritual understanding. Out of the fullness of his knowledge he agreed with her own statement that she had no husband, and reminded her that she had had five husbands. The woman, startled at his keen perception, adroitly changed the subject, and by her implied question as to where men should worship, evoked an answer from Jesus which instantly lifted him above physical limitation. Gone were the hunger, the thirst, the fatigue, in contemplation of this mighty truth, that "God is a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth." His true life, and his true work, that of saving mankind from the density and materiality of which the Samaritan woman's thought was typical, were revealed to him. What a wonderful lesson for us! How the false taskmasters slink away when we flood our thought with the realization that our "meat" is to do the will of God. How the bonds of materialism drop away from us, even as they did from Jesus, when we rise to greet the truth that God is Spirit and all worship of Him must be spiritual.

The rebuke that Jesus gave to the materialistic forms of worship which were expressed in the wordy prayer, hypocritical fasting, and strict observance of the letter of the law, was indeed merited. That pseudo-worship which demanded sacrifice rather than mercy, he could not tolerate. The absurd belief that the worship of God could be confined to any particular place, he dispelled once and forever. He also uncovered the lethargy which would postpone the harvest until a more convenient season. To the clarified vision of Christ Jesus true worship was revealed to be the constant doing of the will of God.

That God is Spirit was also seen to be a mighty truth by Mrs. Eddy, and she used it and its logical conclusion as a climax for that emancipation proclamation which she called the "scientific statement of being," and which is found on page 468 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures." In it she states: "Spirit is God, and man is His image and likeness. Therefore man is not material; he is spiritual." Centuries elapsed after Jesus gave this fundamental truth to the world before one was found who was fearless and faithful and pure enough to show mankind how this truth must be worked out to its logical conclusion that since God is Spirit, His creation is therefore spiritual. Is it any wonder, then, that Christian Scientists are continually expressing their gratitude for the consecrated life work of Mary Baker Eddy? She has made it possible for them to grasp in some degree the spiritual understanding of the life and teachings of Jesus the Christ.

The writer has been healed of a sense of great loneliness and loss by the quiet realization that God is Spirit. The definition of God given by Mrs. Eddy in the Glossary of Science and Health (p. 587) also has been a wonderful help. Nothing could be lost to that Mind which is "all-knowing, all-seeing, all-acting, all-wise, all-loving, and eternal." Only those who have dispelled the thoughts of loneliness and doubt with a right apprehension of God and His creation have known the reward,—a peace "which passeth all understanding."

A Loving and Humble Spirit

PERCY W. BROWN

ARE not some of us too prone to criticize? We see shortcomings in our neighbor and hasten to correct them, to point out the right way according to our own standards, or we speak of them to others. In many cases criticism of others arises from a feeling of superiority, and this is one of two things,—either self-righteousness or unconscious jealousy, one of the most subtle forms of error. The Master's immediate disciples were not always free from jealousy, as we find described in the twenty-second chapter of Luke; but Jesus rebuked them kindly with the admonition, "I am among you as he that serveth." Let us lay hold of that divine quality which found expression in meekness and brotherly love as practiced and taught by the humble Nazarene. If one has even a little understanding of Christian Science, he will pray that divine Principle enrich the thought of his brother, and any feeling of personal superiority will vanish into nothingness.

"The fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace," said the apostle James, and also, "The wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be intreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy." Divine wisdom will appear as our hearts are receptive, and as we seek the truth in humility. Mrs. Eddy writes (Miscellany, p. 228): "Who shall inherit the earth? The meek, who sit at the feet of Truth, bathing the human understanding with tears of repentance and washing it clean from the taints of self-righteousness, hypocrisy, envy,—they shall inherit the earth, for 'wisdom is justified of her children.'"

Much has been said as to constructive criticism. Criticism is right when it tends to reform evil conditions and to restore harmony. Great care should, however, be exercised lest criticism arise from personal motives which belong to the carnal mind and are not those loving qualities which are attributes of the divine Mind. The writer once had a special antipathy for a certain class of people with whom he came in daily contact, which was caused by certain traits seemingly common to all members of that race. The very mention of their racial name was sufficient to arouse a bitter antagonism in his thought. It was not until he approached the situation in a loving and humble spirit that the bad qualities seemed to fall away and he was able to see all men as children of God and all as members of one great family.

On page 8 of "No and Yes," Mrs. Eddy writes: "We should endeavor to be long-suffering, faithful, and charitable with all. To this small effort let us add one more privilege—namely, silence whenever it can substitute censure."

"The reward of obedience"

GEORGENE L. MILLER

JESUS' parable of the wedding feast, where the invited guests were so ready with excuses, illustrates a tendency of mortal mind which, in the words of Paul, would "deceive the very elect." The call of duty, which is really a call to go up higher, is not always recognized by mortals, or if it is seen, the response is given with mental reservations or postponed to a more convenient season. Mortal mind is very elastic in its interpretation of the word obedience. It fails to recognize the fact that if told to go north, one step south is disobedience. Equally disobedient is it to take no step at all. Failing to obey the call of Truth, the wedding guests lost the opportunity to partake of the feast, the blessing of increased understanding and spirituality prepared for them that love God. In other words, they lost "the reward of obedience," to which Mrs. Eddy refers in her Message to The Mother Church for 1902, as follows (p. 17): "Jesus said, 'If ye love me, keep my commandments.' He knew that obedience is the test of love; that one gladly obeys when obedience gives him happiness. Selfishly, or otherwise, all are ready to seek and obey what they love. When mortals learn to love aright; when they learn that man's highest happiness, that which has most of heaven in it, is in blessing others, and self-immolation—they will obey both the old and the new commandment, and receive the reward of obedience." Mrs. Eddy placed much stress upon the need for obedience, and many lines could be quoted from her writings to show this.

One student of Christian Science learned, through many strenuous experiences, the need for implicit obedience to the call of Truth, but especially was this shown in accepting work in the Sunday school. When given an appointment as teacher, she was dismayed. Her teaching experience had been practically nil; furthermore, she was not at all fond of children. She had actually been known to travel miles to avoid them. Had she been given her choice, the Sunday school work would have been her last selection. The problem had to be met, however. In seeking light, the words of one of our hymns came to her (Hymnal, p. 180):—

> What is thy Father's plan
> For His beloved son?

Plainly it was not her province to outline what the Father's child should do, but it was her duty to obey the demands of Truth. If she was needed in the Sunday school, that was her work. She had no choice but to obey. One of the definitions of the word obedience is, "willingness to obey." The call of duty was so clear that she finally found herself willing to obey. Yet there still seemed a terrible mountain of inability in the way, with no path over it or around it. Then Love brought a memory of the children of Israel at the Red Sea. There seemed no way out of their difficulty, yet they had been told to go forward; and to them "going forward" looked like going into deep waters. She, too, felt that she must go forward, and, like the Israelites, she found the way opened for her.

She found that the children helped her a great deal; they unconsciously taught her how to teach them. The truth was present in the pure, child consciousness, and her work was to help it unfold. Many times during those first few months she wept and prayed and struggled against discouragement, impatience, inability, lack of understanding, and other temptations, but she kept on. At last she began to see results, and before the year was out she discovered that a wonderful thing had occurred,—she was healed of her dislike of children! She now looked forward to the Sunday school work because of the opportunity it gave her to be with the little ones. Instead of wishing to avoid meeting a child on the street, she now gladly exchanged a smiling greeting with every little one who came her way.

She realized that she was receiving the "reward of obedience," and her joy was still further increased by an enlarged understanding of the Sunday school. She now saw it not only as a "foundational trust," as Mrs. Eddy speaks of it on page 230 of Miscellany, but also as the future promise of the church; and she was grateful for the privilege of being faithful to this trust, and of helping in the unfoldment of this promise. She also gained a higher understanding of obedience. She saw that the desire for obedience and the willingness to obey are of God, and that the desire and the willingness to be obedient could not help but be blessed.

"Neither do I condemn thee"

VIVIAN M. KUENZLI

And Jesus said unto her, Neither do I condemn thee: go, and sin no more.—John 8:11.

IN song, in speech, and in story,
Sounds ever the sad refrain:
The bird with the broken pinion
Soars never so high again!

And the listening heart grows heavy,
And deeper the lines of care;
For few there be but encounter
And enter the fowler's snare.

And the "Surely He shall deliver"
Seems robbed of its joyous strain,
When we hear that the broken pinion
Soars never so high again!

But hark to the song of triumph!
And gaze on the wondrous flight!
For sure as our strength is weakness,
So surely His strength is might!

No fear from the flight of the arrow
When He has delivered His own;
The soaring wing was but weaker
When it trusted its strength, alone!

For the bird with the broken pinion,
Or the heart with the scarlet stain,
When borne aloft by His angels,
Sinks never so low again.

Selected Articles

["'Behold the Lamb of God'"—The Christian Science Monitor, Boston, U. S. A., Aug. 26, 1919]

Christian Science is the most practical system of religion which has ever been promulgated. For this reason it appeals most readily to thinkers, especially to the so-called hard-headed business man. Every one recognizes that in human experience there are many things which are not as they should be, and most people will acknowledge the existence of a Supreme Being with the intelligence and power requisite to make the necessary adjustments. The popular notion of what this Being is, however, and how the universe is governed is so vague that the majority are more or less content to pay some one to do their religious thinking for them, or else give up the effort as a bad job. Still, there is a Supreme Being who created the universe and who governs and maintains it in perfect harmony, including man and all of his affairs. Logically, then, there must be system and order appertaining to this Being and His government; and, admitting that this is so, He must have provided a means through which this sublime fact may be known and proved.

Dogmatism has never satisfied the world's thinkers. The experience of John the Baptist is an illustration of this. As he grew to manhood he became so dissatisfied with the religious system of his day that he forsook it, and denounced those whom he considered should but would not lead the people to a better knowledge and worship of God. While it is possible that John himself did not gain a sufficiently clear view of the reality of God and His creation to do very much to ameliorate human conditions, he did see the necessity for turning away from and forsaking evil habits and practices, and his vision was keen enough to enable him to recognize the Messiah and to proclaim, "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world."

Now "LAMB OF GOD" is defined in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 590) as "the spiritual idea of Love; self-immolation; innocence and purity; sacrifice." In other words, Mrs. Eddy points out that sin is destroyed by the spiritual qualities indicated in this definition. She also teaches that the term sin has a much broader meaning than that usually given to it, for it includes thought as well as deed. Practically speaking, it may be said to include every thought of the human mind which does not acknowledge the allness of Spirit, the spiritual nature of man, His likeness, and the perfection of the universe He made and governs. Sin is more than an overt act. It must be thought before it can be acted, and the thought is the sin even though it may not be followed by an act. Manifestly, therefore, if sin is to be destroyed, the place to attack it is in thought, and spiritual means must be used for its destruction.

What, then, is the logical process? Why, to "behold the Lamb of God," to search diligently for and understand not only "the spiritual idea of Love," but the divine Principle which is Love and the creator and ruler of the idea which is His image and likeness. The Bible, as interpreted by the Christian Science textbook, from which the above definition is taken, and the writings of Mary Baker Eddy, reveal Principle and its idea and show how all false concepts, including sin, sickness, and death, are destroyed by a correct understanding of Him who is Life, Truth, and Love.

Now the human mind is a mixture of faith in good and belief in the existence and power of evil, and it accepts these opposites as equally true and God-created, notwithstanding that it recognizes that they are perpetually warring with each other. Of course it is obvious that these two contraries, good and evil, no matter how much they may appear to do so now, cannot forever coexist, and that eventually one must predominate to the exclusion of the other. It is equally obvious that it is unthinkable that the government of the universe can ever be given over wholly to evil. And since all acknowledge that good will eventually control, it must be supreme now, and therefore we are forced to the conclusion that it is now and always the only power, presence, and wisdom. Addressing infinite good as "Our Father," the Master declared, "For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever."

Inasmuch as God, good, is power, presence, and wisdom, in our search for the Lamb of God, the redeeming element, it is necessary for us to accept good thoughts as Godlike qualities and to recognize that these good thoughts resulting from a right understanding of God have the power to dispel and destroy the opposite thoughts of evil and their effects, sin, disease, and death. While it is true that the destruction of evil and its every appearance through the process of holding fast that which he has learned, or thinking good thoughts, may appear a long and difficult task to one who is just beginning the study of Christian Science, and he may be appalled at his own ignorance of Principle, let him not despair! He has Paul's authority that "it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure," and Jesus' loving words: "Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." With these assurances he can go forward in full confidence that he can accomplish his own redemption from error. He should begin by watching his own thoughts to see what mental guests he is entertaining, and, whenever he detects a quality which is not good, he must reject it as being unlike God and therefore no part of man, His image and likeness. Moreover he must consistently endeavor to acknowledge the allness of Spirit in his every thought, word, and act.

In his epistle to the Galatians Paul speaks of "the works of the flesh" and "the fruit of the Spirit;" and on page 405 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy shows us how we may utilize these spiritual fruits in overcoming erroneous thoughts. She says, "Christian Science commands man to master the propensities,—to hold hatred in abeyance with kindness, to conquer lust with chastity, revenge with charity, and to overcome deceit with honesty." Thus all evil and its effects,—sin, sickness, death, suffering, want, woe, envy, jealousy, hatred, malice, fear, anger, pride,—are destroyed in and for the individual in the proportion that he consciously entertains thoughts of infinite good and acknowledges and obeys God as the creating, governing Principle by putting these thoughts into practice in acts of self-immolation, of innocence and purity, of sacrifice, and by being sincere, honest, grateful, and joyous.

[Harry Vandegrift in Jewish Review and Observer, Cleveland, Ohio]

Doctor Solomon evidently agrees with Christian Science in the matter of healing in so far as to say that healing is possible through faith and prayer, but says to that extent there is nothing new in Christian Science, for Judaism and other religions also recognize the efficacy of the healing power of prayer and faith. In reply I must say that Christian Science does not claim that healing by prayer and faith is new—quite to the contrary; for this method of healing is the most ancient of all methods, and Mrs. Eddy, the Founder of the Christian Science movement, by diligent search and devoted study of the Scriptures discovered this new-old truth, which had been lost since the time of Constantine, and gave it to the world again.

"But," our critic says, "Christian Science goes much further. It goes to the extreme of denying the reality of disease and of the other ills which man is heir to." The doctor here treads on the same mistaken path trod by other critics of Christian Science; namely, that of confusing absolute truth with mere seeming. What is meant by the real, the absolute, in Christian Science refers to God and the entire spiritual universe. Consequently when Christian Science states that disease is unreal, it does not mean that disease does not seem quite real to the human consciousness. It simply means that God did not create disease, and so it is not eternal, not real. Christian Science accepts unreservedly the teaching of the Scriptures that "in the beginning God created the heaven and the earth," that "God created man in his own image;" finally, that "God saw every thing that he had made, and, behold, it was very good."

To accept the premise of one God, one creator, one must also be in agreement with one creation, one in quality and kind; that is, God being good could not, and being just He certainly would not, cause nor permit any distressful thing to mar His image, His children who reflect Him. Like begets like. God is Life, Truth, and Love; and when this is recognized in deeds as well as in creeds, there will be no objection to the Christian Scientist's position on this question. The basic laws which govern the expression of this new-old truth may be found in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures." Its specific application must come by degrees or in proportion to the putting off of the old man and the putting on of the new man. Day by day some particular phase of the truth which makes us free, unfolds itself and may be applied to human thought and conduct.

The doctor also declares: "Unfortunately we cannot abolish evil by denying its existence. Mere negations are not so effective." The writer quite agrees that evil cannot be abolished by "mere negations," but the doctor's assumption that such is the way of the Christian Scientist is entirely wrong. The abolishment of evil will be accomplished only when each individual has the Mind of Christ, which knows nothing but good. Christian Science makes a distinction between knowing and believing; as, for instance, many people some time ago believed the earth to be flat, but they never knew it was flat, because it was never so.

However, Christian Scientists do deny evil. It is perfectly consistent for them as Bible students to deny it; but it is denied from the absolute standpoint. God did not make evil; therefore, its unreality. The Scriptures declare that God is too pure to behold evil, and the children of God who reflect Him cannot do differently. Of course mortal man is required to learn these truths of reality and live from that standpoint if he ever expects to reach the goal of heaven. On this subject Mrs. Eddy says in "Unity of Good": "The sinner has no refuge from sin, except in God, who is his salvation. We must, however, realize God's presence, power, and love, in order to be saved from sin. This realization takes away man's fondness for sin and his pleasure in it; and, lastly, it removes the pain which accrues to him from it. Then follows this, as the finale in Science: The sinner loses his sense of sin, and gains a higher sense of God, in whom there is no sin."

The doctor mentions mental suggestion and psychology, —an indication that he thinks such things are part and parcel of Christian Science, but this is not true. They have nothing whatever to do with Christian Science, and its textbook specifically counsels against their use.

If "Judaism," as the doctor proceeds to say, "by no means denies the effectiveness of prayer and the value of faith in God's readiness to help and to cure all of man's ills," why do the Jewish people sanction material remedies for healing? Does this square with the teaching that God is all-power? What becomes of omnipotence in such circumstances? And why criticize Christian Scientists, who rely upon Him for the healing of every ill, whether it be acute or chronic, organic or mental? Christian Science heals disease in agreement with the declarations and proofs of Moses and the prophets, and has been doing the good works for over a half century.

The doctor inquires, "Why should the Jew seek outside of his religion healing for his wounds, for the hard blows of fate?" May it not be because the healing works are wanting there? Is it not conceivable that the church which best meets the human need, will be most called upon to supply that need? Let the churches perform the works as well as preach the word, and then observe the difference. If Christian Science has found a better way to escape the ills of the flesh, why object? If they can save drunkards and victims of drug habits and patent medicines by the application of Scriptural teaching which brings people into better health and a happier state, why object? In this day and age words are of but little value if the deeds are wanting. Works are demanded, and proof is essential. When the light of Truth dawns upon the consciousness of any man, whether he be Jew or Gentile, he can demonstrate it.

[Ernest C. Moses in Chicago (Ill.) Post]

Christian Science has a purely spiritual foundation in demonstrable Principle, and its wonderful success arises solely from the good work it accomplishes for humanity in destroying sin and healing disease and discords. It does present "laws of spiritual progression," but these laws are not the assumed laws which are said to attend occult and mystical systems of the human mind. Christian Science is simple, and children readily learn to understand and demonstrate it. It states the nature of God, man, and law as no other teaching does.

In "Rudimental Divine Science," on page 1, Mrs. Eddy answers the question, "How would you define Christian Science?" with these simple words: "As the law of God, the law of good, interpreting and demonstrating the divine Principle and rule of universal harmony."

[Charles W. J. Tennant in Croydon (England) Advertiser]

In a short notice with reference to the taking over of the Congregational Church in Dingwall Road by the local Christian Scientists the remark was made: "If we can escape all illness by the simple process of believing that we are not ill, the Christian Scientists ought to be a real power in the land." This does not represent the method by which Christian Science removes or destroys illness. Jesus made it quite clear for all time that an exact and scientific knowledge of God as the Principle and cause of all that really is would destroy sin and disease; for did he not say, "If ye continue in my word, . . . ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free"? Christian Science replaces belief with spiritual understanding, and enables one to have that Mind "which was also in Christ Jesus." This divine Mind alone is able to destroy the false beliefs of sin and sickness which inhere in the carnal or human mind.

Extracts from Letters

"Christian Science has been such a benefit to me at all times since being in the Army that in appreciation thereof I gladly give the following testimony. I had no knowledge of Christian Science one week prior to my enlistment. My health was so poor that I had to give up my position several months before enlisting, and I thought I would be unable to withstand the rigors of Army life. For a while it certainly looked that way, as shortly afterwards I was sent to a hospital for treatment; but even the physicians' diagnoses only confirmed Christian Science's claim that sickness is in mortal mind, as they were unable to find anything wrong. Consequently I received no treatment, but a week's rest there gave me an opportunity to study and was instrumental in bringing a soldier, whose faith had weakened, back to the fold; as a result of which he improved. Here was a case where by reading I was able to help another. . . .

"Upon my return to camp I found my name on the overseas list, and left shortly thereafter. Experienced no fear about the voyage, but about four days from port (Brest) had a claim of fever which I seemed unable to overcome, although I worked on it for three days and only gave in when things swam before my eyes, and finally was sent to the sick bay. This was when influenza appeared to be at its height, but my stay in sick bay was brief and under better conditions, as I received better food and a real bed, and again had time to work for myself. Arrived at port where the Camp Welfare worker gave me more instruction, after which my progress was more marked. I was the only one interested in Christian Science in our detachment, excepting a few interested for argument's sake, and spent most of my evenings reading by candle light in our attic billet, which housed about forty men.

"We had been rushed overseas with the understanding that our services were greatly needed as we were special service men, but on arrival here were disappointed to find the opposite condition existed. Most of us never got out of the Replacement Depot, and naturally fell in for very disagreeable detail work. . . . I longed for the association of boys interested in Science, and shortly thereafter we received notice that a Christian Science chaplain was in our area six miles away and soon thereafter was transferred right into our town, and immediately we began holding regular Wednesday evening meetings and Sunday night services, four boys being interested; but the number soon grew to more than a dozen, all taking turns in reading. I certainly have enjoyed the friendship of the fine boys we find interested in Science. Since then have received many healings and made demonstrations over various forms of obstacles and evils, and regret that our little band is gradually dispersing homeward bound, ours being the only battalion not under orders, but expect to move toward the States very soon.

"I certainly appreciate the benefits Christian Science only could bestow upon me, and will express my gratitude by earnestly endeavoring to become more proficient in this noble work. I also feel grateful for the abundant literature at our disposal, the chaplain giving us the use of his own room for services and reading, which closely resembled a reading room in the States."

"Words cannot express the gratefulness I feel for the understanding of Christian Science and the help I have received through the teachings of our beloved Leader, Mrs. Eddy. All the literature and periodicals have been of great value to me."

Guided by Right Intuition

"We know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an understanding, that we may know him that is true," declared John. There have been many endeavors by means of translations to reveal the enlightenment of this message. The word translated "understanding" is used but three times in the New Testament and means whole mind or intuition. To the Ephesians Paul writes about the eyes of their understanding being enlightened, and warns them against those who have the understanding darkened; in one case, referring to the illumination of Spirit whereby insight is gained, and in the other to the loss of insight through dullness and ignorance, which estrange men from what is real, leaving them "alienated from the life of God."

John shows clearly that by understanding, that is by intuition, we become acquainted with the true God,—that indeed it was the mission of the Son of God to give us this insight so that we may actually and scientifically know the real God. Speaking of the mission of Christ Jesus, an eminent philosopher said it was "to restore the intuition." Mrs. Eddy has spoken of the guidance of right intuition in a way to quicken universal hope and faith and love. She says in "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 152): "Thus founded upon the rock of Christ, when storm and tempest beat against this sure foundation, you, safely sheltered in the strong tower of hope, faith, and Love, are God's nestlings; and He will hide you in His feathers till the storm has passed. Into His haven of Soul there enters no element of earth to cast out angels, to silence the right intuition which guides you safely home."

Because of spiritual intuition our Master was able to say to the Jews, "Ye are from beneath; I am from above." Those who were arguing with him showed that they belonged to the world below, and Jesus said that he was not of that world but belonged to the world above, the world of reality. It was this evidently that Peter had in mind when he said we "look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." In the world below, or the material world, all inferences and judgments are wrong; hence men are not guided rightly; they are mesmerized by evil instead of being inspired by good. Pride and vainglory ultimate in ill will to men, in contest and warfare. In the real world there is peace, because that which rules is "the very God of peace." When one seeks guidance from Principle it is real wisdom that he is seeking, not so-called worldly wisdom, which is but the cleverness of the world below and partakes not of celestial order or divine revelation. When one is actuated by true wisdom its fruits are evident, for "the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be intreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy."

Wherever prevail views of life which are material, there visible possessions are sought for, and unseen qualities of Mind are unvalued; hence envy becomes the slave master, and love is not sought as the guide; the good report of the welfare of another arouses not joy but this demon which torments his victim. True intuition, however, leads to the valuing of right mental qualities, and the more they are exhibited in their fairness and loveliness by others, the more there is happiness. Because of justice, truth, kindness, honesty, anywhere manifested, there is true rejoicing. Here is where we are able to "rejoice with them that do rejoice," for these qualities bless and gladden all, both the manifesters and the appreciators of them. When we have true insight we are enriched by our neighbor's growth in grace and grandeur. In this respect wisdom justifies the proverb which says, "Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace."

Our Master sought not to please but to bless mankind; consequently he had to rebuke the errors which darkened intuition. He faced violent opposition, for the descriptive words of Isaiah were as if written for the scribes and Pharisees of his time: "This is a rebellious people, lying children, children that will not hear the law of the Lord: which say to the seers, See not; and to the prophets, Prophesy not unto us right things, speak unto us smooth things, prophesy deceits." The practitioner of Christian Science in following the example given by the Master will be guided to rebuke unreality at the time when his heart is most tender with the recognition of reality. Mrs. Eddy, through her revelation, has been able to declare with John, "This is the true God, and eternal life;" and at the same time has rebuked that which denies reality. She says (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 272), "I have endeavored to act toward all students of Christian Science with the intuition and impulse of love. If certain natures have not profited by my rebukes,—some time, as Christian Scientists, they will know the value of these rebukes." And then she further says, "God bless my enemies, as well as the better part of mankind, and gather all my students, in the bonds of love and perfectness, into one grand family of Christ's followers."

God's Promises

The Bible is full of the most precious promises, the simple reading of which brings a sense of comfort and security. For ages religionists have descanted on them rhetorically and have urged their hearers to lay hold of them; but when will one turn to a promise unless he feels the need of gaining something from it, and even then of what advantage will it be to him if he does not understand how to appropriate it? Now a promise includes two parties,—the one giving it and the one to whom it is given. The former must be responsible for its fulfillment; the latter must have confidence in the giver and must claim his own right to the promise if he would reap the benefits which should accrue to him therefrom. If the one to whom the promise is given never claims it, of what possible good can it be to him? There must be activity on the part of the recipient as well as on the part of the giver.

There is no untoward condition or circumstance so desperate that God has not given specific promises whereby deliverance may be realized. Yet how dense has been the darkness of the world in regard to claiming their healing application. In spite of this, there they have stood all unchanged and unchanging, always operative, as capable of fulfillment, as ready to be redeemed to-day as they ever have been in the past. There they are, each one proclaiming protection, safety, deliverance, whatever the need. There they stand even offering the assurance and guidance necessary to the acceptance of them. Christian Science in emphasizing the promises of God is awakening the world to a new faith in their value. It not only is showing men their real worth, but is also teaching how to lay hold of them. More than this, it is even revealing to mankind their great need of the practical use of these promises in bringing salvation from evil. It is proclaiming the satisfying fact that there is not one of them which is not available here and now, offering actual redemption from all wrong.

When the writer of the epistle to the Hebrews made the statement: "Without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him," he presented a fundamental necessity which can never be disregarded in connection with the consideration and acceptance of God's promises. The Christian world has sought long for this faith. Convinced that it should possess it, the longing for it has been insistent, and many a prayer has been offered in the hope that the answer would be manifested in such possession; but the unsatisfied desire has continued in a multitude of cases because of a failure to know the truth about God, and consequently there has been an equal failure to understand what constitutes the quality of faith. Christian Science, however, so reveals the nature of God as all good,—it so shows Him as the infinite Giver who has only good to give,—that it inspires faith in Him from the very outset and thus begets a reliance on His promises as a means of unfailing blessing and blessedness.

In speaking of God's wonderful beneficence, Mrs. Eddy says (Science and Health, p. 5), "God pours the riches of His love into the understanding and affections, giving us strength according to our day." There is no need so small or so great that His infinite love has not already provided the supply for it in fullest measure. Hear what He tells us in Isaiah: "They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." Then does one apparently lack faith? Does matter seem real? Does evil claim to be power? Do the beliefs of sickness and sin seem slow to yield? There are God's promises with their rewards, conditions, demands, so clearly explained in Christian Science that it becomes easy to cling to and rely on them at all times, under every circumstance, proclaiming as they do deliverance from sickness as well as from sin. Mrs. Eddy writes (Science and Health, p. 373), "If we are Christians on all moral questions, but are in darkness as to the physical exemption which Christianity includes, then we must have more faith in God on this subject and be more alive to His promises."

Now since what God does stands forever, no promise He has ever made can possibly fail of fulfillment. They are each and all absolutely reliable and we can rest in them as sure. To doubt God's promises is to doubt God. To win the blessings which result from them, each one must claim them for himself. Christian Science, then, not only sets us searching for them, but also teaches how to prove them reliable and operative, and even points out the way to win the faith wherewith to accept and use them. Above all it gives the glad assurance of their inevitable accomplishment. We may, therefore, find in them something to meet our every need, and as Mrs. Eddy states in Science and Health (p. 55): "The promises will be fulfilled. The time for the reappearing of the divine healing is throughout all time; and whosoever layeth his earthly all on the altar of divine Science, drinketh of Christ's cup now, and is endued with the spirit and power of Christian healing." ELLA W. HOAG.

Special Announcement

The Committee on General Welfare, authorized by Resolution of The Christian Science Board of Directors, and announced by the President of The Mother Church at the Annual Meeting in June, 1919, is now in session in Boston. The Committee is open to receive from members of The Mother Church any communications that will be of assistance to the Committee in carrying out the purpose of its formation as outlined in the Resolution.

All communications should be addressed to Committee on General Welfare, 236 Huntington Avenue, Boston, Massachusetts.

Among the Churches

Current Notes

DAYTON, OHIO.—For the purpose of erecting a new house of worship to meet the demands of the growing congregation, Second Church of Christ, Scientist, has purchased property at Grand and Belmont Avenues, Dayton View, and will soon have plans for a new building. The consideration for the entire strip of ground was about fourteen thousand dollars, and the plot has 142 feet on Grand Avenue and 147 feet on Belmont Avenue, while more is contained in a strip now occupied by the old Ritter greenhouse on Grand Avenue. This latter ground runs back about 270 feet. The congregation has experienced a rapid growth in recent years and the Sunday school roll, in the past few months, has grown to such proportions that it is said the capacity of the building on East First Street, near Memorial Hall, has been taxed by this department as well as by the church proper.

Admission to Membership in The Mother Church

The next admission of candidates will take place on November 7, 1919, as provided in Article XIII, Section 2, of the By-laws of The Mother Church. Application blanks may be obtained by addressing the Clerk of The Mother Church, and should be returned to him on or before Friday, October 24, 1919. Consideration of any applications received after that date will be deferred until the June 4, 1920, admission.

An application sent to the Clerk does not constitute the applicant a member. Notice of election will be sent to those who are admitted to membership.

Those who have made application for membership prior to May 30, 1919, and have not received notice of election, may communicate with the Clerk if they so desire, and are especially requested to do so before sending in a second application.

CHARLES E. JARVIS, Clerk,
236 Huntington Avenue, Back Bay, Boston, Mass.

The Lectures

PORTSMOUTH, ENGLAND (First Church).—John W. Doorly, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. A. Chisholm, who said in part:—

The majority of those who to-day are called Christian Scientists, have become such because Christian Science promises a present relief from sin and sickness. I was brought up in an orthodox church. As far back as I can remember, I endeavored to live consistently with what I believed to be right; but I knew it was a failure—I was not satisfied. I knew, too, that the Bible was full of rich promises, that God was "a very present help in trouble," and would deliver those who called upon Him; and yet I knew that I had not experienced deliverance, although I had prayed fervently for myself and those I loved.

Gradually I was losing faith and hope. The culminating point came at the time of the South African war. The beginning of that war was fraught with many disasters to the British, and a day was appointed for prayer and intercession. I was living abroad at the time, and the little English church in that town observed the day too. At that time my highest sense of loyalty was to go to church and pray earnestly that my country should be successful. Living abroad I had access to foreign newspapers. These papers were anti-British and described the Boer leader as a God-fearing man whose cause was just. While I was waiting in that church the startling questions occurred to me: "Which side is God going to help?" "How do I know which is just?" I felt convinced that the prayer I had intended to pray was useless. That day I did not pray, and left the church feeling miserable and darkened. Shortly afterwards we returned to England, and for eighteen months I had a hard time mentally and physically. I attended church as usual, but all the life was gone out of it and private prayer was almost given up.

Then I heard of Christian Science. I was attracted to it because I was told that Christian Scientists believed in the omnipotence of good, and were able to prove it and to heal the sick through prayer. This was what I needed, and by reading Mrs. Eddy's books I learned this: That God is not tributary to man, coming at human call and fulfilling human wishes; that God is divine Principle, divine Love; that men must approach God reverently, must learn to understand, obey, and apply the understanding of this Principle in their lives if they wish to obtain harmony and holiness. During nearly seventeen years I have proved this to be true, to my own satisfaction. Whenever harmony is not manifested, I know it is due to lack of understanding of God, who does hear and answer prayer.

Wellesley, Mass. (First Church).—Miss Mary G. Ewing, lecturer; introduced by William C. Holbrook, who said in part:—

We are met here in order that we may have shown to us the opening of the road that leads to the Science of Christianity. It is the road that so many are now traveling in the desire to follow the teachings of Christ Jesus, and in the endeavor to make those teachings practical. Through Christian Science men are learning how to use, in some degree, the truths of the Bible. They are finding that it is possible to bring these truths into daily living, and that there is a way to apply them to the pressing problems of mankind; and surely we need that knowledge in these days when the world is so rapidly changing from the old to the unknown new.

Chicago, Ill. (Third Church).—John C. Lathrop, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Mary Fowler, who said in part:—

Christian Science cannot be learned, transmitted, appropriated, or applied by formulas. It was born of portentous spiritual experience, proved in reduplicated experience, and finds validation only in like progressive experience and proof. It must be admitted that God has always known Himself, absolutely, completely; that Christ, the right idea, has always been the same and has always presented God as He is. In the measure that we gain the Christ-idea, the Christ-perception, we begin to come into agreement with God, to be at-one with Him; we express more and more of the divine nature, and less and less of the mortal.

The true idea of God was revealed in all its purity and spiritual clarity to our beloved Leader, Mrs. Eddy. This revelation from God so enlightened her consciousness and purified her concept of the divine nature that she was led to apprehend the Science of Christian healing, which was established by Jesus, and which later she named Christian Science.

Wooster, Ohio (Society).—Paul Stark Seeley, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. George J. Schwartz, who said in part:—

There is no thought of so great importance to us at the present time as the thought of peace. Humanity is ever seeking peace, not the peace that says: "Peace, peace; when there is no peace," but "the peace of God, which passeth all understanding." In the book of Job we read, "Acquaint now thyself with him [God], and be at peace: thereby good shall come unto thee." This advice was given centuries upon centuries ago, and it is just as valuable to-day as it was then.

Christian Science has come to give to man a better understanding of God, and of man's relation to God. This knowledge is the truth, which frees us from what we call the infirmities of the flesh and brings to us health, joy, and peace. It is the "pearl of great price."

Springfield, Mass. (First Church).—John Randall Dunn, lecturer; introduced by Cassius M. Caughey, who said in part:—

Those who have never experienced the healing and regenerating power of Truth as made available in Christian Science may not appreciate the deep import of its message. The psalmist says, "He sent his word, and healed them." Paul testified that the word of God is quick and powerful. In Isaiah we read, "So shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it."

Now while the Bible has been a source of more or less comfort to Christian people generally, it has remained for Christian Science to disprove the fallacy that it was to be merely believed. This teaching has made it understandable and usable, and Christian Scientists are daily proving that the promises therein contained afford a working basis for daily living which delivers them from all manner of diseases as well as from temptation and sin. The Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, explains the Bible in its spiritual import and shows it to be applicable to all ages and not merely a guide to the future world salvation.—Springfield Union.

Newark, Ohio (First Church).—Dr. Walton Hubbard, lecturer; introduced by Guy F. Wright, who said in part:—

Christian Science is the same religion that was taught and proved by Christ Jesus, and through the operation of this truth to-day Christian Science is healing the sick, reforming the sinner, and comforting those in sorrow. Jesus said to his disciples: "These signs shall follow them that believe; . . . they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." Mrs. Eddy, Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, explains this statement in the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by saying (p. 328): "Jesus' promise is perpetual. Had it been given only to his immediate disciples, the Scriptural passage would read you, not they. The purpose of his great life-work extends through time and includes universal humanity." And so we are learning that all mankind are included in this promise and all can prove the truth of Jesus' words.—The Newark American Tribune.

BROKEN BOW, NEB. (Society).—Judge Samuel W. Greene, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Lyle Young Lomax, who said in part:—

Christian Science is to-day emphasizing the same precepts that Jesus taught. It is teaching men that they not only can but must live those precepts in every act, in every thought; and that as this is done the same results follow as did in Jesus' day. Because this is found to be true, Christian Science is able to supply, and is supplying in an ever increasing degree, the pressing demand of humanity for a lasting solution to its many and various problems,—personal, financial, political, and universal.

JANESVILLE, WIS. (First Church).—Virgil O. Strickler, lecturer; introduced by W. S. Pond, who said in part:—

We are gathered to listen, not to a personal opinion of the Bible nor to a personal opinion of Mrs. Eddy's textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," but to an explanation of spiritual law, the understanding of which Mrs. Eddy gained through her study of the Bible. This law Christ Jesus taught and demonstrated. He said it was not of himself, but always has been and always would be available. He also said that if we understood and followed his teachings, we could make the same demonstrations. Now the rule for perpetual ignorance is to be satisfied with our opinions. If we are willing to learn we can renew the body by the renewing of the mind. Many do not believe this; but human beliefs will never change the truth about anything.

Testimonies of Healing

Near the close of the year 1910, I told my husband that I would like to read the book "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, and he immediately asked a gentleman in a bookstore to order one for us. Services were being held here, but we did not know it at the time, nor that the book could be procured through those in charge. It was perhaps four weeks before it came, and after reading the first page of the Preface I realized that I had found what I needed, but that it contained treasures of knowledge which I would need to work for if I were to make them my own. A week or two later, upon procuring a copy of The Christian Science Quarterly and attending the services, the orderly way to gain this understanding was unfolded to my thought.

My first physical healing was of an acute attack of throat trouble, which yielded in one treatment and has never returned. Following this, several attacks of pleurisy were overcome at different times through the loving help of practitioners, each attack growing less severe until they came no more. At that time, several years ago, there was a great fear of the cold winds, which seemed to cause much suffering, but in a short time no fear of these remained. Many other physical ills have been overcome,—a badly sprained foot, headache, toothache, weakness of the eyes, and a nervous condition which I do not know how to name. The last mentioned healing came slowly and taught me very much in the way of patience. I am now strong and well.

I am indeed grateful that our beloved Leader, Mrs. Eddy, by her consecration to God was able to bring Christian Science to a troubled world. I am grateful for the privilege of being a member of The Mother Church, of the branch church here, and for the privilege of having had class instruction. I also wish to express my thanks for our periodicals. My only desire is so to live that I may express my gratitude in deeds instead of words.

After an instantaneous healing of rupture through the application of the truth as taught by our beloved Leader, I went on through a period of several years knowing Christian Science to be the truth but satisfied with the results I had gained and willing to leave the study to the other fellow; in other words, my love for the world and its vices was greater than my desire for what I knew to be the truth.

At this time I possessed "all the bad habits of a decent man," as the saying goes; also some that a decent man is ashamed to admit publicly. After nearly three years of this life, at the very zenith of my indulgence in these things I was taken with a malady which brought me to a bed of pain and suffering. After trying a well-known remedy and having it produce a more aggravated condition, acting the reverse to its supposed intention, I gave up materia medica for all time and turned in my desperation to Christian Science, with the despairing hope that I was not too late. The "day of wrath" came upon me with a vengeance, for I was subjected to all manner of persecution and ridicule, and calamity followed calamity. I was even forced to present myself for examination before several physicians on different occasions, suffering their disdain and listening to their verdict, "You will never get well." It can be imagined with what heartfelt gladness I can to-day write of a complete healing of this disease and many of its attendant vices. I also take pleasure in stating that, although circumstances have placed me in conditions where the temptation to sin "once more" have been very persistent, I have always been able to realize the protection of God's omnipotent care, and have "come clean." I am in a better condition physically, mentally, and morally than at any previous period of my life, due entirely to the influence of the truth as taught by our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy.

I would like to add that my testimony of the healing of rupture, which appeared in the Journal for December, 1913, still holds true in every respect. I wish to express the sincere thankfulness of every member of our little family of four for the Christian Science literature, as it comes with its message of cheer to us on this distant prairie.

Many students of Christian Science have testified that their first insight into the truth was received in entirely unexpected surroundings. In my own case, I was traveling on a New York train when a young woman, a stranger to me, observing my anxiety while going over a dangerous curve where an accident had recently occurred, casually remarked, "You should realize that God is ever present;" and then, at my request, she followed her observation with a statement of her faith in Christian Science. While I failed to grasp the full significance of her belief, yet her evident sincerity and enthusiasm prompted me to commence reading "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" and to attend the services and lectures. Before completing my first reading of the textbook an incident occurred which greatly strengthened my faith and encouraged me to continue its study.

I had suffered from violent headaches, the sort that completely distract and for which materia medica does not afford even temporary relief. They would continue from six to ten hours. While in the throes of one of these I tried to apply what had been gleaned from the textbook, merely a few precepts I was able to understand. The headache instantly left me. At the same time there came over me a serenity of mind never before experienced. This occurred in the presence of my husband, who was nonplussed by the suddenness of the demonstration. Other healings followed in quick succession, and I soon became thoroughly imbued with the teachings of Christian Science. Then came what may perhaps be termed a real test.

During the early part of July, 1916, a fever manifested itself and became very persistent. There soon followed a great sense of weakness and general debility. A practitioner was called; also a Christian Science nurse. The fever was continuous, and as a result of its intensity I became completely deaf. In a little over a week my weight was greatly reduced and hemorrhages had developed. Owing to the insistent demands of members of the family a physician was called. After an examination, to which I reluctantly submitted, since I was unalterably opposed to medical treatment, my case was diagnosed as severe typhoid, and the physician confided to my family that unless medical science was immediately resorted to, I would not live through the following day. As I look back to my weakened state I seem to remember being fully conscious, and to have been clearly guided, for I had no fear, and overwhelming confidence in being healed by Christian Science. I flatly refused to receive medical assistance, and when my family remonstrated I replied simply that I had faith in Mrs. Eddy's teachings and was placing my reliance altogether upon God. The ailment was beautifully overcome, and some weeks later I left for the Adirondacks. Upon my arrival there was a sense of weakness in both feet, and I found myself unable to walk. As no practitioner was available in that vicinity, the practitioner in New York was notified and in an incredibly short time this condition too was overcome.

Finally the healing, which had left me stronger than before the illness, became known to relatives and friends. Those who had seen me during my trials realized that a miraculous cure had been effected. Some were skeptical, but every one remarked that it was strange my hair should have remained intact, since severe typhoid cases almost invariably resulted in the loss of hair. This seeming phenomenon was referred to whenever my case was mentioned, and I suppose I, too, at the last expressed fear on the subject. At all events, about four months after regaining my strength, nearly all my hair fell out within a day or two. This occurrence and my fears were again reported to the practitioner, and there followed complete restoration. I am profoundly grateful.

About seven years ago, when tired of what life seemed to me to be, I met a Christian Science practitioner and asked her to tell me something about Christian Science, as I knew nothing about it but was desirous of beginning the study of the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. She lovingly told me many of the fundamental teachings, but the one which appealed to me at that time and is still uppermost in my thought, was her statement that God is Life. For many months I had been quite ill, suffering from a complication of diseases. With days of discouragement and hopelessness had come the thought of self-destruction, for I had no hope of materia medica meeting my need and death seemed my only means of relief.

It seemed too good to be true that God could heal me, and not until almost a year later did I commence reading Science and Health. Then I earnestly and prayerfully read many hours daily and far into the night, being hungry for the truth. I knew that the "pearl of great price" was being revealed to me, and in less than two weeks I was healed. Instead of being in bed about three weeks out of every five, I was able to be up all day and every day and do the work for my family, standing for hours, whenever it was necessary for me to do so, without the least discomfort. While reading at that time I was also healed of partial paralysis which was affecting a part of the body. There has been no return of the ills, and many healings have since been accomplished as a result of the faithful work of practitioners. A distressing cough with loss of voice, unpleasant eruptions, headaches, and many diseased conditions have yielded to the power of Truth. I am learning that an earnest study of the Bible and of our textbook does keep us day by day, for we are thus enabled to rise above physical sense testimony.

My heart goes out in gratitude to God for leading me to know of Christian Science before the trial came of seeing two of my loved ones pass through the "valley of the shadow," for it has taught me that God gave them eternal life, and it cannot be taken from them. I am grateful to Mrs. Eddy for her courageous and tireless work in giving us her wonderful books and thus enabling us to find in the Scriptures the truth which Christ Jesus said should make us free. The Quarterly and all the periodicals provided by our Leader are a source of great comfort to me, as there is no Christian Science church organization in our town. I doubly appreciate the coming of The Christian Science Monitor each day, the Sentinel each week, and the Journal each month. While gratitude for physical healing is ever present, yet to be able in a measure to realize the spiritual import of the teachings of Christ Jesus is the greater and in fact the first cause for gratitude, as it brings all else that can be desired. For membership in The Mother Church I am also grateful, and to all the friends who have helped me to understand the truth.

(Mrs.) Mary E. Ogle, Carlisle, Ind.

For the spiritual interpretation of the Bible, as revealed through the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, I am profoundly grateful. Brought up in a religious atmosphere, I was early taught to reverence the Bible and to study it systematically. To-day I honor my parents for requiring this of me,—it served a useful purpose; but as I came into manhood I could not reconcile reason with much that I had learned from the Bible, because I had been taught that it must be accepted literally. Christian Science brought in the light of spiritual understanding, which not only healed me of serious stomach and bowel trouble, typhoid fever, and erysipelas, but illumined the Scriptures, opening up that great storehouse of spiritual truths which, as Paul says, are "spiritually discerned." Out of a full heart I thank God for His faithful servant, Mrs. Eddy, who had the vision, the love, and the courage to give to the world the "Key to the Scriptures" so that all who will may learn something of "the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God."

Since my healing in 1913, I have received many blessings from Christian Science. A friend urged me to try it for relief from a severe bilious attack and neuralgic headache, and I was not only healed of these but of kidney trouble of many years' standing, in one treatment. I knew my healing could come only from God, so bought "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" right away and studied the book earnestly in connection with the Bible, and I have been able to demonstrate its truths in so far as I have understood them. We have had many healings in the home. Croup, blood poisoning, and measles have been overcome, and for the help I get in solving the problems of daily life I am especially grateful. I am grateful for all the good received in my old church, as it paved the way in my thought for the acceptance of this great truth that does indeed set free. I am grateful also for our literature, in which I have always found the help needed from day to day. My heart goes out with deepest love and gratitude to our beloved Leader, who walked so close to God that she was enabled to give to the world this new-old truth.

I cannot let another day go by without expressing my husband's and my own deep gratitude for the healing of our eight-year-old son of a severe rupture which came about as the result of an accident. He asked me to treat him, and the soreness left very soon, but severe swelling persisted for nearly a year. No support was used, nor were any material means or medical opinions resorted to. I worked for him faithfully to the best of my understanding of Christian Science, and in September, 1918, the condition completely disappeared. The boy's father is not a student of Christian Science, but his thankfulness was as great as my own, if not greater, because his fear had been constant that the condition was incurable. He did not suggest material methods of healing at any time, but I realized afterwards that in his opinion Science was being put to a severe test.

We have had many healings in our family of five. Among them was the removal of a growth in my little daughter's nose. It was ejected from the nasal passage. I was filled with wonder as to its removal, for the child was but three years old and the passage only about half as large as the growth. For these signs of the power of the Word I am deeply grateful; but for the mental balance that a knowledge of the truth about God and His creation has brought to me, I am even more grateful, for Christian Science found me in a condition of mental chaos pitiful to contemplate. There is nothing discordant that Christ, Truth, cannot straighten out.—(Mrs.) Bessie H. Creighton, Milwaukee, Wis.

The study of Mrs. Eddy's writings was taken up as a last resort to get relief from a trouble with my knee which doctors were unable to heal. The healing was slow, but this compelled me to study Science and Health in conjunction with the Bible, which otherwise I might not have done. A foot which I had hurt while playing football and had been obliged to bandage for a good many years was almost entirely healed during a Christian Science lecture, and after three or four weeks' study the healing was complete.

In one treatment six years ago I was healed of rheumatism, to which I had been a slave for about twelve years and which was getting worse all the time. Having been taught that certain kinds of diet and weather would cause an attack, I had grown to fear these. When the practitioner told me that they had no power to cause suffering, but that it was the fear of them which had produced the bad results, I was much encouraged; and the statement proved to be true, for when the fear was overcome I was able, without any consequent suffering, to eat the same things and be exposed to the same easterly winds which had previously seemed to cause the trouble. From that day I laid aside all medicine and relied on the only true God, whom John describes as Love.

I am very thankful for the happiness which even a slight understanding of Truth has brought to me, and for the joy of looking forward to a greater understanding of God and His laws. I am more than grateful to Mrs. Eddy for revealing this truth.—R. G. F. Cohen, Kew Gardens, England.

With a thankful heart I send this testimony to tell a few of the many blessings we have received since coming into Christian Science. It prevents disease as well as cures it, when rightly applied. While our son was at camp, and the influenza seemed so prevalent, he was able to overcome the fear of it by clinging close to Principle, as taught in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. One day I fell down the cellar stairs and for a few moments felt as if my spine was terribly hurt, but by clinging to God's promises and declaring the truth of being I was able to get up. By the time my husband reached me, I was able to walk up the steps and then eat supper. I continued with my work and there was only a slight feeling of soreness occasionally.

When we first took up the study of Christian Science the remark was made that if any of our family ever got appendicitis, it would end fatally as we did not believe in operations and medicine. Being new in Science at the time I felt somewhat uneasy, but that disease also has been proved powerless. Our daughter had it in its worst form, with peritonitis, but by the help of a faithful practitioner the disease was overcome and vanished into its native nothingness. At one time I had kidney trouble and my back pained me terribly. My husband asked a practitioner to treat me, and in ten minutes the pain was gone and I was at the supper table eating with the rest of the family.

We have been in Christian Science now fifteen years and have not had a drop of medicine in our house during that time, but have relied entirely upon God for healing. This teaching has given us a clearer understanding of God and of man. My father being a minister I was instructed very carefully in the Bible and got considerable comfort out of it, but as time progressed the fear would come up, no matter how hard I tried to lead a consistent Christian life, that God might possibly reject me, that I might eventually be lost. That fear haunted me at times, but now I know, thanks to Mrs. Eddy's teaching, that as God's child it is impossible for me to be separated from Him. I cannot feel thankful enough to God for revealing Himself to us through Christ Jesus and again making the way plain through our faithful Leader.

(Mrs.) Matilda L. Wolff, Hector, Minn.

I wish to testify with gratitude to the healing and regenerating power of Christian Science. It is seven years since I first read the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. I had submitted to an operation, but the surgeon offered no encouragement, saying there was a growth that could not be removed and that I had only a few weeks to live. A friend, a Christian Scientist who had been a materia medica nurse, as I had been for many years, asked me if I would read the Christian Science literature and later sent me some and told me about the textbook and the Lesson-Sermons. I purchased Science and Health and read it diligently, also had help from practitioners. I saw that this teaching was the truth, and was freed from all discordant conditions.—(Miss) Robina I. Patton, Toledo, Ohio.

With heartfelt gratitude and thanksgiving I give my testimony to the great help that Christian Science has been to me in the overcoming of sickness and sorrow and various erroneous conditions. In the past seventeen years it has been our only physician, and has helped us to overcome fear and pain when dental work has been done. I had suffered from ill health since infancy, and for many years after the birth of my first child there was a discordant condition that none of the many physicians we consulted could correctly diagnose, each one advising some different medical treatment in England or abroad, till I was weary of all the so-called "cures" and gave up the struggle to find help through material remedies.

When a friend told us of Christian Science, I was disinclined to try any "new remedy" or to "change my religion." I little knew that the truth taught in Christian Science was that which I had been seeking for many years,—an uplifting, demonstrable, living faith. To please my husband I consented to see a practitioner, with the result that after a few treatments, and much study of the Bible and our textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, I knew I had found the truth, and with joy drew "water out of the wells of salvation," a salvation free to all here and now and always. The textbook flooded with light the Scriptures, "which are able to make thee wise unto salvation," and made clear "some things hard to be understood," unfolding them as ever helpful guidance in the problems of daily life. I was so overjoyed in finding the truth that I forgot all about the physical discord. Later on fear crept in and I again suffered; but the light of Truth soon dispelled the darkness of error and I was healed. Very frequent bad headaches have also been overcome, and we have been protected in accidents.

I am deeply grateful to Mrs. Eddy, who rediscovered this healing truth, also for the illuminating and helpful Christian Science literature. Above all I am thankful to God, who crowneth us "with lovingkindness and tender mercies."—(Mrs.) GRACE M. SHAW, Victoria, British Columbia, Canada.

I wish to express my gratitude for what Christian Science has done for me, as I have been helped in various ways. A very bad nervous trouble has been overcome, and I was healed of chills in one treatment and of a very sore throat in a few days. For about two years now I have relied on divine Love to supply all my needs, and we have been bountifully provided for in every way. I receive much good from the Lesson-Sermons and the Sentinels. The testimonies are especially encouraging to a beginner in Science. I feel that I never can be grateful enough to Christian Science and the loving ones who have helped me. I thank God for our Leader, Mrs. Eddy.

I wish to express my gratitude for the teaching of Christian Science. It has been a great help to me in business, because I am able to realize that God governs. I have a small workroom and have been able to demonstrate perfect harmony among the girls employed.

About three years ago I had a beautiful healing. I had only been asleep a very short time, when I awakened with a severe pain under my shoulders. It was the most intense pain I have ever experienced, and I lay as still as possible, though I felt that I wanted to scream. The Golden Text in the Lesson-Sermon of the previous week had been those beautiful words in Isaiah: "When the enemy shall come in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him." So I lay quiet and tried to know that as surely as the enemy was trying to come in like a flood, so surely the Spirit of the Lord would lift up the standard, if I put my trust in Him. I lay awake all the rest of the night holding on to the promise, and by the morning I felt much easier and was able to dress slowly and attend to my business as usual. By the evening I was perfectly well.

For all the help I have received I am deeply grateful.

(Miss) LUCY A. CROOK, Melbourne, Victoria, Australia.

I wish to express my appreciation and unbounded thankfulness for all that Christian Science has done for me in the past sixteen years. It has overcome sickness, sin, unhappiness, ignorance, and fear. During the influenza epidemic I was stricken with the disease in what seemed to be a very severe form; in fact, all the symptoms described by materia medica were present. As the suffering was intense I asked a practitioner for help and during that day the fever and most of the pain disappeared. The next morning, with the exception of a little weakness, I felt perfectly well, and two days later was able, without the slightest discomfort, to do my work driving a car for the motor corps, though the weather was unusually cold. My two brothers were at training camps where the disease seemed most rampant, and enjoyed the best of health, due to the knowledge that as ideas of divine Love they could not be made to suffer from the illusions of error.

In my experience in Christian Science every phase of evil to which it has been applied has melted into its native nothingness. In June, 1918, I graduated from a college which I entered four years before with the most inadequate preparation. This I am sure would have been impossible without the loving help of practitioners who kept reminding me that, as our Leader says on page 284 of Science and Health, "infinite Mind can have no starting-point, and can return to no limit," and that infinite Mind and not the human brain was my only source of intelligence. I can never fully express my gratitude for Christian Science. The Bible says, "Now are we the sons of God," and Mrs. Eddy shows us how to prove our inalienable rights as His sons in the overcoming of all untoward conditions.

(Miss) SIBYL WALKER, Salt Lake City, Utah.

After suffering a long time from an extremely nervous condition from which there seemed to be no relief, I became very much discouraged, thinking there was no help for me. A friend who had become interested in Christian Science visited my home, and seeing my discouraged condition told me what this teaching had done for her in one year. I had always ridiculed it, but impressed by her words my thought became more receptive. I attended a Christian Science service on the following Sunday, and was convinced that at last I had found what I had been seeking,—a God who answered prayer. Within a few days I was a changed woman, mentally and physically, and realized that my prayer had been answered. I tried to be obedient, to reflect more love, and to trust more in God, with the result of a complete and permanent healing. I was not only free from all sense of nervousness, but no longer required glasses, which had been used for years.

Since then I have been healed of varicose veins. A physician had told me that if they ever broke, the wound would never heal. They did burst, leaving the promised wound, but with the help of a practitioner this was overcome, proving that God's law is ever operative. My children have been healed of many ailments. A case of St. Vitus' dance was overcome at a time when it seemed as though the child would have to give up her school duties. After about six visits to a practitioner she realized the need of doing something for herself, and was healed. That was three years ago, and there has been no return of the trouble.

For all these proofs of the power of Truth, for the periodicals issued by The Christian Science Publishing Society, and for our dear Leader, Mrs. Eddy, who has shown through her writings what Life is and man's relationship to God, I am indeed very grateful.

Having been interested in Christian Science for seven years, I wish to give my testimony as to its healing power. Christian Science was presented to me in 1910, although I did not get interested in it until 1912. I did not take up the study primarily for physical help, but soon saw my need of both physical and moral healing. I was freed from a chronic bowel trouble, also the smoking habit of many years' standing; and the appetite for strong drink was overcome just by reading "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. During the summer of 1912 I received a severe cut on my face, penetrating to the bone.

A practitioner was called at once and in a few days the healing was effected without leaving a scar. Another time when gas almost overcame me, and some of my fellow workmen were obliged to quit work on account of the fumes, I again called for help through Christian Science and was all right in a few days. Last fall, while I was working in a mine, a large rock fell against my right foot, but the pain was overcome at once by declaring the truth, and I finished my day's work, though the swelling seemed to remain. Some trouble was experienced in removing my boot, but during the night the healing came and I went about my work the next day as usual.

I have had many proofs of God's protection, and words are inadequate to express my gratitude for all the benefits that I have received through this healing truth. My desire is to attain more understanding, that I may be of some benefit to my fellow men. The Christian Science periodicals are my daily companions.—L. L. Knudtson, Telluride, Colo.

Signs of the Times

[Ventura (Calif.) Free Press]

During this week [second week of July] a religious organization is holding a conference in Los Angeles, and among other things it is intended to take a few whacks at the Christian Science organization, according to published announcement.

One thing the churches which are attacking or attempting to attack the Christian Scientists ought to remember, and that is that the people of that church used to belong to other churches and they feel that they have found something better on which to pin their faith. Nagging and criticizing them is not going to return them to the old fold, nor is it going to accomplish anything for the naggers.

While the Free Press is not taking up the fight of the Christian Scientists, it abhors the action of the other church organizations in trying to break down the foundations of a faith. It smacks very much of church politics. . . . Every person has a right to his or her own belief in religion, and the average person yields to the organization that best suits his or her ideas of morality. If the ministers of the gospel who oppose Christian Science would show the people something better, perhaps the membership roll of that church would not grow so rapidly. But until they do, their opposition will only make indifferent people sit up and take notice, with the probable result that the Christian Science church will get a great majority of the new members.

The Christian Science church is not trying to force its articles of faith on the world, but is accepting those who accept its faith. It is said that Christian Science is in truth a science, and people who give it merely superficial thought are in no position to decide upon its merits. People of average and more than average intelligence seem to find that faith worthy of their support and deep interest. Let those who oppose this rapidly growing church hide their opposition behind a sincere effort to find a better way to reach the kingdom all men desire.

[The Congregationalist and Advance]

The capitalist or laborer whose life centers upon food, clothing, household furnishings, amusements, material satisfaction of any sort, instead of being a little lower than the angels is only one stage above the brute. He is as undernourished as his body would be if he never ate bread. He is missing the things that make life fine.

The work of the world is not done by capitalists and manual laborers only. Honest men engaged in any kind of honest work are all contributing to human progress. But God is the great workman. His ceaseless energy is bringing to pass designs far beyond our comprehension. We can work against Him. We can ignore and forget Him. But when once the world's toilers get a glimpse of the joy of working with God, then the labor problem will be solved.

If the Golden Rule, the Ten Commandments, and the Sermon on the Mount were in full working order in every heart, other laws, regulations, or covenants would scarce be needed.

Letters of Appreciation

Many letters of appreciation of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR and other Christian Science activities are constantly being received. These letters express what these activities mean to different individuals in various occupations and pursuits. The favorable comment that has been received on those already published indicates that they are welcome and helpful; therefore others will be published under the above heading. Extracts from such letters follow:

IT would require a great deal of space to tell you all the good points I continually see in The Christian Science Monitor. It is a great newspaper and one of the brightest and best I ever read. Every time I look it over I marvel at its accuracy, its typographical perfection, and the wonderful range of subjects it fully and brilliantly covers. It has few equals and no superiors, and it espouses a religion that appeals to the hopeful side of humanity, and which offers to human misery and human yearning an efficacious panacea. The Monitor is flawless from a newspaper standpoint, and mechanically and editorially it is a star of the first magnitude in the newspaper firmament.

THE Christian Science Monitor is one of the greatest newspapers of the country. It not only furnishes its readers with all of the important news of the world, but each issue contains many illustrated articles especially interesting from an instructive standpoint. The typography of the Monitor, too, is excellent. All in all, the newspaper is a model for others to follow.

LAST summer while attending summer school at a Woman's College, in the composition class we were asked to write a paragraph on "How I read the newspaper." I knew nothing of the instructor's attitude toward The Christian Science Monitor and felt a little reluctance toward writing about it for fear of arousing possible antagonism. Still, I barely glanced at the local papers and depended entirely for information upon the Monitor, so I decided to take my stand and rely upon Truth for my protection. As a result my paragraph was read in class and the comment was that the Monitor was itself one of the finest examples of perfect paragraphing. Both its editorials, literary style, and the quality of information were commended, and the professor remarked that she had allowed her subscription to lapse, owing to changing her residence for the summer, but that she was anxious to renew it. After that, the Monitor was mentioned several times in the further studying of paragraphing and, as Professor ——— ——— is regarded as an authority in both literature and composition, I was most grateful for the praise she bestowed upon our paper.

VOLUME XXII OCTOBER 25, 1919 NUMBER 8

Love and Fear

LOUISE SATTERTHWAITE

THE two words, "love" and "fear," represent opposites. It is only after one commences to have some understanding of Christian Science that this fact begins to be seen and comprehended. "The great miracle, to human sense, is divine Love," says Mrs. Eddy on page 560 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures." A far-reaching vista is opened before the thought when this statement is pondered. It would seem that even the human sense of love is sometimes almost a miracle,—that is, the truer human sense which approaches an unselfed love. Even among kith and kin, unselfish love is not any too general. Romantic love, pictured so eloquently by writer and poet, does not always measure up as something which is either altruistic or enduring. Scrutinized in the light of Christian Science, its roots are often found deep in the falsity called "life in matter." It has therefore within it the elements of fear. Even human mother love, the nearest of all affections to that which is unselfish and enduring, is in some instances instinctive rather than reasoning, sometimes fond and foolish and fearful rather than intelligently loving and wise.

Beyond these things the earth has been blessed by those who have brought to human love a gleam of the divine. In Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables" we see how astounded the wretched thief is by the love and forgiveness of the good bishop, when brought face to face with him after the theft of the candlesticks and the outrage of his hospitality. All of human nature is to some extent typified in this portrayal, for is not such unselfish love looked at askance, suspected, disbelieved in, by the unregenerate thought? Such a miracle it seems that it is put on trial, as it were, for some time before it is accepted. Yet every heart longs for it and seeks for it always. Once such love is seen or found, it is not thereafter forgotten. The individual who has learned to love in this way, sincerely and habitually, has mastered an inarticulate, universal language, understood wherever the sun rises and sets and, when finally accepted by the doubting thought, always as welcome to the tired heart of humanity as refreshing showers to drooping flowers. Christian Science reveals the glorious truth that since God is Love, every least expression of true love must be the reflection of the divine.

What, indeed, is love? Whence cometh it? We may define it in many terms. Love is beneficent, love is wise, love gives itself and would not be love unless it could reflect somewhat of itself to all and everything with which it comes in contact. Its energy and action are inexhaustible, continually and perpetually springing forth, continually renewed, continually undiminished, everlastingly just itself. Dictionaries cannot define its length, breadth, or volume, nor can they adequately describe it in words; yet the child knows love perhaps even better than the sage; the bird, beast, and flower—aye, all that seems to live—respond to its mighty influence. We say when we love that we take delight in those we love. We seek to serve and bless them, to protect and care for them, as much as lies within our power. One in the company of those who love him has no fear but rather joy and peace and a settled and continued expectation of greater and greater good. Even to the human sense "love casteth out fear," for the weary child knows no fear when the mother love haven is reached. The friend among loving friends is at ease, knowing that even his faults are forgiven, his mistakes pardoned, that he is loved for what he is, and all loving provision for his wants has been made.

We see also the unselfed love whereby an individual loves a cause or a work and gives himself and his life to its furtherance. All of these examples of that mysterious force called love help to make earth brighter and better amid the turmoil resulting from that opposite thing called fear, which in its turn breeds envy, greed, dishonesty, jealousy, malice, hate—all outgrowths of the thought which is never concerned with giving but always with getting. Fear lives for itself; love lives for others. Fear grasps and clutches, pilfers from others openly or secretly, sickens at sight of the possessions of others, is convinced that there is "not enough of anything to go round," is necessarily destructive in its methods, since it would trample, rend, push aside, or commit any depredation under the spell of its own insane belief that the only way of self-preservation is in the slaying of all or anything which might deprive it of that which it deems necessary.

Life in matter is fear personified, and who can define it or hope to understand it? We see in it the essence of nonintelligence, the fighting of beasts over a bone of unreal pleasure, the eating of bread that does not satisfy, stupefaction by means of drugs and drink in the effort to get away from its own tormenting consciousness. We see it bowing in submission to its own crude law of reproduction, however foolish and futile. The belief of life in matter, which is always fear, leads to the belief of death in matter, and is striving against death from the first second of its so-called existence. The rule and instinct of the whole deception seems to be fear as opposed to that love which is the law of life in Spirit.

What wonder, then, that the disciples heard with amazement the words of the wisest man the world has ever known, when he told them that those who were poor in spirit, who mourned and were meek, who hungered and thirsted after righteousness, who suffered persecution, were blessed! The persistent reversal by this great Teacher of all that had been thought materially good in human living, doubtless confounded and amazed them, until turning from the confusion of nonintelligence, they commenced to study the order, the harmony of intelligence, the positive rather than the negative of all existence, the living which is loving, because there can be no fear in it and no reason to fear. For the creator who is Love gives to His creatures every beneficence, surrounds them with care, provides all good for them, and continues to impart endless and infinite blessings because He cannot do otherwise. Herein is found the meaning of that wondrous saying from the Scriptures, "The Lord shall rejoice in his works."

Love, then, gives and imparts all good. Does not the object of all of this beneficence receive and know its blessings? Is it not happy therein? Certainly this must be so or Love's purpose would be entirely thwarted. The child of divine Love, conscious of happiness, rests more sweetly than any human child in the heaven of its mother's love. The child of divine Love shares all good with all, and with no more effort than the flower makes to show its glowing colors or breathe forth its fragrance upon the surrounding atmosphere; as naturally as a bird sings its rapture, and the star glorifies God by its pure sparkling, never fearing to give back again by reflection all that it sees forever enthroned in inextinguishable loveliness in the divine Mind, where it dwells forever. Fear is not there, nor can it ever enter where Love perpetually imparts and is imparted.

Healing through Truth

GRAY MONTGOMERY

TO some people Christian Science healing comes instantaneously, to others it seems slow; but the process is the same with all. Healing always comes when false beliefs are replaced by right ideas, when mental reconstruction has been accomplished. Mrs. Eddy plainly tells us that the cause of all disease is either fear, sin, or ignorance; therefore when fear, sin, and ignorance are removed through Truth, healing must inevitably take place. In instantaneous healing the lowering clouds of fearful, sinful, and ignorant thinking are cleared away at once by the resplendent light of Truth's appearing. In other cases it seems to take longer to dispel the erroneous mental state, but the mists must eventually disappear, because God is good and the only power. It is quite evident that health, happiness, and harmony, yes, the kingdom of heaven, must come into every person's experience just in the proportion that right thoughts based upon Truth constitute his thinking.

Jesus declared, "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free," and he proved all that he said by his wonderful works of healing. He constantly expressed the truth in word and in deed. Because he was a clear transparency for the light of divine Truth, only pure, righteous, and loving thoughts were entertained by Jesus. He clearly understood the truth, even though he did not directly answer Pilate's question, "What is truth?" Mrs. Eddy has given to us the clear, scientific definition and explanation of Truth. We learn in Christian Science that Truth is God, the infinite, omniscient Mind, whence proceeds only that which is good, real, and eternal. The opposite of Truth or the absence of Truth must be nonexistence, or a lie. Error, matter, sin, sickness, death, all evil, all discord, all imperfections, are simply false beliefs, illusions,—which seem to be, but really are not. Truth is divine Principle, Spirit, Life, Soul, perfect Love. Truth's expression or idea is the real man, defined in Genesis as God's image and likeness.

On page 295 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" Mrs. Eddy writes: "The mortal mind through which Truth appears most vividly is that one which has lost much materiality—much error—in order to become a better transparency for Truth. Then, like a cloud melting into thin vapor, it no longer hides the sun." Only pure living and right thinking will enable the Christian Scientist to become a clear transparency for Truth. As we yearn to grow more Christlike and as we express this pure desire by being patient under difficulties, by being kind and loving in the midst of jarring discords, so we learn to rise above self-will, self-pity, self-esteem, self-pride, all selfishness. As we succeed in conquering self, in overcoming our own errors, we gain humility and become better able to help others in the battle of life.

Christ Jesus knew the truth and it enabled him to reflect the splendor of immortal Life and Love, to transmit Truth's radiant rays and thereby bring healing to all who sought the spiritual help of his pure and powerful thought. Through his divine understanding our blessed Way-shower was able to accomplish all things, to overcome the world, to demonstrate complete triumph over all error, even to rise above the death sentence in his resurrection and final ascension. Only by following his footsteps in the straight and narrow way which he trod, which he taught and demonstrated for the salvation of all mankind, shall we be able to gain the same perfect, spiritual understanding of Truth.

The light of Truth always shines through purity and goodness. The darkness of all error, sin, discord, disease, death, must disappear before the brightness of Truth's presence. The dreams, dogmas, fictions, theories, all the false beliefs of mortals, must go out before Truth's radiant unfolding. Truth's spiritual ideas, the spiritual beings peopling the realm of infinite Mind, possessing by reflection all goodness and happiness, forever live harmoniously together as children of God. The glorious consummation is approaching when it will be universally demonstrated that, as Mrs. Eddy says in Science and Health (p. 470), "The relations of God and man, divine Principle and idea, are indestructible in Science; and Science knows no lapse from nor return to harmony, but holds the divine order or spiritual law, in which God and all that He creates are perfect and eternal, to have remained unchanged in its eternal history."

Place

LUELLA M. MACARTHUR

WE cannot think of anything without, consciously or unconsciously, taking into consideration its relation to something else; and there is no relation except that coming through position; that is, through the place or order in which one particular thing stands, or is maintained, to other things, specific and general. On page 475 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" Mrs. Eddy tells us that man "is the compound idea of God, including all right ideas." In the light of this comprehensive statement we see that it is impossible to conceive of any idea, be it great or small, without considering its relation to God, and hence to man.

Idea never has to wait to find its place; neither is place ever idle waiting for idea to fill it. From the beginning they are inseparable. Thus, strictly speaking, one never has to look for a better or more advantageous place in which he may reflect God, because wherever he finds himself, at whatever instant, there is the place to be spiritually active. Nevertheless, through demonstrating or proving the spiritual fact that idea is always in its right place, it frequently develops that a Christian Scientist will find himself in new surroundings which are apparently richer in opportunity than his previous environment, or he will engage in new activities amid his old surroundings. In either case there will come changes in his human affairs and circumstances, which these new conditions make inevitable.

It follows, then, that whatever place we may occupy at any given time, right there is the point in our individual progress where we must prove that we are ready for the blessing of further unfoldment; that is, are able to recognize and accept more of the truth than we have yet known. Since every new problem is an added incentive to earnestness, loyalty, faith, labor, and receptivity to things spiritual, we find every place a starting point from which to respond to a call to higher duties. If we answer this call whole-heartedly, we shall always see the material situation changing, swiftly or slowly, according to the rate of improvement in our own mental state.

We can find great encouragement in the fact that there are always opportunities and means to better our mental condition. Indeed, we learn with certainty that there can be no real betterment anywhere in our affairs until this is done. There is but one way really to better this condition, and that is to learn to think aright, habitually to measure our thoughts with the quality of thought expressed through Jesus' teaching and manifested in his healing work. Mrs. Eddy through her prolific expression of the truth, her labor of love, her exposition of life, contained in her writings, shows us plainly, inexorably but tenderly, how to do this; and until we practice her teaching and faithfully strive to have that Mind "which was also in Christ Jesus," we cannot justly call ourselves Christian Scientists. To the degree that we do this, we find ourselves in our right order, or place; that is, we know man as the image and likeness of God.

A common difficulty here is that we are all prone to outline or plan, deciding beforehand how and when this change is to come. This is only an attempt to set up our own will or choice as a ruler, forgetting the eternal announcement, "The Lord God omnipotent reigneth." We read in Psalms, "Thou hast set my feet in a large room." This is a definite affirmation that we are not constrained or hindered, whatever the seeming may be, from effecting any needed mental change, and this is the only change that is ever needed on our part; for the outward results are irrevocably promised,—"Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." If, through our human self-determination, we select and occupy a new material location of activity, it may not be long before we learn that we have not really gone into a new place, but have carried with us all our unsolved problems, which reappear, it may be many times, under new or old forms, until they are worked out according to Principle. Then the error will go into its native nothingness before our improved understanding of the truth. To effect a change in our situation, then, we must consider as altogether mental whatever may seem inharmonious regarding it, and so prove that idea is in its right place, indeed can be nowhere else. We can do this only through learning more of Principle, with a corresponding loss of so-called knowledge of matter. The proof will invariably be in proportion to the degree that we know Truth, and hence, the truth of the situation.

Reality itself never changes. The only thing that changes is our own state of consciousness, and through this changing we attain new viewpoints where all things are new, because seen through increased enlightenment. The more we learn of Principle the more we experience this spiritual newness, this renewing. It is through this perpetually clearer unfoldment of divine Principle that proof is brought forth showing that idea is never away from its source, infinite Mind, God, where man lives and moves and has his being, and we are thus assured that man is ever in his place, and is forever the idea of God. Place and idea, then, can never be considered apart from each other. The reverse is true concerning mortal concepts. Whatever mortal mind may claim to be or to have, it possesses no place.

Then, as far as man recognizes his true mental status, or place of standing, and acts on that basis, just so far he finds himself entering into his divine heritage, the one and only right place for man, the idea of Principle, even the kingdom of heaven. In order to do this he must turn unreservedly to Spirit, since, as our Leader tells us, "Spirit is reached only through the understanding and demonstration of eternal Life and Truth and Love" (Science and Health, p. 279). This makes it clearly evident that if we would prove here and now that place and idea are inseparable, we must through loyal practice of Christian Science demonstrate the all-presence and all-power of Life, Truth, Love. It is through the demonstration of this divine trinity, or threefold essence of Principle, God, that we see and prove man to be "a living witness to and perpetual idea of inexhaustible good" (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 83). Of necessity, then, place being concomitant with idea, man has an unlimited place,—that is, his place is always ample for him to do whatever is right for him to do, this being one of the manifestations of divine coincidence. Neither fleshly bonds nor other mortal inventions can fetter man and hinder him from moving freely in his own place. If obstacles seem to develop, or hindrances to multiply, we may be sure that mortal mind is claiming place in our thought for some of its concepts or beliefs. These, however, are always counterfeit and there is no place where they have a legitimate right to be.

When our own thought has cleared as to identity being the idea of Principle, we shall learn that we are already established in our right place, and can be nowhere else. We shall also learn that no good work, no righteous effort, no true knowledge, is ever lost, but continues in its forever unfolding activities; and with the constantly developing understanding of idea, place continues to reveal itself in exact ratio, and through it all shines the promise of a mansion in our Father's house, here at hand as soon as we are ready to occupy it. First, however, we must fully occupy the place of the present moment "until he come whose right it is," and we know ourselves even as we are known of the Father, no longer sojourners and strangers, but "joint-heirs with Christ." Then we shall "come with singing unto Zion" and shall "rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory."

A Flood Tide of Love

OTTO LUNDEHN

"THE way to extract error from mortal mind is to pour in truth through flood-tides of Love," Mrs. Eddy tells us on page 201 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures." The truth of this statement has been proved by countless numbers of human beings, but one of the first to establish it by evidence was Noah. "Noah," we are told in the sixth chapter of Genesis, "was a just man and perfect in his generations, and Noah walked with God." He knew, therefore, of the flood which was to come to destroy evil,—in fact was expecting it. He knew equally well, however, that only good could come from God, and so he prepared himself to receive it. When angels, God's thoughts, came to him in ever increasing clearness, he was ready to receive them, until his whole consciousness and that of his family was flooded with good.

"God is no respecter of persons," however, and so the glad tidings were brought to all the people; but they closed their ears to the message of Truth and hid behind a wall of material beliefs and pleasures. Increasing efforts on the part of Noah to share this abundant supply of good only increased the opposition; but the "flood-tides of Love" kept on working, until at last the walls broke down. The houses built upon sand collapsed under the abundance of Truth, destroying much materiality. On and on swept the truth, cleaning out each nook and corner and demonstrating the nothingness of an opposite, until only good remained to the consciousness of Noah. Then Noah realized that, as later on the psalmist said, "the Lord sitteth upon the flood; yea, the Lord sitteth King for ever."

What about the coming of the second flood? In the twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew we read these words of Christ Jesus: "But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." This passage is generally taken to mean that the state of the world at the second coming of the Christ, Truth, will be the same as in the time of Noah; but does it not rather say that the coming shall be the same, that another flood tide of Love shall come to the world? And is not this prophecy being fulfilled right now? Yes, through the selfless work of our revered Leader, Mary Baker Eddy, countless numbers of men and women have been enabled to see clearly the signs of this coming. What can we do to share in it? This is clearly set forth on page 185 of "Miscellaneous Writings," where Mrs. Eddy says, "Self-renunciation of all that constitutes a so-called material man, and the acknowledgment and achievement of his spiritual identity as the child of God, is Science that opens the very flood-gates of heaven; whence good flows into every avenue of being, cleansing mortals of all uncleanness, destroying all suffering, and demonstrating the true image and likeness."

If proper preparations have been made and we have faithfully followed the advice of our beloved Leader, right here and now the promise as given through the prophet Malachi will be abundantly fulfilled: "Prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

"Lord, teach us to pray"

EUGÉNIE PAUL JEFFERSON

THE plea of the disciples to be taught of their Master the right concept of prayer is echoed by the beginner in the study of Christian Science. Before the great fact of an infinite, incorporeal God had been fully accepted, and the understanding of heaven as an eternal condition of spiritual harmony had been attained, there had appeared to one seeker after Truth a feeling that something vital had been taken away from prayer. This seeming loss was afterwards proved to be gain, for with the giving up of the limited concept of God,—a God who, seated upon a great white throne in a material heaven whose streets were paved with gold, judged His children and forgave or punished, blessed or condemned, according to His will,—came the childlike receptivity to the Christian Science teaching of God as infinite good.

Through the study of the chapter on Prayer in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," the textbook of Christian Science, the former prayer of beseeching gave place to the prayer of understanding, yea, of gratitude, and the young student rejoiced in the comprehension of the words spoken to the elder son when the prodigal returned to his father's house, "Son, thou art ever with me, and all that I have is thine." All good has been the full heritage of the real man forever. Unlike the heir to material possessions, who inherits only his share, each son of the heavenly Father inherits all. Can we ask for more?

To obtain this understanding of prayer, Mrs. Eddy counseled the students of Christian Science to search the Scriptures and ponder upon their message, even as the virgin mother pondered the sweet secret of the angel vision. We do not have to plead to have the loving promises of the Bible fulfilled, but we need to understand the conditions of their fulfillment. Many of the promises have conditions attached to them, and only as we seek in prayer and knock at the heavenly door of understanding, can the fulfillment be demonstrated. Writing upon the subject of prayer, Henry Drummond says, "Men pray for things which they are quite unable to receive, or altogether unwilling to pay the price for."

The great Teacher of humanity in his three years' work among men gives us many helpful examples of the way in which he used the means of prayer to accomplish his mission. At the tomb of Lazarus his prayer was one of thankfulness. He did not ask to have the dead raised to life; he lifted up his eyes and thanked God that his prayer was heard. The great Master looked above and beyond the material evidence of death to the divine evidence of Life as God, ever present and eternal. Jesus did not need the proof given by the resurrection of Lazarus that his prayer was heard and answered. His gratitude proved his understanding that the demonstration was made even before those who stood about the tomb received the material evidence.

The disciples whose thoughts had been changed by his teachings from a material to the spiritual concept of Life, felt the need of knowing how to pray. Upon a certain occasion when Jesus himself was at prayer, one of his disciples said to him, "Lord, teach us to pray, as John also taught his disciples." Then followed the prayer of prayers, of which the theologian Schaff said, "It is the most comprehensive of all forms of devotion." The scientific interpretation of the Lord's Prayer, as given by Mrs. Eddy in Science and Health, may be said to have removed any possibility of this prayer losing for the Christian Scientist its vital breath; as our Leader says on page 16 of Science and Health: "The highest prayer is not one of faith merely; it is demonstration. Such prayer heals sickness, and must destroy sin and death. It distinguishes between Truth that is sinless and the falsity of sinful sense."

Among the prayers of Jesus which are recorded, including the model prayer referred to above, is the prayer of fervent thanksgiving; the petition for strength to submit the human will to the divine; the prayer on the cross for the forgiveness of his enemies; and that which might be called the prayer of glorification, which includes the entire seventeenth chapter of John, and was made by the Master just before his betrayal by his false disciple Judas. This prayer brought comfort and assurance to the faithful followers of Jesus, to whom he declared that he had "overcome the world." The Master prayed, and it was indeed a prayer of glorification. His real Gethsemane was past. There was no further need to ask for strength to pass through the great ordeal which was to prove to the world that human blood could be shed and yet the everlasting life of man remain untouched.

The glory of Jesus of Nazareth began before the ascension. There was no reproach, no resentment. When Judas departed into the night after having received the sop which marked him as the betrayer, Jesus said, "Now is the Son of man glorified." Through his triumph over death and the grave, Jesus caused these experiences to serve as an everlasting proof to mankind that the understanding of Life is the master of the belief in death. Through the prayer of understanding every bitter experience of mortal life can be made to serve rather than to master. Ingratitude, hate, all sin and disease afford opportunities for demonstrating God's all-power, and one may through his overcoming prove himself to be master of all that is unlike good.

"Could ye not watch?"

L. D. CRABTREE

ON a particular Sunday morning while attending our regular church service, I received a great sense of rebuke. The day was a most beautiful one, and with a heart overflowing with gratitude I entered the church. After the first hymn and the reading of the Scriptural lesson for the day, and after the silent prayer, my thoughts seemed to drift away from the service. Seemingly I could not keep my attention fixed upon it. Presently the great desire came over me to glean every word of the truth that was being read to the congregation. The strong words of Jesus our Wayshower came to me, "Could ye not watch?" and with them came the sense of rebuke. Could I not watch during this short interval, when in fact it was my great duty to be ever alert to receive and demonstrate the truth?

The sayings of Christ Jesus are applicable to daily life, and if we will only apply them they will be of much comfort to us. It has also been proved that with the daily applying of the teachings of Christian Science, the greatest obstacles fade into their native nothingness. We should strive to learn spiritual lessons from the many happenings about us. A great and valuable lesson can be learned from the formation of a pearl. Those who are familiar with pearls know that at some time or other a foreign particle has lodged inside the shell of the oyster, thus creating a discordant condition, and as a result of the continuous efforts of the oyster to overcome the consequent irritation, eventually a pearl is formed. In like manner we can all in our daily lives be forming pearls by overcoming the apparent trials and difficulties which confront us.

I can never express in words my gratitude for the knowledge I have of Christian Science, which enables me to discern these lessons spiritually, and for Mrs. Eddy, who has unlocked the Scriptures and has graciously given us the key.

My Garden

SALLIE E. TABOR

I KNOW a hidden garden, where
In Mind's sweet solitude,
Pure thoughts unfold like flowers rare,
And nothing thrives but good.

Through patient years of love and toil,
Uprooting weeds of strife,
Desire and prayer enriched the soil,
To grow the things of Life.

And when my thoughts are pure and calm,
And earthly longings cease,
'Tis then I find Love's healing balm,
'Mid flowering paths of peace.

For Love is the transforming power,
The Life of everything;
Each budding thought bursts into flower,
In Love's eternal spring.

Selected Articles

["The True Witness"—The Christian Science Monitor, Boston, U. S. A., Aug. 14, 1919]

Christian Science teaches every student very early in his experience that it is both important and necessary to translate the Bible into its spiritual or metaphysical meaning, and until we do this we fail to gain or demonstrate the vital healing power which its golden treasures disclose when revealed in their true light. It was the recognition of this great fact that enabled the apostle to the Gentiles to observe that "the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him," and then added, "Neither can he know them,"—that is subject them to scientific proof or demonstration,—"because they are spiritually discerned."

Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer of Christian Science for this day and age, has pointed to this very truism throughout her writings, and, what is most important of all, has taught us how we can gain this demonstrable knowledge of Holy Writ. She says in the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 241): "Take away the spiritual signification of Scripture, and that compilation can do no more for mortals than can moonbeams to melt a river of ice," and adds most significantly, "The error of the ages is preaching without practice." Christ Jesus demonstrated the truth far more than he talked about it. His recorded sayings are very meager in number in comparison with the long list of his mighty works brought down to us through the gospels, and our attention is forcefully called to this by Mrs. Eddy, whose teachings have enabled us to comprehend that what Jesus said was merely the outcome of what he did.

Now, on the basis of what he actually did, was Christ Jesus a true witness, and if so what was his testimony? He said: "If I bear witness of myself, my witness is not true," showing clearly that he could not bear true witness,—testify to the truth,—if he gave less than the entire glory to God. After referring to John as having been sent to bear witness to the truth, he gave utterance to these immortal words: "But I have greater witness than that of John: for the works which the Father hath given me to finish, the same works that I do, bear witness of me, that the Father hath sent me." He called upon the people to believe in his divine mission for the very works' sake, upon his bearing true witness, giving evidence in all that he did for sinful and suffering humanity. He was not bearing witness of himself, but of his Father, who is Love. And moreover it was his unfailing record of good works that proved then and for all time that he was a true witness. His testimony was the testimony of Spirit, of the only true God, who is Mind, and of His infinite manifestation, the universe including the true man, the idea of Mind. The model of the true witness as expressed in the earthly career of Christ Jesus shows us to-day and for all time that in the exact ratio in which we emulate his example can we bear witness to the truth. This testifying does not merely call for a confession of faith or subscribing to church tenets, but demands the proving of the unreality of sin and disease for ourselves and others.

The command to bear true witness is specifically covered in the ninth commandment, though stated negatively. "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour." This is actually embodied in each of the Ten Commandments, which Moses doubtless presented in their different phases in the hope of penetrating the dull ears of the children of Israel, who had fallen into the grossest form of idol worship. While this command should of course be scrupulously observed in its literal sense, as in a court of law, yet it is obvious with a moment's reflection that much of its value would be lost if confined to this interpretation. Here again must we seek the spiritual meaning, unfolding to our understanding in the light of Christian Science. We break this command not only when we fail to tell the truth concerning our neighbor in mere oral or written word, but whenever we entertain aught but angels,—God's thoughts,—about all things. If we are angry, revengeful, or are guilty of sowing seeds of discord, hate, malice, and the like, either in ourselves or in others, we are bearing false witness, declaring for imperfection and evil rather than supporting the truth of being. Christian Science teaches us to resolve things into thoughts, for we are truly living in a thought world. When we do this we are faced with the unalterable fact that we are either bearing true witness, knowing and declaring the truth that makes free, or else we are bearing false witness, fastening on ourselves or others the lie that man can be aught but spiritual, an idea of divine Mind.

The complement of the ninth commandment is the injunction to love our neighbor as ourselves. The Founder of Christianity coupled this with the command to have no other gods and told his followers that there were no greater commandments than these. Mrs. Eddy refers to "Love thy neighbor as thyself" as a divine idea (Science and Health, p. 88). We can never love after this fashion until we learn that God is Love and not a god possessed of human passions and emotions, as He had been believed to be. This is the great lesson that Christian Science is teaching, not by mere abstractions, but by its message of healing, showing us that Christianity is practiced here and now, accomplishing the same mighty works as in the streets of Capernaum and Jerusalem two thousand years ago, proving that the true witness is manifested throughout all ages, the Christ, or Truth, the Comforter that was promised would abide with us forever.

Mrs. Eddy has summed it all up in the following: "God, without the image and likeness of Himself, would be a nonentity, or Mind unexpressed. He would be without a witness or proof of His own nature." This is on page 303 of Science and Health, and on page 411 we read: "If Spirit or the power of divine Love bear witness to the truth, this is the ultimatum, the scientific way, and the healing is instantaneous."

[W. Stuart Booth in Denver (Colo.) Jewish News]

The kindly and tolerant thought toward Christian Science, expressed in an article dealing with Jews and Christian Science, is much appreciated. As stated by the contributor, Christian Scientists are individualistic, for they recognize the fact that salvation from sin, sickness, and all un-Godlike conditions is not vicarious, but can be gained only by each individual guiding his own living and thinking in accordance with the Ten Commandments. This individualism of Christian Scientists is not selfishness, however, nor can it lead thereto; for Christian Science stresses the further command of God, voiced by Moses, "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself." The charge that the great problems and movements of the present age do not concern Christian Scientists, is refuted by The Christian Science Monitor, the international daily newspaper published by The Christian Science Publishing Society in Boston. This paper is generally acknowledged as a fearless and leading champion of every worthy cause, and it has espoused the cause of persecuted Jews more consistently and vigorously than any other daily paper, with the possible exception of some strictly Hebrew paper.

"Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord" is the basis of Christian Science teaching and practice. On page 340 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" Mrs. Eddy writes: "The First Commandment is my favorite text. It demonstrates Christian Science. It inculcates the triunity of God, Spirit, Mind; it signifies that man shall have no other spirit or mind but God, eternal good, and that all men shall have one Mind. The divine Principle of the First Commandment bases the Science of being, by which man demonstrates health, holiness, and life eternal. One infinite God, good, unifies men and nations; constitutes the brotherhood of man; ends wars; fulfils the Scripture, 'Love thy neighbor as thyself;' annihilates pagan and Christian idolatry,—whatever is wrong in social, civil, criminal, political, and religious codes; equalizes the sexes; annuls the curse on man, and leaves nothing that can sin, suffer, be punished or destroyed."

Although there may be many differing concepts of God, it is perfectly obvious that there can be but one infinite God, but one infinite creator of an infinite, eternal universe. The proof of the correctness of one's concept of God lies in its effect in his life, even as was promised by Moses when he voiced the thought of God toward man in these words: "Ye shall serve the Lord your God, and he shall bless thy bread, and thy water; and I will take sickness away from the midst of thee." Christian Scientists rejoice that this promise has been fulfilled to them in a measurable and encouraging extent, and they recognize that the limitation in connection with its fulfillment is due, not in the least to the one God, but to their insufficient apprehension of and obedience to God's unchanging law of justice and harmony.

[Willis D. McKinstry in The Blue Rapids (Kan.) Times]

Christian Science has awakened the human consciousness from a mere belief in the Word of God as found in the Holy Bible to the scientific knowledge of the teachings and demonstrations of Christ Jesus, whereby mankind establish their faith by their works. The Galilean Prophet not only preached the gospel of Christianity but the greater portion of his ministry was devoted to healing the sick and sinning. Jesus' life offers to humanity a present salvation through works, rather than a blind trust or belief in a blissful hereafter. His demonstrations proved the truth of his teachings and made the way clear for mortals; thus he said, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto my Father." Then he gave that rule whereby all who profess to be his followers might know or prove for themselves whether or not they are really worshiping the Father in spirit and in truth: "And these signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover."

Sin and sickness are unreal because they are untrue; they are untrue because they have no foundation in Principle; they are without cause, substance, or law; thus their claim of reality is truly suppositional. The fundamentals of mathematics do not know or treat of mistakes: no rule of application is given whereby mistakes can be made. Yet this law of numbers does impart an infallible rule for demonstration, and he who honestly applies its teachings will avoid the universal claim or belief of mistakes and thereby prove for himself the truth of numbers. So it is with the truth of being, the Science of existence. God is. The universe and man exist because of this fact. The teachings of Christian Science reveal to mankind the scientific Principle and rule of life which admit of nothing unlike God, thereby clearly showing that into the consciousness which is filled with the spiritual knowledge and glory of God, nothing can enter "that defileth . . . or maketh a lie." If Christianity does not impart this clear, comprehensive, and demonstrable way of the Christ, it is futile to humanity.

[Willard J. Welch in Mallard (Iowa) Independent]

Our critic says, "We do not dispute for a minute as to the healings that Christian Science claims, because if the devil can oppress he can lift the oppression." Healings are undeniably good. According to Scripture: "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." Either the Bible, therefore, is not true, or the quotation from our critic is not true. Jesus asked, "Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

Our critic further says, "We admit that God did not create the devil, but He did make an angel that made a devil out of himself." The Bible teaches that God made everything, and "saw every thing that he had made, and, behold, it was very good." Is there anything in good out of which evil could be made? God is wholly good. Habakkuk says: "Thou art of purer eyes than to behold evil, and canst not look on iniquity," hence God could not have made a devil nor anything out of which a devil could be made.

Evil or devil can be only the supposititious opposite of good—a belief which Truth destroys. Belief, of itself, is nothing. If proved true it ceases to be a belief, and if proved false it disappears. Its seeming power is the counterfeit of Truth. Evil is the child of ignorance. It thrives in darkness, but vanishes with the light. Jesus taught this, for he came to destroy the works of darkness. He could not destroy one iota of reality, yet the Bible tells us he came to destroy "him that had the power of death, that is, the devil." In the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, we read on page 186, "If evil is as real as good, evil is also as immortal." When therefore our friend says, "If there is no devil, then Jesus had no mission," it is plain that he fails to understand the mission of our Master.

Because Christian Science heals and saves, it is salvation to the needy, rich, and poor. Ask the man who has been healed by it, if Christian Science is "without salvation," and he will tell you, "Once I was sick, but now I am well;" even as the man in John's gospel declared, "One thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see."

Poverty is a too familiar discordant condition. That Christian Scientists as a class are well-to-do, bespeaks the fact that they have a religion which brings to them undivided blessings. Jesus said, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness." This they strive to obey, and by their obedience to it they are proving his further saying that "all these things shall be added unto you," "for your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things." Christian Science is applicable to all human need, for it is the law of divine Love, requiring only to be understood and practiced.

Our critic's statement that "in Mrs. Eddy's book there are some true statements," is best answered by Mrs. Eddy's own words on page 547 of the textbook: "If one of the statements in this book is true, every one must be true, for not one departs from the stated system and rule. You can prove for yourself, dear reader, the Science of healing, and so ascertain if the author has given you the correct interpretation of Scripture."

A Colorado clergyman recently said: "I have learned that the idea most people have of Christian Science is an erroneous one and that the thing so often attacked as Christian Science is not Christian Science at all. I am not a Christian Scientist. There are some things upon which we differ; there are more things upon which we agree; and the few things upon which we differ should not prevent us from loving each other and living and working together for the glory of God and of men." Is not this attitude of constructive helpfulness among Christians better than wholesale condemnation and criticism?

Extracts from Letters

"Previous to entering the service, I had never taken any special interest in Christian Science. I had often picked up my mother's books and read, but with little understanding. After entering the Army I determined to make a thorough study, and at first not having a set of books myself I would borrow from the other fellows, who were glad to help in any way they could. As a chauffeur I had the opportunity of driving around, and have visited the Christian Science reading rooms. Here in France I have been at Romorantin, Nevers, and Paris, and have also attended the Sunday church services in Paris. I was fortunate enough to be located in the same area with a Christian Science chaplain here in France, and we have been holding our Sunday services and Wednesday evening meetings regularly, using the chaplain's room for a reading room.

"I have found Christian Science not only an ever present help for physical ailments but a guide and protection in everyday life. At our first camp in France an attack of influenza was overcome in twenty-four hours. Once while driving my automobile the front wheel was broken in turning to avoid a flooded road, causing the car to go over the bank and land in the river. Through the protection of Principle no one was injured. I am very grateful for the many blessings received from Christian Science."

"I desire to express a few words of gratitude for what Christian Science has done for me, especially for the demonstrations I have by my slight understanding been able to make since I have been in the Army. At a time when I needed aid in the worst way possible, I found my friends of Truth in Cour-Cheverny. I was sent over to France as an interpreter, a work for which I thought myself absolutely unfitted. The truth was made manifest when I strove to figure out the problem which confronted me. Just at the time when I was about to be sent to Germany, I was offered a place in the band temporarily and finally permanently. It was clear that I had found my right place, since music has been my chief study and interest so far all my life. I have made many friends among the French people of the village, enabling me to learn their customs, traditions, and life, in which I am most interested. For these and many other demonstrations, I can never adequately express my thankfulness."

"Christian Science has proved its worth to me again and again in the many years I have been a member of this church; but during the past three months I have realized more than ever the untold value of the teachings of our beloved Leader, Mrs. Eddy; during these three months I have been healed of the use of tobacco and other troubles of a more grave nature, to mortal belief."

Symptoms of Recovery

The man whom sickness assails is tempted to recount his symptoms and inquire of some authority what particular disease they may indicate. Then his medical adviser turns over page by page his mental pictures of disease until that one is found from which he can name his patient's trouble. Now the patient may have thought that perhaps he would find easement as soon as he knew this particular name, but he actually finds that with the name goes a series of laws or settled beliefs which are supposed to constitute a program for him. He is, as it were, put in prison and must pay the price of such and such a round of suffering, of so many days or weeks of confinement, before he can go free.

In one of her addresses Mrs. Eddy makes answer to the question, "How is the healing done in Christian Science?" by saying (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 96): "It is not one mind acting upon another mind; it is not the transference of human images of thought to other minds; it is not supported by the evidence before the personal senses,—Science contradicts this evidence; it is not of the flesh, but of the Spirit. It is Christ come to destroy the power of the flesh; it is Truth over error; that understood, gives man ability to rise above the evidence of the senses, take hold of the eternal energies of Truth, and destroy mortal discord with immortal harmony,—the grand verities of being."

Were we to accept the diagnosis of the world's condition from the symptoms reported in the sensational press, and listen to the prophets who lay out a program of continued illness, then the heart might fail. The story comes from many lands of the impatient ravages of arrogant self-will, of vexatious persecutions of the honest and conscientious, of riot, larceny, and lynching, of broken truce and violated oath, and therefore we find what our Master spoke of, "Men's hearts failing them for fear." But he who was the great Physician said to his disciples concerning these things, "When ye shall hear of wars and commotions, be not terrified: for these things must first come to pass; but the end is not by and by." Then speaking of the persecutions out of which they would be delivered he said: "There shall not an hair of your head perish. In your patience possess ye your souls."

That which heals an individual will help and heal a nation, which is only an aggregation of individual citizens. Speaking of those who are invalids, Mrs. Eddy says in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 145): "The struggle for the recovery of invalids goes on, not between material methods, but between mortal minds and immortal Mind. The victory will be on the patient's side only as immortal Mind through Christ, Truth, subdues the human belief in disease." In like manner the victory will be with the people who through their Christianity subdue the belief in hate and fear. Among them will not arise the practices whereby the heathen degrade themselves, nor will theft and lying, murder and bestiality appear as symptoms of the malady of sin. The remedy for unrighteousness is always Truth, and the evidence of it in effect is seen where men are enlivened and governed by the Christ-idea. Falsity, then, has no sustainment; and sickness of mind or body, sinfulness in outward act or inward lust, being unsupported disappear for lack of witness.

Christian Scientists are primarily concerned with divine causation in their helpful ministry to mankind, not with symptoms of disease. This is well known; but there might be even greater rejoicing than there is over symptoms of recovery if these were more earnestly sought for. Multitudes seem to be in a state of vexation and resentment, very despondent and bitter; they condemn others whom they blame; they are doubtful, skeptical, agnostic. And in this condition of mind love seems to them "like a summer-dried fount when our need was the sorest." Such mental conditions represent reversal of the truth of being, and one who is thus suffering must have courage to deny what is false and assert what is true. When even a faint appeal is made to divine Principle the answer comes quickly. The truth regarding the graciousness of divine Love is beautifully expressed in the words, "Before they call, I will answer; and while they are yet speaking, I will hear."

Anyone who is engaged in the effort "to negate the negative," which really means to clear his thought of false beliefs, of doubts and fears, should be continually comforted over the fact of healing. Christian Science gives its attestation to the reviving power which when it characterized the early church made it potent as a saving influence; and by continued demonstrations of healing it is establishing hope for all mankind. As the individual worker finds that it becomes more natural and normal for him to think without resentment, to judge without bitterness, to rest in a faith more steadfast and express a love more tender, he should rejoice for the salvation which is going on within him. And as with the individual, so with the world must this process of healing go on until God's purposes of good are accomplished. Concerning the processes of recovery Mrs. Eddy says in "Miscellaneous Writings," (p. 100): "Who remembers that patience, forgiveness, abiding faith, and affection, are the symptoms by which our Father indicates the different stages of man's recovery from sin and his entrance into Science?"

Home

Perhaps few words in the English language carry with them greater possibilities and breadth of vision than does the word "home." From the veriest child to the man of many years it speaks in a multitude of tones. To be sure it may sometimes be linked in thought with disappointed hopes and shattered purposes, but nevertheless the ideal home still stands as a synonym for protection, safety, peace, —for the quiet opportunity of pursuing high desires, for rest from turbulence, for comfort and assurance,—for that which strengthens the understanding of good and lessens the belief in evil. Around this sense of home there cluster an innumerable company of angels, and there is no one in all the world who does not contemplate the thought of it with at least some degree of consideration, if not with positive interest. Its influence reaches out through every one's life, molding and controlling in a variety of ways. Hence, there is no ideal which should be more carefully guarded or more tenderly cherished.

Every one longs to realize the happiness for which home is intended to stand, and men have always been endeavoring to gain such realization. The so-called human mind, with its material concepts, has approached this subject, as it does every other, from the material viewpoint and thus has fallen far short of winning anything like the satisfaction it has expected. Because it has measured its ideals of home largely in square feet and multiplicity of persons and things, it has often found itself disappointed and disheartened. The illumination of Christian Science with its teaching that "all is Mind and Mind's idea" (Science and Health, p. 492), strikes the axe at the root of this as of all difficulties. To begin to discern that home is really made up of mental qualities instead of material objects, and therefore is to be experienced rather than manufactured, sets one's thoughts at work in a new direction.

Although it has already been recognized that the rude hut may embrace within its modest walls more of the elements of the true home than does the stately mansion, since all that matter can give has again and again proved powerless to bring lasting satisfaction, and although mortal mind acknowledges that its best concept of home is but fleeting, there still remains the necessity of improving the beliefs of the world on this subject in order that even the human sense of home may be placed upon a better foundation. This can only be done through gaining a more spiritual concept which will tend to purify and exalt where there has been falsity and debasement and which will render yet finer what has already touched some loftier heights.

In Christian Science we learn that no true sense of home can ever be won except by seeking divine Principle as the source of all good and by bringing one's every thought of home into line with the unchanging law of Principle. Every heart desires home and the companionship which is implied by the term, but while Christian Science teaches us to expect that our every righteous desire will be fulfilled, it does not in any way instruct us to outline as to the way in which this is to be done. For each individual to seek to establish in his own thinking such qualities as are reflections of divine Mind will insure for him a constantly increasing understanding of what the highest sense of home includes.

In "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 589) Mrs. Eddy speaks of "home" and "heaven" as synonymous, and in the light of Christian Science it is easily seen that since home is one's dwelling place and the real man dwells in the heaven of divine Mind,—for, as Jesus said, "the kingdom of God is within you,"—if one's own mental concept of home is right, then it must be divine. When we allow this divine idea of home to unfold in our thought, a breadth of possibilities before unrecognized presents itself. We see that even for to-day it includes all the qualities which would render our associations with each other so considerate and loving, so intelligent and wise, that all companionship would be invested with helpfulness and joy.

To the consciousness thus governed, temporary circumstances and surroundings will become of secondary importance; for with love in the heart outward conditions will necessarily tend toward the ideal. A wonderful sense of freedom will also result; for having learned to look to God, divine Mind and His ideas, for home and companionship, one will find that in God's love there are no homeless ones, and dwelling there, one will always find his home with him wherever he may be placed. This exalted sense of freedom and spiritual understanding is at the same time eminently practical to-day. It will cherish and ennoble every least thought of true human relationship, bringing out a better and better sense of home in the present hour, until all men shall have risen to see the truth of what Mrs. Eddy tells us on page 254 of Science and Health, "Pilgrim on earth, thy home is heaven; stranger, thou art the guest of God."

Among the Churches

Current Notes

BENTON HARBOR, MICH.—First Church of Christ, Scientist, was dedicated Sunday [Sept. 7].

The local Christian Science church was started in 1903, when a small band of devoted followers began to hold meetings in homes of the members in St. Joseph. Desiring a hall in which to hold regular services, they secured Minora Hall on Pipestone Street. After services had been held there for several months, on November 2, 1904, a Christian Science Society was organized. At the end of four years the society moved into Robinson Hall, which was more centrally located and larger. In 1908 the organization was dissolved and under the laws of Michigan was incorporated as a church. After two years in Robinson Hall, another move was made into the Carnegie Public Library, where services were held in the auditorium for four years, a period of great prosperity and increasing numbers in attendance following. The Universalist Church on Pleasant Street was purchased in 1913. This property has since been much improved, and through the money raised among Christian Scientists has this year been entirely freed of debt.—The News-Palladium.

LONGMONT, COLO.—The Longmont Christian Science church will hold dedicatory services at the church edifice to-day [Aug. 24], when many Scientists of Denver interested in the welfare of the church will attend. The building was completed in 1913 at a cost of five thousand dollars. It is of concrete, and has a seating capacity of 125.

Rocky Mountain News.

MYSTIC, CONN.—Dedication exercises of First Church of Christ, Scientist, were held Sunday morning [Aug. 31] at eleven o'clock at the recently completed church edifice in Gravel Street, a large number of the members and friends of the church attending.—The Day.

The Lectures

MONROE, LA. (First Church).—The Rev. Andrew J. Graham, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Anna G. Herring, who said in part:—

Christian Science is attracting much attention to-day because of the blessings it is bringing to those who live in accord with its teachings,—blessings of happiness, health, and peace, which are not for Christian Scientists alone but for all who have the right idea of God. The Bible is their chart of life, its truths are present realities, giving protection and comfort in time of need.—The Monroe News-Star.

LISBON, N. H. (Society).—Dr. Walton Hubbard, lecturer; introduced by Ervin E. Eldridge, who said in part:—

Pilate once said to Jesus, "What is truth?" So I may ask, What is light? As we study the Bible to receive more light on this subject, we turn to the book of Genesis, the first chapter, and there we read, "And God said, Let there be light." As we study the different books of the Bible, sixty-six in number and eleven hundred and eighty-nine chapters, covering a period of over four thousand years, we come to the last book of the Bible, the book of Revelation, and there we read, "And they need no candle, neither light of the sun; for the Lord God giveth them light." All down the ages both seer and prophet have been speaking of this light. Isaiah said, "Then shall thy light break forth as the morning, and thine health shall spring forth speedily." Micah said, "When I sit in darkness, the Lord shall be a light unto me." Jesus said, "Ye are the light of the world."

The Bible is not a book filled with idle tales and empty words. It speaks the truth to every man. Jesus spoke the truth to his followers when he said, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature," "Heal the sick," "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." Jesus knew, as every man ought to know, that an understanding of God and of man's relation to God heals the sick and the sinner.

Fort Dodge, Iowa (First Church).—John W. Doorly, lecturer; introduced by Elmer E. Nordwall, who said in part:—

Christian Science, through its literature, its lectures, its faithful practitioners, and its grateful adherents, is bringing to-day, as in Jesus' time, to uncounted numbers of suffering humanity the first bright rays of a new day, a day free from suffering, worry, and discontent, a day filled with a desire to know more of a God who is Love, and who is able to and does forgive all our sins and heal all our diseases, and to claim man's birthright—dominion, not subjection.

White Bear Lake, Minn. (Society).—William D. Kilpatrick, lecturer; introduced by Stirling Horner, who said in part:—

It is becoming, I think, more and more apparent to the world that God's government is a scientific government, and that the laws which actuate this government are spiritual laws; that the healings and so-called miracles of Bible record are the direct result of the operation of divine law, and that this law is eternal, omnipresent, and ever available. Understanding God and the application of His law, the Master was enabled to heal all manner of sin and disease. Christian Scientists, gratefully following in his footsteps to the best of their understanding, are applying this ancient religion of Jesus and his followers to the overcoming of errors of all sorts, including business difficulties and mental disorders as well as sickness and sin.

New York, N. Y. (Fifth Church).—John C. Lathrop, lecturer; introduced by Elmer B. Sanford, who said in part:—

Christian Science is a subject which is ever new. The more one studies it, the more one desires to know of it, and the more earnest one becomes in seeking a knowledge of God and man's relation to Him. It is this knowledge which heals the sick, reforms the sinner, gives sight to the blind, hearing to the deaf, and comfort to the sorrowing; it is this knowledge which has restored "primitive Christianity and its lost element of healing" (Church Manual, p. 17). This is proof of its divine origin, for, as Jesus said in his Sermon on the Mount, "Ye shall know them by their fruits."

Highland Park, Ill. (First Church).—Judge Samuel W. Greene, lecturer; introduced by Oliver S. Brown, who said in part:—

To-day as of old humanity is looking for a full salvation; that is, to be saved from evil, error, sin, sickness, death, limitation. Any mode or system of thought and action claiming to be the expression of Truth must show itself applicable to the solution of the whole gamut of problems, of whatever kind or nature, physical, mental, moral, economic, political. There must be no exceptions. And in Christian Science there are none; for I am warranted in saying that there are no varieties of untoward conditions, whether manifested in disease or in other forms of evil and limitation, that have not been healed in Christian Science.

Dawson, Yukon Territory, Canada (Society).—Charles I. Ohrenstein, lecturer; introduced by Frederick P. Burrall, who said in part:—

One of the most noticeable results of the great war through which we have just passed, is the general unsettled condition of thought, a pronounced unrest that enters into the everyday activities of the world. Thoughtful men and women everywhere, in seeking relief from this, are looking for a practical, provable religion, one that can be used here and now to bring to them the peace, comfort, health, and contentment that go to make up that rest which Christ Jesus promised all who should come to him.

Christian Science is that practical, provable religion. It is available to all and is daily meeting the needs of those who seek it in earnest, because it shows to man his relation to God as taught and demonstrated by Christ Jesus. It was discovered by Mary Baker Eddy.—Dawson News.

Chicago, Ill. (Sixteenth Church).—Virgil O. Strickler, lecturer; introduced by James Stratton Taylor, who said in part:—

Christian Science to-day stands at the door of the human consciousness patiently and so lovingly knocking for admission. If we hear this voice, and open wide the door of receptivity, Christ, Truth, will come in and will feed the hungry and heal the heart.

Willows, Calif. (Society).—Paul Stark Seeley, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Kate E. Thew, who said in part:—

We read in the Bible of a man who found a goodly pearl. As he looked at it, its beauty and desirableness grew upon his thought, and he wished to possess it. We may not know, possibly, the whole story, of how many attempts he made to purchase it for less than its value; of how many times he offered less than he had; we do know that it became his at the cost of all that he possessed. The Bible records this as a good investment, and Jesus likened it unto "the kingdom of heaven," which is worth to any man all that he may ever hope to have of this material life.

It has been discovered and proved that what is known to the world as Christian Science, brings this condition called "heaven" to men here and now, destroying all sorrow, disease, and sin, and unfolding man's true relation to God.

Colorado Springs, Colo. (First Church).—George Shaw Cook, lecturer; introduced by E. G. Bradley, who said in part:—

In John is given this declaration as made by Jesus, the Way-shower: "My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me. If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." It is on this unequivocal ground that Christian Science stands to-day,—that each one may and must know for himself, out of the fullness and the satisfying quality of his own experience, when in Christian Science he has found the path of life. But those who have the best and deepest knowledge of the truth as taught in Christian Science have also the keenest and the humblest appreciation of the pressing necessity for constant growth, for constantly increasing their practical, usable knowledge of this inexhaustible subject.

NEWPORT, N. H. (Society).—John Randall Dunn, lecturer; introduced by Harold L. Ransom, who said in part:—

Christian Science is synonymous with right thinking and right doing. The Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, expresses it concisely and incisively (p. 448), "It is Christian Science to do right, and nothing short of right doing has any claim to the name."

PORTLAND, ORE. (joint lecture).—Dr. Walton Hubbard, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Percie Proctor, who said in part:—

Many centuries ago there came to humanity Jesus the Christ with a most glorious message and the grandest vision that ever illumined a darkened world. He said, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." It was a message of good, of health, of gentleness and strength, of meekness and courage, of harmony and immortality. Our beloved Leader, Mrs. Eddy, has again revealed this truth, which does make free from sorrow and sickness and sin, and does give a rest, joy, and peace which the world can neither give nor take away.

Testimonies of Healing

Like the majority I came to Christian Science when it became clear to me there was no other avenue of escape from material bondage. To mortal sense I was in a desperate state. I had become addicted to the liquor habit at a very early age and it secured a terrible hold upon me. Although I had taken the two best known material cures in this country, one of them twice, they afforded me no permanent relief and I would break out in periodical spells worse than ever. I had been helped by Christian Science treatment many years before, but ungratefully turned away from it. Seven years ago, after a period of despondency and drinking which nearly finished me, I realized that Christian Science was my only hope and turned to it in earnest. At this time I was a heavy user of tobacco, having what the doctors call a "tobacco heart." Christian Science has entirely healed me, and it is needless to say that neither liquor nor tobacco has touched my lips for the past seven years.

For years I had been troubled with sleeplessness. At times for night after night I got very little sleep, but this ailment has also left me. I had a rupture of over twenty years' standing and the doctors told me nothing but an operation would rid me of it and that I was endangering my life in not having it attended to; but after studying Science a few months this trouble disappeared, leaving no weakness whatever. I must also mention the spiritual uplift that has come to me, and the overcoming of sorrow at the passing on of the one nearest me. The Bible used to mean nothing to me. I failed to see anything in it that was interesting or that could save mankind from its distresses; but now its pages are illumined and I love to study and ponder it.

I could go on indefinitely telling what this wonderful Science has done for me in the way of overcoming anger, malice, hate, self-will, pride, fear, and other forms of selfishness, all of which must fall before the power of Truth. I am indeed grateful to the heroic woman whose purity and noble self-sacrifice were the means of this new-old religion being again revealed to a suffering world. I am likewise grateful for the privilege of class instruction, which has enabled me to progress much more rapidly than before; and for all the opportunities I now have of serving God and my fellow man. I am grateful, too, for our periodicals, which help to keep me in the straight and narrow way.

C. H. Runkel, Arlington, Wash.

Christian Science has meant everything to me, and it is with a deep sense of gratitude that I testify to the healing I have had through seeking "first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness," as taught in the Scriptures and in Mrs. Eddy's writings. Notwithstanding the fact that my home environment had always been such that I never knew what it was to lack anything I needed, yet I had grown into such a state of mind that I realized no person or material diversion could ever bring me the longed-for peace. This condition had been growing on me for some time, for when I was attending college a physician told me I had neurasthenia. I surely found, if anyone ever did, that "fear hath torment," being so bound by it that I felt practically helpless after leaving school, so far as ever being able to do as others did.

Divine Love was, however, leading me all the time, though little did I realize it when circumstances took me quite a distance from my home. I came to realize the meaning of Mrs. Eddy's words (Science and Health, p. 574), "The very circumstance, which your suffering sense deems wrathful and afflictive, Love can make an angel entertained unawares." With the help of a Christian Science practitioner and my own efforts (for I soon learned that it was not right to expect the practitioner to do all the work) the mist cleared away and this false sense of self was gradually replaced by the right concept, and as a result for more than four years I have experienced a freedom that I had never known before. I have had the proof of my ability to work as others do and have enjoyed greater activity and a much more useful life.

During this time many erroneous conditions have been overcome, one of which was an enlargement of the neck which had been quite noticeable ever since I was a little girl. I used to suffer every winter with very severe colds, from which, many times, I would not be entirely free until the spring; also every little exertion tired me to such an extent that I would lie down a great deal during the day and take naps sometimes for two or three hours at a time, only to awaken with a sense of being anything but refreshed. In fact, the more I slept the more I wanted to sleep, until I began to awaken in the true way, and with this right mental activity began the harmonious working out of many discordant conditions. We read in Science and Health (p. 447), "The recuperative action of the system, when mentally sustained by Truth, goes on naturally." During the epidemic of influenza I realized what a beautiful and complete healing of this trouble I had when I heard others, who had medical treatment, tell of how long the weakened conditions lasted, for I experienced none of these after effects. An attack of mumps was overcome in about two days.

While I am grateful for the physical healings, yet the spiritual uplift and peace that have come to me through the study of Christian Science mean far more to me than words could ever express. I am truly thankful to God and grateful to our dear Leader, Mrs. Eddy, for the revelation of this truth, and my one desire is so to live it that others may know it by its fruits. We have, indeed, only to acquaint ourselves with God, and "be at peace."

(Miss) Mary Seymour Stryker, Lawrence, Kan.

It is now over five years since I took up the study of Christian Science solely for physical healing; however, I soon found a beautiful religion, which healed me at once of my prejudiced thought. Reared in the Jewish faith, it meant quite a struggle to overcome old traditions and ceremonies. The Bible had been almost a closed book to me, and the New Testament was a revelation, helping me to overcome the racial prejudices of ages against Christ Jesus. The paragraph in our textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, on page 360, where our revered Leader says, "Of old, the Jews put to death the Galilean Prophet, the best Christian on earth, for the truth he spoke and demonstrated, while to-day, Jew and Christian can unite in doctrine and denomination on the very basis of Jesus' words and works," has been of the greatest help and comfort to me.

In all this time Christian Science has been my only aid for all physical ills. A little over a year ago, when through a fall my wrist was broken, I had to yield to great pressure brought to bear by some of my family, and let a physician examine my arm three days after the accident. What was my gratitude and joy to hear him declare there was nothing for him to do in the way of setting the bone! He found it in perfect position and healing. The loving work of a Christian Science practitioner and my own limited understanding of Truth had resulted in this example of mental surgery. It has been my privilege to experience many other healings, among these the blessing of laying aside glasses after the oculist had warned me against ever leaving them off, claiming that the structural defect of the eye was responsible for the headaches from which I had suffered for years. These, too, have vanished now. I have seen a case of childbirth made safe and speedy through Christian Science treatment, when the doctor feared all kinds of adverse conditions, and very recently my daughter was healed of Spanish influenza by relying entirely on Christian Science help.

I want to express my gratitude for the privilege of enjoying the daily, weekly, and monthly periodicals that come to my home. In thankfulness to God and to Christ Jesus, the Way-shower, and in gratitude to Mrs. Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, I record these blessings that have come to me and mine through Christian Science.

MRS. A. HOLZMAN, Maysville, Ky.

I can testify to the truth of the statements in the above testimony. It was through the healing of my mother that I first became interested in Christian Science. I saw her change from a nervous, ailing woman into a happy, contented member of the family, and this could not fail to impress me.

At that time I was suffering from a painful condition of the nose, and had been told an operation was necessary, but I was perfectly healed through the first glimpse of Truth as revealed in our textbook. Since then I have had many reasons to be grateful to Christian Science, not only for physical healings but more so for the spiritual awakening to the realities about God and man which this wonderful truth has unfolded to me. For my recent healing of influenza, mentioned by my mother, I am very thankful, not only because of my restoration to perfect health but because of the protection of all my immediate family. I am especially grateful that although a great deal of outside influence in favor of a doctor and material means was exerted and some members of our household are not acknowledged Scientists, each one helped to sustain me in my stand for Christian Science treatment only. Glasses, which I had worn continuously since the age of five years, were left off entirely last April and I have felt no inconvenience since.

For the many blessings which have come to me through the study of the Bible and "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," I am deeply thankful to God and to Christ Jesus, also grateful to Mrs. Eddy.

(Mrs.) DORAH HOLZMAN MERZ.

All that I am, and all that I possess, I owe entirely to the teachings of Christian Science. After reading the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, I was healed of heart disease, which was supposed to be inherited, and of many other physical discords, such as throat trouble, influenza, burns, bilious attacks, and so on; also I have received a great deal of help with my sight. When a child I underwent five operations for double cataract at the back of the eye, and it was found necessary to remove one of the lenses of the eye. The specialist could give me no definite hope, but said I might go totally blind and the operations were more of an experiment than anything else. With the aid of two pairs of heavy lenses, which I was told I would never be able to do without, I was enabled to see out of one eye. Through the study of Science and Health I have been able to dispense with one pair of glasses but still find the use of glasses necessary in my work, although I can read some without them. I am sure the work God has begun in me He will complete.

For all these blessings I am deeply grateful, but like many others I feel even more grateful for the new and broader outlook on life which Christian Science has given me. The knowledge that there is only one infinite Mind is enabling me to overcome many errors of temperament, such as selfishness and irritability. I always had an intense desire to help humanity, but the problem of evil seemed so great that I felt helpless before it, and it was not until I gained some knowledge of Christian Science that I realized the far-reaching possibilities of doing good to others, overcoming the belief in evil with the knowledge of its nothingness, instead of standing helpless before it as something equal if not superior to God. There have been many strenuous mental struggles against the myriad beliefs in evil, but each one has helped me to see something of what it meant to Mrs. Eddy when she was called upon to stem the tide of human thinking, which at times threatened to overwhelm her. She was indeed sustained by that wonderful vision of Truth which is undermining the whole foundation of mortal thought at the present time, and which, through the efforts of those pioneers who bore the burden and heat of the day, should make it so much easier for us to-day who are constantly supplied with that purifying stream of truth which flows through the Christian Science literature.

Eleven years ago when everything in a material way had failed to heal me of a nervous condition from which I had suffered for several months, it was again proved that "man's extremity is God's opportunity." I had come to the conclusion that death was the only way out of my suffering, as I was growing weaker every day. One morning when I was feeling unusually depressed and discouraged, a lady came to see me and suggested that I try Christian Science. She was not a Christian Scientist, but had been healed of some physical condition through its treatment. I asked a Christian Scientist of my acquaintance to come over and tell me about this religion, and after talking to her a while discovered she was a practitioner, so asked her to treat me.

From that day I have never used material remedies, but have relied upon the truth to meet my every need. I often feel grateful for the trying experience that brought me into this beautiful light, for Christian Science has made a changed woman of me, physically, mentally, morally, and spiritually, and has given me an altogether different outlook on life. For several years I had been troubled with inflammation of the bladder. This was permanently healed shortly after I took up the study of Christian Science, although several physicians had said that only an operation would heal me. Pleurisy, grippe, and sore throat have been overcome almost instantaneously.

These are just a few of the many blessings Christian Science has brought me. It has indeed done wonders for me, and I can never be grateful enough for it. I am thankful to God for revealing this truth to Mrs. Eddy, and every day feel more grateful to our Leader for giving it to the world.—(Mrs.) EFFIE ADAMS, Butte, Mont.

I have hesitated about sending my testimony to the Sentinel before this, but now see that a demonstration is not complete if one does not pass a hopeful word on to others who may be seeking for the truth. Colds, toothache, ivy poisoning, burns and cuts, car sickness, bowel trouble of a great many years' standing, nausea, and hemorrhoids, also the fear of electric storms, have all been overcome by the application of Christian Science. Our baby girl has never tasted medicine and is very bright and healthy. She was healed of bowel disorder of several months' duration, and an attack of illness, with every symptom of pneumonia, was overcome in three days. One night after a long automobile trip she was restless and would not sleep. After a while I repeated to her the little prayer by Mrs. Eddy (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 400):—

Father-Mother God,
Loving me,—
Guard me when I sleep;
Guide my little feet
Up to Thee.

Before I had finished she was asleep.

I am very grateful for having been led into this wonderful Science, which teaches us that God is an ever present help in time of trouble, a loving Father, and the only power. The literature is inspiring and practical, The Christian Science Monitor being an advocate of all that is fine and clean.

Mrs. H. O. Feldmann, Minneapolis, Minn.

In 1901 I went to Oregon for a change of climate because the physicians who were attending me helped me but little. I was troubled with severe headaches very often, besides other distressing ailments, and one doctor said I had ulcers of the stomach. I began to realize that medicine did not help me at all, and when a change of climate was suggested, I grasped at that as something that might be a help. While we were in Portland our little boy, about twelve years of age, who was never very strong, became ill. We were advised to take him to a Christian Science practitioner and did so, with the result that he was healed in one night and has been well and strong ever since. I then had treatments for myself, but my healing was slower.

All the pills and powders that we had taken from home went into the fire as soon as our son was healed. Since that time all the members of our family have been reading Christian Science literature, all but one are members of The Mother Church, and my husband and I have had class instruction. We have used no material remedies since that time, as the power of Truth has been sufficient to supply our daily needs. Physical ailments are disappearing through the application of Christian Science, and I am very grateful for a better understanding of the Bible, gained through the daily study of the Lesson-Sermon. I am grateful also for having learned that God is good and good only, which is so different from what we were taught in the old way. I am thankful to God for the physical healing, but far more for the spiritual uplift, and am grateful to Mrs. Eddy and to all who helped me on the way.

(Mrs.) Margaret McCluskey, Rosebud, Mont.

For many years I was an earnest seeker after truth, and during that time investigated nearly all the known isms. They failed to satisfy me, and although prejudiced against what I thought Christian Science to be, I was forced to turn to it, since there seemed nothing else left and I had to have a spiritual anchor. My progress was very slow, but gradually I began to realize that I had found the truth. Then I wondered why greater progress was not being made, and became impatient and discouraged.

After passing through various tests which proved to me that "divine Love always has met and always will meet every human need" (Science and Health, p. 494), I found out why I was still groping in the dark. I was remaining in the valley of indecision, and although I desired spiritual understanding, yet I was unwilling to take a definite stand for Christian Science or to give up material pleasures. When finally through suffering and sorrow I became willing to obey the Bible injunction, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you;" when I gave up self-will and said, "Thy will be done," then I began to see more light, and to gain more understanding of the truth which makes men free. One of the difficult lessons I have had to learn is that "the human footsteps leading to perfection are indispensable" (Science and Health, p. 254). I wanted to make the journey from sense to Soul a very short and rapid one, but I have learned that although we can take only one step at a time, each step is illumined by Love, and we never make a misstep when we trust to divine guidance.

I have experienced many healings through the application of the truth; among them, the healing of a rash, of melancholia, nervous exhaustion, headache, colds, and functional disorders. My one desire is to live in accordance with the teachings of our beloved Leader, Mrs. Eddy, and by so doing follow the command of our Master, "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

I have indeed great cause to be grateful for all that Christian Science has done and is doing for me and for all mankind. Study and application of its teachings have answered what to me are the world's greatest questions: What is God? What is man? Christian Science has changed the belief in a God made like unto mortal man to the understanding of God as Spirit, Mind, and of man as the perfect idea of Mind, created to express the allness of God. The unfolding of this spiritual idea in consciousness has healed me of chronic stomach trouble, nervous exhaustion, and all the other ills which are usually manifested in connection with this form of disease. I had tried different schools of materia medica, but all had failed to give me relief in their four years of application. I now thank God that I am a living witness to the healing efficacy of Christian Science.

I can only add in the words of the psalmist, "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits: who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases."

Alex L. Walker, Dayton, Ohio.

I am thankful to have the privilege of adding my testimony to that of many others. About three years ago my attention was called to Christian Science, and when my wife was healed of severe injuries resulting from accidents, through her own application of its teachings, my interest was thoroughly aroused. I procured "The Life of Mary Baker Eddy" by Sibyl Wilbur and read it; then borrowed "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" and began to attend Christian Science church services. When about half way through the book, I found that I was healed of heart, stomach, liver, bowel, and kidney troubles for which I had been taking medicine regularly about thirty years. Forthwith all my medicines were thrown away, and I have not taken any since. I have also been healed of a fractured bone, hemorrhoids, cuts, burns, colds, and sore throat; in fact, every ailment that has presented itself has been overcome solely by reading, studying, and trying to understand the writings of Mrs. Eddy. I am indeed grateful for the many physical healings, but much more for the spiritual uplift derived, for the opportunity of joining in the work as one of the officials of a branch church, and for the great privilege of being a member of The Mother Church. For thirty-seven years I was a member of an orthodox church, and for eleven years I served as an official in it. I had read the Bible through four times, and often wished that I could understand it better; therefore I rejoice that Christian Science has enabled me to comprehend it, at least in part.

All the other members of the family are interested in Christian Science, and are relying on it for healing and for spiritual uplift. The purifying and uplifting change in each and every one, including myself, is indeed great.

I am very grateful to Mrs. Eddy that she had the courage and steadfastness to hold her thought to the pure, the good, and the true, so as to give this divine Science to mankind to heal them and relieve them from suffering, and for their spiritual uplift. Above all I am thankful to God for the manifold blessings which He is continually bestowing on me and mine.—EZRA S. WENRICH, Reading, Pa.

It is with sincere gratitude that I give this testimony. It is over two years since a dear Christian Scientist found me in great suffering and through her understanding of God's power healed me. I had taken quantities of medicine, having been sick for about thirty years. Thanks be to God and gratitude to our dear Leader, Mrs. Eddy, I am a free woman. My friends all wonder at the great change in my physical condition. May my life prove me worthy the honor of being a student of Christian Science. I am studying hard to learn more of the Bible and Science and Health.

I could not begin to enumerate the blessings Christian Science has brought to me and mine, but I want to express my gratitude, first of all, to our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, for being brave enough, unselfish and loving enough, to give the world the blessing of her inspiration and revelation in the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures." I am grateful to my own dear mother, who, over twenty-six years ago, was brave enough to try Christian Science treatment, for in those days Christian Science was not so well thought of as now. That she was healed of much is the reason I am having the blessing of it to-day. I am deeply grateful that my husband, after bitter opposition for five years of our married life, laid down his prejudice and was ready to accept this teaching and has ever since depended upon it for healing, both for himself and for our little family. I have always been grateful that during the time when he did not see the beauty of this religion just as I did, I was able to stand for what I knew it to be—the truth about God and man; and I shall ever be grateful to those who helped me during that period.

It is impossible to express my gratitude for the great help this practical religion has been in raising our family of three little girls. Many ailments have been overcome very quickly, others have responded more slowly, but always surely, and with no periods of convalescence, or fear of a change to some other form of discord. During our experience we have had a touch of almost every kind of physical ailment, but every trial has been a grand opportunity for mental work and further spiritual growth and so has resulted in greater blessings.

Last but not least, I wish to say that I am more and more grateful every day for each one of our periodicals, which keep us in touch with this wonderful work throughout the world, and go forth leavening the thought, preparing the soil for the seed. That Christian Science is in the world to-day, uncovering and destroying evil, is the greatest thing for which we can give thanks. Again I thank God for this demonstrable religion.

(Mrs.) GARNETT JOHNSON PRATT, Stamford, Conn.

Out of darkness, ignorance, confusion, Christian Science lifts us into the light. For many years I longed to know what we were and what life meant. A search of college philosophy courses brought no solution. Mental and moral blindness finally resulted in a nervous breakdown, accompanied by severe headaches and a fear of losing my reason. My work at the university had to be abandoned and relief was sought in rest and osteopathic treatment. The physical conditions seemed to improve, but as the mental distress continued, a visit to a near-by relative was planned. This cousin was a Christian Scientist and told me of her healing of eye trouble. Her poised and happy life struck me as a contrast to mine, and I decided to see a practitioner. At first the explanations given seemed to my egotistical sense like a strange tongue, but I was impressed with the fact that the practitioner really seemed to believe that God heard her prayer and would answer her. In despair I decided to put aside the cynical feeling and cling to the hope held out. I shall never forget my reading of "The New Birth," in "Miscellaneous Writings," next morning.

From that time all has been different. I put off my glasses at once and have never had them on since. The rest that a knowledge of Truth brings after the strain and stress of the previous confusion is like the calm after a storm at sea. The simplicity of the truth that God is All-in-all, comes like a healing balm to the tempest-tossed, double-minded thought trying to solve the problems of the universe on the basis of mind and matter. It shows us clearly that all our seeming troubles are due to ignorance of Truth. The understanding of what is true dispels mental darkness as readily as the dawn dispels the night.

Words can never pay our debt to those who suffered that the way might be made plain for us, but a tribute of gratitude may be a partial expression of the longing to pay that debt. When we were wandering and frightened, like lost children, divine Love sent our Leader, Mrs. Eddy, to tell us that we need not be afraid; and divine Love is still sending us loving messages of comfort through the channels she provided, through our good angel visitors, the Journal, Sentinel, and Monitor. The message of God's love comes, too, through the faithful work of the teachers, practitioners, and lecturers, who are reflecting the love of our Father-Mother God. To their fidelity the world surely owes unstinted gratitude.—(Miss) HELEN PAUL, Moorestown, N. J.

Signs of the Times

[The Chicago (Ill.) Post]

The Chicago Church Federation, through its commission on the church and industry, has issued a call to the preachers of the city urging them to observe Labor Day by discussing from their pulpits on the preceding Sunday the critical industrial situation now confronting America. The federation's suggestion should be heeded. If the church has no message for such days as these, then it may as well close its doors. Never was there greater need for honest and courageous preaching than now—honest in an intelligent facing of the problems of the time, courageous in the application of the teaching of Jesus to their solution.

The church stands on common ground. It holds, by virtue of its faith, a mediating position between classes. If it is true to its great Leader, it has one gospel for rich and poor, for employer and employee, for those who own the tools and those who work with them. If it understands the message committed to it, then it knows that its supreme task is to awaken the spiritual consciousness, the sense of divine kinship in the individual, and to work for a social order in which spiritual values will be supreme.

That is precisely why the church cannot ignore economic and industrial problems. The emancipation of the human spirit to realize its possibilities depends upon a society so organized that men will no longer be the slaves of material conditions. "Ye cannot serve God and mammon"—but to-day the service of mammon is forced upon men; upon the poor in order to escape from poverty; upon the rich in order to preserve the surplus that means comfort and economic security.

The trouble with many movements of our day that aim at social and industrial readjustment is that the readjustment itself is made the goal, rather than the means, to the higher goal of man's spiritual ennobling. Possession of material wealth is the object of effort that leads to bitter conflict between classes, stultifying and corrupting the souls of men. The mastery of material wealth, its complete subordination to the welfare of humanity, so that it becomes the servant of men's spirits, is the true object to be sought. And this object can be attained only through cooperation,—a cooperation based upon the principle of Jesus, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things"—food, raiment, shelter—"shall be added unto you."

The teachings of Jesus hold the solution of the problems that to-day disturb us, and the church is custodian and exponent of those teachings. Its responsibility is tremendous. If it fails to lead men now, it will be derelict in a great duty. There are wrong and injustice and misunderstanding on both sides of the pending struggle. The profiteering spirit is in the camp of labor as truly as in the camp of capital. Contracts are made but to be broken. Confidence does not exist. No happy or righteous solution can be evolved from such conditions as these. Only the truth can make free, and the church must preach the truth fearlessly and apply it without favor. When the kingdom of heaven comes among men, it will come with the trumpet blast of truth and the banners of love.

[The Menace]

Like attracts like, and the quality of any following is the most accurate comment on its leadership. The writer of these lines frankly confesses that he never could understand Mrs. Eddy's teaching; but he can appreciate the quality of her following, which is a tribute that cannot be ignored.

[The Standard]

The churches have a great message for the day. They are teaching fraternity by word and by deed; demanding an honest day's work and a fair share of its fruits; keeping before the minds of men the fact that the highest values do not of necessity bear the dollar mark; and, above all, they warn men against the devil of selfishness which in a thousand guises makes us unmindful of the common interests and common rights of men.

Articles and Testimonies

Available articles from members of The Mother Church and good testimonies from those healed by Christian Science are always welcomed for consideration by the Editors. Manuscripts for publication in the Sentinel and Journal, whether articles, poems, or testimonies, and correspondence relating thereto, should not be addressed to individuals, but to the Editorial Department, The Christian Science Publishing Society, Boston, U.S.A.

Letters of Appreciation

Many letters of appreciation of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR and other Christian Science activities are constantly being received. These letters express what these activities mean to different individuals in various occupations and pursuits. The favorable comment that has been received on those already published indicates that they are welcome and helpful; therefore others will be published under the above heading. Extracts from such letters follow:

JUST recently while visiting in ————, Iowa, I was talking to a business man there, and the following is what he said about THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: "I am not a Christian Scientist, don't believe in their teachings; but I am a friend of their daily newspaper, think it is a marvel of the age. No other paper compares with it in the least degree, the editorials surpass any I ever read, their English is beyond criticism, and during the war it was the only paper I know of that gave positive facts regarding the war situations. It is a nonpartisan paper and stands absolutely for Principle." Now the statements which I have just quoted came from a well educated business man,—one who was once a professor in High School, and is not a Christian Scientist but recognizes the value of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR. I am truly grateful for every one of the periodicals and would not try to get along without them.

MY gratitude for this literature is greater than mere words can express. Having traveled and lived in many different countries during the past twenty years, I find THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR always an abundant source of information; it keeps me more fully posted with current events and general activities than when living in those countries. Its editorials are educative masterpieces of literary art, historical and political knowledge persistently uncovering error and pointing the way to Principle. One is continually in touch with an unlimited source of information through the pages dealing with literature, art, education, theatrical news, sport, and finance. Its Home Forum page makes me better acquainted with my favorite authors and pearls culled from the writings of the greatest thinkers of all ages. The travel illustrations and articles carry me along familiar and new beauty spots, improving my general knowledge of geography. Through its medium, time and space are almost annihilated; in fact, it is the world in a nutshell. One can quote from its pages with authority, it is a joy and privilege to be a subscriber; and my prayer is that it may eventually find its rightful place in the daily life of every thinking individual.

"What I say unto you I say unto all, WATCH." Jesus

VOLUME XXII NOVEMBER 1, 1919 NUMBER 9

The Grace of Geniality

ELEANORA BURDETT CARR

A RECENT writer has spoken of "the horrors of the existing twilight between war and peace," and judging from the standpoint of the material senses, this vivid description pretty fairly sums up the conditions of human existence after four years of terrific warfare. In countries near the seat of war, discomforts, hardships, inadequate housing accommodations, defective and interrupted transport and communication, shortage of food and clothing, and general disorder and disorganization are some of the problems which throng human thought in the aftermath of war.

Christian Science, however, teaches us that good can be maintained and demonstrated in spite of any material evidence of evil, because it shows how to prove material sense to be "a liar, and the father of it," as Jesus declared. Understanding, affirming, demonstrating, the allness of God, with what relief one can turn from the unreal mental pictures of mortal mind, fluctuating and fleeting as the cinematograph, to the beauty and order of Principle, the truth of being, where alone man will find the peace, supply, and harmony he so sorely needs.

On page 224 of "Miscellaneous Writings" Mrs. Eddy sets forth an attitude of thought which it would be well for every one to study and to make his own in character and conduct. "We should go forth into life," she advises, "with the smallest expectations, but with the largest patience; with a keen relish for and appreciation of everything beautiful, great, and good, but with a temper so genial that the friction of the world shall not wear upon our sensibilities." This passage has often been of practical help to the writer under the pressure of varying circumstances, and in pondering it the word genial has seemed to be worth noting; it is so eminently a pleasant word, bringing warmth, good nature, and sunshine in its train. Who does not like and welcome the genial man or woman? Such a one exhales the precious quality of kindness, and kindness is intimately connected with geniality by both association and etymology. The Anglo-Saxon word cynn gives us kin, or race, and the word from which genial is derived means almost the same thing; namely, of one race or people. The kind and the genial are indeed of one race the world over.

Does not Shakespeare say, "One touch of nature makes the whole world kin"? Yes; but we understand through Christian Science that it must be a touch of the divine nature. "Christian Science," says Mrs. Eddy, "kindles the inner genial life of a man, destroying all lower considerations" (Message for 1901, p. 30). Mankind will realize this kindly glow as they accept and acknowledge man's relationship to God as His child, His image and likeness; for nothing but this truth held in thought can give real freedom and equanimity in the face of the constant friction of the world's false concepts, which is the counterfeit of all real activity.

"Grace like fire cannot be hid; you may as soon conceal musk in your hand as grace in your heart," says a seventeenth century writer, and Christian Scientists know that the healing grace they express demonstrates itself in just this quiet way. Divine Love reflected by an honest and pure heart will be felt by those who come within reach of this blessed radiation of the divine nature, and this is the genial temper for which we cannot strive and pray too earnestly; it is a very important part in the armor of the real Christian warrior of the twentieth century.

"Be thou an example"

SAMUEL JOHNSTONE MACDONALD

MORE than twenty years ago a certain man was healed in Christian Science. He had been bound by dissolute habits, and through the liberating power of Truth was brought forth "out of the house of bondage." Almost in an instant the unclean spirits were cast out and the man was transformed. The Scripture was virtually repeated which relates, "Then they went out to see what was done; and came to Jesus, and found the man, out of whom the devils were departed, sitting at the feet of Jesus, clothed, and in his right mind." Among those who thus came and found him, was one who had been his boon companion for years. He stood amazed at this miracle of transformation. It did not seem possible. In his cynical language, "It was too good to be true." With him doubt came hand in hand with amazement, followed by sneering incredulity. "It is incredible," "It cannot be genuine," "It cannot last very long," were the uncharitable comments of him who had eyes but saw not, and ears but could not hear. And thus it came to pass that this descendant of Mr. Worldly Wiseman watched the modern pilgrim's progress from day to day only because of the confident expectation that he would see him falter, fall, and then turn back once more to the fleshpots of Egypt, or at least turn aside and flounder hopelessly in the Slough of Despond. Day after day unfolded its good, however, and there was "no night there." There was no fall, no failure, no turning aside, no relapse; there was only—thanks be to God—what Mrs. Eddy speaks of in Science and Health (p. 584) as "the irradiance of Life."

For fifteen long and weary years the cynical one sat "in the seat of the scornful"—paying without avoidance or escape the full rental of this sitting, to "the uttermost farthing." Let us pause here and ponder this picture, those of us who may be tempted to give ear to the lying suggestion that we are paying too much for our place in the counsel of the godly; aye, let us pause, and compare the small and painless price we pay with the exorbitant, even ruinous price of the sittings among the scornful; then we shall give grateful praise to our loving Father-Mother God, who forgives all our iniquities and heals all our diseases, and we shall never grumble, criticize, nor complain again.

For fifteen fruitful and joyous years the student of Christian Science, unconscious of the critical watcher, patiently continued to "run, and not be weary," and to "walk, and not faint." Then a strange thing—or was it indeed a strange thing?—came to pass: through the silent but irresistible force of his friend's example, and apparently against his will, the cynical one was led to seek the healing ministrations of Christian Science and to turn his face and his footsteps toward the eternal light of Life, Truth, and Love. Afterwards he came to know, through the aid of an article in one of the invaluable periodicals founded by Mrs. Eddy and published by The Christian Science Publishing Society, the true meaning of the Scripture, "Go out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in, that my house may be filled." Assuredly, so he learned, he himself had been one of those who are compelled to come in, the only compulsion, however, being the loving but unfailing force of right example, the example of one striving meekly but steadfastly to obey the Master's command: "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

The newcomer was led to join a small branch Church of Christ, Scientist, and in due time was appointed to some service in the church. Here, unexpectedly, there soon began the manifestation of little frictions and seeming differences, which to the unalert speedily became real and repellent. Personal sense and sensibilities, listened to and believed, induced the mesmerism of impatience, irritation, resentment, and repugnance, and almost before he was aware of it he was at the point of resolving to quit church work, the church, and Christian Science altogether. Upon every such occasion, however, one of the "angels of His presence" (Science and Health, p. 512) reminded him of his friend's steadfast example, and how through all those dreary fifteen years he had watched it as a shining light, a veritable beacon in the night. Then followed the obvious reflection, might not some one else be watching him as he had watched his friend? And if his friend's steadfastness proved of such great help to him, should he fail his own unknown watcher? Was there not a debt laid upon him, a sacred obligation, to pass on the holy light of example, "that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven"? And then the gentle, loving, but imperative voice was heard saying tenderly, "Freely ye have received, freely give." Is it any wonder that thus self-will was always put to shame and to silence, and fresh courage was inspired to continue in the good fight of faith and truth and love? Thus by degrees emerged the light of a purified aim in life, the beacon of a selfless ambition, the love of service. Our revered Leader, with her unerring touch, "smote the chord of self, that, trembling, pass'd in music out of sight;" and this music is ever that of love and service. In a sentence of great sweetness, tenderness, yet withal of power, she writes (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 110), "What grander ambition is there than to maintain in yourselves what Jesus loved, and to know that your example, more than words, makes morals for mankind!"

Individual Salvation

CARRIE L. BOSS

IN Christian Science it is made very plain that the process of salvation is individual before it can be universal, and that one who is conscientiously applying his knowledge of this Science will not attempt to work out anyone's salvation but his own. This individual spiritual illumination, however, does bless all who come within its radius. We often hear it said by a young student of Christian Science: "I hope some day I may be able to help others. I should so love to heal the sick." This desire to serve is both normal and worthy of development, but the place to begin is within one's own consciousness, by healing one's self of the sick and sinful thoughts that are claiming to be one's own. "Physician, heal thyself" is still the fundamental demand which must be complied with before one is enabled to heal his brother. "First cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye." By overcoming the suggestions of sickness, anger, jealousy, resentment, and the like, that present themselves daily and hourly to one's own thinking, one is surely doing healing work in that he is destroying the thoughts that eventually would manifest themselves as sickness. When one has overcome a belief of sin or of sickness seeking expression within one's self, he need not fear inability to overcome a similar belief, wherever it may claim to appear. A false belief is certainly no more real in its attempted manifestation of itself as a so-called patient than as a part of one's self. All are in reality the ideas of God, and any argument that opposes the perfection of any of God's ideas is untrue, hence powerless, causeless, without effect.

Mrs. Eddy makes it very plain that Jesus healed the sick by accepting only perfection for man, when she says in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 476): "Jesus beheld in Science the perfect man, who appeared to him where sinning mortal man appears to mortals. In this perfect man the Saviour saw God's own likeness, and this correct view of man healed the sick." And so we, too, by keeping our thought fixed steadfastly on perfect God and perfect man, refusing to accept as real any suggestions as to a sick or sinful man, are surely gaining the spiritual understanding which does heal the sick.

The windowpane is sure to let in the sun's light if it be kept clean; in like manner, we become transparencies for Truth as thought is cleansed of all error. Individual duty, therefore, is to eliminate from one's thinking all that is not Godlike. This includes the reversal and destruction of every lie about perfect God, perfect man, and perfect universe. Can one therefore afford to believe for a single moment in the reality of an imperfect person, thing, or condition? One's work in destroying any false concept is to lift up thought so completely to the reality of being that the right idea asserts itself spontaneously. This activity of right thinking is the activity of divine Mind; in other words, is God acting, and is endued with the infinite power of Truth to destroy instantly any false concept.

If we do not know all that the right idea includes, we at least know something of its nature, and in being true to that which we do know, we are excluding from thought all erroneous beliefs. More of the right idea is thereby unfolded, and less of the false concept will surely be manifested. The right idea is established, fixed, unchanging, omnipresent; hence it cannot be displaced or adulterated by ignorant mortal beliefs included in any false concept.

The Christian Scientist who is earnestly studying and applying the letter and the spirit of this teaching, is daily learning more of Principle, Mind, and consequently more of Mind's infinite ideas. Such a student engages as naturally in healing the sick as the clean windowpane continually lets in the sunshine. He is lifting up the Christ which Jesus referred to when he said, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." He is putting off the old man and putting on the new. He is rapidly growing "unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ," into the reflection of infinite, perfect Mind, which is ever extending the loving invitation, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." To this student the activity of Truth, the activity of the right idea, is ever operating in consciousness, bursting the bounds and limitations of a finite concept of being, ever uncovering and healing a multitude of sick beliefs of weary and tired humanity.

"God expresses in man the infinite idea forever developing itself, broadening and rising higher and higher from a boundless basis," Mrs. Eddy tells us in Science and Health (p. 258). If we, as students, are doing our part in letting this infinite idea unfold in our thought, then we are doing our part in the world's work of revealing the eternal perfection of God and His creation; we are coming to understand the divine law which is ever governing its own perfect idea, and we are gaining the abiding consciousness that this law is a law of annihilation to everything that is unlike God, good.

The operation of this law within us, the activity of which is ever spontaneous, is the healing Christ which is being lifted up proportionately as we are sincere, honest, persistent, and loving. It is the same healing Christ that antedated Abraham and wrought the miracles in Jesus' time. It is still with us in all the fullness of its power, and by letting that Mind be in us "which was also in Christ Jesus," we are demonstrating the power of the Christ to cleanse the sinners, heal the sick, and raise the dead now as in Jesus' time. Let us hasten to put off the carnal mind, that the Christ may be manifested as the infinitely perfect man, infinitely expressed.

Following Principle

WILLIAM HALE COOMBER

WHEN a student of Christian Science grasps something of the meaning of the term Principle, as applied to God, divine Truth and Love, he gradually comes to realize the necessity of following Principle, as scientifically understood and recognized, in every detail and circumstance of his life. "Principle is absolute," says Mrs. Eddy in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 283), and therefore it is something which can be confidently trusted. The Christian Scientist is realizing ever more clearly that the real man is always governed, guided, and controlled by divine Principle, divine Love, and in the constant endeavor to live daily by this rule he is blessed exceedingly. When one is willing to let mere human will, desire, and planning be set aside, Principle does mark out the path step by step, if one is really bent upon following its leading.

In some of the isles of the Ægean Sea, such as Mitylene, Crete, and others, there are few good roads, and if one desires to move from village to village, often the only paths available are the native shepherd tracks, which are invariably of a very rough nature. In taking several walks of this kind it was observed that there appeared to be a lesson for one endeavoring to follow Principle. The chief point noticed was this: that although the actual next step along the track was always apparent, often it was impossible to see just where the next step beyond that one really was until the first step had been taken; but having done this, it was then clearly to be seen.

So the thoughtful student of Christian Science can but conclude that the next step along the heavenward journey is really always there, although it may not be quite possible to see just where it is leading, or just what the next one after that will be. Over and over again it is possible to prove that when the one clear thing to do is apparent and is done, the next is then made clear, and so on. It may not always be quite what one would have outlined or desired, but it will always be the right thing, if one's main desire is to follow Principle to the best of his understanding. Following Principle reveals God's plan for us, because it means putting aside the merely human will and desire, while remembering that God always gives and sends the best to all His children, and it puts into practice the wise man's injunction, "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart."

Of course it will not always bring one through paths of roses. There may be trials and difficulties, some of which may seem very grievous for the time being. In the dark hours, however, one can always remember that Principle, the omnipotent and omnipresent God, good, is at the helm, and that evil is not real and is not power. Principle can never fail, if one unreservedly casts reliance upon it for the solution of any problem or difficulty, and one has the assurance and learns from experience that the way does grow brighter and will continue to do so.

Scientific right thinking is following Principle in the highest degree, and one who does this will find the way illumined constantly. Moreover, habitual right thinking based on the right understanding of Principle makes one's work spontaneous and natural, and right action will necessarily follow.

Ignorance versus Understanding

NELLIE FOWLER KENNEDY

THE question is often asked by a beginner in Christian Science: Since God is the only creator, and man is His perfect creation, what is the cause of all our ills, and what is this evil power that is seeking to dominate our lives? This is a very practical question and worthy of our earnest consideration; but since nothing is gained by speculation, let us turn at once to God for our answer.

Surely no one wishes to be in bondage to limitation of any kind, whether mental or physical, and it is our desire to establish our liberty as the sons of God, that causes this vague unrest, this reaching out for better things. The Scriptures declare that "God is light, and in him is no darkness at all," and that "in thy light shall we see light;" hence it is very plain that only through the light of spiritual understanding can we hope to find the solution of the problems of existence.

Mrs. Eddy tells us in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 390), "It is our ignorance of God, the divine Principle, which produces apparent discord, and the right understanding of Him restores harmony." Note well what she says,—"It is our ignorance of God" that is responsible for all of our ills. Ignorance, as used here, doubtless has a twofold meaning,—to be ignorant of and to ignore. The words ignorance and ignore are derived from the same Latin stem meaning to be ignorant of; and since to be ignorant of anything is to ignore it, being ignorant of God often leads to a willful disregard of Him. The ignorant man may think he has attained to the point where he no longer can be taught, and ignores all means of further enlightenment. We speak of such a man as an egotist. We know, however, that egotism, self-righteousness, self-sufficiency, and will power are qualities of the carnal mind, so called, and can never create a desire either to know God or to know man in God's image. Ignorance, then, being an inherent quality of mortal mind, is only a supposition, and claims to create discord by thrusting in its own misconception of God and His idea; but has ignorance or any other phase of mortal mind the intelligence or ability necessary to create anything that is real?

When our Leader states that ignorance produces apparent discord, she does not imply that ignorance is a creator, but does imply that ignorance and apparent discord are one and the same. Since, then, a right understanding of God is necessary to restore harmony, our first duty is to seek for it. "Be still, and know that I am God," is the Scriptural admonition. The right understanding of God as the only creator, and of man as reflecting the qualities and attributes of God, dispels the darkness of ignorance and lets in the light of Truth. Man as the image and likeness of God reflects the divine Mind, and in this true reflection, or consciousness, man has infinite capacity to understand God; hence he can neither be ignorant of God nor can he ignore God.

As he awakens to his true relationship to God, he silences the testimony of the physical senses, alias mortal mind, and establishes his true birthright, namely, his God-given dominion over all ignorance with its attendant discord. It is only through spiritual discernment, which is true sight, that man perceives the peace and harmony of God's creation, and realizes that, as Mrs. Eddy says (Science and Health, p. 14), "entirely separate from the belief and dream of material living, is the Life divine, revealing spiritual understanding and the consciousness of man's dominion over the whole earth."

A Grain of Mustard Seed

ARTHUR S. HOLLIS

OCCASIONALLY the remark is heard that certain persons seem impervious to the truth, that though demonstrations in Christian Science have been brought to their attention, they have persisted in clinging to their material gods and have seemed hardly to realize in the slightest the significance of the phenomena observed. That such an inference is not always justified is proved in the writer's experience. A number of years ago he came to the United States to study a certain branch of medical practice which was not taught in England, his native country, and which he had become assured in his thought was the truth of healing. Soon after starting his study, the subject of Christian Science was presented to him as something more than a mere abstraction, as it had been to him up to that time, and one afternoon he had a long talk with a Christian Science practitioner. That the talk did not appear to interest him deeply is indicated by the fact that, though he has many times tried to recollect the line of thought followed, only one statement seemed to remain with him; namely, a remark concerning the healing of a case of Bright's disease.

Some two years after this an advanced case of tuberculosis, which was wonderfully healed in a short time, was brought before his notice. Still no noticeable impression seemed to have been made. Then came a third impression, a year or so later still, when he was in Boston on a visit. The friends with whom he was staying proposed going to a concert one Wednesday evening, and on the way to the hall The Mother Church was passed. The proposal was made, "Let us go in for a few minutes." It was then about 8.10 p. m. Recalling this experience, the outstanding feature is the remembrance of the sense of discomfiture which came from rather noisily entering the church in company with several others, whispering together for a few minutes, and leaving it again, while a service was in progress. During those few minutes one testimony was heard, however,—a man in the balcony declaring in a clear, unfaltering voice that he had been a stammerer before taking up the study of Christian Science. Two or three more years passed, during which the writer was engaged in practice of materia medica with somewhat unsatisfactory results, as it seemed always that there was an element entering into the work that was not included in the ordinary diagnosis.

All through this time there was a thought that would recur at intervals. It was: "I wonder if Christian Science really does heal. There was that case of the stammering man and that tubercular patient. It cannot all be just imagination." He became more and more discouraged with his practice and the results obtainable therefrom, until one day a lecture on Christian Science was attended, more with the idea of passing the time than of obtaining any good therefrom. In it the lecturer told that to his personal knowledge Christian Science had been instrumental in healing a number of organic diseases, and among them he enumerated the restoration of a dislocated hip to its rightful position without any external manipulation or aid whatever. At once the thought came to the listener: "Then those other cases no doubt were healed through the operation of a definite Principle, and Christian Science is not just good for functional disorders."

On the way home, it was seen clearly that it would be impossible for him to continue long at the occupation he was then engaged in, though it was some time before this was demonstrated. To-day, however, the writer rejoices in a growing sense of freedom from the hampering beliefs and so-called laws of materia medica, in the understanding of the truth that underlies all real healing. With this experience has come a great sense of gratitude to God for Mrs. Eddy, in that she was brave enough and consecrated enough to be able not only to discover the fundamental rules of Christian Science but also to found upon that discovery a system that is destined, undoubtedly, to supersede all other systems of religion and healing. As Mrs. Eddy has said on page 184 of Miscellany, "Surely, the Word that is God must at some time find utterance and acceptance throughout the earth, for he that soweth shall reap. To such as have waited patiently for the appearing of Truth, the day dawns and the harvest bells are ringing."

The Dawn

ELIZABETH JACOB

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE holds us to high ideals, pointing out continually that "the Christlike understanding of scientific being and divine healing includes a perfect Principle and idea,—perfect God and perfect man,—as the basis of thought and demonstration" (Science and Health, p. 259). When this premise is accepted by a young student he reaches out with more understanding and consciously grows nearer those ideals which he has heretofore but dimly sensed as real. The following is an illustration in the life of a student who, having accepted Christian Science as the truth, immediately passed through a series of demonstrations each proving more conclusively to her budding thought that the truth upon which she seemed tremblingly standing was absolute. One afternoon she was bound on an errand of mercy in the most congested district of a large city. The work seemed hopeless because of an apparently never ending stream of human poverty and despair which presented itself for rehabilitation. Indistinctly these thoughts came to her, until it seemed that even the silver lining of the cloud was gone, and she mentally cried, "Where is God? I don't see Him anywhere, and how could one see Him amid such sordid surroundings?"

Then almost at her feet she saw a tiny baby girl. She was poorly clad and very dirty. She had in her hands a wide-brimmed old hat, probably rescued from an ash can, and with it she was attempting to dip up the gutter water to give drink to a large horse that stood near her. The baby did not know the water was dirty nor that her efforts for the horse were useless. To her thought the horse needed a drink, and she was doing her best to help him get it. It was not the horse, however, that needed a drink from the child that afternoon; it was one darkened with discouragement, who was passing by, and through the baby's loving act received, as it were, "the water of life." For it was love that was shining through the act of the child, and the recognition of this swept away the weary mist, and the worker went on her way rejoicing that God is, and that He is lighting the way for all His ideas.

With uplifted thought, outward conditions quickly changed. The sun shone again, the air grew fresh and bracing, the shouts of the children turned to music in her ears, and as never before the student comprehended the unlimited meaning of the text, "And a little child shall lead them." Truly, there is no respect of persons with God, and in this world struggle to attain the divine, this stupendous truth is breaking in upon and leveling the thoughts of men. Wearily, tearfully, and fearfully we struggle with wrong thought; but always with the continued desire for right thinking comes a burst of sunlight and our beloved Leader's words in her wonderful interpretation of the Lord's Prayer as given on page 16 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" become to us a living, holy power, "Thy kingdom is come; Thou art ever-present."

"The poppies of Flanders"

BEN HAWORTH-BOOTH

HE is not there; beneath the flowers of sleep
He knows nor sleep nor dull forgetfulness.
They say beneath the sword they laid him deep,
And o'er him sobbed in sorrow's dumb distress;
But nay, he is not there. The sunbeams press
Their kisses o'er his brow, and sanguine flowers
(Meet garb of Flanders in her war-stained dress)
Above him shed their burning tears in showers
For many a flaming mile, and mix their woes with ours.

But weep not for the brave; he sorrows not Save for thy tears. The bitterness of pain,
The hardship and the hate he has forgot;
Only the good and true with him remain,
For these are deathless; and he must retain
All that he knew of God. The poppies fade
And fall and flutter in the wind and rain;
Beneath their rustling roof the dust is laid,
But he yet lives and loves, peerless and undismayed.

Oh, crimson kingdom of the flowers of sleep,
That fain would sacred memory fold to,rest
In hushed forgetfulness, profound and deep,
Of one that was the bravest and the best
In earthly aspiration's heavenward quest,
Guard thou the dust—ever the spirit wings
Into the sunset of the golden west;
Our morning vision a new hope upbrings,
For which he lives, the hope of happier, holier things.

["'Many waters'"—The Christian Science Monitor, Boston, U.S.A., Aug. 15, 1919]

Upon first thought, few people would be likely to say, if asked, that love is the one enduring fact. Indeed, the senses testify upon every hand that love is the thing most buffeted in actual experience, most betrayed and disappointed; and yet it would be difficult to imagine any human being so submerged in cynicism or degradation as to be forever impervious to a genuine expression of love. Jesus' experience with the demoniac removes any doubt about that. This victim of evil belief, so extreme that it represented almost the sum of divine Love's opposite, and which cried out against the approach of Truth, yielded at once to the authority of divine Love, as expressed through Jesus the Christ. However men may fancy, in their devious antagonisms and bitternesses, that love has perished from experience, the longing for love remains; and this is doubtless what the wise man realized when he declared, "Many waters cannot quench love, neither can the floods drown it."

Divine Love is the enduring fact; and the only reason that men have not more often been satisfied with its baptismal healing power is because they have sought and have given one another only a human sense of love, the best they know, perhaps, but none the less a transitory quality that loses its value, if too severely tried, and turns to hate. The reason that mankind perpetually long for Love is not because of any permanent satisfaction to be found in human love when it is won, for that is temporal, if not inconstant, but because divine Love, or Principle, is the central fact of being, and the human heart, consciously or unconsciously, yearns for the spiritual source. This human longing was answered once and for all in the advent and the works of Jesus the Christ. Love, as divine Principle, was the supreme truth which he revealed; it was the basis of his words and miracles; his pure understanding of it was the only secret contained in his mighty triumphs, and this secret he unfolded for all to possess and use. Of the purpose of his work, Mrs. Eddy writes in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 19), "Jesus aided in reconciling man to God by giving man a truer sense of Love, the divine Principle of Jesus' teachings, and this truer sense of Love redeems man from the law of matter, sin, and death, by the law of Spirit,—the law of divine Love."

The human mind does not take kindly to the idea of loving according to law. It wishes to love as it pleases; and it is because it insists upon loving as it is moved by impulse and caprice, that its sense of love must always run dry and its gardens of delight turn to wastes and desolation. This false sense of love is a fundamental error underlying all human discord, an error which Jesus' revelation of God as divine Principle was designed to correct. He declared that God is Father, and in this statement inheres the correlated fact that man is son, even if he had not explicitly so explained man's relation to God. But this truth he disclosed in all his teaching and deeds, revealing spiritual man as the idea of Love, his nature as therefore loving, and his being perfect; and this right understanding of God's man stilled the storms of human passions and, consequently, quenched their penalties.

Marveling at this revelation of the unconquerable love of God and man in the likeness of God, John afterwards wrote, "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God." Spiritual man loves, then, and this not in the least because he is induced by human attraction, but because it is the law of his being to love. He loves because God is Love, exactly as he lives because God is Life. Spiritual love is therefore incapable of reversal or grief, since it exists by reason of, and expresses itself according to, unchanging law, or the Science of divine Love. Of this consciousness of pure being and of its power to destroy the material sense of discord, Mrs. Eddy writes, on page 274 of Science and Health: "The senses of Spirit abide in Love, and they demonstrate Truth and Life. Hence Christianity and the Science which expounds it are based on spiritual understanding, and they supersede the so-called laws of matter."

Acknowledgment of the presence of divine Love does not dispute the fact that, to human sense, those who live lovingly may encounter affliction, as do those who hate. The Bible bears, indeed, a record of the sufferings of loving women and men—Joseph betrayed by his brothers; Mary fleeing with her babe into Egypt; Stephen stoned; and Paul, after innumerable persecutions, tribulations, and distresses, saying, in triumphant faith, "Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." The difference between the afflictions of the righteous and of the wicked is the manner in which they are faced and the impress which the encounter leaves upon character.

Afflictions, rightly understood, serve only to turn desire more and more away from the human to the divine, and when that is accomplished and the understanding of divine Love has healed the hurt, the affliction itself no longer exists even in appearance or memory. Evil will not voluntarily cease its efforts to destroy the divine idea before it is itself destroyed. Indeed, the more loyally divine Principle is adhered to, the fiercer may be the attacks of evil upon its destroyer until its nothingness appears. But the one who abides in the understanding that God bestows nothing but harmony upon man realizes, even in the midst of the tumult, that, as Mrs. Eddy declares in her beautiful paraphrase of the twenty-third psalm (Science and Health, p. 578), "[Love] maketh me to lie down in green pastures: [Love] leadeth me beside the still waters."

Surely the crucial question about any method is, Are the healing results good? And here Christian Science will hold its own with any other system, and with this to its credit, that the patient healed physically is also benefited mentally and spiritually. Christian Scientists do not airily treat patients by flippant methods. On the contrary, those restored to health through Christian Science are often lastingly grateful for the spiritual enlightenment received as well as for the early relief from pain and suffering. Mental suggestion and mere blind faith are erroneously associated with Christian Science, which is not a product of mortal thinking but the understanding of and confidence in the operation and power of divine law.

[Peter V. Ross in Sacramento (Calif.) Union]

While the Rev. Mr. ——— may choose to blame ignorance of the Bible for the growth of Christian Science, he certainly cannot reverse his indictment and hold Christian Science responsible for ignorance of the Bible, for every one knows that Christian Science demands that its students study the Bible and acquaint themselves with its teachings. In fact an adequate understanding of Christian Science can be acquired in no other way. Understanding the Bible and understanding Christian Science are one and the same thing, and the practice of Christian Science in improving health and elevating morals is simply a revival of the practice of original Christianity, which combined healing with teaching and refused to content itself with preaching only.

Jesus and the early Christians did something far more vital than merely preach and ask that their doctrines be taken on faith; they taught the Science of Christianity, and, what is even more important, they actually applied it in healing sickness and in overcoming other human shortcomings and difficulties. This is what gave the remarkable impulse to Christianity in the first three centuries. It is what now gives impulse to Christian Science. It is not ignorance of the Bible that gives Christian Science headway as this clergyman fancies: it is the understanding of the Bible and the putting of its teachings into operation.

[Aaron E. Brandt in Big Run (Pa.) Tribune]

Existence as understood in Christian Science is spiritual and eternal—all that is embraced in God and His creation. Sickness and evil do not have these qualities of being, because they are not creations of God.

The commandment, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me," and many other passages of the Scriptures, preclude the thought that there is more than one creator; and as sickness and evil are no part of God's creation, they cannot have a real existence, but must be the result of erroneous beliefs and human misconceptions. It must be assumed that if God had created sickness and evil, Jesus would not have destroyed them, and therefore his works and the works of Christian Science are entirely in harmony with his profound statement to all his followers, "If ye continue in my word, . . . ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

It is to this scientific truth that Christian Science owes its success in healing thousands of cases considered incurable by other means. Mrs. Eddy, on page 207 of her textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," has stated it thus: "There is but one primal cause. Therefore there can be no effect from any other cause, and there can be no reality in aught which does not proceed from this great and only cause. Sin, sickness, disease, and death belong not to the Science of being. They are errors, which presuppose the absence of Truth, Life, or Love."

[W. Stuart Booth in Great Divide, Denver, Colo.]

The whole world has been, and is yet to a large extent, in bondage to sickness, sin, and other evil conditions, owing to man-made laws or beliefs. In their endeavor to overcome these evil conditions mankind have prepared and used oceans of medicines of every conceivable nature, and have observed many varieties of religious forms and beliefs without getting at the root of their trouble. However, when Christ Jesus came offering mankind release from their bondage by striking the shackles of materialism from human consciousness, he met with opposition instead of universal acceptance and glad acclaim.

Similarly Mrs. Eddy was opposed instead of assisted, when, after she had discovered the Science of Christianity as preached and practiced by Jesus the Christ, she proclaimed man's freedom in such words as these from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 227): "Christian Science raises the standard of liberty and cries: 'Follow me! Escape from the bondage of sickness, sin, and death!' Jesus marked out the way. Citizens of the world, accept the 'glorious liberty of the children of God,' and be free! This is your divine right. The illusion of material sense, not divine law, has bound you, entangled your free limbs, crippled your capacities, enfeebled your body, and defaced the tablet of your being."

Although mankind wish to be freed from all evil and discord, the human, material, so-called mind, being the counterfeit of the spiritual, divine Mind, resents and resists the way of emancipation proffered by Christian Science, because of its spiritual basis and method and because the operation of God's law of harmony and perfection rejects, reverses, and utterly discredits material sense testimony. The acceptance of this material sense testimony by mankind has brought verdicts of condemnation, such as hopeless invalidism, incurable disease, uncontrollable evil tendencies and desires, great injustice; in fact, all the woes of mankind depend solely upon material sense for their claim to authority and existence.

The challenge and denial of material sense testimony by Christian Science is from the basis that God, the divine Principle of all reality, is Spirit, and, as John writes, "all things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made." Since God, infinite Truth, is good, and like produces like, then God's creation must be and is good in every respect; hence, whatever does not measure up to the standard of good is no part of the creation of God, or Truth, and so must be a falsity. This was exactly what Jesus meant when he said of the woman, who was bowed together with disease, whom he healed, that Satan had bound her, for he defined Satan as a liar and the father of lies.

It is obvious that whatever is true, in the absolute sense, must be eternal, indestructible. Therefore, if sickness, sin, and other evils were real and true, the condition of mankind would be hopeless indeed; but the healing of all manner of disease, the elimination of sin, and the overcoming of every material so-called law by Christ Jesus proved the falsity and unreality of these discordant and disturbing conditions. That the master Christian's proof that sickness and sin are devoid of law, power, divine authority, and verity because all law, power, and reality are in and of God, Spirit, good—that this proof was not local as to time and place—is being daily shown by Christian Science, for great numbers of people are joyfully acknowledging the fulfillment of Jesus' promise: "These signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; . . . they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover."

Contrary to the impression of some people, however, Christian Science does not say to those who are in bondage to sin or disease that their troubles are imaginary and do not exist. On page 460 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" Mrs. Eddy writes: "Sickness is more than fancy; it is solid conviction. It is therefore to be dealt with through right apprehension of the truth of being." It was his "right apprehension of the truth of being" that enabled Jesus to deal successfully with humanity's troubles. That it was Jesus' desire and intent that all should attain this right apprehension or spiritual understanding, and thereby realize their God-given heritage of freedom, is evident from his words, "If ye continue in my word, . . . ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

Since man's freedom from enslaving conditions is to be gained by means of knowing the truth, it is evident that the laying on of hands referred to the application of spiritual power rather than to any physical contact. It is related of Jesus that he cast out evils and healed the sick with his word; that is, with the audible expression of his knowledge of spiritual truth he destroyed the manifestation of erroneous belief. The knowledge of the truth of being is available to all and capable of proof by anyone who will learn of and abide by its spiritual rules as explained in the Bible and Science and Health. Therefore these words of Job are strongly emphasized by Christian Scientists, "Acquaint now thyself with him [God], and be at peace: thereby good shall come unto thee."

Funds of The Mother Church

"Please accept the inclosed mite as a small expression of our gratitude for the many blessings and benefits that have come to us through Christian Science. Please convert same to the funds of The Mother Church, where, in your judgment, it will do the most good. Am over thirteen thousand miles farther away than when I sent the last contribution but now know there is no distance in divine Mind, for I find the same Christian Science everywhere. It has been quite a testing time for me, as this mortal mind fear of epidemic and contagion has been manifested about me ever since I landed here in December last; but He in whom 'we live, and move, and have our being' has been my liberator and constant protector. We are very grateful."

"Inclosed please find money order for five dollars, to apply wherever you think best, to either the Real Estate fund or The Christian Science Benevolent Association fund. This is only a small amount but it comes from one whose heart is full of love and gratitude for the wonderful blessings received during the past few weeks through the study of 'Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures' by Mary Baker Eddy."

"The inclosed check is lovingly offered to either the Real Estate fund or The Christian Science Benevolent Association fund, or both, in gratitude for the Christian Science movement as founded by our revered Leader, Mary Baker Eddy."

"I feel quite certain I have contributed to the Real Estate fund and to The Christian Science Benevolent Association fund through our church, but I do not wish to miss the privilege of contributing further to such a splendid opportunity for furthering the cause; therefore you will find inclosed postal money order for twenty dollars to be equally divided between the two funds."

"It is with love and gratitude for Christian Science and for what it has done for me that I am sending this small token of five dollars to the Christian Science activities of The Mother Church, to be used where it is most needed."

"I feel so grateful for this opportunity of contributing to the cause which I have so much at heart, and send these amounts as small thank offerings for the many blessings I have received from the hands of divine Love."

"The inclosed check is sent with sincere gratitude for the better understanding of the source of all good, which has made it possible for me to see that I have much to give. You may use it as you think best, for either the Real Estate fund or The Christian Science Benevolent Association fund."

"We are so grateful for the everyday help derived from the study of Christian Science and through the various channels so lovingly provided by Mrs. Eddy, that we wish to give as much as we can."

Preference in Honor

Days were when if a lad were questioned regarding a tale told or orders transmitted and he backed his assertion by saying, "Honour bright," any doubting disappeared. In those days the word was longer than now; it was spelled with an additional letter by the press as it is in the Bible; but the modification of spelling should not modify the essential meaning of the word. Honor connects itself always with truth. A man's honor is the reality, the affirmative excellence of his character. If any man falls into temptation and becomes dishonorable for profit then his honor for a time disappears and he is temporarily not trusted or valued.

Mrs. Eddy quotes the reply which Aristotle made when asked what a person gained by falsehood, which was, "Not to be credited when he shall tell the truth." And then she makes the comment (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 226), "The character of a liar and hypocrite is so contemptible, that even of those who have lost their honor it might be expected that from the violation of truth they should be restrained by their pride." It is very essential that at certain times it shall be possible to trust to honor. Indeed, the simple directions given by Paul to the Romans, "Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love; in honour preferring one another; not slothful in business; fervent in spirit; serving the Lord,"—this admonition if it were regarded and obeyed would be a complete solution for the human problems of the hour, the strife between capital and labor, worker and employer, guild and union with other guilds and unions, class against class, one self-interest against another.

Families which have protected their honor for generations unquestionably valued honor far above material things. Having suffered the loss of many things in maintaining it they are ready to attribute to others like character, and to trust to their honor, judging not by that which is outward, but estimating aright that which is within. This call of faith and right expectation is responded to, as a rule, because it is only depraved natures that will take advantage of the faith and fair dealing of others. Such persons in a community are like criminals, and it is better that they should be found out and exposed. In faith, then, may be found the solvent for the difficulties about leaguing the nations or accomplishing the federation of the world. That which opposes is distrust and fear. Men justify fear out of the past in the same way that they justify the experience of disease from tradition; but the better thinkers of the hour do not hold to the necessity of inevitable evil, even though they may only admit the possibility of good.

Christian Science comes upon the scene calmly declaring for the potency of good as not just possibility and hope, but rather as fact, evidence, and substance. Moreover it has changed the view of multitudes innumerable, so that they invite peace not pain into their lives, and having been blessed by healing they hold a loving expectation of healing for all mankind. We should let a like expectation prevail regarding such questions as honor and truth. Evidence abounds showing that the prisoner will keep his word, the officer his parole, the servant his trust, the ruler his promise, when reliance, trust, confidence, and faith are strong and demand it. Control is from things above in these cases, and not from things beneath. Per contra, suspicion, hatred that finds evil in another's motive because it perverts judgment and reason to that end, persistent condemnation and misrepresentation are oppressive, not liberative. When the tyrant has slain the martyr, who is justified? Who has maintained honor? The ages that follow give honor where it is due, but how much better if honor were given when it is due. Whether this be done or not the reformer and the righteous man must maintain his own courageous obedience to truth, seeing beyond the hours of persecution to the time when that which he stands for shall be understood. Mrs. Eddy says (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 237): "Honor to faithful merit is delayed, and always has been; but it is sure to follow. The very streets through which Garrison was dragged were draped in honor of the dead hero who did the hard work, the immortal work, of loosing the fetters of one form of human slavery."

Christian Science is the true helper of mankind, showing how that which prevents equanimity and fairness and kindness in human affairs, substituting therefor distortion of thought, contempt of brethren, and sometimes malignity, can be identified and made harmless. Mrs. Eddy deals fairly and honorably with mankind in disclosing its unseen enemy. She says (Miscellany, p. 211), "Animal magnetism fosters suspicious distrust where honor is due, fear where courage should be strongest, reliance where there should be avoidance, a belief in safety where there is most danger; and these miserable lies, poured constantly into his mind, fret and confuse it, spoiling that individual's disposition, undermining his health, and sealing his doom, unless the cause of the mischief is found out and destroyed."

It is evident that such a cause working out mischief is suppositional, not real. When a frenzy of ill-will presses an intoxicated man toward murder, that which is operating is no law of the universe, but only his response to a wicked belief. True cause is true cure in such a case, revealing, as when Christ Jesus healed the man among the tombs, no maniac, but a man "clothed, and in his right mind." And all through human affairs healing may thus proceed, changing, regenerating, restoring men, making them loving and honorable; making it evident, as Paul puts it, that they "have received, not the spirit of the world, but the spirit which is of God."

True Ambition

In her Message to The Mother Church in 1902 Mrs. Eddy says (p. 3), "The only true ambition is to serve God and to help the race." In this simple definition she has given the solution for a multitude of human difficulties. Because she has presented to mankind the possibility of a right ambition, there has thus been unfolded the opportunity for the expression of eager desire for righteous attainment which can be directed to such holy offices as shall result in blessing to all.

Ambition had been considered from such mistaken viewpoints that it had almost seemed that no place was left for any sense of good in connection therewith. It had been so associated with evil pursuits and desires, so turned to evil purposes, that the more earnest searchers for righteousness had come to agree with Shakespeare, when he said:—

> . . . . . Fling away ambition!
> By that sin fell the angels; how can man, then,
> The image of his Maker, hope to win by it?

This mistaken sense of ambition has always been based upon a desire for personal advancement, personal gain, personal adulation, and has been associated in the general thought of mankind with almost every human activity. It has claimed to hold despotic sway over every effort for progress in any direction, insisting that success could never be attained without its presence. It has striven to build up with one hand through a belief in personal ability, only to tear down with the other because of its false basis of limitation. It has held exalted vision aloft that one might strive for it, and then pulled down the ladder of possible ascension by presenting it as impossible of climbing by any but the favored few.

One of its most pernicious methods has been early to incite in children a mistaken desire to exceed their companions in accomplishment. A constant urging to do better than their fellows has started them from so self-centered a basis that it is not strange that boys and girls have grown into men and women madly struggling for the top, pushing aside or throwing down any others whom they might encounter in their selfish determination to reach the summit of their desire.

The disappointed ambitions of the world, with their accompaniment of wrecked lives, are a sad commentary on the fruitlessness of self-seeking. This lesson has been repeated with such terrible insistence that it would seem as though mortal man must ere this have awakened to see the uselessness of false ambition. This would undoubtedly have been the case had not the claim of materiality ever beckoned forward with its lying argument that although others might have failed, there was still the chance for success; always there has been the great temptation of egotism, the temptation of a yet greater personal ability luring one on to certain defeat. No least temptation of evil but in some way contains this argument of personal ability, personal superiority, personal triumph; always the lies of self-will, self-love, self-justification, vaunting themselves in some seductive form claiming a selfhood and a power apart from God, apart from that which is divine.

To all this selfish, mad ambition, Christian Science comes with its gentle "Peace, be still." Pointing out the unsatisfactoriness of all self-seeking, it lifts up at all times the goal of perfection in righteousness, encouraging all to strive equally for it, showing that no good can be gained that is not equally possible for all. The only good there is, is the good which is universal; for is not our infinite God the All-good? And are not all His children the likeness of that good?

Christian Science teaches the child as well as the adult to seek perfection in every undertaking, but tells him at the same time that he should desire that his brother do the same. It shows him that he gains nothing by his brother's failure of attainment, nor is he in any way limited or harmed by his brother's success. Indeed, on the contrary, he is encouraged by it. It is this wonderful equality of opportunity that Christian Science presents which proves its divine origin and authority. When Jesus said, "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect," he spoke no vain words. It was the truth of being he thus presented for our acceptance and which he himself was demonstrating. In Christian Science we have the rule for the attainment of this perfection, when it teaches men "to serve God and to help the race." This loving, considerate ambition, when obeyed, will purify all human endeavor and bring about the blissful government wherein each will seek his own in his brother's good. This is the vision of heaven, the government of God, which alone can satisfy all right desire; for as our beloved Leader tells us, in the Message before mentioned (p. 17), "Conscious worth satisfies the hungry heart, and nothing else can."

Board of Trustees of
The Christian Science Publishing Society,
107 Falmouth Street, Boston, Massachusetts.

Dear Friends:

The Christian Science Board of Directors instructs me to say that the Committee on General Welfare of The Mother Church has prepared the inclosed preliminary report and has requested that it be published in the earliest possible issue of the Christian Science Sentinel.

The Directors, therefore, request you kindly to publish it accordingly.

Sincerely yours,

COMMITTEE ON GENERAL WELFARE OF THE FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST, SCIENTIST, IN BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS

236 Huntington Avenue — October 17th, 1919.

COMMITTEE ON GENERAL WELFARE
PRELIMINARY REPORT

The Committee on General Welfare submits herewith to the members of The Mother Church the following preliminary report:

The Committee convened on September 29, all members being present, and has since met daily for regular morning and afternoon sessions.

After first forming a temporary organization for the purpose of informally considering the individual views of the members, the Committee then organized permanently by the election of a chairman and a secretary. Trustworthy and competent clerical help has been obtained from outside of Boston.

In taking over the office rooms provided by the Church, the Committee also received from the Clerk of The Mother Church the mail addressed to the Committee which had accumulated since July 1. This mail has since been opened and read and is now being classified. Acknowledgments will follow as soon as each communication can receive the attention of the Committee.

The Committee has considered particularly the following points: (a) the understanding of its functions; (b) its relationship to the constituted authorities and members of The Mother Church; (c) its methods of conducting business.

Its conclusions are as follows:

A. The Committee understands that its functions are threefold,—

1. To make such inquiries into the affairs of The Mother Church as the Committee may decide.
2. To make such report or reports to the members of The Mother Church as it may determine.
3. To include in these reports such recommendations to the Board of Directors as the Committee may deem necessary.

Its replies, therefore, to correspondents will be in the form of a report or reports to all the members of The Mother Church and not to individual churches, boards, or members.

Digitized by Google

B. The Committee's relationship to the constituted authorities and members of The Mother Church is comprehended in the fact that while it was authorized and its duties defined by the Board of Directors, its constituent members were elected by Readers of Branch Churches in seven different localities to represent the entire membership of The Mother Church, and, therefore it assumes that it has equal obligations to both.

On the one hand the Committee is bound to refrain from any action which might embarrass the Board of Directors with regard to the present litigation, or which would violate Article I, Section 6, of the Church Manual:

"The business of The Mother Church shall be transacted by its Christian Science Board of Directors."

On the other hand it feels perfectly free to institute any inquiry in directions pointed out by members or upon its own motion.

That the Board of Directors concurs in this view is confirmed by the following letter:

"September 29, 1919.

"Committee on General Welfare,
"236 Huntington Avenue,
"Boston, Massachusetts.

"Dear Friends:

"The Christian Science Board of Directors instructs me to extend to you a cordial welcome to Boston on the occasion of your assuming the duties outlined in the resolution of June 2, 1919.

"The Board is at your service, and will be glad to give you at any time such information or aid as may be helpful to you in the harmonious discharge of your duties.

"It is the desire and intention of the Directors to allow you a perfectly free hand in your activities, but they sincerely trust that you will join them in refraining from doing anything that could possibly be construed as a violation of the ad interim injunction.

"Sincerely yours,
(Signed) "Chas. E. Jarvis,
"Corresponding Secretary for
The Christian Science Board of Directors."

The Committee considers itself to be independent and free to act within the scope of its functions and is united in its determination to neither shrink from the full performance of its duties, nor to exceed its authority in any particular.

C. The Committee carries on its business according to the usual parliamentary methods, and gives careful and prayerful attention to all of its duties. It considers not only signed written communications from but personal interviews with members of The Mother Church on all matters pertaining to Church activities.

It may be stated that all correspondence is held in the strictest confidence and where letters are received that should have been addressed to other departments of The Mother Church they are either returned to the sender or a letter asking for further directions will be sent. No anonymous communications will be considered.

The Committee realizes that the success of its work is dependent upon Divine guidance, but recognizes also the need of the loving and intelligent cooperation of the entire field.

Committee on General Welfare.

Larned, Kan.—The Christian Science Society has taken a year's lease on the Episcopal Church property located at the corner of Eighth and Main Streets. The location is excellent, cornering on the Court House Square.

Larned Chronoscope.

Greenwich, Conn.—First Church of Christ, Scientist, has purchased a large tract of land at Putnam Manor as a site for its proposed church edifice. The property is at East Putnam and Park Avenues, opposite the Higgins estate and within a very short distance of Christ Church and Old Put's House. It has a frontage of 94 feet and is 201 feet in depth.

A building fund is being raised and already a large amount has been subscribed by members of the church and other Christian Scientists. The Scientists organized a Christian Science Society here in 1911. The first meetings were held in a room in the Smith Building, but soon the attendance required two rooms. In two years it was found necessary to have larger quarters, and the society leased No. 69 East Putnam Avenue, where services were held until May of last year, when a still larger meeting place was needed and a change was made to No. 71 Putnam Avenue. The church was organized last April.—The Greenwich Press.

The Lectures

Buzzards Bay, Mass. (Society).—John Randall Dunn, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Flora Kiefer, who said in part:—

In Psalms we read, "Let the redeemed of the Lord say so, whom he hath redeemed from the hand of the enemy; and gathered them out of the lands, from the east, and from the west, from the north, and from the south." From China to California, from Argentina to Alaska, an ever increasing volume of thanksgiving to God is arising from those who say that they have asked, and health has been given them; that they have sought, and found peace; that they have knocked, and a new life of joyful service has been opened to them. What it is that has redeemed them from the hand of the enemy, from sorrow and suffering, and what it is that may so redeem every one that is seeking in sincerity and truth, we have come to-night to hear,—namely, Christian Science.

Aberdeen, S. Dak. (First Church).—John C. Lathrop, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. John H. Perry, who said in part:—

There seems to be considerable misapprehension in the minds of many concerning Christian Science. Friends who are not Scientists frequently express surprise to hear of illness or inharmony in the families of Christian Scientists. They evidently forget that even Jesus was not spared the most distressing human experience; that he was tempted as we are, that he was afflicted and oppressed and finally crucified; but through his understanding of the omnipotence, omnipresence, and omniscience of God, his heavenly Father, who is also our Father, he was enabled to overcome every form of evil, even death itself. Daniel was not spared his experience in the den of lions, but his absolute surety that his God would deliver him, protected him from what seemed certain death.

Christian Scientists do not claim immunity from the evil beliefs and errors that seem to fasten themselves to suffering humanity, even as the poisonous viper fastened itself to the hand of the apostle Paul, who, because of his understanding and application of the healing Christ, shook the viper off and felt no harm. In proportion as Christian Scientists avail themselves of this same Principle and apply it, are they enabled to shake off the evils of mortal belief and feel no harm. On page 450 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" Mrs. Eddy says: "The Christian Scientist has enlisted to lessen evil, disease, and death; and he will overcome them by understanding their nothingness and the allness of God, or good. Sickness to him is no less a temptation than is sin, and he heals them both by understanding God's power over them."—Aberdeen American.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND. (joint lecture).—Frank H. Leonard, lecturer; introduced by Ancil T. Brown, who said in part:—

In the fourth chapter of Proverbs we find these familiar verses: "Get wisdom, get understanding: forget it not; neither decline from the words of my mouth. . . . Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom: and with all thy getting get understanding." For many centuries mortal man has groped in the darkness of sin and despair, not knowing that he had failed to comply with the instruction of these simple verses. However, the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, has brought about the dawn of a new day, and through its teachings mankind has been given renewed faith in God, wisdom concerning man's relation to God, and an understanding whereby he has been able to demonstrate the healing of all manner of sin and disease.

Testimonies of Healing

It is over ten years since I first heard of Christian Science. I was then in a very nervous condition, having been a drinking man for fifteen years or more. I also smoked a great deal and was a very heavy gambler on horse racing. Many times I tried to give up these habits, but always went back to them. I also suffered greatly from stomach trouble.

After over a year spent in England drinking and following the races most of the time, I returned to America and started for a town in Maine where a position awaited me. I did not make good train connections at Portland and, as it was raining hard, I had to pass several hours in the waiting room. While there I took up some papers to read and they proved to be Christian Science pamphlets and some copies of the Sentinel. Up to that time I had considered myself an infidel, but I got interested right away, and continued to read most of the time until my train came. I believe I was healed of the drinking habit and the stomach trouble almost at once, as I got such a sense of uplift after reading a few minutes. When I reached my destination I ate everything that was set before me without any ill effects, and although I managed to drink the whisky I had with me, I had no desire for it. I threw away all the remedies I carried with me and have never used medicine since.

I am healed of all the things mentioned, and I trust God as taught in Christian Science for all my needs. I am very grateful to Mrs. Eddy for this teaching. Life would seem a blank to me without Christian Science, because it reveals the spiritual truths in the Bible.

Arthur Wilson, Bradford, Yorkshire, England.

The testimonies in the Journal and Sentinel have been such a comfort and help to me that I want to add my mite and thus perhaps help some one who is struggling to grow in the understanding of Truth. For ten years or more I had been suffering from stomach trouble, and later from an abdominal hernia. After having doctored for years and being told by six physicians that only an operation would help me, I finally consented to go through this ordeal. The operation was performed and after being in the hospital for weeks I was taken home; but four or five days later the physician insisted upon my returning to the hospital, as an abscess was forming and I would have to be operated on again.

While I lay in bed suffering intensely I started thinking that as God is good, why should I have to suffer so, and the still, small voice said to me, "Why not try Christian Science?" When the physician called that day I told him I would not go to the hospital and that he need not come any more, as I had decided to try Christian Science. He seemed very much excited and worried over my condition, and said that the abscess would break and he would give me two weeks to live. But "man's extremity is God's opportunity." That same afternoon we sent for a Christian Science practitioner, and she lovingly explained to me how good God is and that He alone was my physician. She gave me a treatment and told me to eat my supper with the rest of the family and to eat anything I wanted, as nothing could hurt me. I had been on a very strict diet for months, but followed her advice and ate heartily. I slept well that night, and after ten days' treatment the abscess broke. We called up the practitioner, and she told us to have no fear—that God was right there. The abscess discharged, and the wound healed perfectly. For many years I had been suffering from chronic bowel disorder, and this condition manifested itself. The practitioner, however, assured me that this condition would be taken care of. I had no fever, suffered no ill effects whatever, and the trouble entirely disappeared. After three months' treatment I was a new woman, able to go out and attend the Christian Science services. I am very grateful for this wonderful demonstration.

We have seen all kinds of sickness healed in our family, such as appendicitis, bowel disorder, throat diseases, pleurisy, ivy poisoning, and many other ailments, and have not used medicine for over three years. I can never cease to thank God for His manifold blessings to me and mine, and only hope my testimony may be the means of bringing others out of darkness into the light of Truth. I am also grateful to our Leader, Mrs. Eddy, through whom these truths were so generously unfolded, and for her ability to give them to us in a way easy to understand.

(Mrs.) Augusta Dassler, Ridgefield Park, N. J.

I cannot longer let my healing go unacknowledged. Nearly seven years ago I was employed in the office of a well-known surgeon in a western city. Assisting him was a laboratory specialist, and sharing his office were a specialist in children's diseases and a regular medical practitioner. When I was suddenly taken ill with what the physicians called tic douloureux, a pain in one of the nerves in the face, which came without warning and which only morphine seemed to relieve, I was told there was no known cure for it because there was no known cause. I was sent to a dentist and to an oculist; the X-ray was used; prescriptions were administered, and still the terrifying attacks of pain continued until I did not dare to leave my room. The doctors tried earnestly to give relief. The surgeon said he could remove the nerve which was causing the trouble, but could not guarantee that the pain would not return in another nerve; besides, the operation would leave a long scar which would disfigure me for life, and he strongly opposed it. The oculist told me to wear glasses the remainder of my days. In testing my eyes he kept me nearly blind for ten days, and after this treatment my eyes, which had never given me a moment's trouble, were so weak that I could not look at the light. Naturally glasses seemed the only remedy for this unnatural weakness.

Up to the time of these attacks I had, in common with the physicians, treated Christian Science lightly, usually assuming that something was mentally wrong with a person who preferred it to medical treatment, but finally I told my grandmother there was nothing else left to try. The following day I went to a practitioner, and I was healed in a very short time, having only two minor attacks of the trouble following the first treatment. The first attack came within twenty-four hours, early in the morning. I called the practitioner, but immediately afterwards asked for the doctor in the building, who I knew would administer the morphine. The small voice of Truth was again at hand, however, urging me to give Christian Science at least a trial, and before the doctor had time to leave his room I called again and told him not to come. At once the pain vanished, and with the exception of one very slight attack a short time afterwards I have not had it since. The glasses went the way of the nerve trouble. My position with the physicians was held open for me, but I did not need to go back to it. Another position came to me with an increase in salary, and following that came a better position. So it has been ever since. Just so long as I am faithful to the teaching of Christian Science, progress is made. I have worked steadily for more than six years without missing a day.

Christian Science is so universal in its application that no one need be without it. It would be terrible to go back to the old way of thinking with all its fears and doubts and dependence on a system that time and again pronounces its own inability to heal; to worship a God afar off, and not know Him for the ever present, loving Father whose law governs harmoniously. My gratitude to Mrs. Eddy is unbounded for thus opening our eyes to the truth about God and His perfect creation.

(Miss) MARION F. LEWIS, Lawrence, Kan.

It gives me the deepest sense of thankfulness to God and of gratitude to Mrs. Eddy that I can be a living witness to the healing power of God and to the peace which follows. In March, 1914, I fell from the top of a freight car, and as a result my legs became paralyzed. Eight months afterwards paralysis of the right arm and left side of the face set in. Nineteen specialists and doctors experimented on me for about a year, but I was getting worse. At this stage a Sentinel was handed to me by a friend. This I partly read, only to ridicule it at first; but later I read and reread it. Then Science and Health was given me. I read it and found myself trying to learn to know God. Several healings followed. Bowel trouble and grippe were overcome, but the final awakening came nine months after I began to read Christian Science literature. One night I awoke to find myself well, and I walked the floor, laughing and crying for untold joy. The day before I had been a helpless piece of humanity, wheeled around in a chair. That same week I was able to return to my old position.

I have had many healings since, and my gratitude cannot be told in words for the peace and harmony that this healing power has brought into my life. I hope this simple testimony may prove a help to others.

EDWARD L. EGE, Wilmington, Del.

It is with the deepest gratitude and love I send my testimony. I was a constant sufferer for seven years and underwent two major operations. I wore glasses, and for a year was under the care of an eye specialist, being dismissed with the statement that the glasses were doing me no good, but perhaps a trip to California might help me. In my suffering and disappointment I did go to California (my home was then in Portland, Oregon). Man's extremity was surely God's opportunity, for there I found Christian Science and was healed of the eye trouble, of rheumatism, lumbago, weakness, and fear of colds, just through reading the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy.

Every day we have abundant proof of God's protecting care, and my thankfulness to God and my gratitude to our beloved Leader, Mrs. Eddy, can never be expressed in words.—(Mrs.) MABEL PATTERSON, Oakland, Calif.

Over twenty years ago Christian Science was first brought to my attention, and shortly afterwards two members of my family were healed by its application. It was not until a few years later that I began to study for myself. I was not at that time in need of physical healing, and although I had implicit faith in the power of Christian Science to heal all manner of diseases and during the years that followed experienced many beautiful, also instantaneous, healings, yet I failed to apply it to my life in other ways as I should have done.

Seven years ago I was taken very ill with a great mental depression which necessitated my leaving home and parting with all near and dear to me. Everything of a material nature which I had clung to was taken from me, also health, hope, and happiness. It was some years before my complete healing took place, and the way seemed indeed dark, but the past two years have been years of complete freedom. The physical and mental healing, though beautiful, does not, however, compare with the spiritual awakening which has come to me. Many material things which years before seemed necessary to my happiness, I find no longer essential. I have been healed of fear to a wonderful degree, of grief, pride, sensitiveness, discontent, discouragement, and anxiety. In their place I have found joy and peace, independence, freedom, courage, and the consciousness of real wealth that the world has not to give and cannot take away. I have indeed proved that joy is spiritual. Many beautiful and quick demonstrations have been made for myself and also for others. I have found the "pearl of great price," and all the world offers could not buy it from me. My one desire is to gain in understanding, and imbibe the spirit so as to help others as I have been helped.

I am thankful to God, the giver of all good, and also grateful to our faithful Leader, Mrs. Eddy.—(Miss) ALICE LIVINGSTONE EAGAN, W. Somerville, Mass.

I gratefully acknowledge the good which I have received through the study of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, and of the Bible as interpreted by her. Thirteen years ago everything looked dark. Every material means had been tried for relief from nervous prostration, rheumatism of the feet, and lung trouble, but without avail. I was very downhearted, but felt that I could not accept the teaching that a just God would take parents away from little children who were entirely dependent on them. A very dear friend came to see me one day, and noticing my depressed state she spoke of her own healing in Christian Science. I was immediately aroused, and as I listened to her words of encouragement, could scarcely wait to know more about this religion, I was so anxious to be well. She told me to read the ninety-first psalm and said she would send me a copy of the Sentinel, so I learned the psalm by heart and began to study diligently all the literature. I had testing times and much opposition to meet, but that did not matter, for I had found the truth which makes free. In less than a year I was healed, and have had no return of these ailments. I am grateful for all our literature and rejoice in the privilege of being a member of The Mother Church.

I feel a deep sense of gratitude toward Mrs. Eddy for "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures." This book has revealed God to me as Love and has taught me that when rightly understood, He heals the sick and casts out evil. I owe much gratitude for these words: "Ye shall seek me, and find me, when ye shall search for me with all your heart," as Christian Science was not by any means easy for me to understand and required much studying on my part. Mrs. Eddy tells us in Science and Health (p. 1), "Desire is prayer; and no loss can occur from trusting God with our desires." It is this desire that has given me an understanding of God. I have been healed of a skin disease, stomach disorder, an abscess, nervousness, and head and scalp troubles, all of long standing, also of grippe. My sister laid aside her glasses after two treatments. My husband was also healed of a bad case of grippe.

We owe endless gratitude to Mrs. Eddy for this practical religion. We are grateful for all these healings, but more so for the spiritual understanding. I am deeply grateful for the authorized literature and for the lectures, which are so helpful. I am indeed thankful to God that I was led into Christian Science.—Mrs. E. A. MacNeil, St. Paul, Minn.

I can testify that the above statement given by my wife is absolutely true. I have been healed of many minor ailments, also of the liquor habit, and Christian Science has taught me right thinking and living. I am very grateful for the spiritual uplift, and thankful to God for giving us the Way-shower, also for Mrs. Eddy's teachings.

E. A. MacNeil.

It is with the deepest love and gratitude to God that I add a little to the mighty strain of praise which is ascending to Him daily all over the world. When on a visit to Ladonia, Texas, in 1912, I stopped off in Dallas to see my brother and his family. I had been in ill health for fifteen years, suffering from nervousness, headache, neuralgia, and stomach and bowel troubles, and had just about given up hope. While I was sitting in the park one afternoon, a gentleman came up to me and asked if I was troubled about anything. I told him yes, as I had just about decided to get out of this world on account of my ill health. He then inquired if I had ever tried Christian Science, and when I said no, although I had tried almost everything else, he said he could help me and asked if I would mind going to the Wednesday evening testimony meeting with him. As I consented to go, he called for me that evening and I went with him. During the meeting a testimony was given that gave me a great deal of encouragement, so when I had made my visit to Ladonia and returned to my home I took up Christian Science and had treatment from a practitioner here. In three months I laid aside my glasses, which had been worn for six years, and several ailments have disappeared since. I am very thankful to God and grateful to Mrs. Eddy for this.

J. E. Jackson, Waco, Texas.

Christian Science is indeed the "pearl of great price" to me, and my earnest desire is that I may bring the healing truth to some one else. I was completely healed of acute stomach trouble, and a great freedom accompanied the demonstration, for a great fear was allayed. The "little book," "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," was "sweet at its first taste," as Mrs. Eddy says on page 559, but its digestion was "bitter." Material sense clamored loud for admittance to my consciousness, and error whispered in many ways that there would be time for the living of Christian Science later, that it was easier for one older and more settled in life to demonstrate and prove the truth as taught by Mrs. Eddy; yet the seed that had been planted grew day by day, until now there is a great hope, a wonderful peace, and a mighty longing to be good welling up in my heart, that I know can never be destroyed.

In replacing each wrong thought that would deter my progress, with the correct thought, the right ideas that I have gained through the study of the Bible together with Science and Health and other authorized Christian Science literature, the wall of salvation is being built; and where at one time weakness, doubt, and fear seemed to have dominion over my thinking, these are gradually being replaced with thoughts of strength, courage, and assurance. These have not been won in a day or without effort on my part, but the understanding of the allness and goodness of God has come through patient, persistent endeavor to put out of my thought all of these doubtful, detaining suggestions and to know that man is made in the image and likeness of God, and that this can be proved now.

It is Love alone that has guided and guarded me through these testing times, and I daily pray that I may be accounted faithful to the beautiful teachings of Christian Science.

(Miss) Myrtle Roberts, Portland, Ore.

I became interested in Christian Science, not for physical healing, but because it appealed to me as a consistent religion. I did not, however, gain an understanding of its teachings until we had proof of its healing power. This demonstration was an instantaneous healing of Bright's disease, after prominent physicians and specialists had given up the case. Since that time, nearly seven years ago, Christian Science has supplied our every need, and I am indeed grateful for all that it has done and is doing for us each day. In our home tonsillitis, inflammatory and sciatic rheumatism, St. Vitus' dance, and many other discordant conditions have been overcome; and as we go on with the study of Christian Science and faithfully apply its teachings, we find these conditions do not appear so often as they did, so I feel that the truth is preventive as well as curative.

I wish to express gratitude for our periodicals, and my earnest desire is to prove my gratitude by loving service.

(Mrs.) Maritta David, Wilmette, Ill.

I wish to express my deep gratitude for a healing I experienced toward the end of last year. We were hauling in a heavy stationary engine by horse power when the rope that tied the pulley thereto broke. The pulley flew through the air and caught me right across the kneecap, but although badly wounded I managed to go on with the work for an hour or so and drive myself home in the car. The next day the leg was quite stiff, and I could only just get upstairs, so I wrote to a Christian Science practitioner asking for treatment, and was driving my car within a fortnight.

I found the truth in 1906. About the first thing I was delivered from was fear. I was never more surprised in my life than when I read in the Bible, "God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind." I never dreamed there was anything so practical in the Bible. I am very thankful for deliverance from the bad effect of accidents and cuts; as regards the latter I can recollect three or four cases in which bleeding has been stopped at once. I have also been healed of varicose veins, after suffering from them for more than a dozen years.

I am indeed very thankful to God, and to Jesus the Way-shower, also grateful to our beloved Leader, who has shown us the way in this age.

H. T. Stephens, Carmarthen, England.

For about eight years my only physician has been Christian Science, for which words cannot express my gratitude. I first turned to it for the healing of a skin disease. At times my face was so disfigured I would not go out without wearing a veil. After trying all kinds of material remedies and receiving no benefit, I turned to Christian Science. I had been living on a light diet for some time, but the practitioner told me to eat anything I wanted. In one week I was healed of two chronic diseases. I did not keep up the treatments for the skin disease, however, as I thought it should have been overcome at once; but after a year or more I asked for help again and was healed in three weeks.

We have had many beautiful proofs of God's care since that time, and I am especially grateful for the help Christian Science is in the raising of children. My daughter has attended the Christian Science Sunday school for the past seven years, and the truth she has learned there has brought her untold blessings. She has been healed of mumps, measles, whooping cough, severe headaches, and weak eyes. My husband became interested in Christian Science through being healed of kidney trouble of seventeen years' standing. Above all we are grateful for the demonstration of God's power a year ago when a baby boy was born.

I am grateful for the privilege of being a student of Christian Science. The daily study of the Lesson-Sermon does unfold all truth that is promised in the Bible and in Science and Health. Words are not sufficient to express my gratitude to Mrs. Eddy, and I wish to express my sincere thanks to all who have helped me along the way.

In taking up the study of Christian Science I carried along a great load of fear as to the outcome of turning away from specialists to God. I believed Him to be all-powerful, but did not know that we could always get into touch with Him. I resolved, however, to rely absolutely on this teaching, and during the three years that I have been studying it the sense of fear has slowly but surely become less. My children have been healed of croup, gathering in the ear, measles, headache, spasms, cuts, boils, fevers, and whooping cough, and I have been healed of nervous prostration and stomach trouble.

I am so glad that through Mrs. Eddy's "longing to be good and true," to use the words of a hymn, I have learned to know our Father-Mother God. The Bible is now my daily companion, whereas I had for years failed to understand it.—(Mrs.) FLORA HELEN MYERS, Centralia, Wash.

My heart overflows with gratitude for the many blessings that have come to me through Christian Science. I had suffered for thirty years from an organic trouble, nervous prostration, and many other discordant conditions. A little over a year ago I was told by physicians that an operation was inevitable. It did not seem possible to either my husband or myself that I could stand any more suffering and live. We had reached our extremity; materia medica, drugless systems of treatment,—in fact all material means,—had failed. We then decided to try Christian Science, so went to see a practitioner, and learned that healing is of God. With just a few treatments I was healed. Pain, discouragement, sorrow,—all disappeared into their native nothingness. I am very grateful for this physical healing, but most grateful for having found a God of love.

Words are inadequate to tell what this year has brought to me and mine,—joy unspeakable, health, happiness; but more than all else to me is some understanding of the divine sonship, God's gift. There have been a few days when to human sense it seemed difficult to go on, but by being obedient and seeking to know the truth all problems have been readily solved. There have been many, many days when blessings were so abundant that all I could think of or say was: Father, I thank thee. I am very grateful to our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, for giving us this beautiful truth; grateful, too, for the privilege of class instruction, and that in Christian Science I am learning to understand the words of Christ Jesus: "Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me . . . For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light."

(Mrs.) MATILDA J. HOFFMAN, Santa Ana, Calif.

I gratefully substantiate all my wife has testified and wish to add my expression of gratitude. I had devoted all my energy and earning power to buy some relief for this dear one. When the practitioner, who lovingly taught us of a God "who healeth all thy diseases," pointed out to me the blessing Christian Science would bring, I began to study "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, in connection with the Bible. Through this study I found a practical and scientific religion,—a practical religion I can apply in business, a scientific religion which teaches me how to think right. Through this revelation I was healed of stomach, liver, and bowel disease, supposed to have been inherited.

For this healing I am very grateful, but more so for the spiritual understanding, the peace, and the love for my fellow man. I am thankful to God, who gave us Christ Jesus, and also revealed to our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, a way of explaining the Bible texts "in their spiritual import," as stated in the Explanatory Note in The Christian Science Quarterly. I am grateful for class instruction. My daily prayer is that I may reflect right living, so as to help others to understand this law of all-powerful, ever present Love—Christian Science.—FRANK V. HOFFMAN.

It has long been my desire to express my gratitude and acknowledge publicly what Christian Science has done for me. I have been healed of stomach trouble, quinsy, astigmatism, and am being healed daily of impulsiveness and a quick temper. As these tendencies become less, other conditions that have yielded slowly are returning to their nothingness. I am learning daily more of what Mrs. Eddy means when she says (Science and Health, Pref. p. vii), "To those leaning on the sustaining infinite, to-day is big with blessings." This statement has sustained me many times when I seemed in utter despair.

To say that I am grateful expresses my feelings mildly; but to live my gratitude by daily watching and praying for that Mind to be in me "which was also in Christ Jesus," and which was again revealed by our beloved Leader, Mrs. Eddy, is my fondest hope.

In the darkest hour of my life, after trying for some years to regain my health through materia medica, I turned to Christian Science for help, which was received. Being a registered pharmacist, with no little love for and faith in the doctors, it was only a state of hopelessness that led me to take this step. My mental and physical condition improved from the moment I began to perceive that there is only one Life, which is forever expressing itself everywhere; that the real man, God's image and likeness, can never be separated from this Life. For over ten years now the light of Truth has been a beacon in the fogs and mists of mortal belief, and I have never failed to get the needed help either through my own faithful study of the Christian Science literature or through the clearer mental work of a friend more advanced in understanding of the truth. I am indeed most grateful that Mrs. Eddy was able to share with us the truth about God and man.

Signs of the Times

[Pittsburgh (Pa.) Leader]

A warning given by the Rt. Rev. Charles Henry Brent, D. D., Episcopal bishop of western New York, against the use of physical force in attempts at adjusting social problems, is wise in its ethical terms and especially so in its timeliness. The bishop advises that we do not need the utilization of the centuries' old doctrine of physical force to apply to new perils, new opportunities, new tasks. What we do need, the bishop wisely remarks, is new vision to deal with new problems, for they are new in spite of their appearance of age. The conditions from which they grow are old, but the questions, the difficulties themselves, are new and demand the cautious use of new vision to handle them in the right way.

Physical force, according to Bishop Brent, can never be more than a power to clear the road for spiritual force. The road he claims is open and clear now. It needs only to be traveled. The world expects an era of liberty in which justice and honor and freedom, for which the war was fought, will be applied to every department of life and made available for the last man and the least nation. The doubt that this era of liberty has dawned after all the promises, the fear that selfish motives are bitterly at work trying to checkmate the coming of freedom, justice, and the opportunity for happiness, in the bishop's view, is the real cause for the prevailing unrest.

If immediate steps are not taken to remedy this condition, he warns that disorder will follow, and if it does it will be a justifiable disorder. The church, he declares, has the giant's share in this task. If it fails, he warns, the church will have no excuse for continued existence. The church needs to be jolted out of the rut into which it has been running, the bishop asserts with bluntness. She cannot without the deepest shame pursue a policy of self-preservation while all mankind, educated by faith for one grand adventure, is waiting for another in which the church alone is equipped to lead.

"Does the church know what its obligations are to the community, the nation, and beyond?" he asks, and replies: "We must know what to do before we can do it."

[Rev. Joseph Fort Newton in British Empire Review]

Manifestly, the hope of the world lies in the League of Nations, but the hope of the League of Nations depends upon the friendship of Britain and America; for upon our united shoulders, by the providence of God, henceforth, so far as we can see, the peace of the world will largely rest. Neither Britain nor America sought this responsibility for the guardianship of the main line of human development; nor can we evade it. Our common genius for private liberty and public order at home; of frankness, friendliness, and fair dealing abroad; our common ideal of the Commonwealth, of the service of man to his neighbor, near or far,—an ideal of which this blessed island has been at once the home and the fortress for so many centuries, and whence it migrated to the New World,—require of us a leadership of service in the reorganization of the world. From this obligation there is no honorable escape, and if we are not ready for a great feat of brotherly world service, putting the welfare of the race above our own interest, we have not learned the lesson of the world tragedy.

Isolation is at an end. The narrow nationalisms of olden time have broken down, and humanity has been drawn by a common peril into a new fellowship of interest and obligation. Either we must learn to live together in amity or face an all-dissolving anarchy. One thing is clear: the future of human society is inevitably democratic, and nothing can stop it. There is no way out of the welter of rivalries, chicanery, and strife except to make the world democratic, and then by education and Christian influence to remove the weakness and shams of democracy. For democracy, as such, is no panacea. Left to itself, without discipline, without spiritual vision, it may be a plague. Since the curve of the world is toward democracy, we must spiritualize the inevitable, or the future of the race is dismal beyond words. In letters of fire it is being written before us that the hope of humanity lies in the spiritual guide, which alone can touch to finer issues the creative forces of civilization.

Letters of Appreciation

Many letters of appreciation of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR and other Christian Science activities are constantly being received. These letters express what these activities mean to different individuals in various occupations and pursuits. The favorable comment that has been received on those already published indicates that they are welcome and helpful; therefore others will be published under the above heading. Extracts from such letters follow:

I WISH to say that I am grateful for this opportunity to express my appreciation of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR, as well as to renew my subscription. I began to read the MONITOR while in Boston when it was first published and before I became interested in Christian Science as a study and practice. My attention was called to it by the statement of a college professor who said it was the only reliable newspaper published. He also stated that he was not a Christian Scientist and had never been inside the church but that he must give those people credit for a splendid newspaper. Since that time I have been a regular reader of it, either having a subscription in my own name or with someone else. To-day I consider it essential to the working Christian Scientist if the world problems are to be intelligently handled. Please accept my congratulations and best wishes for the success it so well deserves, which is the assurance of reward for "well done."

I TAKE this opportunity of expressing to you gentlemen the pleasure and instruction daily afforded me by the columns of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR. For some little time I have taken no other publication, newspaper or otherwise, yet I find that I not only keep myself as currently informed as the readers of many publications, but that what information I am able to possess myself of through the MONITOR is far more analytical and synthetic,—constructive, perhaps, would be the better word,—in its review of daily and hourly issues concerning cause and effect than so-called information to be gleaned on similar topics from any other (to me personally known) expression. . . . Saving occasionally editorially, a regard for newspaper belle lettres must of necessity be very charitable. The diction and rhetoric of the MONITOR render it, to me, as well-appointed a vehicle as a classic, with its added advantage,—the MONITOR'S wheels roll through paths prepared by Truth.

"What I say unto you I say unto all, WATCH." Jesus

VOLUME XXII NOVEMBER 8, 1919 NUMBER 10

"He that shall endure"

AGNES M. CLEAVELAND

INTEREST in sacred prophecy has become widespread among Bible students since the Bible has become less of a sealed book and is being recognized for what it really is—a record of the unfolding of the divine idea to human consciousness. Both in its statement of absolute truth and in its record of the transformation which takes place in human lives when this truth is grasped, the Bible has been and will be throughout all time the infallible guide. When this twofold aspect of it is understood, many of the otherwise obscure passages are made plain, for no matter how far from present day standards many of the practices therein recorded may appear to be, nevertheless they are higher expressions of human conduct than obtained before the leaven of Truth wrought its healing effect upon the dense materiality of the age.

With the waning of materiality there comes inevitably a quickened perception of what Truth is and how it will affect the human mind. Knowing what the human mind will do when it is turned toward Truth, is all that is meant by prophesying. Because Jesus so thoroughly understood the action of Truth, he knew, as its inevitable corollary, what the human mind must of necessity do when subjected to this action. In a word, he knew that this so-called human mind would disappear, with all of its material concepts of man and the universe, and in its place would be revealed divine Mind with its true vision of all things.

In the twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew is recorded one of the most significant of the many prophecies of the Bible and one that is set forth in such simple, direct language that its meaning is unmistakable. The twelfth, thirteenth, and fourteenth verses recite: "And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold. But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved. And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." Truly to-day is witnessing the preaching of the gospel of the kingdom in all the world through the spread of Christian Science, and we may therefore properly look for the end which has been foretold. What is this end? Foretelling the end of the world and preparing for it has frequently caused acute fear to many and incited many others to ridicule, yet every Christian knows that the Scriptures abound in references to "the end," "the end of time," et cetera. In the passage just quoted we are bidden to endure unto the end. How many professed Christians have taken this to mean that man is adjured to suffer for an indefinite period, only to be swallowed up finally in some overwhelming cataclysm!

Not until our reasoning faculties have been set free through the study of Christian Science are we enabled to grasp the true import of statements such as these. Perhaps our first discovery when Christian Science has led us along the path of logical deductions is that there can be no end to anything which ever really existed. This becomes clear the instant we see the true relationship between divine cause and effect. It is self-evident that nothing exists except it exist as the effect of the one only cause, and while cause remains cause, effect will continue to exist. This opens at once the further vision that cause is self-sustained, for the obvious reason that it would require something outside of itself to thwart it, and of course that which would claim to be outside of the one infinite cause is no cause, no power, nothing. The only possible conclusion, then, is that whatever comes to an end is that which in reality never began, because it did not originate in cause.

Jesus characterized this suppositional material existence as "a murderer from the beginning," meaning what was already nonexistent, having no beginning. He called it "a liar, and the father of it." When we analyze the word lie we see that a lie is that which is not true, pretending nevertheless to be true. In order to be a lie it must fulfill both of these conditions. Of course there is an immediate end to the lie the moment it fails to deceive; but is there ever an end to Truth? No. Truth being simply that which is, it can never have an end; therefore when Jesus speaks in this twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew of the end that shall be, he cannot refer to anything that ever actually existed; and yet he admonished us to endure unto the end, and we know that his words were undeviatingly accurate. Is it not inevitable, therefore, that we should conclude that the whole import is that we shall stand in opposition to the lie about cause and effect, God and man, until the lie comes to an end? Just exactly what is this lie? And we must not forget that it must be Truth which is lied about! The lie is nothing more or less than the claim that cause is material and effect like unto it, or else that a spiritual cause produces an effect unlike itself, both of which arguments do violence to the most elementary logic. So to put it quite succinctly, enduring unto the end can mean just one thing, and that is, being divinely logical and thereby forcing illogic to its destined destruction.

On page 93 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" Mrs. Eddy says, "Divine logic and revelation coincide." Divine logic is, of course, that which is accurate in both premise and conclusion. Miscalled human logic is that into which undetected fallacies have crept and thereby vitiated the conclusion. The teachings of Christ Jesus and the elucidation of these by Mary Baker Eddy have ever been steadfastly logical, admitting of no possible fallacy in premise or conclusion.

Now of course responsibility for what this conclusion is rests with God, divine Principle, but the revelation of it to man comes through the medium of divine reasoning. This may be exemplified by a comparison to the multiplication table, in which the responsibility for the correct mathematical relationships involved rests upon a demonstrable understanding of the rules of mathematics, but these relationships are revealed to us through accuracy in stating and using them. So it is with the relationship between ourselves and

God. That relationship—that oneness—is established and maintained by virtue of divine Principle, but is revealed to us only when we have proved it with exact truthfulness. Summing it up we can say that man's whole responsibility is to be a true witness for God and thereby bring the established relationship into his own comprehension. Man is not responsible for bringing things to pass—attempting to do this is attempting to usurp the prerogative of God; but he is responsible for the accuracy of his declaration about the source of all phenomena, himself included, remembering always that the declaration has not been really made unless actions confirm the words.

On page 477 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy states, "To the five corporeal senses, man appears to be matter and mind united; but Christian Science reveals man as the idea of God, and declares the corporeal senses to be mortal and erring illusions." These erring illusions are the lies which when detected can no longer pass for truth but must come to an end. Therefore to endure unto the end, as Jesus admonished, is to annul these lies by reasoning and proving correctly the nature of cause and effect, God and man.

The ability thus to reason comes only through faithful and consistent study of the teachings of the Bible and of Mrs. Eddy's writings, for in these two sources alone do we find infallibility in premise and conclusion. Every other exposition since the dawn of recorded history has contained some subtle fallacy which has led to the ultimate cry, "The inscrutability of Providence is beyond man's understanding." But man must understand! Luke says of Jesus, "Then opened he their understanding," and thereupon the disciples immediately were able to heal the sick and raise the dead. The study of Christian Science to-day is opening the understanding of the whole world and proving itself the "witness unto all nations;" and so we rejoice that the end shall come,—the end of all the lies which deceive mankind into believing that they are helpless victims of outward and material conditions; that matter can torment and ultimately destroy that which God made by His divine decree, "Let there be." Christian Science is teaching us to hold steadfastly to divine logic, and this is enduring unto the end, whereby we not only shall be saved but are saved. What can be more sublimely logical than these words found on page 470 of Science and Health, where Mrs. Eddy says: "If God, or good, is real, then evil, the unlikeness of God, is unreal. And evil can only seem to be real by giving reality to the unreal." This is indeed the Comforter, and we rejoice that it has come to us as the Master promised it should and that in the evil day we are standing and seeing salvation.

The True Ministry of Health

ARTHUR E. JENNINGS

AT the present time, when the nations are searching for health, it may be useful to consider what Christian Science has to say on this subject. Christian Science has established a ministry of health. It ministers lovingly and correctly to the sick, the sensual, and the sinner. It has been proved in the experience of people of many nationalities that health must be demonstrated metaphysically by the individual before it can become universal. Certain rules about health are given in the writings of our beloved Leader, Mary Baker Eddy, which bring abundant fruits to those who practice them. These rules are spiritual.

It is generally admitted that Christian Scientists are a healthy people; and what they have gained in health has been brought about by obedience to these rules, which are based upon wisdom, truth, and love, and it only requires pure desire and earnest application in order to learn to demonstrate them. Christian Scientists have gained health through an understanding of God, divine Principle, and it depends upon this understanding how much they are able to prove. In "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 141) Mrs. Eddy says regarding divine Principle: "Its only crowned head is immortal sovereignty. Its only priest is the spiritualized man."

Christian Science enables one very soon to become his own physician. "Physician, heal thyself," is equivalent to "Physician, know thyself." Christian Science reveals step by step the healing art, thus blessing mankind in the process; for in this Science we soon learn that there is only one way to health, just as there is only one way to harmony. All other methods are temporary and abortive. Mankind has never obtained health through material methods, but in Christian Science the truth of being delivers from evil—sin and disease. The practitioner administers this truth; he applies the spiritual law which is applicable to healing and which is understood and relied on by him.

The law as contained in the Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount has always existed. The prophets reiterated this law, and the great demonstrator of it, Christ Jesus, summed it up in his statement, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbour as thyself." This is the basis of all true health and holiness. "As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise," is a law which is always in operation. How absurd it is to think that material remedies will remove the cause of disease, which is wholly mental. Science and Health declares (p. 120), "Health is not a condition of matter, but of Mind; nor can the material senses bear reliable testimony on the subject of health."

Material systems of healing are an attempt to substitute matter as a healer, thereby ignoring divine law. Christian Scientists have proved that spiritual methods of healing are really efficacious. The command of the Master to "heal the sick" has been found applicable to the needs of this age. The student of Christian Science has found the correct teaching as to cleanliness, purity, and health. He has received this understanding through a revelation and not through legislation. Health is not a quality that can be manufactured, although there are at the present time some conditions leading up to health which could be improved by the state for the masses. Cleanliness is always a necessity. It is not material medicine that the people need, but in order to free mankind from their slavery to false beliefs the metaphysical system of Christian Science needs to be thoroughly understood and put into practice.

This universal Christian Science health ministry is removing the cause of disease and suffering. It is always compassionate and loving, but it never condones evil. It destroys the belief that sin and disease are realities, by proving that God never made them. It uproots the belief that there will always be sinners and that there will always be sickness and poverty. At length it will be found that the greatest lack is experienced by those who have the least knowledge of Truth. Absolute Truth alone will solve every social, religious, and economic question. It will banish all deception and fraud from the human mind, so that sin, disease, and war will become unknown. Then the time-worn argument, Why does God permit evil? will be dismissed from consciousness. Those who ask this question will have seen the need of a better concept of God, a better understanding of Him. Statesmen with good ideals need to be also metaphysicians; for it would be better for all concerned could they remember that when they voice something true about divine law they are repeating what has always existed. Mankind will be freed as they look to Principle, the living God, rather than to personality for deliverance. This foregone conclusion is only an enlargement of the fact which Christian Science makes clear to its students, that God governs all.

The teaching of Christian Science that God never sent sickness, and that He knows it not, is the basis of all health. How can God, who is good, be conscious of His opposite, evil? Sickness is evil just as sin is evil. The simple illustration of the fact that light dispels darkness is sufficient; it disappears at the approach of light, for light instantly destroys darkness; they never mix. Truth destroys error in the same way, because where the truth is, error cannot exist. This scientific truth is establishing for mankind a ministry of health that will stand forever. It is based upon this important rule in Science and Health (p. 495): "When the illusion of sickness or sin tempts you, cling steadfastly to God and His idea. Allow nothing but His likeness to abide in your thought. Let neither fear nor doubt overshadow your clear sense and calm trust, that the recognition of life harmonious—as Life eternally is—can destroy any painful sense of, or belief in, that which Life is not."

That every individual in every nation can apply this teaching there is no doubt. This absolute Science is the solution to life's problem. It is God's ultimatum on the question of health to every human government. Such a ministry will bring the healing of the nations.

Generosity

HENRIETTA MARCUS

WHEN the disciples asked Jesus to send the multitude away to procure provisions for themselves, he answered, "Give ye them to eat." His followers were probably surprised at such a demand, seeing they had but five loaves and two fishes to distribute among five thousand men. Evidently the disciples thought, "Here are thousands of hungry people and nothing to give them;" on the other hand, Jesus demonstrated the omnipotence of Love to satisfy the physical as well as the spiritual needs of mankind. There is always a difference between a gift given for the mere pleasure of giving—the careless generosity of mortal mind—and one offered in love, the value of which lies in what it represents. The feeding of the multitudes was a concrete demonstration of Jesus' love for them, the giving of loaves and fishes an expression of his desire to impart that spiritual food which alone could sustain them. It was the blindness, or indifference, of the disciples on the latter point that made them incapable of satisfying even the physical needs of the people around them.

The narrative of Elijah and the woman who was a widow also shows how supply is always adequate when the true source is sought. Elijah asked the widow for bread, appealing to her generosity, and she, willing to give but oppressed by the sense of want and poverty around her, feared to share what she had, thinking her further needs might not be met. Under the influence of the larger thought and more spiritual understanding of the prophet, she consented to share what she had, and in doing this her needs were supplied, and the barrel of meal did not waste nor the cruse of oil fail. If we share the good that comes to us, knowing that it is the gift of God and therefore inexhaustible, there will always be enough and to spare. Why do we not learn the lesson and live to bless rather than to receive? It is fear that holds us back from imparting to others the blessings that are ours, and this fear springs from a profound ignorance of the nature of supply, its origin and infinitude. Mere giving is in itself but a doubtful blessing, for both the donor and the recipient, unless it is an expression of a real love for mankind and not merely an act to relieve one's feelings or satisfy one's conscience.

There is no doubt that the generous man is lovable, but generosity is a term so loosely applied that it may include lavishness, personal extravagance, and pride of bestowing, all of which are far removed from that real generosity which gives out continually, regardless of self. Oh, the joy of it when once we recognize that we possess boundless wealth which we can share with others. We all possess some good which, if wisely and thankfully used, increases by expending. "There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty." Was not this the fact that Jesus endeavored to impress on his followers on the occasion of the feeding of the multitude,—that they themselves had power to satisfy the needs of their fellow men? He said, "Give ye them to eat;" and when the disciples failed to understand his meaning, he blessed the loaves and fishes and gave them to the disciples to hand over to the multitude, showing how the humble earnest student can be a channel for good when his work is blessed by the Christ. Whatever we possess, when recognized as a gift from God, can be used to bless those around us as well as to benefit ourselves.

Many opportunities come to us daily to prove by deeds the value of our words of generosity. The hunger that appeals to us for satisfaction calls upon us to give out, in some form or other, the love and goodness that we have ourselves received. It is a common thing to hear people say, "I would be so glad to help, but I have no money," or "I haven't enough time," or "I have not sufficient experience," and so on, just as in the parable of the wedding feast where each invited guest gave some excuse for refusal. Times change, customs alter, but mortal mind continues in the same old rut of apathy and indifference. The kind word, the patience with dullness and stupidity, the love for good that silences the claim of hate—these are all expressions of that real generosity of which the sharing of material possessions forms but a part. Our time, our intelligence, our money, are they not His? Have we really anything of our own except the consciousness of right? That, too, is a reflection of divine goodness.

We have been granted the joy of sharing the possessions intrusted to us, but, as in the parable of the talents, we shall have to render an account of our expenditure. What can we do to make the world happier, more beautiful, more harmonious; or rather, how can we help to destroy the conditions which make the reverse seem true? That is a point, perhaps, which we might consider more deeply and not leave to others to puzzle over while we continue along the old road of indifference and selfishness. Each one has great and precious gifts from God, and the only necessity is to use them continually—like precious pearls which must be constantly worn to keep them bright and luminous; for when laid aside they grow dull. It requires thought to give wisely.

Jesus looked up to heaven and "blessed, and brake" before he gave the loaves to the disciples to distribute among the multitude; and we, too, need to ask God's blessing and direction in our giving. The soft word because we are indifferent to error, the society amiability which condones immorality of word and deed, are not signs of generosity but indications of moral apathy. Large donations to charities are often but means to an end to arouse admiration or perhaps to still a sense of undue niggardliness. An antivivisectionist was a subscriber to a large hospital, and one day he was horrified to hear by chance that the particular institute to which he was subscribing regularly was expending large sums on vivisection. He had failed to make inquiries as to how his money was being used. Most of us have erred in this fashion at some time or other. How wisely Jesus gave, satisfying the material needs and yet lifting thought toward the spiritual source of all blessings! The water that was turned into wine was an expression of supply on a joyful occasion and met the need of the moment, as likewise did the feeding of the multitude. The material expression of love was great and precious because it was an illustration of divine goodness made manifest to human understanding.

"Before they call"

REUBEN POGSON

IN "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" Mrs. Eddy says (p. 559), "The 'still, small voice' of scientific thought reaches over continent and ocean to the globe's remotest bound." Jesus demonstrated the same truth when he caused the boat to be immediately at the other side of the lake. Yet even the annihilation of space seems less mysterious to the human mind than does the obliteration of time, notwithstanding the fact that time annihilation is implied in the Scriptural statement, "Before they call, I will answer." If man is the image and likeness of God, then to him as to God time must be nonexistent. Was it not to this state of spiritual understanding that the angel was referring when he sware "that there should be time no longer"? Undoubtedly we are thinking that infinite good can be limited when we allow space or time to act as a barrier or gulf between our prayer and its answer.

Sometimes we are inclined to think that our prayers are not fully answered. This is often because we do not associate some blessing with the prayer which was offered. We have allowed the time sense to separate us from the unity and ever presence of all that is good. The writer's providential avoidance of disaster on board a vessel which was torpedoed during the last few weeks of the war brought home the far-reaching effect of the mental work for the church, done by himself and others. After over seventeen years of continual attendance at Christian Science services it became his duty to go on active service in the British Army. For three months he never saw a Christian Science church, society, or even a Christian Scientist. This in addition to the hardships of army life in a country where antagonism, open and concealed, to the British Army was generally manifest, made him at times wonder when he should have the joy of attending a Christian Science service again and feel that sense of freedom which seems stifled in an atmosphere of opposition. There remained, however, this joy,—that he could mentally work for the Church of Christ, Scientist, and enjoy that spiritual fellowship of the household of Principle which Christian Science had revealed to him. Mental work for the revealing of the glory and prosperity of the church was done every day, sometimes in a quiet hayfield in a few moments' respite from duty; sometimes in a sentry box in the middle of the night midst darkness, desolation, and torrential rain; sometimes—and this most often—sitting up in the night in the hut when the rest of the men were asleep.

At last there came the time when leave would be due in a few weeks. The usual drafts went from his regiment on Wednesday or Thursday, and as the actual leave was for only six days, it meant that on whichever of these two days one went, there would be no opportunity to attend a Wednesday evening testimony meeting. To get anything which involves a slight alteration of procedure is a very difficult task in the Army. When that "anything" requires special forms to be filled in by men often overburdened with work, the task is even more difficult. More than once while trying to get permission to go two days before the rest of the "leave" men, the writer felt like giving it up. Finally, however, the Regimental Sergeant Major, amidst his multifarious duties, very kindly made all the arrangements, got the necessary papers filled in and signed, and the writer was free,—free for eight days, six days' leave and two days for traveling. Words failed to express his gratitude at the Wednesday evening testimony meeting which he was thus able to attend, or his thankfulness to God for Christian Science and our beloved Leader, for the help that Christian Science had been to him during experiences so violently different from those of civil life. Yet the biggest testimony of all, although he did not know it at the time, was his presence in that church. The next morning the boat on which he would in the ordinary course of events have been traveling with many of his comrades was torpedoed, and he might have shared their danger. Incidentally, he is glad to record that the Regimental Sergeant Major, after two hours in the water, was one of those to be picked up and saved.

"Before they call, I will answer." The scientific explanation of this is, that if one is trying to pierce the veil of this material dream, he walks through the mazes of this dream with its time sense and space sense, and is led by Principle to do the highest good which he knows, and by so doing he misses much that is cruel and disastrous in this mortal existence. Let those who see no result, in their own particular field, of the mental work which they faithfully do for the church recognize that it was the love of Christian Scientists for their church which helped to attract the writer among others to the Christian Science church in the first place, and to his own home church on this particular occasion when he avoided possible disaster. This experience and many others during his brief service in the Army have tended to convince him that the only thing which will save the world and humanity from all disasters, physical or otherwise, is the love that is the manifestation of Principle. Divine Principle, Love, knows no time but exists always in the eternal now.

Spiritual Lessons

IDA LUCKE WILBUR

ONE pities the canary confined within the narrow limits of his gilded cage,—and yet, who is more restricted or imprisoned than mortal man, still in bondage to the five physical senses, still seeking happiness in worldly interests, still fearing an unknown evil power?

After experiencing through the study of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" a wonderful spiritual healing which resulted in mental as well as physical freedom, the writer was eager that her pet canary might also enjoy a larger sense of liberty. For five years they had been daily, yes, hourly companions; he in his gilded cage and she in her imprisoned sense of a sick body. Suffering from serious internal troubles which gradually caused physical inactivity and then the disuse of her eyes, the writer became a helpless and hopeless invalid. No wonder a great bond of sympathy grew up between her and the bird. Now that freedom, health, and harmony had come into her own life, she eagerly opened the cage door for her beautiful pet so that he, too, might taste the joys of freedom.

His first attempts to be free were so full of fear that the writer soon learned to remain very quiet, mentally declaring the truth that "perfect love casteth out fear." Gradually he became graceful in flying, and each day would venture a little closer to the writer. There were many lessons in patience and self-control for her to learn in order to prove to the bird that she was always trustworthy. Then the writer realized that all of God's ideas are free and ready to unfold to man when thought is purified of self and shows a fitness, a trustworthiness, for their reception. As she gradually learned to still self-will, the bird gained in confidence, until one happy day he flew upon her shoulder, took a seed from her lips, then perched upon her head and sang a sweet song of gratitude. Here was an opportunity to overcome self-gratification. Goethe well says, "Not doing what one likes to do, but liking what one has to do, makes life blessed." And how can man ever grow into the complete self-sacrifice necessary to obey the command, "Follow thou me," unless he begins to learn self-restraint and self-control in the small daily experiences.

When a ray of sunshine enters the window, how quickly and eagerly the canary welcomes it and basks in its glowing warmth. So God's child is grateful for the light of Truth and Love. To-day, though the bird is flying in the same room and among the same familiar objects, what novel freedom, what joy he is realizing. So mankind through spiritual, ascendant thinking, awakens to the unfoldment of God's infinite ideas, and life is spiritually discerned. Illumined thought sees the opportunity to reflect God everywhere,—in office, in schoolroom, in kitchen,—and all work becomes God's work. Mrs. Eddy states in Science and Health (p. 323): "Beholding the infinite tasks of truth, we pause,—wait on God. Then we push onward, until boundless thought walks enraptured, and conception unconfined is winged to reach the divine glory."

To-day the fearless canary follows his friend anywhere indoors, and out on a large screened porch, always eager to light upon her finger and burst into a rapturous song of thanksgiving. The writer is thus reminded that freedom belongs to all of God's ideas and will unfold to man, in proportion as man is God-governed.

Evensong

MARION C. JONES

DEAR Father-Mother Love, the day is ending—
Day that began anew with praise to Thee;
Dawn touched the mountain peaks to rose; descending,
Tinged the blue mist of valley gloriously.

Thy little ones the valley have forsaken
For steep ways winding upward to the skies;
In fresh sunlight another step they've taken,— Celestial heights the goal before their eyes.

The wilderness that marches up the mountain
Baffles each pilgrim—yet Love's arm enfolds;
Forth from the rock there springs a living fountain,
In noontide heat and stress Love's hand upholds.

Dear Father-Mother Love, though light is waning,
And glorious summits still far distant seem,
We know a higher love we have been gaining;
To-morrow leads us farther from the dream.

["The Authority of Jesus"—The Christian Science Monitor, Boston, U. S. A., Aug. 27, 1919]

If there was one quality in the teaching of Jesus of Nazareth which impressed the multitude more than another, it would seem to have been the authority with which he spoke and acted. Constantly the New Testament records refer to this, and quote the exclamations of surprise with which the people acknowledged their recognition of it, and that this authority extended even to the elements. What makes this the more remarkable is the fact that at that time the scribes and Pharisees had for many years claimed to rule the Jews with the strictest discipline, based on the authority of the law, which carried with it all the weight of age and convention, so that the people were by no means unfamiliar with authoritative statements. And yet they evidently felt some striking difference in the attitude of Jesus, who, although he was not attempting to assume any kind of dictatorship over them, impressed them with this strong sense of authority.

At a time like the present it is interesting to inquire into this subject, for human nature being much the same in the twentieth century as in the first, cause and effect in these matters are likely to bear a similar resemblance. The basis of the authority with which Jesus spoke was, unquestionably, knowledge. He spoke what he knew, not what he believed or opined, and on that knowledge he acted and made it therefore demonstrable. That is the whole matter in a nutshell. The scribes and Pharisees did not know; they talked, they preached, they were full of superstitions, and though many were no doubt well-meaning men, their actions were limited to such matters as ceremonial washings, tithing, "mint and anise and cummin," and some were hypocrites and cruel.

This knowledge which Christ Jesus made so practical was the knowledge of the truth about everything; it was the word of God which had searched his bone and marrow, had tested every fiber of his being, before he came forth to give it to the world. Through this knowledge he healed the sick, he controlled the elements, he fed the multitude. No wonder the people felt the power of it. Is not this the secret of what is happening to-day? Since the old superstitions have vanished under the light of better education, men have felt that there is no authority anywhere, either in religion or politics. No one speaks to them with knowledge except the professor of natural science, who deals with matters somewhat apart from the ordinary man's range of interest, and whose knowledge is also confessedly constantly changing. The truth is that there is no authority really but God, and the old idea of God has vanished, and unless a new and valid idea of Him appears the world must perish, or as Peter expresses it, "melt with fervent heat." The student of Christian Science believes that in this Science such a valid idea has been revealed, and that only here can salvation be found, because Christian Science reveals through demonstration the Principle which gave Jesus his authority.

Beginning on page 112 of the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," we read: "God is the Principle of divine metaphysics. As there is but one God, there can be but one divine Principle of all Science; and there must be fixed rules for the demonstration of this divine Principle. The letter of Science plentifully reaches humanity to-day, but its spirit comes only in small degrees. The vital part, the heart and soul of Christian Science, is Love." And again, beginning on page 469: "With one Father, even God, the whole family of man would be brethren; and with one Mind and that God, or good, the brotherhood of man would consist of Love and Truth, and have unity of Principle and spiritual power which constitute divine Science."

Taking these two quotations together we understand that this divine Principle or Mind is the Supreme Being or cause, and if men generally recognized this and the connate fact that Principle is to be demonstrated according to law, there at once would be the authority based on knowledge, which would unite all in one desire and accomplishment. History, ancient and modern, has proved, times without number, that if men are assured that a cause is right, that they have a leader whom they can respect and trust, they will unite and follow that leader, and give up all selfish desires for the cause in a way that is astonishing to those who do not see the underlying motives. So, if men are given a vision of God and of His Christ which they can understand and prove, they will unite and leave their materiality and their greed and will find happiness and peace in obedience to divine Principle.

The follower of Christian Science is proving to-day in his own individual experience that obedience to Principle gives him already a large measure of authority over disease and adverse circumstances, and thus proves to him that it is merely a question of a more universal understanding for that dominion to become a world-wide possession. This to him is the coming of the Christ and the verification of the message written to the Pilgrim Fathers, "When Christ reigns and not till then will the world have rest;" but just so long as the world believes that the Christ was one individual person who walked on earth nineteen hundred years ago, so long will it continue to wrangle through the different creeds built upon that belief. When Christ is understood to be Truth, which was before Abraham, and will always be, then will the authority Christ Jesus exercised be available again, and Christ's kingdom will be on earth as it is in heaven.

[John M. Dean in Memphis (Tenn.) Commercial Appeal]

The "testimony of common sense" is a stock phrase of those who decry any teaching which does not conform to popular notions, and must have been what Paul had in mind when he said, "The wisdom of this world is foolishness with God." Reliance on the evidence of the physical senses holds out no promise for the salvation of man, and it is only as men rise above sense testimony into the realm of spiritual things that they can cognize what Paul terms "the evidence of things not seen." Paul also said, "The flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh," and throughout the Bible the things of the flesh receive merited condemnation. Religionists who hold to the flesh (matter), zealously arguing for all its boasted claims, are at the same time contending that God, Spirit, is something less than almighty.

To say that Christian Science is pantheism while at the same time admitting that Christian Scientists deny that statement, is to charge Christian Scientists with being either less intelligent or less honest than this critic,—a charge which I am sure his modesty would deter him from making intentionally. For his information, however, let it be said that Mrs. Eddy deemed this a question of such importance that she at one time wrote a special Message to The Mother Church entitled "Christian Science vs. Pantheism," and no thinking person can read this Message and honestly conclude that Christian Science is anything but the exact opposite of pantheism.

No doubt the critic will concede the truth of the statement in Genesis that God's work was "finished," and that He pronounced it "very good;" also that declaration in the first chapter of John, "All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made." If he will acknowledge the truth of these sayings, I respectfully submit that his jealous regard for the real entity of sin and disease has no ground left to stand upon—not that these things do not appear terribly real to the mortal, human sense of things. It must be apparent that if God never made them, they have no reality beyond that attached to them by prevalent wrong thinking; while to assert that He did make them is to charge Him with creating all evil and involves a contradiction of Scripture, and therefore of both reason and revelation.

The healing of sickness is not the whole of Christian Science any more than it was all of primitive Christianity as practiced by Jesus and his immediate followers. A practical, worth while religion does not postpone salvation to a future life, and must necessarily comprehend the healing of present ills of every possible name and nature. Christian Science does this, but because the healing of sickness makes the greatest appeal to the average person, this phase of help excites the most comment now as in the time of Jesus.

Our friend acknowledges that Christian Scientists make the Bible their "constant companion;" yet he says the Bible is the only "antidote" for Christian Science. He also says in effect that the Bible should be studied "without note or comment,"—certainly a strange assertion to come from one who averages, no doubt, at least two sermons a week in explanation of the Scripture, and who was attempting such an explanation at the very time he made the statement in question. This critic will sometime learn, as other well meaning critics have grown wiser in learning, that the only "antidote" for Christian Science is something that will better serve the needs of mankind. If he can offer such an antidote, the world will accept it without compulsion, but unless he can do this, silence is more becoming than mere iconoclastic words.

In these enlightened modern days sensible people will not go to a blacksmith for lessons in watchmaking, to a watchmaker for lessons on horseshoeing, nor to an uneducated person for instruction in mathematics. By the same token they will not go to a prejudiced preacher of another denomination for a correct statement of Christian Science. Our friend incidentally acknowledges a list of good things that are resultant from Christian Science, and this concession destroys his entire argument. "Ye shall know them by their fruits," said Jesus; and this infallible test of true Christianity is just as pertinent to-day as it was nineteen hundred years ago.

[Joseph E. Badger in Montreal (Canada) Star]

Permit me to reply to the ministerial attack on Christian Science as reported in your columns. In the first place, had this well advertised, so-called "Christian Science lecture" been designated, "Some False Views on Christian Science by Local Clergymen," it would have been more correct, and would have been less misleading to the general public. The admission, by one of these critics, that "he found its teachings an intellectual impossibility," at once disqualifies him as a competent judge of it. Yet, undeterred by this acknowledgment of his failure to grasp its teachings, he launches an attack on a figment of his own imagination; and is assisted in this display by a fellow clergyman in arms, who at first criticizes him for his "kid glove" attempt, and then joins in the attack more vigorously himself by resorting to the accusations that the Pharisees of old used toward Christ Jesus and his teachings.

Christian Science must be judged, not by what its critics say against it, but by its essential Christianity,—by what it really is and what it is accomplishing. It must be judged, not by whether it conforms to certain accepted standards or beliefs of ecclesiasts, but solely by the vital questions: Does it conform to the teachings of Christ Jesus? Is it fulfilling the essential mission of the religion he taught, which unmistakably is the healing of the sick and the reformation of the sinner? Christian Scientists emphatically declare, as a result of their experience, that it does so conform, and they prove this declaration in their daily lives. In every Christian Science church on every Wednesday night, all over this and other lands, many thousands of God-fearing people who are the direct beneficiaries of this healing, saving religion, bear willing and grateful testimony to its efficiency as a healing and redemptive teaching. These people are well and favorably known in their respective communities. They command the respect and esteem of their friends and their neighbors. Their word can be considered unimpeachable, because their integrity as citizens is unquestionable. They are Christian Scientists because of what Christian Science has done for them. When all else had failed in most cases, the power of God through Christian Science healed them.

In choosing to attack the religion of a large number of their fellow citizens who are endeavoring, with a gratifying degree of success, to reduce the sum total of the world's load of sickness, distress, and despair, these two Christian ministers were not only wasting their time and that of the teachers of the Sunday School Association, whom they should have been instructing in teaching the gospel message, "On earth, peace, good will toward men," but were exhibiting a regrettable spirit of intolerance which would, if it could, tear down that which has given to unnumbered thousands health in place of sickness, joy in place of sorrow, and peace where discord was before.

Until the theologians of the present day are able to prove their faith by their works, and so fulfill the unconditional command of the master Christian to "heal the sick," they can gain nothing by attacking a church that is willing to accept, and does accept without reservation, the Master's every command, and to rest the future of its growth, not on dogma and creed, but on its ability to bring to the individual, and so to society, better health, better morals, greater happiness, and a clearer and more scientific understanding of God and man.

[W. Stuart Booth in Boulder (Colo.) Camera]

The latest criticism of Christian Science by a writer in the Camera furnishes an excellent example of one fighting "as one that beateth the air;" for in spite of many motions, the use of many adjectives and comparisons, the critic misses the mark entirely. It is evident that if Christian Science were what he supposes it to be, it would not have been accepted by so many intelligent Christian believers and have earned the respect of a large number of others who have witnessed its works, but have not studied its textbook. However, Christian Scientists do not feel unkindly toward the critic; for all the unkind, untrue things that could be said against Christian Science, were voiced long since by those who later discovered their error and are now themselves Christian Scientists.

Christ Jesus did not teach, and therefore Christian Science does not teach, that obedience to the two great commandments about loving God and our neighbor would result in immortality in matter, although Jesus said, referring to these commands, "This do, and thou shalt live." The Master evidently meant that those who obeyed his spiritual behests would thereby be enabled to prove his statement regarding eternal life, "This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." Paul grasped the spiritual import of Jesus' words when he wrote, "To be spiritually minded is life and peace," and again, "In him [God, Spirit, Mind] we live, and move, and have our being."

Obviously Jesus taught no mere post-mortem salvation and immortality, for he not only preached that "the kingdom of heaven is at hand" and admonished his followers to preach the same, but verified his preaching by his practice of bringing more of heaven, harmony, into the lives of men, by healing them of their ills, comforting them in their sorrows, and destroying their sin. In promising that those who believe on him should do the same works, he attached no time limit; for he knew that God and His law of harmony are ever present and ever available to all who live in obedience to that law.

On page 343 of the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," Mrs. Eddy writes: "Anciently those apostles who were Jesus' students, as well as Paul who was not one of his students, healed the sick and reformed the sinner by their religion. Hence the mistake which allows words, rather than works, to follow such examples! Whoever is the first meekly and conscientiously to press along the line of gospel-healing, is often accounted a heretic." Fortunately it has been found that to be accounted a heretic because one is a Christian Scientist, does not cut one off from God's loving care and healing power; but on the contrary anyone who earnestly studies the Bible in the light of the Christian Science textbook and lives daily in accordance therewith, will have occasion to echo the psalmist's song, "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits: who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases; who redeemeth thy life from destruction; who crowneth thee with lovingkindness and tender mercies; who satisfieth thy mouth with good things; so that thy youth is renewed like the eagle's."

[From The Christian Science Monitor (Copyright)]

Turn back, O ye nations, in your prayers,
To the long ago;
When a victor king, after sacrifice,
Heard the voice of God, in a dream,
Commanding, Ask now what it is That I shall give to thee;
And the victor king implored:
Give thy servant an understanding heart,
To discern between good and bad;
Give thy servant an understanding heart—
Just that, O God, and no more!

To-day is our Gibeon—God is calling—
O nations, hush and withdraw,
And pray, as he prayed and found favor with God;
Not for long life—
Such life as the senses weave in myth,
Bound fast on the looms of time;
Not for riches, piled high, to melt once more
Into munitions of death;
But pray for the understanding heart
That shall know the good from the bad,
And forswear the carnal idol, at last,
For man as the image of God.

The Inner Meaning of Patience

Quite often men think of patience as a negative quality of mind, for to them it seems to be submission to slights, endurance of suffering, or resignation under sorrow; but the Christian use of the word ennobles it. The patient man has quiet fortitude which meets the trials of the present without discontent and faces the possible troubles of the future without perturbation. He has steadiness in action and continues in a right course tranquilly. He overcomes difficulties with persevering energy, but is tolerant with others and not soon discouraged in his continual efforts to help them. In human relationships patience goes beyond forbearance, which may be simply nonretaliation, and is well defined as "keeping kindliness of heart under vexatious conduct."

Patience, then, is not feebleness, but great strength, and it can be manifested in the Christian sense only when based upon faith. Genius has sometimes been spoken of as being just a great patience; that is, an ability to persevere in a particular course to the end. But one form of genius may have for its end merely self-exaltation, and the world be none the better for the conflicts and turmoils it introduces through the person of some all-highest leader or some truth-destroying philosopher; whereas the faith and patience of the saints is a perpetual leaven, inspiring mankind to higher things. Fortitude and perseverance without vision may fight for the evil side; but faith enlightens the mind as to what is good and affects the worker with both tenderness and courage in working out patiently the designs of good. In the work of the Christian Scientist patience is essential. Our Leader says in "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 7): "Great charity and humility is necessary in this work of healing. The loving patience of Jesus, we must strive to emulate."

Faith is ever the Godward look whereby the eyes are enlightened and the heart is comforted with the assurance and very substance of good. Where faith is, patience easily follows and becomes the manward aspect of fortitude, composure, and long-suffering kindness. Patience, then, is really the maintenance of faith for men; it is noncomplaining expectancy of good results; it is good will unwearied and kindness undismayed. It does not retaliate when slighted nor take revenge when injured, but commits the case to Mind. It is interesting that Peter's remembrance concerning the example of Christ Jesus is that he "when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously."

In the practitioner of Christian Science, patience may be spoken of as tenderness waiting for results which are foreseen by faith. How beautifully Mrs. Eddy values this work of the practitioner. She says (Miscellany, p. 247): "God has called you to be a fisher of men. It is not a stern but a loving look which brings forth mankind to receive your bestowal,—not so much eloquence as tender persuasion that takes away their fear, for it is Love alone that feeds them."

The whole life of the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science has shown how much she trusted like the saints of old to faith and patience in gaining her results, and at this period in the world's history it would bless men greatly if they were to follow her example. Human ways are full of impatience, arbitrariness, partiality, and partisanship, but such paths do not lead to solutions. Murder is not cured by breaking the necks of some criminals and imprisoning others. It will be eliminated only by a change in the heart of mankind. Jesus made it very clear that the flash of anger, the encouraged vexation and bitterness within, must be eliminated. Then there are those not wicked but undeveloped, or incompetent, with whom men are tempted to be impatient. Weary of the lame man limping in the rough path, mortal mind desires to push him out of the way altogether. Christianity asks for patience and for the endeavor to make the way more easy to travel. It says by way of admonition that we should help the weary one, and the incompetent, "lift up the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees; and make straight paths for your feet, lest that which is lame be turned out of the way; but let it rather be healed." What has in these past years deluged the world with blood but impatience, and what is needed now but an understanding that man will find universal freedom "not through human warfare, not with bayonet and blood, but through Christ's divine Science" (Science and Health, p. 226). Those who are to help the race must ever increase and strengthen their faith in God as Principle, Love, and likewise reveal in patience this faith which they cherish; for it is by patient continuance in works of love, it is by unwearied and never discouraged demonstration, that the fruits of faith finally appear.

Forgiveness

Much has been said about forgiveness. Many have been the prayers which have had for their burden either the desire to be forgiven, or the longing to know how to forgive. There has never been a time when humanity has not desired to find forgiveness for its sins. No sooner does a mortal become aware that he has infringed the divine law than he immediately reaches out to see how he may be absolved from the consequences which he inherently feels must be the result of such disobedience.

The fear of the penalty for sin committed has always gone hand in hand with the belief in sin, and many and varied have been the attempts to escape such penalty. It takes but a slight degree of honesty to discern that love of sin is at the bottom of the endeavor which would escape the suffering, but would still cling to the sin. So long as sin is loved and indulged there will remain the attendant fear of the punishment which sin itself always metes out to the one who indulges its demands. The belief that there is satisfaction in wrongdoing has closed the eyes of men to the awful nature of evil and its terrible consequences. It is this blindness which shuts out the possibility of seeing that there can be no real forgiveness until sin itself is relinquished and thereby destroyed; for no one could be contented with a forgiveness which did not include the blotting out of all remembrance of the sin. "I will remember their sin no more," is one of the most precious of God's promises.

In speaking of the way mortal man is to be saved from sin, Mrs. Eddy says (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 90): "He must know that God is omnipotent; hence, that sin is impotent. He must know that the power of sin is the pleasure in sin. Take away this pleasure, and you remove all reality from its power. Jesus demonstrated sin and death to be powerless. This practical Truth saves from sin, and will save all who understand it." To believe that sin confers pleasure, that it can ever produce good, is to believe that good can come out of evil, and this is to deny the very nature and power of God, good. For one to love God, good, sufficiently to be willing to say to every least temptation to indulge in the belief in sin, "You cannot deceive me, because you can bring no satisfaction," is to have started to prove the unreality of sin. The moment one is willing to admit that sin affords no pleasure, he has begun to win the understanding of what forgiveness from sin means. Mrs. Eddy tells us (Science and Health, p. 5), "Sin is forgiven only as it is destroyed by Christ,—Truth and Life." This opens to mankind the glorious possibility of the blotting out of sin, which constitutes perfect forgiveness; for sin can only be forgiven as it is forsaken.

To the burdened heart longing to be rid of sin, tied down as it has been through false education, not only to the belief in the reality of sin but also to the fear of it, Christian Science comes with its glad offer of redemption and lifts one to an immediate sense of hope, which the schools have never given. It not only uncovers the undesirability of sin, but teaches how denial of such satisfaction from the standpoint of constant realization of the all-satisfaction of good, will result in an ever increasing power to resist and reject sin's every claim and thus bring the understanding of that forgiveness which neither knows nor remembers sin. For when a sin is really forsaken there can no longer be any necessity or temptation either to fear it or to contemplate it from any standpoint whatsoever.

Jesus taught us to pray, "Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors. . . . For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you: but if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses." The joy and freedom which accrue to one from the scientific forgiveness—blotting out, annihilation of even the remembrance—of his own sins, can only be exceeded by the bliss which comes to him when through this same method he finds himself able to forgive and forget—prove unreal—his brother's trespass against him. Many a Christian, before Christian Science was revealed to him, had prayed earnestly and long to forgive an injury, and sometimes he had felt his prayer had been answered,—that it was really possible to love his brother in spite of his offenses; when, lo and behold, a second offense committed against him by the same brother, and there was the first offense presenting itself to be forgiven all over again! Then how impossible seemed the task of forgiving until the "seventy times seven" of Jesus' command!

How different it all is now, with the wonderful illumination which Christian Science gives us, showing how to understand and follow the teaching and example of our beloved Master. It indicates so plainly that the only reason one ever sins, or continues even to believe in sin either in himself or in others, is because he believes in some—oftentimes subtle—way that he can find pleasure in so doing. Then who would be so foolish as to continue this torment of evil thinking, when all one needs to do that he may find peace and comfort and joy is to turn away from sin to the love of God, good. What marvelous satisfaction must be found in loving good to the exclusion of every suppositional opposite until no belief in sin shall have power to deceive or hold us in its detestable thralldom! Then let us lift up this love of good in our hearts until all men shall see the power of God to bless in overflowing measure all those who forgive as they would be forgiven. ELLA W. HOAG.

Among the Churches

Current Notes

DAYTON, OHIO.—As indicating the growth of Christian Science in Dayton and the activity of the Scientists here, the congregation of First Church will hold its regular services in the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium beginning with the Wednesday evening testimony meeting, August 20, while its church edifice on South Robert Boulevard is being redecorated, modernized, and better adapted to the needs of the movement. While every effort is being made to refit the Boulevard property for the present use, the Scientists already see the need for large representative churches that will occupy the place in Dayton that is held by the Christian Science churches in other progressive cities of the country. Second Church of Dayton recently announced the purchase of a beautiful church site on Grand Avenue, Dayton View.

DENVER, COLO.—Plans have been completed for the new church home of Fourth Church of Christ, Scientist, to be erected on the triangular plot of ground at West Thirty-first Avenue, Lake Place, and Grove Street, at a cost of nearly one hundred thousand dollars. The contract for the excavation and foundation is to be let at once [September], and it is expected that ground will be broken within the next two weeks. On the street floor will be located the Sunday school room, having a seating capacity of seven hundred. The seating capacity of the auditorium will be about eleven hundred.

The Lectures

BOSTON, MASS. (The Mother Church).—Dr. John M. Tutt, lecturer; introduced by Bicknell Young, First Reader, who said:—

It is a special pleasure and privilege again to welcome an audience to a lecture on Christian Science here in The Mother Church. At these recurring seasons it is well perhaps for us to remember that the object of giving these lectures is not that of mere propaganda. We are not as a body of people primarily engaged in striving to add to our numbers. We are giving these lectures because we unselfishly desire to have mankind learn of the Science of Life and be at peace. Through the study of Christian Science we have come to recognize that the kingdom of heaven is man's natural state of existence. All the harmony which belongs to that kingdom exists now and here as an inevitable phenomenon of the divine Principle, Love, which Mary Baker Eddy, in her discovery of Christian Science, revealed to the world. To demonstrate this divine Principle we must have enlightenment. It follows, therefore, that enlightenment is the need of mankind. Pure spiritual enlightenment constituted the Mind "which was also in Christ Jesus." To find that God's universe is all right and that there is no other universe, and then to prove this fact step by step by demonstration, is the way of Christian Science.

Paul speaks of Luke as the beloved physician. We believe this term was particularly apt because the Bible indicates that Luke, when he became associated with Paul, had forsaken material methods of healing and had learned to heal by the infallible power of Spirit. Our friend who comes to speak to us this evening was a physician according to materia medica, but has learned through Christian Science to follow in the footsteps of Luke. He will tell us of the healing and saving power of Christian Science.

BARRINGTON, ILL. (Society).—The Rev. Andrew J. Graham, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Grace E. Gleason, who said in part:—

It seems a fitting conclusion to the program for health promotion that has been carried out in our village during the past week that we should have an opportunity to hear this subject discussed from the point of view of Christian Science. Whatever preconception may exist in one's thought as to the nature of the teachings and curative mission of Christian Science, it will be found that this system is identical in practice with the method of healing used by Christ Jesus, our great Way-shower, throughout his ministry, and that its theology is the simple spiritual doctrine of primitive Christianity.

CORDOVA, ALASKA.—Charles I. Ohrenstein, lecturer; introduced by Mayor A. J. Adams, who said in part:—

To many people the term Christian Science is of no more significance than the name Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, or the name of any other of the many religious organizations; but to the person who has made a study of the teachings propounded by Mrs. Eddy and who has accepted the truth thereof, there is vastly more than the mere name. Christian Science deals largely with the problem of being, the nature and existence of God, and the nature and existence of man and his relation to God, and is calculated to affect our line of thought, and consequently our happiness.

After years of studious and careful research the Founder of Christian Science saw in the mathematics of the vast universe only order, beauty, and harmony, and she reasoned that equal order, beauty, and harmony extended to the relations existing between God and man, that divine law is eternal and unchanging, and is the same to-day as it was in the time of the Galilean Prophet nineteen hundred years ago. She accepted as true the statement contained in the last verse of the first chapter of Genesis and the first verse of the second chapter: "God saw every thing that he had made, and, behold, it was very good. . . . Thus the heavens and the earth were finished, and all the host of them;" that there was nothing further for God to do to add to our happiness either here or hereafter; that Principle is unchanging.

Mrs. Eddy reasoned that the same divine law that was demonstrated by Jesus and his disciples in destroying sin, healing the sick, and raising the dead, is just as effective to-day as it was nineteen hundred years ago. She did not promulgate a system of reformation; she attempted restoration. She did not attempt to patch up the old, worn-out garment of theology, but she discarded it for one that though ancient, was without rent, and as strong and beautiful as when first wrought out by the hand of God. She planted in the fertile soil of the nineteenth century the same seed as was sown by the Galilean Prophet in the first century. She proposed a return to the apostolic standards and rules of conduct.—Cordova Times.

FERGUS FALLS, MINN. (Society).—Judge Samuel W. Greene, lecturer; introduced by Roy G. Loomer, who said in part:—

Christian Science is a religious teaching that heals the sick as well as reforms the sinner. It takes its authority from the Bible. This method of healing is not new, nor was it new when Jesus was on earth. The prophets before Jesus' time healed the sick. However, Jesus the Christ was the most successful healer the world has ever known. He not only performed cures himself, but gave instructions to students or disciples, and they went from city to city and healed the sick and cast out devils, showing that it was not the person of Jesus that effected the healing, but the knowledge that he possessed, because by imparting that knowledge to others he enabled them to heal also. And why should not the teaching of Jesus heal the sick to-day as well as it did nineteen hundred years ago? The Bible says that "God is no respecter of persons."

HORNELL, N. Y. (First Church).—Dr. Walton Hubbard, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. A. C. Small, who said in part:—

Since the beginning of the Christian era it has been the highest aim of mankind to attain peace, health, happiness, and prosperity,—a betterment of human conditions. A close study and application of the truth as found in Christian Science enables one to obtain these results. Mrs. Eddy, a noble, unselfish Christian woman, through spiritualization of thought and an inspired study of the Bible found the truth of which Jesus said, "If ye continue in my word, . . . ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." She demonstrated the Principle of this truth by casting out error and healing the sick.

NEW YORK, N. Y. (Fifth Church).—John C. Lathrop, lecturer; introduced by John Nelson Ross, who said in part:—

It is well known that most people become Christian Scientists because they have been restored to good health through Christian Science or have been redeemed from adversity of some sort, or because they have found nothing of permanent benefit in other forms of religion. Christian Scientists generally are those who have gone through deep waters and have come to Christian Science to find rest and peace. Mrs. Eddy, our beloved Leader, has given it as her understanding that divine Science is the Comforter promised in the Bible, and Christian Scientists firmly believe this and demonstrate and attest it in their lives daily.

HIGHLAND PARK, ILL. (First Church).—George Shaw Cook, lecturer; introduced by Robert P. Walker, who said in part:—

We will all agree that Christianity refers to the doctrines taught and practiced by Jesus. His doctrine or method was not based on mere faith or belief, but upon an understanding of divine Principle; therefore, it was strictly scientific. It gave him a true sense of God and of His reflection, the perfect man. He proved beyond question that his theory was correct, in the healing of sin and sickness, the raising of the dead, walking on the water, and in many other ways. We are therefore justified in speaking of his religion, as Mrs. Eddy terms it in Science and Health (p. 473), as "the Science of Christianity," or Christian Science.

Jesus' commands: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature;" "Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils: freely ye have received, freely give;" and his promise, "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also," were meant not only for that particular period but for all times. Those who are working and praying scientifically are worthy to be called true Christians, or Christian Scientists. Not until Mrs. Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, published the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," did the world have any knowledge of the method by which Jesus destroyed the many beliefs of mortal mind.

Testimonies of Healing

I am very grateful for Christian Science. For years I had been a great sufferer from different complaints and had been having medical treatment nearly all the time. During the last few years I kept getting worse and was in and out of the hospital. Finally the doctors told me I was suffering from chronic Bright's disease and discharged me from the hospital as incurable. They told me I would have to give up work, live on a low diet, and have two or three hot packs every week, as that was all the hope for me. I went to another specialist, and he said the same thing. I continued the treatment for twelve months but kept getting worse and gave up hope. Then my prayer for health was answered. Through a friend I heard of Christian Science. I went to a practitioner for help and was healed of all my complaints in two treatments. I have taken no medicine since; I eat what I like, enjoy perfect health, and do my work with no trouble.

I am very grateful to Mrs. Eddy, and for the assistance received from some of the members of the church who have helped me to understand this great truth. All I want to do now is to help others to receive the benefits of Christian Science.—Mrs. M. Nielsen, Brisbane, Australia.

My healing of almost unbearable nervousness and pain came through the mental change brought about by the study of the Bible in connection with "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. I had always found the human mind a most perplexing study and was one of those who having mourned, was comforted by Mrs. Eddy's wonderful book. This book taught me how to understand the Mind "which was also in Christ Jesus," and when I began to discriminate and to forsake the mind of mortals, according to the passage from Isaiah, "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts. . . . For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord," I felt a change in my condition, and was quiet.

It was my experience that my former education was of little if any value to me in acquiring the understanding I have gained of Mrs. Eddy's book, for only through humility and a great desire to know the truth that Jesus said would make us free, could I glean any knowledge from my study. Being so willing and anxious to see what Mrs. Eddy had labored to have us see, I was soon able to discard glasses, which had been worn for some years, and my eyes were healed. All the old troubles and ills have been put off, and I am much healthier and happier than in those dark years, so full of uncertainty and fear, before Christian Science came into my life.

Christian Science was of such immeasurable value to me during my military service that I would like to submit a testimony for publication. In civilian life Christian Science was my religion and my only remedy in case of illness for a good many years, but I was inclined, whenever any physical trouble assailed me, to depend a great deal on help from others. Just previous to the beginning of my service in the Army I began to realize that the help which had been so easily obtained would cease to be so close at hand when I became a soldier; and I had not a little apprehension as to how I would fare in the Army with its system of doctors, hospitals, hygiene, and physical regulations. Upon entering the service the Bible and Science and Health were taken with me and study was continued. Gradually came a confidence that my needs would be met, in whatever circumstance I might be placed. That confidence became conviction after a few months through being able by my own understanding of the truth to overcome different ailments in their first stages.

A little over a month after joining the Army my unit was sent to France, and after that I was deprived almost entirely of association with other Christian Scientists; but by depending wholly on God I was fully protected from the different ailments to which the soldiers seemed to be subject. I was overseas over thirteen months, and during that time, and also while in the camps in the United States, I had no medical treatment except the compulsory serum inoculations and vaccination administered when I first went to camp. Although there were minor complaints, I was absent from my duties only one day on account of illness and that was occasioned by the effects of one of the aforesaid inoculations. Our company served in some of the greatest battles of the war, and Christian Science was always a wonderful aid and comfort whenever my duties took me near the front lines. The reassurance which it gave me through the correct understanding of Life was very effective in allaying fear whenever I was exposed to danger. Promises of protection contained in the Scriptures were often brought to mind and proved. I was also enabled to see more clearly what my country and her allies were fighting for, and thus experienced a greater satisfaction in being privileged to serve in so great a cause.

There are many hardships attending the soldier's life in foreign service, especially for those occupying the devastated regions, and one of the greatest of these is lonesomeness. Owing to separation from loved ones at home, lack of diversions, the rigid discipline of the Army, the great difference between the old country and our own, and other causes, army life is apt to become very depressing at times. Christian Science was a great help in overcoming this form of discord and in preventing me from feeling despondent. There is nothing for which I am more thankful than my vest pocket copy of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," which was sent to me by a friend after I had arrived in France. Having the textbook in such a small form is a great advantage to a soldier in active service, for the amount of his material belongings is necessarily very limited.

I am indeed thankful for all these blessings, and must acknowledge that Christian Science was indispensable to me throughout the war. I am also still more grateful to God for the glorious outcome of the conflict which was a complete victory for the forces representing justice and right.

Remi E. Nadeau, Los Angeles, Calif.

When I first started the study of Christian Science, I received so much help and encouragement from the testimonies published in the Journal and Sentinel, also those given at the Wednesday evening meetings, that I send mine with the hope that it may help some one as I was helped. In 1914 I was healed of sciatic rheumatism in a few treatments from a Christian Science practitioner. Then I eagerly began the study of the Bible in the light of the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. Through this study and attending the services regularly I was healed, in less than a year, of chronic sick headaches from which I had suffered for over twenty-five years, of kidney disease and nervous exhaustion, utter weariness of both mind and body, sleeplessness, defective circulation, chronic stomach trouble, ptomaine poisoning, and many other ills. As I have progressed in the understanding of God and His spiritual laws, I have been healed of sprained ankle twice. The first time the healing was accomplished in two treatments from a practitioner fifty miles distant; the second time, eighteen months later, the healing came instantaneously through my own declaration and realization of the omnipotence and omnipresence of God and His laws. I was afterwards healed of a broken wrist by the patient work of the same practitioner.

I can never be grateful enough to Mrs. Eddy for all the wonderful avenues which she so wisely and lovingly provided through which one can learn of this blessed truth. I am also grateful to the practitioners for their helpful and healing words of counsel. Christian Science has healed me of the fear of poverty in old age, of a sense of lack of many things, and has brought peace, and happiness, and strength in the place of worry, sorrow, and weakness. For all these blessings I am deeply grateful, but I can find no words to express my gratitude for the overcoming of my bitter hatred of God and man; I can only pray daily and hourly for more understanding.

(Mrs.) MILDRED O. TARLTON, Houston, Texas.

It is nearly eight years since I came to Christian Science for healing. I was a traveling salesman, and for two years before leaving the road had been subject to periods of intense agony. The first diagnosis was intestinal indigestion. The attacks increased in frequency and severity, and I again sought a diagnosis and was told that my trouble was gallstones. An operation was recommended, with the cheering information that I might receive permanent benefit, but that probably future operations would be necessary. Another physician confirmed this diagnosis.

Shortly afterwards I left the road and was depending, for temporary relief, on medicine which was being taken daily. At this time Christian Science was brought to my notice by a man who had just been employed by the concern with which I had been connected for many years. He gave me a copy of the Journal, and on looking over the list of practitioners we selected the one that was nearest. I applied for and began to receive treatment at once. As I now know, my healing must have been immediate, but in a condition of great fear I continued treatment for twenty-one days, when I was lovingly told that further help was not needed. On the advice of the practitioner I secured a copy of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy as soon as treatment was begun, also began attending the Sunday services and Wednesday evening meetings. Since that time I have missed very few services and it is my daily practice to read the Bible together with Science and Health or other authorized literature. A few days after turning to Christian Science I threw away all material remedies and from that time all my needs have been met by this healing truth.

Not only was the condition for the healing of which I first came to Christian Science, with its various complications, healed, but other physical discords were eliminated and the whole tenor of my life was changed. I had always lived the life of the worldly and indulged the appetites for ease and pleasure. I used tobacco to excess, and liquor, while it never obtained sufficient hold to become a habit, was indulged in on the grounds of business advantage and conviviality. I soon found the tobacco habit slipping away rather against my will. I had held on to it as somewhat of a personal privilege that could not injure anyone, but the statement of our Leader in Science and Health (p. 407), "Puffing the obnoxious fumes of tobacco, or chewing a leaf naturally attractive to no creature except a loathsome worm, is at least disgusting," had done its work and the habit disappeared. The need for a stand on the liquor question soon came and, needless to say, it was taken. Every seeming sacrifice has been rewarded with an enlarged blessing.

As a result of my healing, my wife became interested and took up the study of Christian Science and is now active in the work. I am indeed thankful to God, and grateful to Mrs. Eddy for Christian Science and for the inestimable privilege of active church work. I am especially grateful for our periodicals, which bring to us daily, weekly, and monthly the truth that helps us in the solution of all our problems. The Christian Science Monitor, with its illuminating analysis of world conditions, is filling a need the recognition of which must grow with the realization of its fruitage.—ERNEST W. ALLEN, Detroit, Mich.

Christian Science has freed both my husband and myself from many discordant conditions, leading us, though slowly, to gain some understanding of the love expressed in the Christ, which enabled our Master to lift mankind mentally and physically above the clamorings of mortal wrong thinking. Soon after my first steps in Christian Science I was healed of so-called drying cartilage. This trouble had so far developed as to make kneeling impossible. The knees were becoming deformed and the joints grated audibly, causing sharp pain, especially when I tried to quicken my pace. I well remember the first two communion services which I attended at a Christian Science church, for when the congregation were invited to kneel in silent prayer and I was unable to get down on my knees with the rest, a painful sense of self-consciousness caused me great discomfort. It was not then realized that self-consciousness is a disease in itself. Since my healing I have knelt whenever the desire or necessity has occurred. My husband and I have made cycling tours during summer holidays, and the ascent and descent of some of the stiffest hills in this country have been accomplished without pain. Nearly all my joints were affected, and a specialist said there was no cure for me. All this trouble has yielded to the truth, and the fear of heredity has likewise gone.

Error has tried in other ways to make me afraid, manifesting itself as fluid and causing the knee to swell so much that the leg was drawn up backward until the point of the shoe rested on the ground. Christian Science treatment was asked for and in a very few hours the condition began to disappear, leaving the leg free to act in the natural way. This trouble came again when I was engaged in literature distribution work for the church. I was a few miles from home and my district not half visited. Mental work was, however, done, and remembering the needs of others I was enabled to overcome the sense of fear and finish my church work. Since that time, over three years ago, there has been no more trouble.

It had been a source of grief to me that gratitude for all these blessings was not consciously so deeply felt as was the case with many who expressed gratitude at the Wednesday evening meetings, but, as time passed, a quiet sense of ever deepening gladness and thankfulness found its way into my consciousness for all the good that Christian Science reveals to me. It protects our thought and our home, it brings us true friendship, it opens our understanding, and broadens our vision; above all, it makes us loving and more tolerant. For a member of my family Christian Science has completely overcome hemorrhoids and has reduced varicose veins to almost nonexistence, this, too, when the sufferer had not for many years put a foot to the ground before bandaging the legs. Bandages are never thought of now; gratitude has taken their place, while an ever growing desire to learn more of this regenerating truth is being constantly fed by this "bread from heaven."

For our dear Leader's unselfish life, her loving counsel and true womanhood, it seems impossible to express one's gratitude adequately. She has taught and lived the love our Master demonstrated, and her example is helping us to try at least in some measure to follow in his footsteps. The time has come when I do know and feel the gratitude I have longed to express.

(Mrs.) Martha Noot, London, England.

I wish to tell briefly of a healing, in the hope that it may help some one and that God may be glorified. In the beginning of the epidemic of Spanish influenza in this city I was attacked one afternoon while teaching in the public schools. The next day I was so ill as to be almost unable to talk. A Christian Science practitioner was called. Almost at once I felt so much better that I wanted to get up and go out of doors. Upon my expressing that desire the practitioner lovingly said, "Arise and rejoice," and I did. Especially was I grateful for Christian Science healing when I saw the trouble and fears of those about me who were trying to combat the same disease with material means.

Every day I am becoming more grateful for the life of Jesus the Christ, and feel deeper gratitude to Mrs. Eddy for her unselfish, loving work for humanity. The practical good of Christian Science in my life every day is inexpressible.—(Mrs.) Marion B. Will, Denver, Colo.

For several years I have received many benefits from reading the testimonies in our periodicals; likewise, from hearing them at the Wednesday evening meetings. Four years ago our family physician told us my wife could not live six months unless she submitted to an operation. We consulted a specialist who told us the same thing. After consulting another specialist, who gave us no hope, we turned to Christian Science, and in one treatment my wife was healed. Our daughter had an ugly growth on her cheek which the physician removed twice with a knife and three times with the electric needle treatment, but it came back again. Just at this point came my wife's healing and quite naturally we asked the practitioner to help our daughter. The same night the growth disappeared, not even leaving a scar.

Strange to say, after seeing these marvelous healings in my family, when I was taken ill with pneumonia I called in a physician and took his medicine. My wife and daughter did not remonstrate, but lovingly nursed me till I was declared out of danger. Then a cough asserted itself so persistently that for weeks I could not sleep. The physician said it would require several months' treatment to cure it. I had four kinds of medicine to take at various times besides sprays for the throat. Finally the light came. Then I hastened to the Christian Science practitioner, who advised me and gave me one treatment. I went home, threw out every drop of medicine, and studied the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, together with the Bible, as I had never done before, and suffice it to say the cough left me that very day and never returned. A short time ago an attack of rheumatism prevented me from even lifting my hand to my mouth, but with the aid of a practitioner, who showed me how to rid my consciousness of resentment, I was able in two days to go about my duties.

For these and other healings, and the understanding of the Bible gained by reading it in connection with Science and Health, I am most profoundly grateful.

Harry Flicker, Washington, D. C.

I wish to express my gratitude for the many blessings that have come to me through Christian Science. Three years ago last winter my feet were frozen, and afterwards I suffered intense pain from chilblains. I called upon a practitioner for help, which was received quickly, the trouble being overcome in a few treatments. I have also been healed of severe colds, tonsillitis, inflamed eyelids, and many other discordant conditions, and through these proofs of the power of Truth others in the home have become students of Christian Science.

For all the physical healings I am grateful, but more so for the spiritual understanding that has come to me through the study of Christian Science, and for the peace and joy it has brought into my life in place of the former discontent. I am so glad to know God as Love, and that He guides and protects us always. I am indeed truly grateful to Mrs. Eddy for giving us this beautiful teaching and for all the authorized literature.

I feel it a privilege and a duty to tell of a healing I received through Christian Science in the winter of 1918. On my way to work one morning when there was a bad snowstorm, my horse became stuck in a drift, and as I stepped from the sleigh, the horse jumped, throwing me so that all my weight came on the left hand, bending back the third and fourth fingers. I put them back into place with the other hand, but when I got to the stone shed, for I am a granite cutter, the hand was swollen. By using my understanding of Christian Science I was enabled to work all day, but on reaching home at night the pain was so severe I telephoned to a practitioner and asked for treatment. In two hours the pain had ceased. Next morning the hand was an enormous size, but during the afternoon the swelling began to disappear. After it had all gone I found that the bone of the third finger had been splintered. On the fourth day I was able to go to work again.

I am indeed grateful for this healing, and also for the understanding of Truth that I am gaining each day from a study of the Bible, and of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy.

It has been eight years since I became interested in Christian Science, and I feel that I should acknowledge my many blessings. After two years of constant doctoring and drugging, I was told by the several physicians who treated me that I would never be a well woman again. I was suffering from rheumatism, heart disease, stomach trouble for which I was on a diet, and defective eyesight for which I had worn glasses eleven years; and I was told that as soon as I was able I would have to be operated on for ovarian abscesses. As a result of all this suffering and of worry over financial reverses, I was on the verge of a mental breakdown. It was at this time my attention was turned to Christian Science. After a few treatments I was able to lay aside glasses, and they have never been needed since. The healing of the other conditions mentioned seemed to me slow, and many times I became discouraged, but the practitioner by her love and encouragement helped me. I have not needed much help for the past two years for physical discords, but when I have called for it have had results. About three years ago I was stricken with congestion of the lungs and double pleurisy. The suffering seemed great to mortal sense, but although I had an attack of hemorrhage of the lungs this too was overcome with the healing power of Truth. In the past year I have asked for help several times to overcome worry and anxiety and have been wonderfully uplifted. For this I have been very grateful.

To say that I am grateful for all these blessings is to express my feeling mildly. I am grateful for the understanding gained from the daily study of the Bible with our textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. I am thankful to God for all good, and grateful to our dear Leader for this wonderful truth, also for the Christian Science periodicals.

For several years I have read the testimonies and articles in the Christian Science Sentinel, and so much help has been received from them that with gratitude I send my testimony. For about nine years I suffered terribly from several diseases, although I had secured the very best medical advice. All material help failed, and several of the diseases were pronounced incurable. I was soon compelled to leave my usual employment on account of nervousness and lack of physical strength, so took up traveling in the hope of finding a climate where I could regain health and happiness. I continued to fail daily, however, and before long became completely disabled. The only relief from pain was secured from hypodermic injections, but these caused me to have severe trouble with my heart. At this point I consented to try Christian Science, and had studied but a very short time when I was able to lay aside glasses, which had been worn continually for seven years. I had lost all faith in material remedies, but belief in the healing power of God had to grow into faith and faith into spiritual understanding before complete healing from the other troubles was experienced.

In Science and Health Mrs. Eddy has given to the world a "pearl of great price," a "key" with which we can unlock the Scriptures.—EDWARD C. KOPS, Waukesha, Wis.

A few years ago when first I heard of Christian Science, I had occasion to go to a surgeon regarding my foot, a portion of which had been amputated because of an accident some years previous. The old wound used to break out at times, giving pain and considerable discomfort. On the occasion to which I refer, the condition was rather worse than in other years, and the surgeon after trying every material remedy for over two months without success, told me he was afraid that he could do no more for me and advised me to have that part amputated. I left him with a feeling of extreme disappointment. I had only recently taken up Christian Science and did not then realize what wonderful results could be attained through its study. As material remedies had failed, however, I decided to turn entirely from them and depend solely on Christian Science for my healing. This I did, and the week following my visit to the surgeon I went to see a practitioner and asked for treatment. After visiting him on two consecutive days I felt completely uplifted, my outlook with regard to my foot immediately changed, and on the third day the wound was entirely healed.

This I call my greatest healing, as it was my turning point from the material to the spiritual. Since then I have studied and understood, and now know that nothing is impossible in Christian Science; for as we study and know, so we are able to demonstrate. After five years of this study I can prove that divine Love does meet every human need; and as we understand more about God we also understand what Jesus meant when he said, "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also."

FRANK B. DAVIES, Thornton Heath, Surrey, England.

For three years and a half I had not been without a nurse for even a day. Then in the fall of 1917, through the ministrations of Christian Science, I was healed of the fears which held me in bondage. As the result of a nervous shock I had become so full of fear that for months I was afraid to stay alone in a room even for a moment, and was never without certain medicines. If I crossed the room without taking my medicine bottles with me, I felt as if I were miles from all help. After a time this condition had abated to a certain extent, but I continued to live in extreme fear, and became a burden to all those about me as well as to myself. Later a specialist ascribed this condition to intestinal trouble, and various diets were tried with little success.

Finally, after I had been for nine weeks in a sanitarium, my mother, who had been studying Christian Science for some months, took me and the nurse who attended me into her home. She tried to interest me in Science, but I was afraid to give up my medicines. At this time I was taking tonic hypodermic injections every day, bromide quite frequently, besides remedies for bowel trouble. Through dread of after effects my diet had become limited to almost nothing, and even that little I ate in such fear that I often lay awake half the night as a result. One despairing day I picked up "Miscellaneous Writings" and began to read the testimonies. At once I was filled with hope. About ten days later I abandoned all material remedies and had my first Christian Science treatment. Immediately I began to sleep better and eat more normally. In three weeks I returned home to my husband and children, and in five weeks let the trained nurse go. The first two months I had treatment almost every day, but the intervals between treatments grew as, through study, the truth began to unfold to me and I learned to help myself to some extent. The healing has been permanent and has been followed by added blessings.

With perseverance I hope I shall some day be able to help others and carry to them this superlative blessing. I feel that a great debt of gratitude is due all those who helped to lead me to this beautiful truth, and especially to Mrs. Eddy for her message of salvation to mankind. Above all I am thankful to God, the source of all good.

(Mrs.) ROSALIE S. JACOBY, Los Angeles, Calif.

In gratitude for Christian Science and the many blessings it has brought to me, I should like to write some words of thanks as to my healing of a disease having a discharge which was very offensive. I called on a Christian Science practitioner for help and am happy to say I was healed in one treatment. I was also helped during a time of financial stress. Since then all of my problems have been solved through this means. My comfort and daily desire is to study "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy.—(Mrs.) ELAINE PIERUCCI, St. Petersburg, Fla.

Signs of the Times

[Outlook Bulletin, Ocean Park, Santa Monica, Calif.]

Anyone who has returned sound and whole from a vacation in the woods will tremble to think what he escaped, when he buys the new pamphlet issued by the United States Public Health Service, gruesomely entitled "The Safe Vacation." "Sanitary conditions are more important than golf links or ball rooms," warns the little counselor. It also gives a list of bandages, drugs, and other contents of the bathroom medicine cabinet which should be taken along. It even insists that a clinical thermometer and a hot water bottle are the only safe and sane companions to life in the woods.

If you camp out, you must make a trench around your tent, build a wooden floor, screen your cook tent, and then, being exhausted, lie down to pleasant dreams of what a good time you might have had if you were not upon the safe vacation. Upon the safe vacation you carry remedies for bullet wounds, for drowning, for poison ivy, and for chigger bites, and on any and all occasions you send for the doctor. This last is the refrain, the golden thread of harmony, which holds the composition together.

Perhaps it is just as well that the book did not come out until most people had had their vacations. If they get it now and read it promptly it will be possible to forget most of it by the time vacation time comes round once more, and the vacationists can start off unsafe as always, but happy.

[Anaconda (Mont.) Standard]

As was to be expected, the doctors don't agree as to the likelihood of a return of the "flu." Some of them shake their heads in ominous fashion and warn us that the worst is yet to come—arriving probably in late fall or early winter. But now comes an army surgeon who says that's all bosh. "There's no more likelihood of a return of influenza than there is of a return of smallpox, plagues, or diphtheria scourges that have come over our country at times in the past," says the captain. "These fogy ideas about a big, healthy nation like this falling prey to the ravages of any disease are absurd."

In the Army it is one of the duties of the company officers to address the men frequently on subjects concerning their general health, personal hygiene, sanitation, and how to avoid illness. The captain quoted says he would like very much to be able to call out the people of the United States in some fashion and to lecture to them against the fear of a return of the "flu."

[Commissioner Sells, Office of Indian Affairs, in a circular to Superintendents and School Workers]

I would urge the thought that the Indian School must build character; that there must be no neglect of the pupil's moral nature; that the highest success of every one is conditioned upon a discrimination between right and wrong, and that there is nothing more essential to true education than the "ought" and the "ought not" in mental growth. Although comprehensive outlines on manners and right conduct were not given in the tentative course of study, definite time is set apart for such instruction and should be faithfully used.

Every school library has, or should have, reference books for teachers on moral training, and every conscientious teacher will be true to the moral element in personal example and in class room methods. Moreover, all superintendents should see that the broadly tolerant spirit of the General Regulations for Religious Worship is fully sustained. There should be no curtailment of the impartial privileges therein extended to all Christian denominations whose missionary efforts have become so helpful to our work. The influence of the Sunday school, the facilities to pupils for church attendance, and the moral features of the general assembly must not be overlooked. In our preparation of the Indians for citizenship, we should hold firmly to the prime truth that good men and good women are the safety of society; that in no form of government is civic righteousness so essential as in a democracy where the rulers are the people whose individual rectitude must determine the collective morality of the state and the standards of public ethics.

Letters of Appreciation

Many letters of appreciation of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR and other Christian Science activities are constantly being received. These letters express what these activities mean to different individuals in various occupations and pursuits. The favorable comment that has been received on those already published indicates that they are welcome and helpful; therefore others will be published under the above heading. Extracts from such letters follow:

IT is to be regretted that there are not more newspapers like THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR,—papers that are clean in every respect and which do not consider it necessary to fill their own columns with crime and scandal to hold their readers. THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR sets an example for the American press to follow. It might not only adopt its moral tone, but its typographical dress as well. It is a relief to pick up a journal whose pages are not a Chinese puzzle of heads and a bewildering maze of broken columns, with black-faced matter absent and every line easy to read. Regardless of what you may think of the religious belief behind THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR it is a complete newspaper. Like hundreds of other newspaper men I look forward to the day when the American press raises itself to the tone of the Boston paper.

ALLOW me to express my sincere gratitude for all the good literature I get. I don't know how I could get along without it. I am so thankful for THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR. I am being educated all over again through reading it. I think the Children's Page is wonderful. I get a good laugh at "King Arthur and the Round Table" and am looking for more of it. Whoever writes these articles surely knows boys.

I SHOULD like to express my gratitude for THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR. It is indeed a wonderful paper and is fulfilling its mission here. My paper has been delivered to the theater here and almost every evening someone in the office reads it and expresses his gratitude for the wonderful good contained therein. They especially speak of the editorials and the theatrical news of the world as being superior to that of any other paper.

"What I say unto you I say unto all, WATCH." Jesus

VOLUME XXII NOVEMBER 15, 1919 NUMBER 11

The League of Nations

GUY H. DEMPSTER

IN reading in the English newspapers the many sincere and well meant efforts of the editors to promote friendship among the nations, especially between England and America, the writer has frequently been struck with the wonderful truth and simplicity of that statement written by Mrs. Eddy in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," beginning on page 469, "With one Father, even God, the whole family of man would be brethren." To the theorist, the above quotation appears to be logically self-evident; yet the "man in the street," while believing possibly that it states a truth, fails to understand it as practically applicable to human affairs. Whatever the human efforts to realize unity among the nations may do, they demonstrate that mankind is crying out consciously or unconsciously for the living God, the animating Truth. Students of Christian Science know that harmony apart from God is impossible, for harmony is "the reign of Spirit; government by divine Principle; . . . the atmosphere of Soul" (Science and Health, p. 587). Humanity has yet to admit this truth and to welcome a practical understanding of God, good. It has many steps to take toward realizing this understanding, but fortunately, as Mrs. Eddy says in Science and Health (p. 327), "reason is the most active human faculty." Let us appeal to that faculty so that we and those we meet may be induced to think intelligently. The following train of thought may be found useful in helping mankind to think constructively on world unity.

Friendship, to be genuine and consequently permanent, must be based on the common participation of a true ideal. The counterfeit friendship, stimulated by an appeal to emotionalism or to any phase of erroneous sense, is ephemeral and evanescent. The intrinsic worth of the common ideal is therefore of the utmost importance in determining the value of the friendship which is founded on it. Now every individual has an ideal, but every ideal is not worthy. As humanity believes in minds many, instead of acknowledging one Mind, there are in human experience many ideals, and thus no constant ideal; consequently, no constant friendship between individuals or nations can be found on a materialistic basis of thought. The true and permanent ideal is good, or God. This ideal has one basis, because there is one God. The endeavor of any two or more persons or nations to seek such an ideal must bring those parties naturally together in a common friendship. That this process is taking place among the more enlightened nations is evident in present day history, but perhaps the vital importance of a true idealism has not been generally grasped.

The essential element in developing this true idealism is the love of God, good. Were our present day Utopians to recognize this great verity, they would set about directing thought toward desiring an improvement in some mutual interest, whether it be connected with an educational, a social, or a political problem; toward urging in thinking, and consequently in living, a higher standard based on Principle, rather than toward appealing to the emotions through rhetorical speeches or flag-waving pageants. All activities exercising a direct control on public thought, especially perhaps the newspapers and public educational institutions, have an immense duty imposed on them with a wonderful scope of real usefulness; and in this connection it is gratifying to note that our Christian Science periodicals are well in the van of progressive thought. The way out of all human problems has been shown by the master Christian to lie in obedience to the two commandments, to love God and to love one's neighbor, as cited in the twenty-second chapter of Matthew. Progress may appear to be slow and require much patient work; for it must be "precept upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little;" but the way leads to the one ideal understanding, "for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."

"A highway for our God"

AMANDA COLBATH

NOW that the construction of public highways is occupying so large a place in the world regard, it is an opportune time to ponder the question of highways and consider some of its aspects from a metaphysical point of view. If one's mental work is to be effective, it must be based on what the work represents and includes. Material road building abounds in illustrations which are applicable to the incidents of human experience. Some realization of what it means came to the writer recently while motoring over one of the scenic highways of the Northwest. She was impressed with the grandeur of the scenery, and her thought went out to the motive which had prompted the building of this road over deep ravines and around rugged cliffs of solid rock. There were more accessible routes which could have been taken; but these would not have passed by a broad expanse of water which a river afforded below, and had the cliffs been avoided the numerous waterfalls flowing over them would not have been brought to view. It was obvious that the route had been taken which would give the traveler the best outlook on the surrounding country, regardless of the difficulties which would be encountered in building the road. The engineer evidently did not hesitate to select the most beautiful locations when laying out the work, because he understood the fundamentals of engineering which would enable him to accomplish the task.

The individual who maps out his way through the wilderness of human belief in accordance with divine Science, giving no reality to the difficulties he may encounter in reaching the high goal of spiritual understanding, inevitably gains entrance to an understanding of infinite power. The student of Christian Science has chosen the most scenic way; for the instant the truth begins to dawn in thought, a view of human experience is obtained that proves its unreality.

Having once learned the unreality of material existence, mortals begin to rise above the clouds of material sense, and from the heights of exalted thought catch glorious glimpses of the grand realities of the spiritual universe. Then they can no longer be deceived by any material outlook, but can pass through the experiences of material belief and retain the vision which transcends mortal view. Before the Bible passages were illumined through the discovery of Christian Science by Mrs. Eddy, mortals did not know how to value the lessons which human experience should teach. Not having sufficient demonstrable understanding of the Bible to prove the existence and practicability of divine law, they lost sight of the desired destination in time of trial and became engulfed in the evidence of the senses. On page 597 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" Mrs. Eddy defines wilderness as "loneliness; doubt; darkness;" and also as "spontaneity of thought and idea; the vestibule in which a material sense of things disappears, and spiritual sense unfolds the great facts of existence."

One of the noteworthy features of material road building is the fact that it is always accompanied by the necessity to go forward and remove everything which will impede progress. The mental or spiritual journey out of material sense is no exception to this rule. Because man is subject to every right demand of God, he is liable at any time to be called upon to express a higher sense of Truth. As he encounters the obstacles which the overcoming of materialism brings, the temptation may come to turn back, or at least stand still,—that is, to rest in a present understanding of Truth. It is impossible, however, for an individual to rest in contentment and peace with an unsolved problem before him for which he is seeking a right solution. Truth has much to reveal to us, and nothing less than the vision of Truth that progress brings to view will satisfy the traveler journeying out of material sense.

The question is: How shall one progress mentally in the face of difficulties? One important thing to be considered is the reliability of the passport on which we are traveling. The passport has been granted by infinite wisdom, and the law of God provides for a safe journey. If the way at times seems new and strange, it is well to remember that every step of this road has been trod by Christ Jesus, and he left a record of his victory over material sense, as a guide to all who follow in his mental footsteps. Sorrow, sickness, sin, whatever phase of error may challenge the rights of man to a journey out of material sense, are false contestants and can never form a chasm so wide, between mortals and spiritual progress, that divine Love cannot fill it and make a safe passage for the man journeying heavenward.

During the recent world war the need for conserving in labor and materials resulted in certain restrictions. The demands of the times would not permit of products being used for the manufacture of beverages which appealed only to depraved appetite. While it is true that nations are no longer at war, we are still in the midst of the warfare between matter and Spirit; would it not therefore be unwise to burden ourselves with useless habits which have so recently been laid down as extra baggage? The inroads which the truth has made into the darkest and remotest places of the human consciousness, may seem to have been untimely and rudely made, but they cannot be abandoned. Mankind has paid a dear price for the sudden awakening to the possibility of beginning now to overcome these evils, and we must continue to clear out the débris which the light of divine Truth has uncovered.

How encouragingly these words of Isaiah fall on the ears of mortals as they begin to realize the unreality of things material: "Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God." The word desert, as used by the prophet, so well portrays the hopelessness of the human mind when based on materiality. It suggests the lack of everything which is necessary to the continuity of human happiness and progress; but right at this point man has the ability to demonstrate his birthright as a child of God. Purity of thought is the living water that will transform the life of any individual. When thought is kept open to the truth, the free and beautiful expression of divine Principle appears. No one, be he high or low, rich or poor, is exempt from building "a highway for our God." It is a work every one must eventually perform in his mental transition from a material sense of existence to the spiritual.

The way of the Lord is not prepared until thought has been cleared of all that prevents the inflowing of divine light. The gates of pearl, figuratively referred to in the Scripture by the Revelator, surely typify the pure and receptive thought through which divine Love is expressed. It is only through clarified consciousness that the "King of glory" enters, thereby enabling us to know, to do, and to enjoy whatever is true, beautiful, lovely, and good,—"and the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day: for there shall be no night there."

Children of Israel

CHARLES C. SANDELIN

WHEN Moses returned to the Israelites in Egypt, for the purpose of leading them out of bondage, it is doubtful whether he was at first hospitably received by those whom he desired to uplift. No doubt there were some who immediately turned to him and had faith in his words, but we cannot believe that the whole Hebrew people did so. This people had for many generations been in slavery to the Egyptians, and to break the fetters of that bondage may have seemed to them a hopeless task. Necessarily, a power superior to that of the Egyptians was requisite to free them, and in the mental darkness of that slavery they had forgotten the power of God. Moses' first task, therefore, was to renew their understanding of God's omnipotence and omnipresence, to teach them that the power of God is greater than any so-called material power, and that, guided, protected, and sustained by the divine power, they had only to leave their tasks and go with him to the promised land. Many were the obstacles to block his purpose, but finally, when the thought of the people was awakened to a measure of faith in God, the Israelites successfully took their departure from Egypt.

Moses' work did not stop with the Exodus from Egypt. The mental purification which was to destroy material yearnings and enthrone faith in Spirit then began. Many were the trials which beset them upon their journey, but in none of them was the divine aid found wanting; for every obstacle was overcome, every need was met. As trials multiplied, however, the people murmured at Moses, and we read that they longed for the fleshpots of Egypt: for there, even in slavery, their material needs were supplied. Yet, notwithstanding the ingratitude and lack of faith which they displayed, Moses did not cease to care for them, teaching them the divine law and patiently guiding them.

To a world in bondage to materiality, Mrs. Eddy, after several decades of earnest seeking for divine guidance, sounded the call to come out from the Egypt of materiality.

Digitized by Google

Did the world heed the call as it should? On page 330 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" she says: "Until the author of this book learned the vastness of Christian Science, the fixedness of mortal illusions, and the human hatred of Truth, she cherished sanguine hopes that Christian Science would meet with immediate and universal acceptance." Many were indeed willing to leave the bondage of error—to escape from their taskmasters of sin and sickness, but they were not so willing to tread with her the narrow path of righteousness. Was Mrs. Eddy discouraged? Nay! Like Moses, she did not cease her efforts, but lovingly, patiently, trustingly counseled and guided these new children of Israel, turning their thoughts to God as able to meet their every need.

On page 2 of "Rudimental Divine Science" we read: "Healing physical sickness is the smallest part of Christian Science. It is only the bugle-call to thought and action, in the higher range of infinite goodness. The emphatic purpose of Christian Science is the healing of sin; and this task, sometimes, may be harder than the cure of disease; because, while mortals love to sin, they do not love to be sick." The Red Sea having been crossed, there still remains the mental journey in the wilderness of mortal mind, filled with beliefs of materiality, sin, sickness, sorrow, death, all of which are to be overcome through the understanding of Truth. It is important to consider how we meet the difficulties and dangers which beset us in this journey. Do we, like the Israelites, again long for the fleshpots of Egypt,—satisfaction in materiality, with its resulting bondage,—or do we have faith and such understanding of God as enabled Moses to overcome all difficulties? On the one hand there is the belief in the reality of matter, hence the reality of evil; on the other hand there is the understanding of Spirit, and the consequent understanding of the nothingness of matter, hence the unreality of evil. To the former there is naught but defeat; to the latter, although there may be trials, everywhere and at every moment there are opportunities to prove God's presence and protection.

Leaning upon the unfailing support of divine Love, Mrs. Eddy was sustained through trials that were in many ways equal to those of Moses, and her loyal followers rejoice in the knowledge that the divine presence will also unerringly support and guide them in the true path leading through the wilderness of error, "into the land of Christian Science, where," as we read in Science and Health (p. 227), "fetters fall and the rights of man are fully known and acknowledged."

The Act of Obedience

HELEN K. BROCK

IN the ninth chapter of the gospel of John, we find a detailed account of the healing of a man blind from his birth. It is there recorded that in answer to the inquiry of the neighbors and those "which before had seen him that he was blind," as to what had been done for him, he said, "A man that is called Jesus made clay, and anointed mine eyes, and said unto me, Go to the pool of Siloam, and wash: and I went and washed, and I received sight." The Pharisees, however, when he was brought to them, were not satisfied with this reply. It is noted that they asked him twice practically the same question, and that finally he answered them, "I have told you already, and ye did not hear: wherefore would ye hear it again?" The darkness of the Pharisees was so dense that they could not see that the pith of the whole testimony lay in the simple statement, "I went and washed;" that is to say, that he had rendered willing and instant obedience to the instructions of Jesus, neither stopping to argue nor seeking to evade compliance with the simple demand, "Go, wash in the pool of Siloam." There was no healing virtue in the waters of the pool of Siloam any more than in any other pool of water. It was not a material cleansing that was needed; it was a purging from the belief in imperfection, and this was accomplished by simple obedience to the requirements of Truth as voiced by the man Jesus, himself the highest human exponent of the truth.

With what overwhelming joy and gratitude, then, could the erstwhile blind man say to his questioners, "I went and washed, and I received sight." By the act of obedience he had destroyed the opposition of error to truth in his own consciousness, and thereby had opened the way for the cleansing flood of pure thoughts to wash away the claims of evil that would blind him to the glorious realization of the truth of being. He had not only washed in water to remove the clay from his eyes; his thought had been flooded with a new light, a conviction that he could see, and a new concept of himself as the image and likeness of God. The old misery and darkness had dropped away from him even as the clay had been washed away from his eyes by the waters of the pool.

In the words of John, "He went his way therefore, and washed, and came seeing." How very, very simple, and yet how reluctant the human mind is to obey! If we will all put aside the tangled web of belief which we have woven for ourselves, and seek Truth with the simplicity of the blind man whose singleness of purpose enabled him to obey without questioning, we too can go and wash,—rid ourselves of all material theories, cleanse ourselves of false beliefs, wrong desires, self-will, and all the kindred host of evils that throng the human mind, and like him, receive sight.

Minute by Minute

HILDA WILLOUGHBY WOLF

A LESSON recently learned in the practical application of the truth, as revealed in Christian Science, of the present reality of Life and its manifestation as perfect health, and the consequent unreality of anything unlike that manifestation, has been of such value to me that I feel this experience should be shared, perchance to bring a ray of light to some other pilgrim.

After an instantaneous healing of a condition considered incurable by the medical men, followed by freedom from chronic tonsillitis, like a cloud out of a clear sky a severe and most disfiguring skin disease quite suddenly appeared. With confidence, however, I applied to a Christian Science practitioner for help. Work was lovingly and faithfully done, but to my astonishment and dismay there was only very slight relief. In desperation I dropped my household duties and read Science and Health eight hours a day. Still there was no change for the better. As the months passed by, many unkind remarks as to the apparent failure of Christian Science to heal this case were by one means and another brought to my notice, so that I finally found, added to the burden of physical suffering, a sense of personal responsibility, feeling that it was my duty to prove that the power of Truth is indeed adequate to replace all blemishes with a manifestation of purity and beauty. And so day after day I made my declarations of truth, but the physical appearance remained unchanged and the extreme itching seemed to increase.

One day, however, my eyes were suddenly opened, as a friend bluntly remarked, "I don't see how you can expect to be healed when you keep applying a material remedy." I rather indignantly replied: "I use nothing of the sort. How can you say such a thing?" The answer was, "Every time you touch your face, either to rub it or scratch it, you are applying a material remedy, you are acting on the basis of the reality of this disease." I pondered the situation, and then the warfare with error was on in earnest. The first erroneous argument presented was that it would be impossible for me not to rub or scratch my face because the act had become largely an unconscious one. Truth's answer was immediate: Thought precedes action; therefore in reality there is no unconscious act or habit. The next attack came swiftly: You may be able to see the truth clearly now, but you will soon fall into your old ways again. Quietly and confidently the answer was given: I know the truth now; this present minute is all I have; and I will live and act from the basis of truth only, each minute as it comes. And so, minute by minute, all through the day, knowing that there was no irritation in Love, I left my face untouched. I acted that truth, not merely repeated it. And the next day, one minute at a time, the work went patiently on. In forty-eight hours there was a marked improvement. In two weeks I was healed. After two years of struggle the valuable lesson was brought home to me that not only must we think the truth and speak the truth, but we must also act from that basis only. On page 264 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" Mrs. Eddy says, "We must look where we would walk, and we must act as possessing all power from Him in whom we have our being."

Success

LAWRENCE THOMPSON

THERE are very few matters in connection with which one can safely say that practically the whole of humanity is agreed. This state of affairs is no doubt due to the fact that there is no unity in a mind believing in both good and evil, for as Jesus said, "Every city or house divided against itself shall not stand." All normal human beings, however, desire to attain success in life, and this desire may be right and legitimate in itself; but on looking carefully into the matter, it is found that the word success is usually construed by the human mind as meaning the attainment of material possession or power. It is impossible to avoid the conclusion that any seeming unity among mortals in connection with this question is largely due to selfishness. When it is understood that "substance is that which is eternal and incapable of discord and decay," as Mrs. Eddy says in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 468), it is clearly seen how false and misleading the ordinary view of success is; for the winning of it may produce nothing but discord, hatred, war, and the like, and is often the direct cause of much of "man's inhumanity to man."

One method adopted by mortals to gain the "bubble reputation" is the employment of mere human cleverness. This practice has no reliable foundation, for it is based on the belief that one person can succeed at the expense of another; and to accomplish this purpose dishonesty, craftiness, and subtlety are frequently resorted to. The pernicious nature of this belief is revealed when it is remembered that very few persons naturally wish to do harm, or even to act uncharitably toward others. The method referred to, however, hardens the heart and silences the higher motives, unless the true understanding of reality and substance is attained through a knowledge of Christian Science; for there is no doubt that the major part of the trouble is due to a misunderstanding of these subjects. The prevailing systems encourage dishonesty by teaching the reality of matter, and the thief logically argues that if matter is real substance, then self-preservation, which we are told is the first law of nature, justifies his taking what he can lay hands on, especially if the owner appears to have more than his share of things. The same error lies at the root of much deception, trickery, and falsehood. In Christian Science we learn that "reality is spiritual, harmonious, immutable, immortal, divine, eternal" (Science and Health, p. 335). When this definition, together with the one already quoted regarding substance, is understood and practiced, evil purposes will be destroyed and the true sense of success will be demonstrated.

In the history of the world, selfishness, duplicity, and subtlety have been prominent in international relations, the result being wars and commotions. It is a matter for rejoicing, however, that there are now unmistakable signs that the futility of relying on anything but Principle is being more and more recognized. Principle demands an honest desire to observe the admonition of Jesus, "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." This admonition is regarded as impractical by the carnal mind, but the fact remains that it is the only safe method to adopt. On page 313 of Science and Health we are told that "Jesus of Nazareth was the most scientific man that ever trod the globe. He plunged beneath the material surface of things, and found the spiritual cause." Being the most scientific, it follows as a matter of course that Jesus was also the most successful man, and this is appreciated when his achievements are reviewed. He overcame the three great enemies of mankind; namely, sin, disease, and death, and all real success lies along the same lines.

A man's success, therefore, is measured by the degree in which he approximates the achievements of Jesus the Christ. There are, of course, many points of divergence between the methods used to secure what is regarded as worldly success, and the means employed by Jesus to win true success; but perhaps the most prominent is the absolute reliance of Jesus on his Father, divine Principle. Even in the supreme hour of trial in the garden of Gethsemane he was able to say, "O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt."

One meaning of the word success is found to be, "That which comes after; hence consequence; issue, outcome, or result of an undertaking." This points to the scientific fact that to be really successful one's aims and motives must be in harmony with Truth, and it also emphasizes the Scriptural injunction, "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Any standard of success which falls short of that introduced by Jesus the Christ is of no real value, for its achievements are short-lived, and permanence is an essential characteristic of all true success.

Liberation

MARGARET S. SAYRE

DURING the recent world-wide conflict, a great deal was said about freedom. An analysis of this thought by Christian Science shows the only real freedom to be the mental freedom which brings true liberation. One of the traits of error is to incline one to run away from an unpleasant situation, but as we progress in spiritual understanding, the realization comes of the impossibility of ever eluding evil of any sort by running away from it. When God commanded Moses to cast down his rod and it became a serpent, he fled before it; then God bade him go back and handle the serpent, or his concept of evil. His fear was overcome and this overcoming became a staff which supported him. So it is with us; when an error is met and conquered, the fear disappears and the experience thus gained becomes a help and an added inspiration to press on still farther. When we have reached this stage, we can say with our Leader, "Trials are proofs of God's care" (Science and Health, p. 66), and welcome each new problem presented, as an opportunity to further prove the truth of Principle in higher and better demonstration.

The writer remembers during her early experiences in Christian Science a tendency to ignore the so-called small errors, the daily little annoyances that arose, and these unarrested beliefs in evil were the source of much confusion and discord. As the understanding became clearer and clearer to her that all ideas of Mind are always in their rightful place and environment, doing their rightful work, the beauty, harmony, and perfection of God's creation made her realize more than ever before the importance of instantaneously rebuking any suggestion of evil which would dim this wonderful understanding of a perfect God and perfect universe. Gradually carelessness and apathy gave way to order and alertness; fear, resentment, and selfishness were crowded out by the Love which purifies and uplifts mankind. With this purification came a clearer vision of the Christ, "the divine manifestation of God, which comes to the flesh to destroy incarnate error," as Mrs. Eddy tells us on page 583 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures."

Each Christian Scientist has an individual share of working, watching, and praying to do in the reconstruction period now at hand. All ideas of God reflect the one Mind, which can neither be mesmerized nor manipulated by the false arguments of mortal mind, that would otherwise keep the world in its present seemingly chaotic condition; but as greed, fear, lust, malice, hate, and the desire to rule and dominate are cast out of each and every one of us by a complete surrender to God's law, then, and then only, can we know as individuals and nations the freedom which brings with it, as its inevitable concomitant, that perfect peace which is beyond all human understanding.

Confidence

GRACE A. BOUGHTON-LEIGH

ABOVE the storms of passion
And murmurs of self-will,
The voice of Truth still whispers
The message, Peace, be still;
And through the night of sorrow
Upon life's restless sea,
Love calms the waves of error,
In silent victory.

E'en in the drowning shadows
Truth's power still is nigh
To banish every darkness
And lift us up on high,
Until we reach in safety
The haven of our peace,
Where all earth's troubled anguish
Shall find a sure surcease.

The vision of the Christ is hid,
Through clouds of doubt and fear,
But understanding faith can grasp
That Love is always near.

["Taking Thought for the Morrow"—The Christian Science Monitor, Boston, U.S.A., Aug. 16, 1919]

The habit of taking thought for the morrow in material ways grows out of two things; first, the dense materiality of the human mind, second, the intense belief of that mind in the power of evil. Ultimately, of course, these two things are the same thing, for the belief in the power of evil is itself a product of the materiality of the human mind. The moment, consequently, that a man begins to lose his materiality, that moment his belief in the power of evil begins to lessen, and he unconsciously begins to cease taking thought for the morrow—as well he may.

To the materialist, thought for the morrow is in the nature of a necessity. Believing that houses and fields, ships and warehouses, banks and churches, represent substance in themselves, he must, in common prudence, take thought to add house to house, and field to field. There are only so many fields, there is only so much gold in the world, and if he does not get his share, and more than his share, he must, as he sees it, take his place in the ranks of the world failures. No such excuse, of course, exists for the philosophic idealist, the man who insists that matter is a state of consciousness and has no objective reality. When you have once admitted that matter exists solely as a mental picture it is obvious that your whole reckoning must be with mind. But it is precisely here that the difficulty arises. Post hoc propter hoc, after which because of which, the mind which pictures matter must be itself material, and so again, after which because of which, the idealist of the philosophic school has gained wonderfully little over the rank materialist; for even if, as Mr. Balfour once said, he has explained matter away, he has explained it away in the terms of material-mindedness, and it matters extremely little whether his house or his field exists subjectively in his mind or objectively independently of it, if only he holds the title deeds. That is really why, as Huxley was wont to insist, the philosophic idealist is apt to become a mired logician.

The material mind, then, thinking in terms of matter, the philosophic idealist naturally takes thought for the morrow with the whole-hearted thoroughness of the convinced materialist. If he is faced by a difficulty in his business, he does not get very much further by declaring that houses or fields are not made out of clay or stone, but are mental pictures, for the simple reason that the sole origin of the material clay or the material brick is a material mind which, just because it is material, cannot express itself in anything but matter. As a consequence, such a business man is involved in a vicious circle of material thinking from which he can no more escape than the materialist who shrugs his shoulders resignedly before the ponderous mass of a mountain, and dryly insists that he has never seen the faith that will move even a little hill.

Now the faith of the materialist is in the reality of matter, the faith of the philosophic idealist in a material mind, and the difference is more apparent than real. This faith, bred in the material-mindedness which explains that mind is a phase of matter or matter a phase of mind, is itself grossly material. But there is another description of faith, the faith which the great Christian philosopher declared was "the substance of things hoped for," which exists as a purely spiritual conception. This faith is "the evidence of things not seen;" it is the testimony to the human consciousness that there is a power, spiritual, and so uncognizable by the material senses, which proves the unreality of the material mind, of material phenomena, and of all material laws, by demonstrating the fact of their nonexistence and powerlessness. Such faith expands quite naturally into spiritual understanding, and finds it possible to move mountains because it knows not only that the mountain is a mental picture, but that the mind producing it is as unreal as the picture, since it is nothing but a counterfeit of divine Mind, Principle, and is dependent for its very supposititious existence on a reality to counterfeit. This, surely, is what Mrs. Eddy means when she writes, on pages 9 and 10 of "Unity of Good": "What is the cardinal point of the difference in my metaphysical system? This: that by knowing the unreality of disease, sin, and death, you demonstrate the allness of God. This difference wholly separates my system from all others."

The only teaching which Mrs. Eddy followed in pursuing the discovery of Christian Science was that of the Bible; and the scientific freedom to which she ultimately attained was that foretold by Jesus the Christ, when he declared, "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." This freedom is, of course, amongst other things, a freedom from taking thought for the morrow, for it is based upon an understanding of the unreality of material phenomena. This understanding made Christ Jesus the wisest, wealthiest, and most powerful man in the world, and yet endowed him with a wisdom, a wealth, and a power which rendered thought for the morrow not merely unnecessary but futile. The man who had grasped the unreality of matter so perfectly that he could raise the dead, walk on the water, and still the tempest, had discovered that the wisdom of this world was unutterable folly; the man who had fed the multitude, found the tribute money, and made the miraculous draft, had reduced the wealth of this world to poverty; the man who had conquered death on Calvary, and proved that Life is spiritual and not material, had shown that there was nothing left for him to conquer in the world; for death is the last enemy to be destroyed.

Christ Jesus is the way, and the victories he achieved those who follow in his footsteps must achieve in turn. It is mockery, professing to believe in him and then taking every conceivable material thought for the morrow. The thought every real Christian has to take is how to walk in the footsteps of the Christ to-day, and that and that only will assure the safety of to-morrow; for "sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."

[Peter V. Ross in Emanu-El, San Francisco, Calif.]

To assume that Christian Science "bears no relation to Judaism" would lead to the erroneous conclusion that Christian Science bears no relation to the Old Testament, for Judaism, while in part made up of tradition and ceremony, is in large measure and in vital respects based on the Old Testament. So far as it is so based, Judaism and Christian Science have a common foundation; it is only as Judaism is built up of rites and dogmas that Christian Science ceases to be in touch with it.

The fundamental teachings of the Old Testament are accepted by both Jew and Christian Scientist. Those fundamentals are simply that there is one God, the great I AM; that He is omnipresent and omniscient, that is, incorporeal Life, Truth, intelligence; and that obedience to Him brings life and happiness, while disobedience leads to distress and despair. These are basic teachings of the Old Testament, of Judaism, and of Christian Science alike. Christian Science departs from Judaism, chiefly, in giving these teachings a practical application. Thus, postulating that there is one creator, who is good, Christian Science successfully disputes the reality of evil; accepting God as the only Life, Christian Science attacks sickness, the principal enemy of life, as at most a mistaken human belief, and hence overcomes it where other health systems fail because they admit as real the very thing they hope to destroy. Recognizing God to be the only Mind, Christian Science looks for and is bringing about an end of the confusion and strife growing out of the false supposition that there are minds many.

This interpretation, instead of carrying "no appeal to the Jew," makes every appeal to him, as Christian Science takes hold of his thought, for it imparts a significance and vitality to the Scriptures which they never before possessed for him. It enables him, he believes, to separate the essential truths of the Old Testament from the nonessential forms and traditions of Judaism and thereby to see, contrary to the orthodox Jew's opinion, that the Old and New Testaments are "in accord with each other," and that, while the law was given by Moses, "grace and truth came by Jesus Christ."

Seeing, then, that the religion of the Jew and the religion of the Christian Scientist have, at least to a considerable extent, a common origin, it is not surprising that occasionally a man of the Hebrew race should indulge the sentiment that he is both a Jew and a Christian Scientist, or even that Christian Science has made him a better Jew. Whether such propositions are technically correct is, after all, of little consequence. The important question is, Has Christian Science made him a better man? . . . The attraction which Christian Science has for some Jews is due to the conviction that it does put in them a new heart and a new spirit, whereby they become not merely healthier but happier and holier.

It is true that the "Jew had a knowledge of God thousands of years before Mrs. Eddy proclaimed her spiritual interpretation of the Scriptures." It is equally true that that knowledge was, from time to time, either lost sight of or not lived up to. The whole history of the Jews from the time of their escape from Egypt to the captivity at Babylon alternates between periods of understanding of and obedience to God, attended by progress and success, and periods of ignorance of God and of doing evil in His sight, with consequent personal affliction and national disaster. This latter tendency finally prevailed to such an extent that they ceased to be a nation. . . .

Christianity believes that Jesus tried to impart the spiritual interpretation of the Scriptures to the Jews, but that they rejected it, preferring "for doctrines the commandments of men;" and that Paul, discouraged with his efforts among his own people, turned with better success to the Gentiles. Mrs. Eddy, Christian Science affirms, discovered the spiritual or real meaning of the Scriptures, which had long been lost alike to Jew and Christian, and made it applicable in our times to the destruction of all forms of evil, sickness and disease included.

Out of the literal interpretation of the Bible come all the contradictions and inconsistencies in which critics find satisfaction. The two accounts of the conquest of Canaan, taken literally, differ in important details, yet the spiritual significance, the truth intended to be conveyed, is identical in both cases. It is immaterial whether all the tribes acted together under a unified command as described in Joshua, or whether they operated separately or in groups as narrated in Judges. The essential thing, and the fact at the heart of each narrative is, that the experience in the wilderness, followed by the occupation of the promised land, is typical or allegorical of the steps taken by every human being in his journey out of the material sense of existence into the spiritual, wherein obedience speeds his progress, while disobedience leads to suffering and ends in downfall. "Take away the spiritual signification of Scripture," Mrs. Eddy has well said on page 241 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," "and that compilation can do no more for mortals than can moonbeams to melt a river of ice."

[George R. Lowe in The Mail and Empire, Toronto, Ontario]

A recent issue contains a review of Dr. A. H. Forster's book, "Four Modern Religious Movements," in which it is said that the author admits that many of the cases of healing by Christian Science are genuine, but says that "they might occur equally well in the Church if that body had not forgotten the truth which Mrs. Eddy has distorted." Surely the latter statement about Mrs. Eddy is prejudicial and illogical. Genuine healing must have genuine, real, good cause. Something genuine does not proceed from something distorted. A genuine phenomenon or effect must proceed from a true cause; that is, from Truth, "the great First Cause." God is the intelligible Principle of Science.

Christ Jesus explained his healing ministry by the statement that the knowledge of the truth gave freedom. This emancipation included healing of bodily diseases, and Doctor Forster declares that Christianity is "a gospel for the body" also. Then why does not "the Church" gain a knowledge of the real truth which heals bodily ills? In the Christian Science church bodily as well as moral ailments are healed scientifically. It is clear that the knowledge of the truth frees anyone from ignorance, falsity, illusion, or lie. Truth frees from the seeming opposite of the truth, that is, from an abnormal, diseased condition. It is thus that Christian Science interprets and demonstrates the teaching and practice of Christ Jesus.

Admitting the reality of the healing, as any fair investigator should, the conclusion follows that the cause made known in Christian Science as Truth, Principle, or God is the only real cause. In discovering this truth, Mrs. Eddy had not distorted it, but applied and taught the truth. She wrote in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 418): "Truth is affirmative, and confers harmony. All metaphysical logic is inspired by this simple rule of Truth, which governs all reality." The unhealing negation is reversed by affirmation of the truth.

[A. A. Freel in Junction City (Ore.) Times]

A recent issue is loud in its praises of medical inspection of school children through the medium of a county health nurse. No doubt this inspection of school children is highly desired by an interested class of persons, some of whom are innocently believing that such inspection will be productive of good results. But when we examine the records of cities and towns where thorough medical inspection has been in operation for some years, and find that the percentage of communicable diseases among school children has greatly increased since the system has been in use, and then go to other cities where after a trial it has been discontinued, and learn that since the discontinuance of medical inspection the percentage of communicable diseases has appreciably declined, we naturally question the results of medical inspection. The reason for this is not hard to find. The child is taught disease instead of health; he has it pictured to him; and the inspector by word or act continually suggests disease to him until through fear he imbibes it and thinks it, until it becomes manifest on his body. Fear, which is an accompanying agent with every school inspector, especially among the small children, is the most potent producer of disease. When we realize that about one half of the diagnoses made by the best trained men in the medical profession in the best equipped hospitals of the United States are acknowledged to be wrong, it does not stand to reason that even half the diagnoses made by school inspectors will be correct. If the diagnosis is wrong, how about the treatment which is expected to follow?

In the face of these facts parents are making an ever increasing protest against school inspection of any kind, and rightly so. There is no law in Oregon which authorizes medical inspection of school children. In our sister state of California those who believe that our public schools should be kept free from religious and medical control, have organized themselves into what is known as The Public School Protective League. This league is prosecuting every offender where the rights of school children are infringed. In this way they are impressing upon the public the fact that the "function of the public school is to educate—not to medicate." The time seems propitious for the people of Oregon not only to realize but to act upon the truth that the school is public, and not the child.

[A. C. Cronk and "Freedom" in Yorkshire Post, Leeds, England]

I think the attention of every one of your readers should be drawn to the remarks of your Notes and Comments writer with regard to the vital tendency which is now taking place in Government matters, as illustrated in the proposed Ministry of Health bill. Although this bill professes to be only a coordination of the existing health departments, there is sufficient indication in the bill, and also in the speech of the introducer of the bill, to show that ultimately vigorous measures will be taken. The world is demanding democracy, and those who have bitter experiences with regard to Army regulations must not grumble later on if they find they are under the yoke of medical autocracy, and have to submit to many things that go completely against the grain, if this bill is permitted to pass.

["Freedom's" letter]

Mr. Cronk's letter regarding "the Ministry of Health" raises a point of which few people seem to be aware. The Ministry of Health bill, unless carefully watched, will give almost unlimited power to the medical profession, and, with all regard for the members of that profession, one would not like to see medical domination exercised in this country. In America, at any rate in certain states, the idea is carried to a ridiculous extreme. Most people would like to see hygienic principles carried much farther, but few of us would care, for instance, to be lined up periodically and ordered to strip for our monthly medical examination. This sort of thing has been suggested seriously, and if any plan of this sort is adopted, we shall find that Prussianism is not dead, but has only assumed another guise.

Those who have had Army experience, and have been demobilized, are congratulating themselves that their periodical medical examinations are a thing of the past. Are they? Not if some of the promoters of the Ministry of Health bill have their way. The public do not realize what is in store unless the measure is carefully watched and no loosely defined clauses are allowed to be adopted. In the meantime, people are not taking much, if any, interest in the subject, although, if they knew the kind of thing that is contemplated, they would resist to the uttermost. Let us have a Ministry of Health by all means, but not domination by the medical profession.

A League of Understanding Hearts

In the collection of religious poems attributed to King David is one psalm wherein he complains of those who reverence not the unchanging God. He shows how a man may with suave and deceitful talk cover over his malign intention. Of such a one he says: "He hath put forth his hands against such as be at peace with him: he hath broken his covenant. The words of his mouth were smoother than butter, but war was in his heart: his words were softer than oil, yet were they drawn swords." Our Master revealed the residence of error when he said, "From within, out of the heart of men, proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders, thefts, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, lasciviousness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness: all these evil things come from within, and defile the man." Now if war and its train of evil is to cease it must be deprived of residence and retreat where in concealment it may crouch behind the screen of false and smooth words. Entertained in the heart it grows like the tiger cub kept as a plaything, which in its mature brutality may slay its host. From earliest times it has been said, "All they that take the sword shall perish with the sword." It is not by victories in war, but by victories over war that men will find themselves delivered. Mrs. Eddy has said (Miscellany, p. 281), "War will end when nations are ripe for progress."

It sometimes happens that the right-minded and good-humored people of the world are called upon to fight the others who believe in war. People occupied in the ways of peace will prosper; there will be fertile fields, flocks and herds, homes where art produces ornaments and treasures. The tribal chief who has war in his heart calls his men to observe that they can rob the granaries, drive off the herds, loot and destroy the homes, and enslave the people who through peace are prosperous and happy. Thus he denies the moral law and promulgates a devil's law, promising that they shall steal and kill and commit adultery, and lay hands on whatsoever they covet. It is necessary, then, if not for the protection of their property, yet for the protection of human beings, of women and children, that the workers in peace should sometimes take up arms and fight. They may do this not at all with war in their hearts, but with courage, resolution, and faith. But if all in the world who reverence the moral law, if all who love peace and orderly ways and the joy of constructive work, were united, they could proclaim a prohibitive No to all the proposers of war, and thus the prophecy would be naturally fulfilled which says of the nations: "They shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. But they shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig tree; and none shall make them afraid."

When there is in a man that same mind "which was also in Christ Jesus," from his life flow such influences and effects as characterized the lives of those whom the Master called his disciples. To have healing in the heart is just the reverse of war in the heart. Every century has its proud despot who would make earth tremble because of his shaken sword. By his ambitions he troubles mankind, sending his armies forth to conquer and destroy. He justifies cruelty and treachery if it will subserve his purposes, and so upon the earth come confusion, famine, plague, ruin, sorrow, death. Century by century it has been so, but surely it is time for the world's ignorance to have an end. Let us remember that only a small minority in the world believe in war. How could they by mesmerism drag others into conformity with their plans if these others were clear in their thinking? A few forgers and account manipulators and dishonest speculators do not mislead those who think mathematically and honestly. Suppose, then, that there be an agreement among men to think Christianly and scientifically; that is, to accept God as Principle and Christ Jesus as example; would men not then understand the working of divine Principle, and say as the psalmist said, "He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth"?

Christian Scientists throughout the world are united in a noble purpose. They are striving to be themselves healed, and to prove to others the goodness of our God who says, "I am the Lord that healeth thee." They foresee that as Christianity becomes practical and men cease to war over doctrinal opinions and political advantages there will come international unity because there will be obedience to the moral law, and illustration in the lives of men of the teachings of the Sermon on the Mount. Naturally they aid and further every honest effort to establish righteousness in the world, be it a leaguing of nations or the uniting of sundered family ties. In fact, all who obey Principle are in league and amity for this purpose, that the kingdom of God come. This unity of those who have understanding hearts is essential, for the opponents of the Prince of peace are in alliance and confederate. Mrs. Eddy has said (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 177), "The powers of evil are leagued together in secret conspiracy against the Lord and against His Christ, as expressed and operative in Christian Science." Then she asks: "What will you do about it? Will you be equally in earnest for the truth? Will you doff your lavender-kid zeal, and become real and consecrated warriors? Will you give yourselves wholly and irrevocably to the great work of establishing the truth, the gospel, and the Science which are necessary to the salvation of the world from error, sin, disease, and death? Answer at once and practically, and answer aright!"

William P. McKenzie.

Right Motives

Nothing is of more importance to men in the working out of their salvation from all evil than the understanding of how to examine and purify motives. There is always a motive prompting every act, whether the act be great or small, whether it be of larger or lesser influence; it is therefore easy to see the immense significance of right motives. It is only from perfect motives that perfect acts can result, and correcting the motives, more correct living must follow as a necessary consequence.

Now this examination of motives is entirely a mental operation and it is only through the light which Christian Science throws upon all mental activity that proper discernment is made possible. In its revelation of absolute Truth, Christian Science has opened the way to an exact differentiation between the true and the false, between right and wrong, between good and evil, at all times and under all circumstances. It remains, however, for each individual to lay hold of this perfect method and to apply it to every thought in order that he may bring forth the fruit of right motives.

To begin with the motive that Truth must be the goal of all endeavor, that Truth must be loved supremely and held as the alone desirable, is to have taken a great step toward the ability to clarify and rectify the nature of all motives. No honest heart but longs to be guided rightly and no question assails the student in the demonstration of Christian Science more frequently than that which asks, "How can I know whether it is truth or error which is knocking at the door of my thought?" Right here is an opportunity to enter upon the work of the analyzing and purifying of motives, by applying the simple test, "Am I desiring and seeking self, or God?" For with the one insistent purpose to be true to Truth, all wavering mental vision will be done away.

Christian Science teaches that in all mental work, if one starts with the positive truth about any subject and clings steadfastly to that truth, it is certain to uncover all that is unlike itself, and thus an occasion is afforded to deny and reject the false until Truth shall hold sway. Suppose it is a correct thought or concept of motive that is desired; the first necessity is to see clearly that the only real motive there is or can be is the one which originates in God, divine Mind, which remains in that Mind, which is under the direct control of that Mind, and which partakes of the qualities of Mind. To cling to this truth about motive, letting divine Mind continually lead one forward into a larger comprehension of what comprises this divine concept, will uncover all that is false in one's own belief about motive. Thus there is furnished the opportunity to relinquish the false and rise into a purer, better understanding of motive.

It may quickly be seen that a God-ordained motive can never be less than the purpose that Truth shall prevail; and this simple fact accepted, the way is made plain for right demonstration of every problem. If one desires simply and honestly to have Truth control every situation, he will be glad to drop every selfish purpose which would limit or interfere with the operation and appearance of Truth. The motive to gain an ever increasing understanding of Truth in order that Truth may be proved, will always be open to receive criticism of any position taken or of any statement made. If one seeks only Truth and its establishment he will listen gladly to the views of others regarding his own acts and words; for does he not know that Truth is unchangeable? If his deeds, words, and thoughts are according to Truth, the further examination of them will only bring out more clearly their rightness. A true mental attitude will also render one only too happy to have greater light thrown upon a mistake in order that it may thereby be corrected.

To measure one's every motive by the divine,—so to work that Truth alone shall be manifest,—this will keep one ever alert to the laying down of all selfishness. It will purge one of personal aims, jealousies, sensitiveness, until each will rejoice as heartily in his brother's proofs of Truth and its all-power, as he does in his own. Mrs. Eddy tells us in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 490), "Christian Science reveals Truth and Love as the motive-powers of man." This simple statement held to, prayed, demonstrated, will analyze and purify every human belief of motive. As every Christian Scientist strives for this simplicity of motive, which has no desire outside of loyalty to Truth itself, he will find in his own experience the truth of the further statement in Science and Health (p. 454), that "right motives give pinions to thought, and strength and freedom to speech and action."

Lecture in The Mother Church

The First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston, Massachusetts, announces a free public lecture on Christian Science by Judge Samuel W. Greene, a member of The Christian Science Board of Lectureship, in the church edifice, Norway, Falmouth, and St. Paul Streets, Back Bay, Monday evening, November 24, 1919, at eight o'clock. The public is cordially invited.

Lectures in Suburbs of Boston

The Mother Church announces the following lectures in the Boston suburbs to be delivered by John Randall Dunn:—

Roslindale and West Roxbury: Gorman's Theater, South and Washington Streets, Roslindale, 3 p.m., Nov. 16.

Everett: Olympia Theater, Chelsea Street, Everett Square, 8 p.m., Nov. 16.

Brookline: Beacon Universalist Church, Harvard Street, near Coolidge Corner, 8 p.m., Nov. 17 and 18.

Waltham: Asbury Temple, Main and Moody Streets, 8 p.m., Nov. 20.

Mattapan (Milton lecture): Oakland Hall, Oakland Street, Mattapan Square, 8 p.m., Nov. 21.

Allston: Allston Theater, 128 Brighton Avenue, 3 p.m., Nov. 23.

Watertown: Masonic Hall, 23 Main Street, 8 p.m., Nov. 23.

Revere: Revere City Hall, Broadway, 8 p.m., Nov. 25.

Among the Churches

Current Notes

MADISON, WIS.—Second Church of Christ, Scientist, is planning the erection of a new home, which will be the first Christian Science church to be built in Madison. A deal for the old Hiram Johnson property on Langdon Street, near Frances, has been closed, according to real estate dealers. The church is now holding meetings in the Knights of Pythias Hall.—The Capital Times.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.—First Church of Christ, Scientist, has purchased a house and lot at West Trade and Cedar Streets for twelve thousand dollars; the brick building occupying the lot will be converted into a temporary church for the use of Christian Scientists in this city. The Christian Scientists have been conducting services for the last five years in Baird's Hall, at Poplar and Seventh Streets. They moved into this hall from a smaller one in the first block of West Fifth Street. The new and larger quarters will be occupied as soon as remodeling is completed. The members of the church plan to build an edifice on the new lot at some future date.—Charlotte News.

WORCESTER, MASS.—It is with deep gratitude that the literature distribution committee of First Church of Christ, Scientist, makes this report. For the past eight years it has had a reading tent at the New England fair held during the first week of September. This year 3249 pieces of literature were given away, nearly three times as much as in any former year.

The Lectures

Bellingham, Wash. (First Church).—Dr. Walton Hubbard, lecturer; introduced by F. D. Yale, who said in part:—

There comes a time in the life of every one when a desire arises to know the truth about religious matters,—about God and man's relation to Him. The greatest teacher on this subject whom the world has ever known was Christ Jesus. Several hundred churches have been founded upon widely differing interpretations of his teachings, and on account of a lack of understanding, nearly all of them have ignored a very important part there relating to healing the sick. In 1866 Mrs. Eddy, peering beyond material forms and merely human opinions, discovered the truth which Jesus sought to convey, by interpreting his teachings spiritually, and proved the truth of her discovery by actually healing the sick, as Jesus did. She gave her discovery to the world under the name of Christian Science, resulting in countless benefits and blessings to humanity.—The Journal.

Canton, Ohio (First Church).—Judge Samuel W. Greene, lecturer; introduced by Frank Engle, who said in part:—

Undoubtedly there is no word in the English language that has been more frequently used in the past few years than the word peace. During the recent conflict the world has been crying for peace, and has never before realized more clearly the need of a righteous peace, one that has no partnership with greed, hatred, injustice, or any other form of evil. The world is somewhat ready to consider the prophecy found in Isaiah: "They shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." On page 188 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," the Christian Science textbook, our revered Leader, Mary Baker Eddy, writes, "Passion, depraved appetites, dishonesty, envy, hatred, revenge ripen into action, only to pass from shame and woe to their final punishment." Christian Science reveals to us the remedy for every manifestation of sin that would rob us of the peace "which passeth all understanding."

Butte, Mont. (First Church).—John C. Lathrop, lecturer; introduced by F. C. Jaccard, who said in part:—

Christian Science is a new-old religion based on the teachings of Christ Jesus as explained and interpreted by Mrs. Eddy. It is indeed a return to primitive Christianity. It is a religion of life, not of death; of truth, not of error; of love, not of hate. It teaches the truth about God and man's relation to God, and this truth properly understood will enable one to heal the sick and to destroy sin. It is an important fact in Christian Science that this truth must be practiced, must be lived, before one can advance very far in the understanding and partake fully of its benefits.

Seattle, Wash. (Fourth Church).—Paul Stark Seeley, lecturer; introduced by William K. Sheldon, who said in part:—

Last Friday [September 12], recognizing that now as heretofore nations rely upon material preparedness for the protection of their governments, our hearts thrilled with patriotic pride at the imposing naval spectacle spread before our eyes, because we regard a navy at the present time as a preventive of war and an effective means of maintaining peace. On Saturday night many of us had the privilege of listening to the President of the United States, a man who has been called "a practical idealist," one who not only has visions of right and justice, but who strives to enact those visions into law, and who believes that the time has come when the aroused conscience of mankind, the moral sense of humanity, operating as law, can maintain peace and make war forever impossible. We who are assembled here this evening are to be told of a higher law, higher than material preparedness or moral sense, the law of spiritual supremacy, omnipotent and omnipresent, made available through the right understanding of what God is and what man is; an understanding which when discerned, apprehended, comprehended, and demonstrated, will bring peace on earth, good will to men, a law of righteousness, right-thinkingness, as sung by the psalmist, "Thy righteousness is an everlasting righteousness, and thy law is the truth."

Fairbanks, Alaska (Society).—Charles I. Ohrenstein, lecturer; introduced by Guy B. Erwin, who said in part:—

It is my privilege to introduce one who has journeyed far, even within the shadow of the arctic circle, to bring to us the message of Christian Science, a religion which for over half a century has done so much for mankind in regenerating, inspiring, healing, and saving humanity; breaking down superstition, dogma, and fear; comforting the sorrowing, and reforming and restoring the sinner to a life of usefulness.

As our spiritual education or religion has largely been along material lines, it is hard to accept the truth of this Science without considerable resistance; but every one, I am sure, is willing to admit that if such inharmonies can be overcome through the understanding of spiritual power, it must be good, and not evil, that accomplishes the work. Now if Christian Science will do these things, and thousands of people are testifying to it daily, then the most important thing that can engage the attention of thinking men and women to-day is to gain that understanding.

The Alaska Citizen.

Mountain Lakes, N. J. (Society).—The Rev. Andrew J. Graham, lecturer; introduced by Cuthbert K. Cooper, who said in part:—

We are living in a world of belief. Our beliefs are the products of our training, our education, our environments, our association, and our personal interests. We are controlled by our beliefs, whether they be right or wrong, until Truth comes to our rescue; even then we struggle until Principle forces the issue, and we are compelled at length to throw down the gauntlet and follow the leadings of Truth. The question, "What is truth?" is answered in Christian Science, and the answer is confirmed by demonstration. When demonstration enters the arena of conflicting thought, the tempest is stilled and there is a great calm. Having reached through demonstration the climax of our search, no other conclusion can be reached. I invite your attention to an exposition of Christian Science,—the most marvelous, the most dynamic system of therapeutics the world has ever known. Its therapeutics is not confined to physical disease only, but includes the entire phenomena of mortal existence.

Chicago, Ill. (Eleventh Church).—Dr. John M. Tutt, lecturer; introduced by Jacob Netter, who said in part:—

In the midst of the fear and the subtle clinging to self-love and self-will, which are the cause of the seeming unrest in governments, organizations, and business, and keep many of us from the full realization of the health, harmony, and joy that belong to all of God's children, Christian Science comes as the still, small voice of Truth crying in the wilderness, bidding us to stand still and know that there is no other power or presence than God. As this scientific fact is realized, all the mental conflicts arising from the belief in two powers will cease, as did the storm when Christ Jesus gave the command, "Peace, be still."

CHARLEVOIX, MICH. (First Church).—The Rev. Andrew J. Graham, lecturer; introduced by Dr. F. H. Wilkinson, who said in part:—

Jesus said, "If ye continue in my word, . . . ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Christian Science has brought into the world the truth about God and man and has proved that the so-called material law which seems to make men subject to sickness and sin, sorrow and suffering, is no law at all, but merely a false conception of law. When the truth is made known, this false law is seen to disappear. That this is the truth which makes men free from all these forms of error is being demonstrated by Christian Scientists in every corner of the globe.

The Charlevoix Sentinel.

SALMON, IDAHO (Society).—John C. Lathrop, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Florence McCormick, who said in part:—

In this our period of reconstruction the most crying need of the times is for a universal religion of love, a religion free from ritualistic doctrines and dogmas, a religion which recognizes the omnipotence of God and follows the teachings of Christ Jesus. Such a religion is Christian Science, and we who have experienced its blessings know that it is an ever present help in time of trouble.

NEWPORT, R. I. (First Church).—John Randall Dunn, lecturer; introduced by George B. Austin, who said in part:—

Christian Science during the early years of its growth has been repeatedly before the tribunals of human opinion, being charged with being impractical, unorthodox, and without divine authority; but, as of old, there have been those who have counseled a spirit of charity and toleration toward it, and neither they nor the ones who have accepted its teaching have been disappointed. To-day it stands as the Science of religion, understood and demonstrated in all parts of the world, and has brought to its adherents health and newness of life, which is the rightful and true status of every individual who is willing to conform his life to the laws of divine Principle.

Testimonies of Healing

A year ago this last spring, on a Friday evening, a Christian Science lecture was delivered at our church edifice and I was one of the ushers to report at quarter of seven. An hour before that, while cranking an automobile prior to putting it in the garage, I broke my wrist. At once I declared the truth of being, finished cranking the machine and put it away. Then I had dinner, dressed, and was in my place as usher on time, able to use both hands freely in showing visitors to their seats. The next morning an X-ray photograph was taken to see if there was a break or only a sprain. The plate, which I still retain, shows a break quite plainly. More mental work was done, and through the realization of God's ever presence I resumed operating my car the following Tuesday, and testified to this wonderful healing on Wednesday evening, much to the surprise of those who were present at the lecture.

From that day to this I have had free use of my wrist, proving Mrs. Eddy's statement in "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 175), "But remember God in all thy ways, and thou shalt find the truth that breaks the dream of sense, letting the harmony of Science that declares Him, come in with healing, and peace, and perfect love," for all of which I am indeed grateful.—S. Haines, Cleveland, Ohio.

It is more than five years since I turned to Christian Science for help, after spending over ten years in a search for health. Existence from childhood had been a condition of weakness and pain for the most part. No sooner would one ailment abate in severity than something else discordant and painful would come. Finally a stroke of paralysis seemed to be the beginning of the end. After baths, massage, electric and medical treatments, had proved of no avail, despairingly I bought a copy of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. Within a week paralysis, heart trouble, and a ruptured condition, said to be due to an operation, disappeared. I started reading the chapter on Prayer and did not leave a sentence till the meaning was clear. The years since then have been wonderfully free from physical trouble, but the struggle to "clean house" mentally has been severe.

I am very grateful for Mrs. Eddy's example and our textbook, through which the Bible is illumined; also for the Journal, Sentinel, and Monitor, which is the only daily newspaper in our home. My thankfulness goes out in full measure to God, the giver of every good and perfect gift.

(Mrs.) Grace Martin Degnan, Chenoa, Ill.

Jesus said, "Freely ye have received, freely give." In order to abide by this injunction I realize that a written testimony in regard to what Christian Science has done for me is necessary, and it is with deep gratitude that I send the following.

When Christian Science was first presented to me I recognized it to be just what I needed to overcome the sense of depression, apathy, melancholy, and nervousness under which I was laboring. I recognized instantly that my transformation had to come by the renewing of the mind; therefore I accepted Christian Science and set about to overcome these seeming blights within my life. Whenever and wherever the truth has been intelligently applied benefits have been received.

Our Leader says, "Divine Science is absolute, and permits no half-way position in learning its Principle and rule—establishing it by demonstration" (Science and Health, p. 274). This truth sustained me in going through two trials when loved ones passed on through accidents. I realized that nothing can disturb the harmony of God's universe and that Life is eternal. The uplift that came with this realization was wonderful and meant spiritual growth for me. During the influenza epidemic I was the only Christian Scientist in a household of seven. Every one else had either a slight or a heavy attack, but I was absolutely free from any suggestion of it. I clung to the understanding that "in atmosphere of love divine, we live, and move, and breathe." This experience proved to me that Christian Science is preventive as well as curative, and I am very, very grateful for this proof.

I am happy to be a member of The Mother Church and am striving to live according to the Manual. I am grateful for the experience of class instruction, grateful for our Leader and for all the activities of this movement which she founded for us.—(Mrs.) Edith Bradford Balke-Haines, Portland, Conn.

With a deep sense of love and gratitude for this wonderful truth as given to the world by our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, and in hope of encouraging others in their study and application of Christian Science, I send my testimony. It was through the letters of one who loves this religion that the truth was brought to my attention about fourteen years ago. She knew my need and sent me the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, and through reading the book I was healed of catarrh and bronchitis, also hemorrhages. It would take many pages to tell all the healings I have had, of both sin and sickness. I had an abscess on my gum for many years. Five years after I began the study of Christian Science, fear began to creep into my thought; so my husband said I should ask for help. I therefore went to a Christian Science practitioner, and was healed. From that time on, my love for God and all mankind has grown broader, and my gratitude deeper for the authorized literature.

(Mrs.) Jessie C. Salman, Seattle, Wash.

I can verify my wife's healing, as before Christian Science came into our home I did not know what health and harmony meant. I myself have had many healings in Christian Science in the last fourteen years.

✧ Charles A. Salman.

A little over four years ago, a neighbor in Chicago handed me a copy of the Sentinel to read. I knew very little of Christian Science at that time, but read the articles and thought them very beautiful and inspiring, so asked for more literature. A short time after this I was taken with a seemingly severe case of tonsillitis and became quite ill. Members of my family insisted upon calling a physician, but I desired Christian Science treatment above all else. Having read the splendid testimonies of healing in the periodicals, I knew that I too could be healed, and so a practitioner was called. In two treatments I was entirely healed, and was about my household duties the second day just as strong and well as before. After this I wanted to learn more of this truth, so purchased "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. The study of this book in connection with the Bible has gained for me a better understanding of Truth, for which I am very grateful.

My husband was healed in a few treatments of a growth on his neck, which had, previous to his coming into Science, caused him considerable trouble. Our little girl has been healed of whooping cough and bronchitis. While very grateful for the physical healings, I am more grateful for the spiritual uplift, and my earnest desire is to learn more of this saving truth. The study and application of Christian Science truly brings the peace of mind that passes all understanding. My heart overflows with gratitude for this beautiful religion of Love, and my daily prayer is that I may reflect more love.

(Mrs.) O. C. REICHERT, Los Angeles, Calif.

In 1902 I attended my first Christian Science service, and seeing so many happy faces and being so warmly welcomed led me to further investigation. From boyhood I had been troubled with bad hearing. At the age of sixteen years an operation was performed by one of the best specialists of this city, with temporary relief, but gradually the ears closed up again. After being interested in Christian Science about a year, I began taking treatments for this trouble and in about six months was able to hear as well as anyone. My hearing has been good ever since. I have also been healed of smallpox, spinal trouble, rheumatism, and many minor ailments. All desire for smoking has left me, whereas I used to be a heavy smoker. I enjoy the Sunday services and the Wednesday evening testimony meetings. My daily desire and prayer is to become a better man, and to reflect love to every one I come in contact with. I can only express my thanks to Christian Science by living closer to its teachings, as taught by Mrs. Eddy.

WILLIAM F. JENS, Milwaukee, Wis.

Remembering how eagerly at one time I searched our periodicals for testimonies of protection and healing in confinement cases, I am sending an account of my own experience in the hope that it will help some one. During the months previous to the birth of my little girl, I spent nearly every waking hour in the effort to understand and apply to each daily task the rules of Christian Science as set forth in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. I cannot say, as some people have testified, that the birth was painless, which is probably accounted for by the fact that I unconsciously retained the recollection of two previous experiences under medical treatment; but I can truthfully say that all the so-called laws of mortal mind concerning rest, quiet, and diet thereafter were trampled underfoot, with no ill effects. A short time after the nurse left, the baby manifested some trouble with her eyes, generally supposed to be due to infection. The practitioner gave treatment for this condition, which seemed to be quite serious, and the healing took place about ten days later.

At another time I was instantaneously brought out of a condition which in many cases is fatal under materia medica treatment. I am firmly convinced that for a few moments I was actually passing through the stage of mortal experience called dying; but the practitioner's understanding of Truth cleared away this false sense, and my condition became normal.

We have depended on Christian Science to supply our every need for the past eight years and have had many other wonderful healings in our family of six. Abscesses, measles, chicken-pox, colds, fevers, earache, toothache, cuts, bruises, bowel trouble, biliousness, burns, sprains, poisoning, and pneumonia have been overcome. Through the study of the textbook the Bible has become my much loved daily companion, whereas before using the "Key to the Scriptures" it was not off its shelf for years at a time. The story of Jesus' life is now an everyday help instead of a bit of far-away and well-nigh incredible history. One of the things for which I am thankful is the privilege of having received class teaching from one of Mrs. Eddy's loyal students. We also rejoice that we can know that God supplies our every need every moment, as we trust Him; that we are learning to look away from the material sense of things into the spiritual and eternal, wherein "all is infinite Mind and its infinite manifestation" (Science and Health, p. 468). Is it to be wondered at that having received such manifold blessings through Christian Science as given to the world in a demonstrable form by our beloved Leader, I should wish to express my gratitude by telling others of the good that is in store for every one who faithfully studies and endeavors to apply its rules? So to live that my light may shine before men and I may thereby glorify my Father which is in heaven, is my heartfelt prayer.—(Mrs.) GERTRUDE GOODING MCCLOUD, Reading, Mass.

Christian Science has been everything to me since I first heard of it about eight years ago. Four years before that a great sorrow and loss had come into my life, in the passing on of my father and the selling of my home. During those years I was a very depressed person with no desire to live. Friends told me I should try to be resigned and that I would outlive my sorrows; that the unhappiness and misery in the world was sent by God for some wise purpose; but I felt that the light of my life had gone out forever. It was suggested that it might be good for me to go abroad for a time, so I visited Holland and stayed in different places there for six months, then went to Germany for a few weeks and finally returned to England. After spending a few weeks in London I went back to Holland, and it was during my second visit there that I nearly decided to end my mortal existence.

At this time an English girl who came to see me told me about Christian Science. She said very little, but enough to make me want to know more of the men and women who lived near by and who did not believe God sent illness and sorrow, for all my life I had been taught that He did. I told her I would go with her to the Christian Science service on Sunday, and that day, July 16, 1911, will always be remembered. I was so impressed with the service that after it was over I made four attempts to get enough courage to ask the First Reader if I might buy the book she had been reading from, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. It was not announced that the book was for sale, as there was only a small meeting of Scientists.

Error was saying to me all the time that these people would not let me read the book, as it was much too beautiful for strangers. It was a strange feeling I had, that these people certainly had something other churches did not have and they would surely guard it and keep it from the world. However, to my great surprise and joy the lady said she would be very pleased to sell me a copy, and in less than two days the book came. Five months later I was the Christmas guest of this lady, and she it was who guided my first steps in Christian Science. I was healed of a great deal of depression but not all at once. I have had seeming trials and difficulties since then, but have overcome them, sometimes with the help of a practitioner and at other times by my own mental work. When I left the meeting referred to, I cried so much I had to take a walk before returning to the boarding house, but from that morning I have never experienced such hopeless misery as always seemed part of me before. In due time I left Holland to stay with some Scientists in Neuchâtel and returned to England in 1913 to visit with joy all the Christian Science churches in London. My first demonstration was made in Switzerland a few weeks after buying my first Quarterly, in December, 1911. Since then I have had many demonstrations and it would take pages to write them all.

I am grateful for the privilege of having had class instruction in 1914, and also for membership in a Christian Science church. I am indeed very grateful for this teaching and know I could not live without it. The authorized literature is a great joy to me, and my daily prayer is that I may help others as I was first helped, and when I see strangers coming into our churches looking unhappy, I think of my own experience and want to help them all I can. My love and gratitude go out to Mrs. Eddy for telling us about Christian Science. The last three months Christian Science has been a great help to me, and that is why I now send this testimony to express my gratitude. God has done so much for me, the least I can do is to be very thankful. I hope my experience may help others who are sorrowful.—(Miss) Emily Amelia Jonas, Stamford Hill, London, England.

How blessed are those of us that have touched the hem of Christian Science. Two days after I had been given an X-ray examination by two surgeons, who said I must be taken to a hospital and there undergo three operations, owing to a bad case of hip disease and many other physical ailments, Christian Science was brought to my attention and without any hesitation or mental reservation I accepted it. I began to live in conformity with its teaching, in patient obedience to God's infinite law of Love, and through the help of a practitioner was healed physically and morally. As yet I have caught only a beautiful glimpse of God's allness, but it is the light of my life.

I can truly say that the lame walk and the deaf hear, because this has been proved in my own experience. After I had been in Christian Science about six months my first testing time came. To mortal sense I became deaf but I did my mental work unceasingly, and with treatment from a practitioner the healing came ten weeks later. I attended the church during all this time, and finally one Wednesday evening at the beginning of the meeting my ears were unstopped and I could hear as well as ever. This most beautiful healing gave me much spiritual food for thought. The overcoming of the hip disease and lameness was very slow, but I thereby learned to be calm and steadfast each day in my adherence to God's law. To-day I am in perfect health. I lean on divine Love for all my daily needs, and in so doing have no care, no doubt, no fear.

I am very grateful for membership in our local branch church and in The Mother Church, and at this writing am having class instruction. I am indeed thankful to God, and grateful to our beloved Leader, Mrs. Eddy. My daily prayer is to hear and obey, and live only for God and our fellow man. There is no other way.

My attention was first called to Christian Science when as a trained nurse I cared for a practitioner's mother. We carried the case along all summer but finally the patient collapsed and did not respond to medicine; accordingly, the daughter was called home. Two days after her arrival the night nurse was discharged, as two nurses were no longer required, and three days later the doctor discharged himself, saying his services were no longer needed. At the end of the week the patient was well. A friend who had been operated upon many times for an abnormal growth only to have it recur each time, was healed by one treatment in Christian Science. These healings led me to buy "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, and I found in it just what I had needed all my life. I wanted to give up my profession at once and take up the study of Christian Science, but could not see my way sufficiently clear to do so.

I worked along in medical nursing four years more; but was not happy in the work. At the end of that time my health broke down so completely that the physician told me I would not be able to take up my work again. I therefore gave up my room and went to stay with relatives. Strange to say, I did not at this time think of Christian Science and the book that had been such a help to me. I went along six months, taking medicine that I knew would not relieve me, the pain becoming more excruciating every day. Then I thought of my copy of Science and Health, and began to read. This, however, was not sufficient, so I asked for absent treatment and from the first received so much help that I was encouraged to go on. I was under treatment two years before the healing was complete. I have been healed of many physical ills; but the physical healing is little compared with the spiritual uplift. Instead of sorrow I now reflect joy; instead of sickness, health; instead of poverty, an abundant supply of all good.

I am very thankful to God for our dear Leader, Mrs. Eddy, who gave the world this great truth, grateful to practitioners and nurses, who so lovingly helped me, grateful for the reading rooms and the Christian Science literature and for all the other activities of The Mother Church, through which I have received so much help. My only desire is to make my life an expression of gratitude and appreciation of the good.—(Miss) Hannah M. Wright, Bangor, Maine.

On page 420 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy is found this advice: "If students do not readily heal themselves, they should early call an experienced Christian Scientist to aid them." This was a great help to me at one time. While on my way to the depot to take the train to a neighboring town, where I was teaching painting, I slipped on a wet sidewalk, spraining my ankle. It did not hurt much, so I went to my class as usual, but during the afternoon it swelled and gave me considerable pain. By the time the class closed I could not step on that foot. I had no opportunity to help myself much until I reached home again about eight o'clock in the evening. Then I took Science and Health and read a while and treated myself to the best of my understanding. In the morning the foot was black and blue, but there was no pain, and I could walk with ease, providing I did not spring onto my toes; I had to walk rather flat-footed.

For two months I tried to overcome this condition but made no headway. I felt rather ashamed to ask for help, having done so well at first, and then grew a determination to make the healing complete, which I now know was self-will. Then one day while reading Science and Health I came across the reference quoted. I immediately wrote to a friend in a distant city who was a practitioner, asking for treatment, and within three days the healing was complete. I was grateful for the physical freedom, but much more so for the mental healing which took place.

Christian Science has worked wonders in our home, and I do not see how people manage a house, a home, or a business without it. Many unpleasant traits have been overcome,—a tendency to criticize, covetousness, self-will, and pride. I did not think I was entertaining any of these alien thoughts until the searchlight of Truth was turned on self. I am thankful to God for the experiences which have made these self-examinations necessary, and more than grateful to Mrs. Eddy for showing us the way to apply the truth to our everyday life. It is the correction of seemingly little faults that fits us to overcome those that take on larger proportions. I am grateful indeed for the Christian Science literature, and more so than I can tell for the illumination Christian Science brings to the Scriptures.

The testimonies in our periodicals have been such a help to me that I am grateful for the privilege of giving mine. I took up the study of Christian Science almost four years ago with one desire,—to see if I could find a God in whom I could believe. Before reading very far I found God, and it was indeed the new birth to me. It brought me more joy and happiness than I ever experienced before, and also a love for all mankind. By that first reading my little boy, a year old, was healed of bowel trouble, which he had had from the day he was born. I have continued my study daily and since that time the truth has been our only physician. A baby was born a year and four months after I turned to Christian Science. The birth was painless and was a beautiful proof to me that God is All-in-all. I had a practitioner and a Christian Science nurse. Our two children have been helped many times. Colds, croup, burns, fevers, and a bad cut have been healed instantaneously. I have been freed to a great extent from fear, worry, anxiety, selfishness, resentment, sorrow, and discouragement. Other members of our family have taken up the study. We have been living in small towns the last year where there are no churches, but we rejoice that we cannot be separated from the true church, which Mrs. Eddy explains in Science and Health (p. 583) as "the structure of Truth and Love."

I am grateful to Mrs. Eddy for living such a pure life that this truth was revealed to her to give to the world. I am also grateful for the Lesson-Sermons and all the authorized literature.

About five years ago while visiting a relative who is a Christian Scientist, I was lovingly asked if I would have treatment for my eyes, which were causing me trouble. After thinking it over I decided that although I felt sure it could not help me, it would at least not harm, so I consented to remove my glasses, which had been worn constantly for fourteen years. I had been assured by doctors that I would have to wear them all my life, but have never had to use them again. My eyes gradually became stronger until they were normal and I have never had a return of the severe headaches from which I formerly suffered. Since then I have had many physical healings. Rose fever, from which I had suffered each spring for a number of years, disappeared the first summer I was in Science, and severe burns and bad colds have been overcome. I have experienced the protecting care of God during a fire, and when struck by an automobile with such force that I slid on my face six or eight yards, I had such a sense of God's presence that no pain was experienced and there was only a slight stiffness for a couple of hours.

Two years ago, on a return trip from a tropical country, I was waked up in the night with great pain in my foot and leg. After declaring the truth for some time the pain ceased, and I did not think of it again until two days later when it returned, and I was not able to get rid of it, except at intervals, for the next few weeks. Upon examining my foot I found a small black spot and immediately realized that an insect of which I had heard while in the tropics had got into the foot; also that I had been filled with fear of this during my whole visit. One evening, after experiencing much pain I asked for help from a practitioner and the next day a round, hard substance the size of a pea, with the black spot embedded in it, dropped out of my foot. I told one who had lived in this place about my experience and was informed that usually the insect had to be cut out.

While very grateful for these physical healings, I cannot find words with which to express my thankfulness to God, and my gratitude to our beloved Leader, Mrs. Eddy, for the spiritual uplift which has come to me through this study.

(Miss) MARION N. BANDMAN, New York, N. Y.

The truth as taught in Christian Science first dawned on my consciousness some six years ago, at a time when it was most needed. I had been attending an orthodox Sunday school but had become dissatisfied there, as I had not gained a religion that satisfied my longing for the true God. Immediately after taking up the study of Christian Science I realized that I had at last found God, and this realization brought with it many healings. I was freed from sick headaches and acute stomach trouble, both of which had caused me much suffering. I soon entered the Christian Science Sunday school and began to put into practice the healing truth taught there. I can never express my gratitude for what this teaching has meant and now means to me as a college student. I have proved in my studies that "God is Mind, and God is infinite; hence all is Mind" (Science and Health, p. 492). My membership in the Christian Science Society here has meant everything to me. I have had the privilege of serving on the distribution committee and have noted, with rejoicing, the changing attitude of the campus toward Christian Science.

I am sincerely grateful for all that Christian Science has done for me and mine,—grateful to God, the tender Father-Mother of all, and to Christ Jesus, the Way-shower, also grateful to Mrs. Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science. My daily prayer is that I may become worthy to be called a Christian Scientist by living a life of consecration and love for all mankind.

LEWIS BURT LESLEY, Stanford University, Calif.

I wish to express my gratitude through the Sentinel for the many blessings that have been bestowed on me and mine. While visiting my parents some years ago I became interested in Christian Science. "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy was brought into the home by a friend, and it brought peace, comfort, and harmony. I read the book for hours and found it to be what I had been searching for from childhood. I have been healed of burns, headache, toothache, also of a severely sprained ankle. I slipped on the porch steps and with difficulty limped into the house. The thought that was uppermost in my mind was the "scientific statement of being," which is found on page 468 of Science and Health. In half an hour I could walk without inconvenience and the next morning there was no pain or swelling. With the loving help of a practitioner I was healed of influenza with all the symptoms of pneumonia in less than twenty-four hours. My husband has been freed from severe ear trouble, and tonsillitis was overcome in one treatment.

I am indeed grateful for the physical and mental healing, but especially for the spiritual uplift that came when one very dear to me passed on. God was a very present help and comforter. My prayer each day is that I may know more of the truth.—(Mrs.) GERTRUDE COMSTOCK, El Paso, Texas.

Signs of the Times

[From a declaration by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America]

Fortunately the church itself has undergone, within the last decade and especially during the war, an enlargement of scope which amounts to a transformation. The churches to-day recognize, as they did not a generation ago, that the kingdom of God is as comprehensive as human life with all of its interests and needs, and that they share in a common responsibility for a Christian world order. They are convinced that . . . the ethical principles of the gospels are to be applied to industry and to the relations of nations; that the church is to devote itself henceforth to these purposes, along with the individual ministries of religion.

[San Francisco (Calif.) Bulletin]

Many parents are emphatic on the point that their children go to school to be educated and not to be medically inspected, and resent the idea that their young should begin life with the thought that health is impossible apart from the aid of a physician and a near-by drugstore.

[Rev. Clarence A. Barbour in Rochester (N. Y.) Democrat and Chronicle]

Religion finds that the words of Jesus are words of truth, as tested by any analysis we can give them. We conclude that they have always been true; that they are not true because Jesus said them, but that Jesus said them because they were true.

[Champaign (Ill.) Gazette]

That was splendid advice given by Secretary of State Robert Lansing, in an address before the new era conference of the Presbyterian Church, at Lake Geneva, Wisconsin. Mr. Lansing took the position that what was the matter with the world was materialism. It may be asked: What is meant by materialism?

Materialism, according to the best thought in modern philosophy, is a belief, with action following the belief, that life and power are in matter. The position is taken that the material alone is tangible and real and is the only thing with which to reckon, except in the poetic dreams of the incompetent and impractical. The position of religion has always been diametrically opposed to this idea, though institutional religion has frequently compromised with it. That is, religion emphasizes the truth that life and power are spiritual, and that the spiritual alone is real and permanent. The position is taken that matter is temporal, ephemeral, and tributary, and therefore undependable and misleading.

Now comes Secretary Lansing, a man of culture, familiar not only with philosophic but also with religious thought, and insists that the need of the world is spiritualization. That is, to have a faith and understanding that the spiritual, or idealistic, is alone dependable, permanent, and worth while. And he insists that the church shall assume the obligation of teaching this attitude toward life to the people. Glad as many people will be to hear Mr. Lansing's insistence that it is the business of the church to apply truth, or spiritual methods, to the solution of the human problem, there are many to whom it will be no new thing.

To one but slightly familiar with the Bible and church history it will be remembered that this was the heart of the message of Moses, David, Isaiah, Jesus, Paul, Savonarola, Luther, Wesley, and every other prophetic mind that ever gave thought to meeting the needs of troubled humanity. As for those who sneer at it, either from unfaith or an intellectual priggishness, this may be said: Conduct based on the thought of material philosophy has made a sad mess of the world. What is left is here because men had a modicum of faith in something else than things. It would also be interesting, to say the least, to see the whole church take Mr. Lansing at his word.

Letters of Appreciation

Many letters of appreciation of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR and other Christian Science activities are constantly being received. These letters express what these activities mean to different individuals in various occupations and pursuits. The favorable comment that has been received on those already published indicates that they are welcome and helpful; therefore others will be published under the above heading. One such letter follows:

HAVING been an eager reader of history, politics, travel, biography, standard novels,—in fact every subject I knew about and thought worth while in both prose and poetry,—THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR has been a continual surprise and delight in satisfying my hunger in each of those directions and in cleansing any desire for other things. To have two hours to spend in reading one copy is an uplifting treat and also a treatment. From the first to the last pages, its news purifies and strengthens, encourages and instructs, whether talking about politics, books, art, or business. Not having been able to finish my college course it is proving to be my daily instructor; not having time for much so-called entertainment it is my entertainer in music, theater, art, and books as well as other "news of the day." Whether traveling or stopping long in one place—but it so happens we are always away from our old home and friends—it is my friend and companion. Always finishing the reading of each copy with the article especially on Christian Science on the Home Forum page, I feel ever nearer realizing true intelligence and joy, spiritual consciousness and an ever increasing desire to live as our Leader, Mary Baker Eddy, has shown us how to live and to express more gratitude for the gifts which Principle, Love, has given to us through her and which her followers are faithfully carrying on after this reading. The editorials have healed me many times. We are so glad that we can send this gift to others in various parts of this country and in Canada, and that it is the gift they choose always.

VOLUME XXII NOVEMBER 22, 1919 NUMBER 12

Thanksgiving Proclamation

THE season of the year has again arrived when the people of the United States are accustomed to unite in giving thanks to Almighty God for the blessings which He has conferred upon our country during the twelve months that have passed. A year ago our people poured out their hearts in praise and thanksgiving that through the divine aid the right was victorious and peace had come to the nations which had so courageously struggled in defense of human liberty and justice. Now that the stern task is ended and the fruit of achievement is ours we look forward with confidence to the dawn of an era where the sacrifices of the nations will find recompense in a world at peace.

But to attain the consummation of the great work to which the American people devoted their manhood and the vast resources of their country, they should, as they give thanks to God, reconsecrate themselves to those principles of right which triumphed through His merciful goodness. Our gratitude can find no more perfect expression than to bulwark with loyalty and patriotism those principles for which the free peoples of the earth fought and died.

During the past year we have had much to make us grateful. In spite of the confusion in our economic life resulting from the war, we have prospered. Our harvests have been plentiful and of our abundance we have been able to render succor to less favored nations. Our democracy remains unshaken in a world torn with political and social unrest. Our traditional ideals are still our guides in the path of progress and civilization.

These great blessings, vouchsafed to us, for which we devoutly give thanks, should arouse us to a fuller sense of our duty to ourselves and to mankind to see to it that nothing we may do shall mar the completeness of the victory which we helped to win. No selfish purpose animated us in becoming participants in the world war, and with a like spirit of unselfishness we should strive to aid by our example and by our cooperation in realizing the enduring welfare of all peoples and in bringing into being a world ruled by friendship and good will.

Wherefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America, hereby designate Thursday, the twenty-seventh day of November next, for observance as a day of thanksgiving and prayer by my fellow countrymen, inviting them to cease on that day from their ordinary tasks and to unite in their homes and in their several places of worship in ascribing praise and thanksgiving to God, the author of all blessings and the Master of our destinies.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done in the District of Columbia, this fifth day of November, in the year of Our Lord one thousand nine hundred and nineteen, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and forty-fourth.

(Seal) WOODROW WILSON.

Robert Lansing, Secretary of State.

Spiritual Activity

EDWARD EVERETT NORWOOD

JESUS spoke as one having authority because he was one with Principle or the source of authority, the ever divine, infinite God, good. He never accepted mortal mind's valuation of a single incident or situation. "The scientific man and his Maker are here; and you would be none other than this man, if you would subordinate the fleshly perceptions to the spiritual sense and source of being," says Mrs. Eddy in "Unity of Good" (p. 46). Thus did our Master, and in doing so he proved man to be the intelligent reflection of divine Mind, possessing and exercising dominion over all.

As we understand that God is supreme, eternal good, we are thrilled by the transcendental importance of what this means; and as we put this knowledge into practical activity, our joy and gratitude become unbounded. When we really understand Christian Science we can demonstrate it, and in the same proportion are we grateful for its blessings, because we know the basis thereof. The joy that comes when we are enabled to help others is unspeakable; it must be experienced to be comprehended. And a blessed thing about it is, we learn to be honest with ourselves as well as with our patients. We are showing the latter how foolish it is to imagine they can stand at parade rest and be healed, as one orders a pair of shoes made. There is a work to be done by each and every one, by both patient and practitioner, in order that harmony may be established. We are learning and imparting the great truth that salvation is from sin, not from mere penalty of sin, and that we are just as good to-day as we really want to be. This stirs thought to honesty of purpose, with desire and energy to fulfill it; and health and wholeness are gained. How firm a foundation have the saints of the Lord! All that is based on anything less is mere theory and speculation, and a journey into that realm is unprofitable, without even one's traveling expenses paid. "Great peace have they which love thy [God's] law: and nothing shall offend them," says the psalmist.

We see the great need of the world for right mental activity; that thinkers and thinking—reflecting the Mind of Christ—can alone save it. A Christian Science treatment is knowing what is true about any situation that can arise, and the truth of it always has dominion over the material belief about it. We never settle any subject until we refer it to Mind, and consider it from a correct basis. Now good is one, primitive. We understand it, reflect, express it. On the other hand, evil is vague, negative, illusive. The carnal mind is not subject to the law of God, because there is nothing in evil to respond to law. Good does not regulate evil, but destroys it, even as light dispels darkness. Then what is analyzed? It is a situation,—a suppositional mixture of good and evil; and as Truth is applied to the problem, the evil comes to the surface and passes off; the good remains, and the problem is solved. A great necessity is to get the problem correctly stated—to reduce it to its common denominator. Error would have us add pennies and pints and inches, and it cannot be done; hence there is no answer. The Master's simple rule—all that is secret shall be uncovered, all that is hidden be brought to light—is followed, and the answer is clearly seen, because the one Mind has revealed it.

The tendency to personalize both good and evil, to limit one and resent the other, is a common trait in human thinking, and only the grace of God and a clear, definite understanding of the Science of being enable one to escape it. Mortal mind is an idolater, having other gods of every name and nature, because it misses the truth always, and is a sense of limitation and fear. One trick of error is to induce Christian Scientists to dwell upon and brood over higher attenuations of evil, subtle phases of sin, in the name of "handling them." Whenever error rises in any guise, we need to dismiss it summarily as illusion, having no history, no intelligence, no activity, because there is no such thing. To admit that it has any quality that belongs only to reality is supremely foolish and fatal to spiritual growth. Jesus wasted no time on it, and he was at once the wisest and most practical man on earth.

We are grateful there is a way out of error, that we have found it and are walking in it. It is a great thing to know that as we unfold spiritually, we are becoming more consciously real all the time. Then will be experienced a steady, intelligent growth in grace and goodness; the understanding of our divine sonship and all that it includes will be clearly perceived. As we are saved, our universe is saved with us, for it is included in the one universal reflection. What a joy to know this! All that exists, all true substance, reality, expression, and volition, always did exist right here.

Man has unlimited capacity to unfold, to reflect good, and to express conscious and intelligent activity. To give a Christian Science treatment one must think rightly about a specific subject. Such treatment is the individualization of the eternal power and love of divine Mind. It helps and blesses because the errors of sense are dethroned, and each participant who is willing and ready to loosen his hold on evil is benefited by this spiritual activity, or the truth which is active in the treatment. God, infinite Mind, operating through spiritual law, heals the sick. Can Mind be limited? No; for it is infinite, supreme, and eternal. It is divine Principle, the origin, source, substance, from which there is no appeal, in which all things are perfect, harmonious, all-inclusive, and eternal. It is the real man's privilege to know instinctively that which is true. His intuition and discernment are perfect, and human sense cannot blind him to the complete utilization of any faculty.

We must be conscious at all times, however, of our identity in Mind, of our unity with the source of our being, and maintain it, notwithstanding sense testimony. One who is not active in knowing and declaring the truth may become darkened and confused, hence not a clear reflection for healing the sick. On page 4 of "Pulpit and Press" our wise Leader says, "You have simply to preserve a scientific, positive sense of unity with your divine source, and daily demonstrate this." Love is the only thing that liberates, for it is constructive and healing.

We must remember we are standing as sons of God, as reflections of divine Mind, not beliefs of mortal mind, and "from everlasting, from the beginning, or ever the earth was," man is upright and holy. So let us be God's children, forever about the Father's business, as regular as the precession of the equinoxes in our daily mental work, the blest spiritual activity, and unfolding every hour to a clearer and fuller understanding of good.

Alertness

LILLIAN P. EDWARDS

A CAREFUL study of the life of Christ Jesus shows him to have been ever alert to the still, small voice of Truth. This same alertness to the spiritual vision is necessary for the Christian Scientist's progress. "Watchfulness" and "vigilance" are synonyms for alertness; so then, the Christian Scientist needs to watch his thought to see that when any problem presents itself the material is quickly subordinated to the spiritual, that he is giving power only to that which proceeds from God. In the early experiences of the writer, in working out the demonstration of supply, she found that when obedient to the demands of Truth and first seeking the spiritual idea rather than planning material ways and means, abundance was always realized. When error would argue that the plainness of material ways would bring quicker results, thought was awakened to the fact that since all substance is spiritual it must be gained only through spiritual ideas. By holding to this thought, limitation was eliminated and harmony experienced.

A soldier would not expect to have his rebuke modified because of his excuse that he did not hear the bugle call. It is his business to be listening for commands constantly and to be ever ready to obey. "The Christian Scientist has enlisted to lessen evil, disease, and death," says Mrs. Eddy on page 450 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," and in order to be a good soldier he, too, must ever be alert to hear the voice of Truth, not having ears for error and its various claims. We are never without a thought of some kind, and the question for each one is: What am I thinking? Is thought dwelling on the spiritual, the real and the eternal, or is it wandering off into the bypaths of sense testimony? When human thought is dwelling in the realization of the power and presence of God, it is alert to the ideas of God and is able to rise instantly to the demands of the moment. "A Christian Scientist never mentally or audibly takes the side of sin, disease, or death. . . . He lays his whole weight of thought, tongue, and pen in the divine scale of being—for health and holiness" (Miscellany, p. 146). What a bugle call to alertness! This demand of Principle must be obeyed if we would reach the height of spiritual vision.

The practitioner should ever be alert and on guard against idle words, self-condemnation, pride, material pleasures, self-justification, self-will, and all worldliness; for these would rob him of the glorious realization of the truth by which he is able to heal the sick. The Christian Science nurse feels especial need of alertness in being ever on guard against mental interference, fear, and lethargy. Watching ever, he never voices anything but the truth, whatever the material evidences may seem to be. Surrounded by such alertness, the patient experiences strength, health, and perfect freedom, and he walks forth a new man.

There is a call for alertness, too, coming to the church member through the Manual of The Mother Church, and his duty is plainly specified in Article VIII, Sections 1, 4, and 6. These, adhered to honestly and faithfully, will bring a wonderfully sweet sense of brotherhood and make the church member truly active in the service of God. The business man can obey the demand for alertness by guarding his thought from anxiety, personal influence, competition, all of the so-called cunning of human thinking. As he opens his thought to the spiritual ideas of honesty, sincerity, kindness, justice, and brotherly love, his consciousness will be flooded with light and a rich understanding that will open to him infinite resources for real service to mankind. The housewife, the farmer, the scholar, the office boy,—in short, the student of Christian Science in every walk of life, watching and praying without ceasing,—will find himself living above the clouds of worry and discouragement, finding no time for envy, jealousy, discontent, or idle amusements.

The soldier is faithful, steadfast, and alert to every command of his superior, and equally alert against every subtle advance of the enemy, and progress and victory are his reward. The Christian Scientist must never for an instant desert his post of spiritual observation, watching diligently lest the enemy—fear, selfishness, or hatred—break through the ranks and overthrow, for the time being, his happiness and joy. This constant watching will enable him "to live so as to keep human consciousness in constant relation with the divine, the spiritual, and the eternal," which, Mrs. Eddy says on page 160 of Miscellany, "is to individualize infinite power; and this is Christian Science."

The Heart of Man

REGINALD H. SCHENCK

THROUGHOUT the ages the heart of man has been conceived of as the seat of all emotions, the origin of joy and sorrow, love and hatred, good and evil. The poet Wordsworth sang of "a heart, the fountain of sweet tears; and love and thought and joy," while the Scripture declares, "A good man out of the good treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is good; and an evil man out of the evil treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is evil." All of which Solomon in his wisdom succinctly expressed when he said of one who has "an evil eye," that "as he thinketh in his heart, so is he."

To a student of divine metaphysics, an evil heart can relate only to the sinning race of Adam. Now Adam is the false concept of man, and from this Adam-heart of false belief "proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies," but out of the heart of the real man proceed the things of the Father. Believing the Adam-man to be God's likeness, evil appears to come from the same source as good, and what is called man's heart would seem to measure out, beat by beat, from the cradle to the grave, his very life. To-day we are blessed through the light of Christian Science with the spiritual understanding of Mind as the source and primal cause, as Life, Truth, and Love, and may find the proof by demonstration that, as Mrs. Eddy says in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 207), "there is but one primal cause. Therefore there can be no effect from any other cause, and there can be no reality in aught which does not proceed from this great and only cause."

This great and only cause, divine Mind, is omniscient good; and spiritual man, God's image, exactly reflects all that Mind knows and sees. In his capacity to think, an individual is conscious of perfection in the degree that his thinking is in accordance with Principle or Mind. Thus it is the pure in heart who see good, God, and enjoy His blessings, while a double-minded man, believing evil to be as real as good, experiences his own false imaginings making a reality of the carnal or human mind, and the sin, sickness, and death which constitute materiality and mortality.

The poetry of the heart and the human sense of affection, loyalty, justice, and kindness partake of the divine nature, although more or less alloyed with the materialistic soil of selfishness and sensuality. The seeming hindrance in distinguishing the true from the false is due to self-deception, which would have us believe that what we love and cherish is matter in one form or another, be it called man, animal, possession, or thing, while the truth is that Love in all its expressions is purely spiritual. Love is defined through pure affection, and is misunderstood to the extent that we think materially. We can only know through spiritual unfoldment; and that love alone is real and true which is entirely free from temporal, material belief, and hence is above the certain destruction and annihilation which the Scriptures show is inherent in all things material.

Included in the human concept of the heart as the seat of love and affection is the belief that it is also the source of life in the form of a bodily organ, expressing ceaseless activity and vital function. Thus does mortal mind counterfeit the spiritual fact that Love is Life and the real heartbeat a spiritual effect of the one cause, divine Mind, and so in perfect accord with the creator of all. Nevertheless, disease and death bear constant witness that the human mind is convinced of the mortality of its own beliefs. Mortality or belief of life in body is nothing more than mortal thinking. Deity, divine Mind, alone outlines, but mortal belief claims to be objectified in what we think and feel materially. The heart of man is never diseased, and only as one thinks wrongly in his heart, is wrongly convinced, does it appear to be so; because, while matter cannot think, wrong thinking about matter as cause sows the seed that is liable to appear or be objectified after its kind. "Be not deceived," said Paul; "God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

On page 50 of "Miscellaneous Writings" Mrs. Eddy has written with special reference to the heart of man: "We do believe, and understand—which is more—that there must be a change from human affections, desires, and aims, to the divine standard, 'Be ye therefore perfect;' also, that there must be a change from the belief that the heart is matter and sustains life, to the understanding that God is our Life, that we exist in Mind, live thereby, and have being. This change of heart would deliver man from heart-disease, and advance Christianity a hundredfold."

"In him we live, and move, and have our being" are the well-known words of Scripture, and Mrs. Eddy brings out clearly their meaning when she says, as quoted above, "that we exist in Mind, live thereby, and have being." Individuals are spoken of as human beings, but it is apparent that being human is not the "being" to which she refers. "Be ye therefore perfect" is the high command, and the individual endeavoring to obey this command must still the material sense of being. "Be still, and know that I am God" are the words of Scripture. "Being" is to live and know; to be conscious of what is scientifically true. To be pure in heart is to be one with divine Mind, to have one Ego or divine individuality, to be one in substance with the Father, complete and perfect, God manifest, Soul expressed. "I and my Father are one," were the momentous words of Christ Jesus when speaking of his true selfhood, and our Leader plainly taught (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 183) that "asserting a selfhood apart from God, is a denial of man's spiritual sonship."

Bringing forth the true idea of immortality for the practical use of all mankind is the great work of Christian Science. Being of one Mind, the pure in heart, through a clear perception of the truth, reflect the light that reveals an open door to immortality. The infinite idea correctly applied sets free the thought imprisoned in false material belief, destroys all ills and limitations, and by demonstrating life as eternal shuts the door on death. Christian Science is applied Science. It is the spiritual education which is replacing the false belief with the true idea about God, man, and the universe, and revealing the kingdom of heaven as present here and now. Treading the path the Master trod with unselfed love, the heart of God's man goes out to every creature, preaching the gospel which heals both the sick and the sinning. This healing heart of Love is "the fountain of life," and from its inexhaustible source and unfathomed depth of justice, kindness, and goodness, flow the waters that purify and satisfy, the living waters whereof we may drink to the full and thirst no more. In the words of one of our hymns (Hymnal, p. 236):—

For the love of God is broader Than is seen by human mind,
And the heart of the Eternal
Is most wonderfully kind.

"He departed from him for a season"

ADELAIDE SINGLETON

THE reservation "for a season" is of metaphysical importance to the student in Christian Science. When first entering the study of this Science, the pouring forth of the truth to the unenlightened mind often brings the light so suddenly and clearly that instantaneous healing has resulted, and the student in this new stage of uplifted consciousness expects the same results all along the line of his endeavors. Then sometimes comes the surprise and seeming disappointment if other errors do not yield with the same rapidity; he has now to learn to prove his demonstration through spiritual understanding. In this testing time doubts and uncertainties may assail him and he may even question whether his first healing was demonstration or accident. It is only the lack of spiritual understanding which makes possible the misgivings and the questionings as to why such results as his first healing are not always repeated.

Mrs. Eddy says in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 28), "The trials encountered by prophet, disciple, and apostle, 'of whom the world was not worthy,' await, in some form, every pioneer of truth." Paul writes that Jesus "was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." "Yet without sin"—if the sinless Jesus was tempted, and often tempted, can we, the "lesser apostles of Truth" (Science and Health, p. 40), expect to escape his experiences? How many times he was tempted we know not, but if the devil left him "for a season" we know that evil suggestions must have appeared again in other forms of temptation—perhaps through the crowd which was always present in his healing ministry. We can easily picture this crowd, many among the number always on the alert to put a stumblingblock in the way of Truth, saying, for instance: "Here comes a blind man, a man blind from his birth. Surely he will not be made to see." Jesus, who so clearly "saw" every thought around him, must have seen this one; and may this not have been a form of temptation which he again gloriously overcame? And so through all his work we know the temptations must have still returned until the hour came when he could say, "The prince of this world cometh, and hath nothing in me."

Thus if we accept Jesus as the Way-shower, it must be without reservation and in every experience in life, and so we have to "glory in tribulations" by turning them into opportunities to follow the Way-shower, grateful that we, too, may be classed as followers of Truth. We have only to be honest and sincere in our desire to follow, and we shall be helped by the angels of His care, directing and encouraging us as we remember Jesus' words, "Be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." Can there be greater encouragement than that so beautifully expressed by Mrs. Eddy in "The First Church of Christ, Scientist, and Miscellany" on page 149, "Remember, thou canst be brought into no condition, be it ever so severe, where Love has not been before thee and where its tender lesson is not awaiting thee"? When our trials seem severe, we have to learn how to lean at all times and in all conditions upon divine Principle. The human mind with its finite sense of reasoning, constantly suggests, "So far and no farther;" that some problems are too great, some too unimportant to gain the help of Principle. It is the human concept of God which would limit the power of God in big things and deny its availability in lesser things. This is a common form of temptation and has to be recognized and destroyed by knowledge of divine omnipresence.

The omnipresent Mind is at hand at all times. He is not like some human potentate, so busy with great issues that he needs secretaries, deputies, and the like to deal with small claims; but He is accessible here and now to help and heal. When we learn to lean whole-heartedly upon Principle, and begin with meekness and humility to apply our own understanding of Principle, we gradually gain the exalted state of thought where we glimpse the vision of the Christ, and attaining some perception of the spiritual idea, we are led up to our at-one-ment with divine Principle, Love.

Proving God

MARY DYER LEMON

IT was in a high school room during her first year of teaching in a small town that the writer began to put into practice the truth she was learning in Christian Science. The physical trouble for which she had turned to Science for help had no doubt been aggravated by the great sense of responsibility and fear of failure which she was entertaining. This condition of thought was uncovered, and she began to see how her trouble was wholly a result of wrong thinking.

In spite of the new light that Christian Science was throwing upon everything, however, she could not help feeling, being fresh from college, that the many theories learned there—conflicting though they were—should be of some service to her, and she determined to try them out. Full of the mesmerism of false education, to her Christian Science seemed too simple. Surely it could not cover the vast amount of ground that psychology and pedagogy included in all their phases. She told the practitioner about her problems of discipline and teaching. He explained that God was the Teacher and His perfect child the pupil. But mortal mind argued, "What could a man like this, who before taking up the study of Christian Science had had no intellectual advantages, know about the difficulties of a schoolroom?" Then followed weeks of experimenting—only to end in failure and disappointment. There was an almost continual state of confusion and mutiny throughout the room. She had interviewed other teachers, and had applied their methods, one after another, but without avail. The spirit of the room became worse instead of better.

All this she told the kind practitioner with tears of discouragement rolling down her face. "Have you ever tried loving?" he asked, after patiently listening to her story. She admitted that she had not. "But how could one love unlovely girls and boys?" she thought as she looked over the schoolroom the next day. Many of them were from factory homes, with no manners or even cleanliness in some cases. To her unloving nature it did not seem necessary to love such as these. All day long the practitioner's words kept singing themselves in her heart, "Did you ever try loving?" But the same inharmonious conditions continued to reign.

During the last half hour in the afternoon, while trying to teach a senior class in English, the spirit of unrest, inattention, and noise became so augmented that in sheer desperation she closed her book and told the class to study a while. Everything else had failed. She would try God. She opened the Bible on her desk and turned to the ninety-first psalm. Whole-heartedly she turned the room over to God, and applied herself to trying to understand that the promises and assurance contained in that passage were for her then and there, if she would only be obedient to the still, small voice of Truth. Time and place were entirely forgotten, so absorbed was she in the new meaning that this much thumbed page had for her that moment. "Surely he shall deliver thee from the snare of the fowler, and from the noisome pestilence," it read; and farther on was the assurance, "For he shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways." Then there was really nothing to fear, nothing to annoy or be annoyed. Closing the book, she was aware that a great sense of peace had come over her, and with great joy she looked up to find the room quiet and deep in study.

It was her first real demonstration—her first proof that the Word of God, understood ever so faintly, does heal, when we have put aside all material methods and turned unreservedly to God. She began to see that all the unrest, indifference, and disorder had been simply correspondent to her own state of mind. Mrs. Eddy says in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 390), "It is our ignorance of God, the divine Principle, which produces apparent discord, and the right understanding of Him restores harmony." Surely the little understanding that she had been willing to receive that afternoon had restored harmony, and given her a proof that was indeed a lamp to her feet from that time forward.

The Evening and the Morning

AGNES CHALMERS

FATHER, I thank Thee for these clearer rays
Of Truth, the evening radiance and morning glow.
I thank Thee for these nights and for these days
Of praising Love. I thank Thee that I know
That Thy creation is revealed. Yea, now
There still is light, although earth's solar beam
Has ceased to shine. This evening, Father, Thou Hast been revealed anew. To-night there gleam
Across a world awakened from sin's war,
The myriad torches of the men who fell,
Writing with steady glow across the far
Horizon: Weep not, friends, since all is well.

Immensity is filled with grateful song
That flesh wars not with Spirit, and that Love
Conceives nor war nor punishment nor wrong.
Immensity is filled with joy, above
All earthly pleasures, that Mind's thankful throng
Of those who served in earth's last warring strife
Have proved that man is free, unfettered, strong.
Thus doth Love's torch record eternal life
And not eternal punishment. Mind's might Gleams through the evening and the morning light
Recording Church and government at one,
While God commands His angel, Justice, Write:
In Church and government, God's will is done.

["Health"—The Christian Science Monitor, Boston, U. S. A., Aug. 20, 1919]

It is probable that if a hundred persons were asked to explain what they believe health to be, ninety-nine at least would agree that it is a state of the body from which disease is absent. Possibly, though it seems doubtful, the hundredth might pause, dimly conscious that floating in the background of his mind there was an impression that somehow health includes a mental as well as a physical condition. However this may be, there is no doubt that how to preserve health, meaning by that, how to keep the body free from disease, forms a large part of the individual's daily cares, and is at the moment occupying a larger and larger share of the considerations of paternal governments.

The discovery made in different countries, through drafting millions of men into armies, that the general percentage of health is very low, has shocked governments into the realization that it is essential to find a remedy; but their aspirations do not appear to be able to rise higher than housing and wages—all very necessary, but to the Christian Scientist mere matters of effect and not fundamental at all. That the whole of this subject is regarded generally from a fatally mistaken point of view is indicated by a phrase occurring in a leading article in a widely known daily paper. The writer was dealing with various arrangements looking toward controlling public health, and stated that "disease is a correlative of health," thus practically binding the whole human race down to the plane of matter, from which they could not hope to escape. To the Christian Scientist, educated as he is by his study of the Bible and "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," a statement of this kind seems little short of blasphemy, for he has learned to associate health with the knowledge of God through Christ Jesus, and to regard disease as a correlative of error, of a negation, having neither Principle nor substance, and certainly no relation to God, whom he regards as the source of health.

On page 120 of Science and Health, Mrs. Eddy says: "Health is not a condition of matter, but of Mind; nor can the material senses bear reliable testimony on the subject of health. The Science of Mind-healing shows it to be impossible for aught but Mind to testify truly or to exhibit the real status of man. Therefore the divine Principle of Science, reversing the testimony of the physical senses, reveals man as harmoniously existent in Truth, which is the only basis of health; and thus Science denies all disease, heals the sick, overthrows false evidence, and refutes materialistic logic." In other passages too numerous to quote or even to refer to, she insists not only that health and disease are opposite states of mind, having no relation to each other, but that the mere absence of disease is not necessarily a healthy state. The only healthy man is the one who, through spiritual desires and activities, has overcome the fears, passions, and evils inherent in the carnal mind, and, as a necessary consequence, finds his holy thoughts expressed in a healthy body; for health originally meant wholeness or holiness.

That this has been partially recognized is evident by phrases occurring here and there in old books; for instance, Wycliffe almost invariably translated the word we now call salvation, as "helthe," and the Edward the Sixth prayer book states in the confession that we are all miserable sinners, and "there is no health in us," obviously attaching the word health to a mental state. The gradual encroachments of materiality, however, separated mind and body to the extent of making health a condition of matter which could only be relieved from disease by the use of drugs, and relegating the state of mind to a discreet background. And now, apparently, nations are to be kept in health by acts of Parliament or of Congress. If such acts could control a nation's thinking and eliminate vice, hate, fear, and so on, from the public thought, there might be some hope of improvement through these methods, but that being impossible, it is more than probable that the fears engendered by the constant discussion and dissection of disease will increase the very evils this legislation desires to avert.

To quote from Science and Health again, on page 411 we read: "The procuring cause and foundation of all sickness is fear, ignorance, or sin. Disease is always induced by a false sense mentally entertained, not destroyed. Disease is an image of thought externalized. The mental state is called a material state. Whatever is cherished in mortal mind as the physical condition is imaged forth on the body." The only obvious deduction from this is that the way to obtain and maintain health is to have the perfect Love which casts out fear, the knowledge or understanding of God which corrects ignorance, and the appreciation of good as the only Principle which removes the desire for sin. It is the mission of Christian Science to give this panacea for all ills to humanity, and that it is accomplishing its mission is evident to anyone who will take the trouble to look into the facts.

The most striking of these facts is the steady increase in the numbers of those who adopt Christian Science as their guide in life. There is nothing in it of an emotional or sensational nature which could account for this attraction. The public services in its churches are of the very simplest kind, without ritual or ornament or the attraction of what is commonly known as good preaching. It tends to induce amongst its followers a certain austerity of life which does not generally appeal to the human mind, and it also demands a correctness of thought and speech which proves a somewhat strict discipline to the general habit of mind. There must therefore be something solid in it which holds those who come under its influence, and this something is unquestionably the demonstrable knowledge of God which it imparts, through which the honest student finds that peace "which passeth all understanding." To quote Whittier's familiar words:—

The healing of the seamless dress
Is by our beds of pain;
We touch Him in life's throng and press,
And we are whole again.

[Willard J. Welch in The Gate City, Keokuk, Iowa]

Christian Science does not teach any use of the so-called human mind,—suggestion, mesmerism, hypnotism, occultism, spiritualism, or any degree or measure of so-called mental influence. Its statement to the human mind is the still, small voice of Truth, which reveals God as Spirit and His child as spiritual, and hence immune from all beliefs of evil.

It is a mistake to say that Christian Science teaches that "realization and affirmation" are effective "up to a certain point in creating or bringing into manifestation desirable conditions." Let us see. An affirmation may be either true or false. A liar intending to deceive may make an affirmation of falsehood. The ignorant may unwittingly affirm error as truth. Is it not evident that the sole potency of an affirmation lies in the truth of the affirmation?

Few persons will deny the truth of the affirmation, "God is good." This is a basic statement of Christian Science. All Christians admit that, as John says, "all things were made by him [God]; and without him was not any thing made that was made." It follows that God and His creation comprise all that exists. God is Spirit. He made man in His own image and likeness. Man therefore is not "spirit" but spiritual; that is, he possesses through reflection the qualities of Spirit, God, his creator and Father. Further, God must be perfect, and it likewise follows that man in His image is also perfect; that is, expresses perfection. Christian Science teaches the sick man the truth about God and about himself as the son of God. This enables him to see and to affirm the truth, which is potent to lift his thought out of his mistaken sense of life into reality,—into the desirable condition of health and right living, conditions not created by his affirmation but recognized by it.

The work of Christian Science is so to correct human thought as to unfold the understanding of the truth; namely, that God is, that He made all, and that all conditions for man and the universe are already perfect and have only to be seen and recognized as such. That what we call human existence is not the reality of being has for ages been perceived by great thinkers. Wordsworth calls it "a sleep and a forgetting." The truth about God and man is awakening many from the dream of suffering, drunkenness, discouragement, poverty, loneliness, self-depreciation, discontent, homelessness, uselessness, and oppression. This is why men turn to Christian Science.

The nothingness of matter as taught in Christian Science is the simple, direct deduction from the basic truth of Christian Science; namely, that God, Spirit, is all, and there is none beside Him. The writings of Mrs. Eddy clear up this much discussed and greatly misunderstood question. It is manifest that the healings of Jesus were entirely through spiritual methods. Those who came to him he healed through the truth. As the psalmist says, "He sent his word, and healed them, and delivered them from their destructions." The only mystery in spiritual healing lies in the darkness of doubt and materiality. Faith and spirituality always have recognized that "with God all things are possible." In all ages some lovers of God have healed the sick through the power of God.

It is true that "spiritual truth cannot be successfully trafficked in, bought and sold;" also that those who "commercialize" their healing powers "tend to lose them." To put it more directly, one who thinks he can "commercialize" or put on a money basis the healing of the sick through spiritual means shows that he has already lost to a large degree that love for God and man which made such healing possible. This does not mean that the words of Jesus, "The labourer is worthy of his hire," are not true, nor that the man or woman who devotes time to the study of the truth and its practice for the healing of the sick should not receive a just reward for this labor of love. Money is our modern medium of exchange and it is compatible with dignity and with decency that those who devote time to the practice of Christian healing should receive suitable and just remuneration.

[A. E. Brandt in Erie (Pa.) Dispatch]

As Christian Science proves itself to be the most efficacious existing means of overcoming sin and its consequent sickness, disease, and so forth, and as it operates entirely through an understanding of the teaching of Christ Jesus, it should by no means be classed as a form of infidelity and denounced, as appears to have been done by a contributor in a recent issue. "By their fruits ye shall know them," Jesus declared.

The teaching of Christian Science by no means denies, but definitely affirms, that Jesus sacrificed every human and mortal sense of life, thus proving "once and for all" that real life is immortal and that man is the immortal child of God. This understanding of the true meaning of Jesus' sacrifice on the cross, as gained in Christian Science, enables his followers to work out their salvation as directed by Paul. Jesus, as the Way-shower, declared and showed the necessity of overcoming all evil in order to inherit the salvation promised. And therefore we read thus in the second chapter of Revelation: "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life," "He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death," "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna," "He that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations;" in the third chapter, "He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment," "Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God," "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne;" and in the twenty-first, "He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son."

The emphasis here so repeatedly laid upon overcoming and within the space of a few chapters, shows its vital necessity in gaining the rewards promised; and the critic's quotation from Paul, "By grace are ye saved through faith," is pertinent in showing how overcoming is accomplished, namely, by the grace of and faith in God. Such meaning is clearly indicated by another passage from the selfsame apostle: "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling. For it is God which worketh in you." Without such aid even Jesus could do nothing.

Encouraging people in the belief that they can go on in a sinful state expecting to be saved by the sacrificial death of Jesus, is not warranted by the Scriptures, nor by the critic's own experience. Jesus' so-called death occurred nearly two thousand years ago, but by the critic's own admission his death did not save the critic from sin, disease, crime, or drunkenness. It was overcoming that did it. "Faith without works is dead," said James, and so-called works which do not overcome are equally so; for that sin, and the suffering it occasions, will continue until overcome, is too plain for argument, and the supposition that a vicarious sacrifice will save without overcoming is one of the worst delusions that dogmatic theology ever visited upon a people. Therefore Mrs. Eddy, having an unbounded love for humanity, without fear or favor, revealed the truth and declared: "Do you ask wisdom to be merciful and not to punish sin? Then 'ye ask amiss.' Without punishment, sin would multiply. . . . Truth bestows no pardon upon error, but wipes it out in the most effectual manner. Jesus suffered for our sins, not to annul the divine sentence for an individual's sin, but because sin brings inevitable suffering." "The so-called sinner is a suicide. Sin kills the sinner and will continue to kill him so long as he sins." (Science and Health, pp. 10, 203.) Hence Jesus' reference to the second death quoted above, signifying that death is by no means an end to the problem.

The critic's attack on another ground, namely, that Christian Science denies that Jesus is the Christ, is equally fruitless. Christian Scientists use the term Christ Jesus as frequently as others in referring to him, and do so with a definite understanding as to its meaning. But the words Jesus and Christ are not necessarily synonymous terms, and Mrs. Eddy in defining them draws a necessary distinction between what is human and temporal and what is divine and eternal—a distinction which the Bible makes from one end to the other, and without which it cannot be understood. As Jesus himself said, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit;" "A spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have."

His fleshly body disappeared forever, as all human and temporal things finally will in the overcoming of the world material. And surely the critic in saying, "But Jesus came down in the gutter, put his loving hand under my soul, lifted me up and gave me back my health and the self-respect which I had lost," does not mean that Jesus' hand of flesh and bones was used in the saving process, but that his divine nature, the ever present Mind that was in Christ Jesus, did it; and so we have here an attempted distinction on the part of the critic without a real difference. On this subject Mrs. Eddy speaks with unmistakable clarity (Science and Health, pp. 332, 333), "The corporeal man Jesus was human." "On the other hand, Christ is not a name so much as the divine title of Jesus. Christ expresses God's spiritual, eternal nature."

[Miss Evelyn A. S. Bull in Weekly Scotsman, Edinburgh, Scotland]

In the Weekly Scotsman there appeared a short article by "Physician," entitled "Subconsciousness," which conveyed the impression that the practice of Christian Science is a process of suggestion. I would make the correction, that of course suggestion in any form is entirely contrary to the teaching and practice of Christian Science.

Christian Science is based on the Scriptures. It came to the Discoverer, Mary Baker Eddy, as a revelation through reading the Bible. She was instantaneously healed of a physical injury from which she was expected to die. Sickness and sin result from false, inaccurate thinking; in other words, from the carnal mind; but, as this mind is the source of evil, the remedy must be outside of itself.

Christian Scientists do not attempt to efface their troubles and difficulties by the action of the human will in any form of suggestion, but they recognize that the remedy lies in the fact there is but one Mind, Spirit, or God, omnipotent good. This Mind, "which was also in Christ Jesus," always and everywhere active, operates by spiritual law to liberate mankind from all evil thinking and its effects. This law was successfully applied by the early Christians, and its process was entirely spiritual. To get good either for one's self or for another, one must express good.

Extracts from Letters

"I desire to express my gratitude to God for His many blessings to me during the past five years of military service, as I feel that I owe to Christian Science the fact that I am alive to-day. Whilst in the trenches I once experienced instantaneous healing by absent treatment. I was taken ill in the front line, got very weak, and could hardly sleep or eat anything. I at once wrote home to the practitioner who was patiently and lovingly helping me while on service. The same day that my letter reached London, I moved into reserve, feeling very ill indeed, lay down in a dugout, and dropped asleep. A few hours afterwards, I awoke perfectly well, ate a hearty meal, and spent half the next night in No Man's Land as strong and well as ever.

"The Christian Science literature has been a positive godsend to me on active service, and thanks to Mrs. Eddy's revelation of the truth, the ninety-first psalm is to me no longer an overoptimistic fable as heretofore. No testimony can adequately express my gratitude for Christian Science."

Kindly Affection Triumphant

How interesting is the tribute to the life and work of Jesus of Nazareth given by Mrs. Eddy when she says in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 54): "Through the magnitude of his human life, he demonstrated the divine Life. Out of the amplitude of his pure affection, he defined Love. With the affluence of Truth, he vanquished error." Here is brought to light not only healing to renew life but all the gospel message, the gladness of divine Love, and the comfort of justice.

Some one made a remark concerning well-known philosophical writings, that "all of Emerson will not cure a headache." One might likewise say that all of Carlyle might fail to reveal peace for the heart; also that one might know the laws of Solon and not understand self-government, and have acquaintance with the proverbs of Solomon and not know wisdom. It was the one known spiritually as "great David's greater son"—of the lineage of faithful Ruth the gleaner, as well as of David the king—who came to reveal healing and peace, to declare the joy of obedience to God and the blessedness of heavenly wisdom. To revive healing, to renew peace, making practical the Christianity which had become doctrinal, to establish demonstration according to Principle, and develop present understanding of heavenly things, instead of maintaining tradition and memory of the past, was and is the mission of Christian Science.

Memory in mortal mind works ill because it records and retains what it knows of evil. In a feud each side makes a record of wrongs whereby to revive hatred and fan the heat of resentment. A feudist on his gunstock will tally the number of the slain of the opposing clan and make occasion for self-magnification out of murder; but if one prays as a Christian to one Father he admits a bond of brotherhood with all mankind, and of every killing by secrecy and stealth it can be said:—

"It hath the primal eldest curse upon't,
A brother's murder."

Kindly affection keeps no tally of evil things done, nor casts up any account of slights, discrepancies, neglects, or failures. Christian love "suffereth long, and is kind; . . . thinketh no evil." This love is not glad when others go wrong, because it can only be glad in goodness. Consequently it keeps no dossier of the mistakes of others, not desiring to vaunt itself as having superior goodness, but simply desiring that goodness may bring blessing to all.

The recording of error, backed by hateful determination to make it real and to prevent reform by shackling a man to the error he would forsake, is just the opposite of the healing work of Christian Science. The true practitioner begins by recognition of good as reality and of man as the child of God. He is without envy, malice, or ill will, consequently has no ability to pervert judgment as the evil-minded do; therefore he judges righteously, and metaphysically sets free from his oppressors the man longing to be set free from the claims of evil. The Christian Scientist is the true liberator, and as the work goes on a larger and larger host of those benefited are giving thanks to God and enlarging the happiness of the worker because their gratitude impels them to engage in the work of healing.

There is a story that the children never weary of hearing, perhaps because it shows the triumph of brotherly affection. Joseph seems to have been singularly frank with his brothers, quite unsuspicious of their jealousy. They were ready to kill him, and did sell him into slavery, and yet when the divine purpose was revealed he became their savior from famine, and in returning good for evil put evil and hatred quite out of countenance; hence we have the definition in our textbook (p. 589): "Joseph. A corporeal mortal; a higher sense of Truth rebuking mortal belief, or error, and showing the immortality and supremacy of Truth; pure affection blessing its enemies."

The workers in this great movement are more and more learning to make demonstrations after the manner of Joseph. When a man can meet another who has injured him beyond human ability to forget and forgive, and yet through divine inspiration and the comfort of the heavenly Father's love he can forgive and forget and love on, with sincere affection continuing kindly services and such attitude as will heal, an illustration is certainly given of Christlike affection. That such demonstration shall be made for the welfare of humanity by increasing numbers of workers is quite evidently expected by Mrs. Eddy, for in her letter to the Board of Lectureship (Miscellany, p. 248) she said: "You are not setting up to be great; you are here for the purpose of grasping and defining the demonstrable, the eternal. Spiritual heroes and prophets are they whose new-old birthright is to put an end to falsities in a wise way and to proclaim Truth so winningly that an honest, fervid affection for the race is found adequate for the emancipation of the race."

Thanksgiving

It is quite appropriate that the Thanksgiving season should be associated in human thought with the harvest time. With fruition there naturally comes a sense of thankfulness and rejoicing. No heart is so dull that it does not feel grateful when some victory has been won, some honest effort has achieved success, some patient endeavor has reached fulfillment. What is true of the individual becomes equally true of the multitude, and many a time happy songs of praise have ascended when triumphs have been recorded.

Paul, however, talks to us of thanksgiving under quite different circumstances. He says, "We glory in tribulation," and then he goes on to explain why; for, he says, "tribulation worketh patience; and patience, experience; and experience, hope: and hope maketh not ashamed; because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts." Now all this is exactly contrary to the human method of procedure, which starts out by saying: If I have the love of God in my heart I can have hope; if I can but hope I will be able to gain experience; with experience I can learn how to be patient; with patience, it would perhaps be possible to stand tribulation; and with such spiritual attainment I might be able to rejoice.

It is Christian Science and the individual demonstration of it which alone make it possible to lay hold of this demand and reap the glorious reward which results from obedience thereto. It is the revelation of Christian Science which unfolds the foundation of thanksgiving as based in so wonderful an understanding of Truth and its salutary action on the human consciousness that human belief is immediately reversed; and why? Because at the very outset Christian Science gives a vision of the reality of God, good, so that the falsity of a suppositional opposite is discerned in at least some slight degree. Then the necessary conclusion follows that the uncovering of evil by Truth must precede evil's rejection and destruction. To mortals this uncovering of evil may often seem like deepest tribulation, but to the student of Christian Science it is a proof of God's all-pervading care, since only thus can one ever hope to get rid of evil.

The Christian Scientist who clearly perceives that the operation of Truth always first uncovers, then rebukes, then eliminates what is unlike itself, will awaken to the joy of being thankful in tribulation. When it is understood that a truth discerned inevitably reveals the false nature of any supposititious opposite, one will no longer be disturbed at this uncovering of evil. If the rule of addition is understood, one is not troubled at whatever mistake may be presented for rectification; but rather rejoices in the possession of that intelligence which not only recognizes the wrong but knows enough to correct it and replace it with the right. With such a viewpoint,—a viewpoint which unfolds the possibility of making every least apparent tribulation an opportunity for proving the power of Truth to triumph over evil,—there can only be thanksgiving.

Christian Science teaches that it is Truth which shows evil to be evil, and if one sees evil thus he may always be assured that the same understanding of Truth which uncovers error is quite sufficient to prove the nothingness of the error. It is then easy to accept the truth of what Mrs. Eddy tells us in Science and Health (p. 66): "Trials teach mortals not to lean on a material staff,—a broken reed, which pierces the heart. We do not half remember this in the sunshine of joy and prosperity. Sorrow is salutary. Through great tribulation we enter the kingdom. Trials are proofs of God's care."

The demonstration of the truth as taught in Christian Science is bound to uncover the evil beliefs of mortals which, as has already been said, must first be seen before they can be rejected and destroyed. As we constantly remember that this operation in the human consciousness is the proof of God's abiding care and of His presence with us,—since it shows us the error which must be eliminated before we can attain the understanding of our perfection as the sons of God,—we can surely rejoice with all our heart when tribulation seems to come. We are thus afforded the occasion and privilege of proving the tribulation unreal and without presence or power. For after all, each belief in evil is but a temptation to admit a reality in what God did not make, what He does not know, and which we have a God-given power to prove is as contrary to our real selfhood as it is to God Himself.

The true Thanksgiving then comes to those who can thank God for every opportunity to prove His presence and allness in spite of any and all the suppositional arguments which material sense may claim to present. To such as these there must come the bliss of proving the abiding protection of God, who, as Mrs. Eddy tells us in "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 10), "has called His own, armed them, equipped them, and furnished them defenses impregnable. Their God will not let them be lost; and if they fall they shall rise again, stronger than before the stumble. The good cannot lose their God, their help in times of trouble. . . . The best lesson of their lives is gained by crossing swords with temptation, with fear and the besetments of evil; insomuch as they thereby have tried their strength and proven it; insomuch as they have found their strength made perfect in weakness, and their fear is self-immolated."

Lecture in The Mother Church

The First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston, Massachusetts, announces a free public lecture on Christian Science by Judge Samuel W. Greene, a member of The Christian Science Board of Lectureship, in the church edifice, Norway, Falmouth, and St. Paul Streets, Back Bay, Monday evening, November 24, 1919, at eight o'clock. The public is cordially invited.

Lectures in Suburbs of Boston

The Mother Church announces the following lectures in the Boston suburbs to be delivered by John Randall Dunn:—

Mattapan (Milton lecture): Oakland Hall, Oakland Street, Mattapan Square, 8 p.m., Nov. 21.

Allston: Allston Theater, 128 Brighton Avenue, 3 p.m., Nov. 23.

Watertown: Masonic Hall, 23 Main Street, 8 p.m., Nov. 23.

Revere: Revere City Hall, Broadway, 8 p.m., Nov. 25.

Among the Churches

Current Notes

ALBERT LEA, MINN.—On Sunday, September 28, the members of First Church of Christ, Scientist, dedicated their church, on the corner of Clark Street and Adams Avenue. The building, with furnishings and lot, cost approximately fourteen thousand dollars. It is entirely free from debt, the last payments having been made from a substantial gift by the Trustees under the Will of Mary Baker Eddy, from a sum set aside by her for the purpose of helping branch churches.

About twenty-five years ago a class in Christian Science was taught in Albert Lea, after which Sunday services were held at the homes of students until the following year, when the Christian Science Dispensary Association was organized in the Masonic banquet room in the Hewitt Building, corner of Broadway and William Street. Two years later the church was incorporated with thirteen charter members. On October 24, 1900, this church was reorganized under a state charter. In 1914 the lot on which this church now stands was purchased and building operations were begun. The corner stone was laid Thursday morning, June 10, 1915. The structure was completed in December of the same year, and the first service was held in it Sunday morning, December 12, since which time Sunday services and Wednesday evening meetings have been held regularly. When the church was organized a Christian Science Sunday school was also established.—The Tribune.

CAPE TOWN, SOUTH AFRICA.—The foundation stone of the first portion of First Church of Christ, Scientist, was laid on June 5, 1919. This building will eventually be the Sunday school, but when completed, services will be held therein until the church edifice is erected, the Sunday school being conducted in the meantime in a house already occupying a portion of the ground, which was purchased for the sum of thirty-five hundred pounds. The plot, which is a corner one, has a frontage of about 185 feet on Grey's Pass, with a depth of 90 feet facing Orange Street. It is situated in the center of the residential and educational part of Cape Town, and commands a beautiful and unobstructed view of Table Mountain.

A Christian Science Society was formed in 1910, and in 1912 reorganized as First Church of Christ, Scientist. Since then services have been held in the Cape Times Buildings, with reading rooms on the same floor. The ever increasing attendance at the church services, and the inadequate accommodation for the rapid growth of the Sunday school during the last few years, indicated that the time had come for the church to have its own building.

PUNXSUTAWNEY, PA.—The property on the corner of Union and South Findley Streets, recently purchased by First Church of Christ, Scientist, has been remodeled and is now being occupied by the congregation. The entire interior of the house has been changed so that it is ideal for the purpose to which it is now devoted.

Punxsutawney Spirit.

BISMARCK, N. DAK.—The dedication of the edifice of the Christian Science Society took place August 3.

POTSDAM, N. Y.—The Christian Science Society of Potsdam has incorporated as a church organization and will be known as First Church of Christ, Scientist. A building has been acquired and will be used as a church until a new structure can be erected.—Rome Sentinel.

The Lectures

NEW YORK, N. Y. (First Church).—William W. Porter, lecturer; introduced by Lieut. Richard J. Davis, Chaplain U. S. N., who said in part:—

Those of us who have had the opportunity and privilege of a part in that great experience "over there," who have been working hand in hand with men of every color, class, type, and race, bearing with them in the most intimate way their sin, sorrow, pain, and the dangers of war, have come back with one very clearly defined and settled conviction,—how much, oh, how much, poor, suffering humanity is in need of an available God, an understandable God! How great is the need of knowing better how to love and to be kind!

Over eighty per cent of the men in the Army and the Navy make no pretense or claim to religion or creed; and yet underneath there is a real hunger to know the truth. These men have come back with the old ideas of dogma and creed forever shattered; and they are not alone in that. To-night in this great congregation there are doubtless many who have arrived at the same state of mind,—those who, weighed down with disease, sorrow, poverty, or perhaps the impress of sin, are earnestly praying for light. My friends, in the words of Isaiah, "Arise, shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee."

TORONTO, ONTARIO, CANADA (First Church).—The Rev. Andrew J. Graham, lecturer; introduced by J. S. Mills, who said in part:—

Christian Science is to-day destroying the beliefs of sin, sickness, and death, and instead of these is bringing health and purity, peace and joy, into thousands of lives all over the world. Students of this Science soon find that the Bible, as explained by Science and Health, has become a new book to them. It assures them of physical healing; and this is very important, as it is the proof that this truth is scientific. It also gives a satisfying answer to all spiritual questioning, and when rightly applied, solves their every human problem, and enables them to live lives of purity, health, happiness, hope, and freedom from both sin and disease that before taking up this study they did not think possible in this world.

ANCHORAGE, ALASKA (Society).—Charles I. Ohrenstein, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Anne Shonbeck, who said in part:—

Christian Science is a practical and provable religion, available to all mankind through a right understanding of God. It is the same religion, based on the same Principle, as that which Jesus taught and exemplified when he preached the gospel to every creature and healed "all manner of sickness and all manner of disease among the people."

NEW BEDFORD, MASS. (First Church).—Frank Bell, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Alice P. Valley, who said in part:—

Christian Science is the gospel of salvation. The world has tired of being told that God in His infinite wisdom afflicts His children, and of the promise of a future world salvation. When all material means have proved unavailing and the doctor has said, "I can do nothing more;" when all material safeguards have failed to avert poverty, loss, and sorrow, and so-called joys have left not a ray of real happiness, then we want to know of a God who can heal and save and bless us now; and Christian Science comes like the light shining in darkness promising complete salvation here and now from everything that is unlike good. The way in which God becomes a God of salvation, and is found to be "a very present help in trouble" is through scientific right thinking.—Fairhaven Star.

EAST ORANGE, N. J. (First Church).—John W. Doorly, lecturer; introduced by Clarence J. Goodman, who said in part:—

We do not hesitate to share with our fellow men that which we have found to be a source of blessedness to ourselves; and Christian Science has indeed been a blessing to mankind, bringing peace, health, and happiness to many thousands of people throughout the civilized world, in many instances after all material means had failed. Christian Science is a potent factor in the religious world to-day, and is exerting a powerful influence for good upon all religious orders, as well as upon the civic life of the people. It stands as an exponent of the revival of spiritual life.

LONG BEACH, CALIF. (First Church).—Dr. John M. Tutt, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Mary Parker Bort, who said in part:—

In "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" Mrs. Eddy has issued this clarion call to the world: "The time for thinkers has come" (Pref., p. vii), and the events of the past few years and the present unrest show us, as never before, the necessity for right thinking. Christian Science is teaching us what right thinking is, and how to think rightly; and through this right thinking thousands to-day are being lifted out of invalidism into health, out of sin into righteousness, out of sorrow into joy, out of poverty into plenty, out of ignorance into the understanding of man's God-given birthright, dominion.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS (Seventh Church).—Prof. Hermann S. Hering, lecturer; introduced by T. Fremont Hoyt, who said in part:—

From the beginning of time, humanity has been reaching out for something that would satisfy, searching for something that would heal and save; but only in the degree that it has learned to think rightly, has it gained any measure of that dominion which the Scriptures declare belongs to man. For it is only through right thinking that perfect health, peace, and joy can be gained, and our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, in her textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," plainly tells us how this right mental state can be attained, and that here and now we can prove the Master's saying, "The kingdom of God is at hand."

CAMDEN, N. J. (First Church).—John Randall Dunn, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Edith M. Bodine, who said in part:—

All through the ages, when the hungering and thirsting after better things has been sufficiently great, that which brings better things has appeared. So it was that Jesus came saying, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly;" and this abundance of life was made manifest in the healing of the sick, the reforming of the sinner, the comforting of the sorrowing, and the raising of the dead. To the sick, the sinner, and the mourner of to-day the Christ-message is come with "signs following;" and this message is Christian Science, the revelation of Truth to Mrs. Eddy, and given to the world in the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures."

BROOKLYN, N. Y. (First Church).—Frank H. Leonard, lecturer; introduced by Joseph M. Thomas, who said in part:—

In approaching the subject of Christian Science it is soon learned that whereas the healing of physical disease is indeed an important part of its teachings, yet it is but incidental to that more important healing which is so necessary for the salvation of the world; namely, the healing of sin. Now, the great sin that besets the world and is the cause of the ills of humanity, may be characterized as the universal ignorance of God; so that the healing of one's ignorance of God in Christian Science is found to be the primary healing, and necessarily includes the healing of whatever may seem to be discordant, whether it be disease of a mental, moral, or physical nature. In other words, it is a mental transformation, such as Paul referred to when he said, as recorded in the twelfth chapter of Romans, "Be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God."

Testimonies of Healing

It is four years since my testimony appeared in The Christian Science Journal, telling of the healing of chronic rheumatism which had rendered me a helpless cripple. That healing I am grateful to say has proved permanent, as the following experiences clearly show. Not only does Christian Science heal us of disease but it does this by making us better mentally and morally, giving us purer desires and an abiding trust and confidence in God and His protection which no so-called material remedy can supply.

As a reservist I was called to the colors in August, 1914, on the outbreak of hostilities, and in November of the same year I went to France as a private. The night of the second of November I was pushed right up to the firing line. So meager was the protection afforded by our cover from fire that we were compelled to retire some two hundred yards and drop into a ditch in which we remained up to our waists in water for more than an hour. Whilst we were in the water a doctor's warning as to the fatal results of such a position flashed through my mind, but I immediately corrected this and realized I was in God's care; and so it proved, for no fatal result followed as was prophesied.

We were twenty-eight days in the front line before we were relieved, and during this time we were subjected to countless attacks, had very little sleep, and were continually in wet things, the water at times spurting out of our boots as we walked. In this condition we were told off for rest and shelter to a flax mill a considerable distance to our rear, and very grateful we were to snatch a few hours for rest and sleep. I was not, however, allowed to sleep undisturbed, for I was awakened in the night by what seemed to me a voice warning me of the presence of danger; and this warning proved necessary, as I shortly discovered the mill was on fire. Instantly I gave the alarm, and my comrades gathered up their belongings and hastily left the burning building, thankful to escape unscathed and unharmed in what was to them such a miraculous way.

Whilst engaged on fatigue duties I have had the things I carried shot through by enemy bullets, but none even so much as scratched me; in fact I can testify that I never felt afraid from the moment I set foot in France. This lack of fear through realizing the ever presence of Love gave me protection and courage to fetch drinking water from a pump under the direct observation and fire of the enemy, and so to meet an urgent need of the moment. My friends could not understand such wonderful protection.

The Christian Science Sentinels sent to me from home I used to read eagerly whenever I had the opportunity. My comrade, who, by the way, was a slave to the use of bad language, although a good fellow at heart, once said to me that there must be something good in the paper as I was always reading it. I assured him that there was and offered to lend the paper to him. He gladly accepted it and soon became quite keen to read the Sentinel. After a time his thinking was completely changed and the habit of swearing left him. For this change in him I was very grateful, and it was a source of great joy and encouragement to me to have such a friend.

I was in many tight corners during my two years' service in France, but was brought safely out of them all without a scratch, a sore, or a day's sickness. As a member of The Mother Church my heart is full of gratitude for this wonderful deliverance and protection wrought by divine Love—the Rock upon which our dear Leader, Mrs. Eddy, stood, and upon which our church rests. My wife and I would like to take this opportunity of thanking all loyal members for the good work they did for the "boys" in the trenches,—work which made what would have been hell, a place where one could say and feel, "His arm encircles me, and mine, and all" (Poems, p. 4).

My favorite among musical instruments has always been the Italian harp, and for a number of years after marriage it had been my privilege to have the best teachers available wherever we were living. About eight years ago I went to Chicago for the purpose of having further instruction, and most of my time was devoted to practice and study, leaving little if any for recreation or other purposes. For some months all went well, then doubt and fear as to whether I was making the desired and expected progress began to manifest themselves. It was not long before I had worried myself into a mental and physical condition that plainly made it impossible to go on, and reluctantly I returned home, keenly feeling the failure I had made out of the opportunity from which I had hoped to accomplish so much.

A complete collapse followed, and the consultations of our family physician and specialists resulted in my being taken away for confinement in a hospital for the insane. During the months that followed not a word of encouragement was given by any physician or nurse connected with the institution. The next summer Christian Science was brought to the attention of my family, a practitioner was sought, and for the first time they heard words of hope and good cheer. After several months of treatment I was restored to my family, and then came to me a most vivid realization that now, as in Peter's time, the angels of God can unloose the chains and open the prison doors for those in bondage. Since then I have been an earnest student of the Bible and of Mrs. Eddy's writings, in a humble effort to pass on to others in need some realization of this truth and of God's healing power.

Words cannot express our deep gratitude for this healing and the many other blessings which have come to us through the study and living of this truth.

(Mrs.) Celia Mowrer, Columbus, Ohio.

Fourteen years ago Christian Science healed me, in three treatments, of an ailment that physicians said only an operation could relieve. I had suffered intensely for years, but dreaded the serious nature of the proposed operation, so turned to Christian Science, as so many do, as a last resort. I knew nothing of its teachings, but the healing came at once and I have never had the least return of the trouble. Other blessings came to me as I took up the study of the Lesson-Sermons, but as I had a deep antagonism toward the Bible, believing it a mass of contradictions and impossible tales and not at all comprehensible, my progress was slow and there were many slips and stumbles on the way, until finally I gave up my study altogether. This may seem the deepest ingratitude, after my wonderful healing; though I never failed to give absolute credit to Christian Science. I had never given up my antagonism toward the Bible, and it was not until I became willing to become "as a little child," that real progress began.

During the years that I neglected the study of Christian Science, there was always the partly unacknowledged conviction that only within that study would I find the truth that would satisfy me. At last illness came, and suffering that made me long for help, and long for it enough to seek it earnestly. Of course when that time came I found relief, and then began the real effort of my life to gain what I dimly glimpsed was to be had if sincerely desired and sought. Some difficulties were overcome almost instantly and others it took more time to prove unreal, but each and every one overcome was a stepping-stone to a clearer understanding of the ever presence of divine Love. Many ills have yielded to the truth. My little son has been healed of serious attacks of poisoning from contact with so-called poison oak; I have been healed of broken arches, coughs, and periodical bilious attacks; and measles and what to mortal sense were alarming colds have been overcome for both of my children.

Christian Science has also helped me in my struggles to overcome what I was pleased to call "righteous indignation" over what I considered injustice to others or to myself. Gradually there came the understanding that there is no "righteous indignation," no matter what the seeming provocation; and though the lesson has not been all learned yet, progress has been made, and for this and many kindred steps in the direction of overcoming personal habits and faults, I am deeply grateful. Every good that has come to me I know has come from my understanding of the Father-Mother God and His laws, gained through the study of Christian Science, as taught by our beloved Leader, Mrs. Eddy. For these blessings and for my love and understanding of the Bible, a hitherto closed book to me, I can never cease to rejoice. The ninety-first psalm is my refuge when sense testimony seems to darken my way.

Until about three years ago I had taken medicine nearly all my life. When an attack of appendicitis set in our physician thought an operation would right everything, so I finally consented to one, thinking if I could only be well how happy I would be. For about a year after that I seemed to get along pretty well, but soon other troubles presented themselves, and in a short time I was suffering more than ever before from acute bladder trouble and neuritis. I had electric treatments, used plasters, and took medicine with no result.

At this time Christian Science was brought to my notice. A few days later I was taken with a severe toothache. I read all day in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," but seemed to get worse. I went to bed, but could not sleep. About midnight the thought came to me to have Christian Science treatment, so I called a practitioner and told her about my tooth, and she said she would help me. I did not know what was expected of me, but took Science and Health and tried to read. The tooth, however, ached so hard I gave it up, and finally called again, telling the practitioner I had received no help. She said she would continue to work for me, and immediately after that I fell asleep. In the morning the pain was gone and during the day the soreness disappeared. This demonstration proved to me that Christian Science heals. Soon afterwards I went to the practitioner and was healed of all the other ailments. My only physician now is this wonderful truth.

When our baby was five months old we had treatments for her for stomach disorder. We had tried all kinds of baby foods, and also cow's milk with no success. Since she had treatment she has taken all the foods I had in the house that she could not take before. I am more than grateful for this healing. About a year ago our little boy had so much trouble with his eyes that his teacher advised us to have them examined. My husband, not being interested in Christian Science at the time, took him to a specialist who treated him and also fitted him with glasses, but after wearing these for a while he seemed so much worse and it seemed so hard for him to wear them, that my husband consented to having Science treatment for him. We had just one treatment and the trouble was overcome. His teacher says he is getting along nicely, and is doing much better work than before.

We have just experienced a demonstration of the guiding power of God. Both our children had whooping cough. A little fear crept in at first, so I asked for treatment. All fear left me and we got along beautifully. Our baby got through without whooping at all, and the work we did for them in Science has been a great help to us. I say "us" now, for my husband has been shown the way, and for this I am truly very grateful. We now work out our problems together, and know that God is omnipotent, supreme, and that divine Love does supply our every need. My daily prayer is that I may gain a better understanding of this wonderful truth, and so live as to be worthy to be called a Christian Scientist.

I have had many beautiful healings of sickness and sorrow during the few years that I have known of Christian Science. There is one, however, which stands out most clearly.

Some time ago I awoke one night not feeling well, and soon after getting up I fainted away. On regaining consciousness I found myself lying on the floor bleeding at the mouth and nose and with a deep gash on my head. As soon as I could, I declared the truth as taught in Christian Science, but the wonderful part is that a tide of helpful thoughts and passages from the Bible flooded in when I was not yet conscious of the body and did not know what had happened. This phase of the experience brought to me a glimpse of the reality of Life in God. It is not the brain which thinks, nor so-called mortal mind. "Mind controls body and brain," Mrs. Eddy says on page 79 of Science and Health; and I can understand now what she tells us on page 488 of the same book: "Mind alone possesses all faculties, perception, and comprehension." When I was entirely conscious again Truth had done the work so effectually that there was no room for either fear or doubt. Bleeding and pain stopped immediately, I got up in a few minutes, and in less than half an hour went back to sleep with a heart full of gratitude for God's healing power. Soon the wound knitted together and after a few days there was hardly a mark left.

Since "Love is impartial" (Science and Health, p. 13), the truth which healed me must be available to all those who face the onslaught of evil.

In Isaiah we read, "And a little child shall lead them." This was our experience, for it was through the illness of our baby boy that we were led to Christian Science. Having enjoyed the blessings of this wonderful truth for several years, I desire to express publicly my gratitude for benefits received.

When a young girl I had a fall which was said to have injured the spine. This brought on a complication of diseases from which I never knew a well day for many years. Ten years ago our baby boy, who was seemingly injured at birth, was about to pass on after materia medica had exhausted all its resources. When the physician left, the thought came to pray, but error argued that I had prayed for years for health and my prayers had remained unanswered; however, I listened to the still, small voice which said to pray anyway. I knelt, praying as I never had before, repeatedly asking God to show me the way to Him and give me light! In less than an hour Christian Science was presented to me and a practitioner was called.

The healing came slowly, and I was often beset with discouragement, but I knew the teaching was true, and Jesus said, "He that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved." Severe headaches were the first to vanish, the nervousness and depression, and sense of great sorrow over the loss of a dear one yielding later. In about ten months I was permanently healed, and the baby about two months afterwards. I rejoice greatly that during those months I lost sight of the physical need in the wonderful transformation which was going on in my thought daily and hourly.

Through Christian Science I have found satisfying work, fuller and richer friendships, a higher sense of beauty, and many spiritual joys in place of the once alluring and seemingly desirable material pleasures. My entire family accepted Christian Science through these healings.

(Mrs.) Mary Sanburn Wallwork, El Paso, Texas.

It is with a heart filled with gratitude for the many blessings that I have received through the study of Christian Science, that I corroborate the testimony of my wife. I took up the study of Christian Science at the time she did, not for any physical trouble of my own, but to help her, as she had not been well for many years. The healing of my wife and little son was wonderful, but by anyone who has an understanding of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, it would be recognized as the natural working of divine Principle, God, who governs all.

Christian Science is the most wonderful thing that ever came into my life; it is a practical religion, which we can apply to our daily living, not only in our home life, but in the business world as well. It is to-day fulfilling the doctrine of the great Master in healing the sick and sorrowing and redeeming the sinner, and is giving us that peace "which passeth all understanding." I am grateful for our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, who has made possible the way of salvation to all who are willing to deny self, take up the cross, and follow the Way-shower, Jesus the Christ.

J. C. Wallwork.

I was brought up by Christian parents and was quite satisfied with my religion, until a great sorrow entered my life. Both of my parents passed on in less than five months of each other. I turned for comfort to my religion, but found none. How could I love a God who had sent such bereavement? Having the care of sisters and brothers, I tried to follow the paths of duty my parents would have wished. At last physically ill, discouraged, full of fear, and tired of life, I went from one place to another seeking help. After six years doctors feared for my reason, and told me I had only six months to live; however, I slowly recovered. I tried again to follow the teachings of the church, but was never happy.

Then I removed into the country, where one day I met a young Christian Scientist who told me of the book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," and offered to send it to me. She made clear in a few hours many things which I had been longing to know for years, and before I had finished reading the chapter on Prayer, I had found the God whom I had been seeking. It gave surcease to my sorrow, lifted from me the burden of care, and life put on a nobler outlook. From that day Christian Science has been my only healer and teacher. Before I merely existed; now I revel in the sunshine of Truth.

Through reading Science and Health I have been healed of chronic stomach trouble, extreme nervousness, and pleurisy. Bilious attacks which used to last a week have been overcome in an hour. Severe headaches have also disappeared, and I am entirely free from many other ailments. One day at school I became very ill with severe pains across the chest and an obstruction in the throat which prevented my swallowing anything except a little water. When I arrived home a message was sent to a practitioner asking for help and then I tried to do a little mental work myself. I was at a loss how to do so, but as I lay perfectly still, these words came to me: "The eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms." I was very restless but finally fell asleep. Toward morning I awoke. Then I thought, "The prayer of faith shall save the sick when man is governed by God." Immediately the obstruction in the throat was removed and the other discordant conditions abated. I said to myself, "God has healed me." The healing was more wonderful when I called to mind that the conditions were similar to those of an illness which caused me great suffering, and for which I had medical treatment three years.

Christian Science is everything to me, and my only desire is to learn to reflect the light of Truth.—(Miss) Mary Hughes, Ramsgreane near Blackburn, England.

Four years ago I first heard of Christian Science. This was in a grocery store where one lady said to another, "The lady on the opposite side of the street heals by Christian Science." After that, as she lived next door to me, I watched many people going to her, especially a man who at first came on crutches and could not walk, but finally came without crutch or cane. When one day my sister came home from work very ill, saying I should get a doctor at once, that she could not stand such suffering any longer, I asked her to go to our neighbor, for I knew she helped many people. While my sister was gone I walked the floor almost sick myself wondering what was going to be the trouble with her, but in a few minutes she returned smiling, bringing some Sentinels with her. These I began to read and in them found the truth which has made me free. I read both copies that evening and slept all night, which I had not done for years. In the morning I read them again and asked my sister to get me more of this beautiful reading. I at once told my little girl, then five years old, that I had found something better than doctors and medicine, for God could take care of us and heal all our sickness just as in Jesus' time. We at once gathered a big pan of medicines and threw them out.

A few months later I was visiting some friends when suddenly they said how sick my little girl looked and insisted that I had better get a doctor. I tried to apply the truth, but fear crept in and finally I took the child in my arms and carried her to my home. She was stiff and I could not hear a breath, and as I reached home I prayed to know what to do. Instantly the thought came to go to the lady next door, so crying and trembling I took the child to her and asked her to help me. She told me to be calm, that God is our Life, and instantly my little girl raised herself up in my arms, smiling. This at first frightened me very much, as I thought it was the end, but in a few minutes I was all right and we both walked out of that home rejoicing and knowing that God is the only power.

I too have had many healings. One day the practitioner asked me why I wore glasses, and on being told that my eyes were so weak I could not see without them, she answered that some day I would not need them. On reaching home I tried to read Science and Health without them but the words were in a blur. I kept on trying, however, and in a few days could read perfectly. The best specialists had said I would always need to have treatments and must wear glasses, and I had worn them for seventeen years, but I have perfect sight now and can read and sew at night, which I would never attempt before. Through reading Science and Health I have also been healed of catarrh of the nose and throat, supposed to have been inherited. Doctors had said there was no help for me. When I first went to church I was told to read the hymn on page 168 of the Hymnal, wherein are the words:—

> Bright skies will soon be o'er me,
> Where darkest clouds have been.

At the time I thought that Christian Science was wonderful if it could bring about such a change, but this is what it has done in my home. Where discordant conditions had full sway and sickness prevailed all around me, now we have health, peace, and happiness.

I am grateful for all our periodicals, and very grateful to Mrs. Eddy, who so faithfully has given this beautiful religion which teaches us to know God as a present help in every need. I thank God for leading me to this truth that does make free.

(Mrs.) EMELIE M. HANSON, Oakland, Calif.

That Christian Science does heal, I have abundant proof. After several years of ill health a physician to whom I went for help informed me that I was suffering from an incurable disease and that I had but a few weeks to live. To satisfy myself and other members of the family I went to another physician, only to be told there was very little hope for my recovery. That was eleven years ago. Through the daily reading and application of Christian Science, together with some help from practitioners, I have become well and stronger than ever before. Many minor ailments have also been overcome for myself and others.

While very grateful for the physical healing that has been mine since I began learning the truth about God and His creation, I am more grateful for the spiritual understanding. The Christian Science Monitor is my daily companion, and I am very grateful for that as well as for all the other Christian Science publications.

(Miss) REBECCA SCHNEDERMAN, Citronelle, Ala.

Christian Science came to me about seven years ago, from which time it has been part of my daily study. That its teaching is demonstrably true, I soon experienced. For more than ten years I had been an inveterate smoker. Through reading the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, I was freed forever from that habit. Since then, in all the departments of life Christian Science has been to me a wonderful and sure help, and at this time I know that the law of God, the eternal Mind, is an ever present help and guide.

At first, applying Christian Science in times of temptation and trouble I would solve the problem before me in a rather impetuous way, but now it is clear to me that the more thought is allowed to rest in God, good, the more effectual will be the healing power, which comes from the realization of Him who was not in the great and strong wind, neither in the earthquake, nor in the fire, but whom Elijah recognized as a "still small voice" speaking to man. I have made mistakes, it is true, but have learned to profit even by them. Love has not left me alone. The most glorious thing of all that I have found through seeking God in the Christian Science way,—and that which is far above all other evidences,—is the spiritual uplift or the imperishable joy and peace which "passeth all understanding" and from whence come the power and strength whereby to overcome whatever has no part in God. Hope grows thereby and one's eye is purified to catch a glimpse of the real world.

Thanks be to God for the noble woman, Mrs. Eddy, who was found worthy to receive the revelation of the truth of being, which she sets forth in Christian Science. This Science is teaching us all things and is bringing all things which Jesus said to our remembrance. It is indeed the Comforter that the Father has sent as promised by the Master. Only in my daily walk and conversation can I express my gratitude, and to do this is my prayer.

JOSEPH A. LIENDEBORG, Stockholm, Sweden.

Christian Science found me two years and a half ago. Since then I have been healed of one so-called incurable disease, also of blood poisoning, grippe, wearing glasses, of an almost ungovernable temper, and of fits of depression lasting for days. During these attacks suicide was my one and only thought. I was instantaneously healed of three bad habits of twenty years' standing. For all of these blessings and the spiritual uplift that is coming to me daily I wish to thank God and the Master, Christ Jesus, and to express my gratitude to Mrs. Eddy, and my friends in Science who have so frequently passed me the cup of cold water. I also wish to express my gratitude for the Christian Science literature. The Monitor has given and is giving me an education in world affairs that I never could have obtained in any other way.

I feel it my duty to write my testimony in gratitude for what Christian Science has done for me. In March, 1912, I came into Christian Science for the healing of a very bad nervous breakdown, heart disease in its worst form, and spinal trouble, also stomach and bowel disorder and hemorrhages of the lungs. The doctor said I had a very bad cavity in my right lung. The climax came when I had a shock of paralysis. I was a member of a church for about thirty years, and the elders anointed me with oil, laid hands on me and prayed that I might be healed, but I did not get any better; instead I continued to grow worse. I had a number of doctors but all failed to do me any good. A cousin who had been in Christian Science one month and had received great benefits from it came to see me one evening and said if I would turn to Christian Science I would be healed. She told me how it had benefited her and I listened to what she said and drank in the truth. As a result I gave up all material remedies, turned absolutely to God, and was healed through Christian Science treatment.

I cannot find words to express my gratitude for this great deliverance. Also much love and gratitude goes out to Mrs. Eddy for her faithfulness to the truth.

(Miss) SUSIE HURST, West Boone, Iowa.

Signs of the Times

[San Jose (Calif.) Mercury Herald]

Nor will the efforts of the religion of the future be confined to preaching about God and His love; but regenerated and consecrated men and women who in every age have given religion its real strength and power, will in much larger numbers and in a more personal way be manifesting this love to His children by wisely and unselfishly ministering to their needs, temporal, moral, and spiritual, by striving to create for them a healthful, pure, and elevating environment, and, better than all, attracting them away from sin by the drawing powers of their examples and the influence of their pure, unselfish, and godly lives, full of love for God and men. This future religion will teach that unless religion produces such regenerated and consecrated men and women, it avails little or nothing in this world or the world to come.

In short, unless the whole world is to become agnostic, infidel, and materialistic—which God forbid—the religion of the future must more nearly approximate the religion of the Christ as outlined in the New Testament. That religion, although often misunderstood, misinterpreted, and distorted by the many creeds and dogmas alleged to be founded upon it, is still the hope of the world. It will outlive and rise above all these misunderstandings and distortions, and in the time to come it will again be vitalized and made a present reality to the world by those who live its truths as well as talk of them. The human race is not watching for, nor greatly needing, the promulgation of new creeds nor the formulation of new dogmas; but it is suffering, groaning, dying, for lack of love, the help, the power, and the spirit which the religion of Christ, manifesting itself in the lives of his followers, alone can supply. The religion of the future, no matter by what name or names it may be called, will be a larger and more perfect incarnation of his spirit and life in those who profess to be his followers.

[Manufacturers Record, Baltimore, Md.]

Labor strikes are threatened almost daily, but many labor men are showing keen appreciation of the conditions under which we are living and are opposed to the radical leaders—an extremely hopeful sign. In so far as labor men are willing to increase their efficiency and production they are fully entitled to high wages. Neither the laboring man nor the farmer nor the average salaried man has ever been adequately paid as a whole. The unrest of the hour is the inevitable struggle of the chrysalis as it seeks to throw off its old shell and become a butterfly. Eventually out of the struggle will come a larger, broader life, a closer friendship between all classes, and a more harmonious cooperation between employers and employees, between the rich and the poor, the educated and the uneducated. This will be founded not on so-called charity or philanthropy, but on a fair and honest recognition each of the rights of others.

[The Muncie (Ind.) Star]

In a thoughtful article contributed to the Journal of Philosophy, Professor Sheldon calls attention to the fact that today the greatest defect of democracy is oversocialization, or social cowardice. He asserts that this "can be overcome only by a gradual spiritual education which will restore our vanishing respect for the more valuable elements of society, independence, leaders." Our old-time physical fear has given way, he says, to a social cowardice which now is our obsession, and that oversocialization tends to kill the very brotherly love it was designed to foster. It kills the virtue of thrift, foresight, and individual initiative.

For many years the emphasis has been placed upon social welfare, social cooperation. In religion we have had an overinsistence upon social work and morality. What we unquestionably need to-day is more of the spirit of worship and prayer, more thoughts of Deity and a more intimate relationship to Him. Consequently, many persons have felt that much of the preaching of modern times dwells too much on economical and sociological themes, too little upon individual duty and morality. Even conscientious churchgoers complain that they go to church only to hear lectures on sociology rather than spiritual sermons, which bring cheer and hope to weary souls.

Letters of Appreciation

Many letters of appreciation of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR and other Christian Science activities are constantly being received. These letters express what these activities mean to different individuals in various occupations and pursuits. The favorable comment that has been received on those already published indicates that they are welcome and helpful; therefore others will be published under the above heading. Extracts from such letters follow:

I WOULD like to express my appreciation for the great help I receive from these periodicals, the CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SENTINEL and THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR. For a clear, farsighted, comprehensive grasp of current world events and their relation to one another there is no other daily newspaper which can compare with the MONITOR. The illustrations, too, are excellent and certainly a long step in advance of the usual newspaper illustrations. A small boy of my acquaintance came to me one day asking for some pictures of India and the Far East, as he could find nothing satisfactory in the magazines and he and his class were required to make illustrated booklets of each country they studied. In looking over some back copies of the Monitor we found just what he needed, and as each new country came up, there were always sure to be some illustrations in the MONITOR covering some phase of it. He was able to supply his classmates too, and he said they were always glad to get the pictures, as the particular kind they needed was hard to obtain.

ONE of the assistants in the department of Political Science referred definitely to THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR before the whole class in "Practical Problems of Democracy." Of course I cannot give his exact words, but I am certain about the ideas he meant to convey to us. He said that THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR was one of very few journals in the country to-day that was even as much as attempting to inform its readers on the various national and international problems confronting the nation at present, that its every statement was absolutely authoritative, and that it was unique because it presented the news in distinctly unbiased manner. He further cautioned his students against any prejudice they might have against Christian Science, because he said that he had found very little mention of religion at all in any part of the paper, and finally added that reading the MONITOR daily was the most practical plan he had found to keep himself well and correctly informed on all matters of public interest.

"What I say unto you I say unto all, WATCH." Jesus

VOLUME XXII NOVEMBER 29, 1919 NUMBER 13

M. ETHEL WHITCOMB

IT is related that at one time Michelangelo called at the studio of Raphael, and finding his friend absent, examined the canvasses that were in the room. An unfinished picture on an easel attracted his attention, and feeling that the subject was being handled in too small a way, he wrote on a paper, with significant meaning, the one word, "Larger," placed it beside the picture and went away.

Christian Science is awaking millions to realize for the first time that they are painting on life's canvas with strokes too small, and have been studying a model too limited. Because each thought paints after its kind, self-loving, discordant, flesh entwined thoughts must portray their warped and painful likenesses upon the body and its affairs. With its divine demand of "Larger," Christian Science turns men to the study of the Christ-model, the man of Mind's knowing, and teaches them how, with bold strokes of moral courage, alertness, diligence, and selflessness, to reproduce this perfect model in all its purity and sublimity upon the canvas of experience.

That individual does not merely exist, but lives, who questions his thought models to see if they are good enough to endure throughout eternity, and if not, discards them as unfit for to-day. He walks on the same earth with the small and commonplace thinker, but he lives in a wholly different mental world and sees entirely different views, for the thoughts of the one are self-centered and bound, while the thoughts of the other are God-centered and free; one gazes at the dismal, cramped objects of material sense, while the other perceives the limitless beauty and joy of spiritual sense.

The larger thinker is often asked what is the secret of his joy. Is it happy surroundings? Pleasant circumstances? Money? Friends? No. The larger thinker lives outside the narrow limits of human circumstances and environment. Moment by moment during his busy day, he turns his thought from the fleeting to the permanent, from the mutable to the immutable, from the personal to the impersonal, from the unillumined to the inspirational. By such thought-steps he rises from earth to heaven,—to that spiritually mental height from which the imprisoned John beheld the new heaven and the new earth; and all the combinations of suppositional error can never prevent his ascent nor blind his vision of the real. The old epigram rebukes the one > "Who, born for the universe, narrow'd his mind,

> And to party gave up what was meant for mankind."

We are all born for the universe, because created by limitless Mind; and everything that we have belongs to Mind. The moment one becomes self-mesmerized by the belief that his house, his time, his talents, or in fact anything that he has belongs to himself, he becomes circumscribed and small, soon to grow as useless and unlovely as a parched desert. What a change, however, when he awakes from the stupor of self-bound interests and realizes that it is his duty, his privilege, his joy, to use his time, his talents, his income, his every thought, for others. At this moment he becomes one with the law of expansion, one with the law of opportunity, and a clearer thinker, a more efficient doer; one whom God can use appears; the one-time barren consciousness, now irrigated by the streams of sacred purpose and selfless love, yields abundantly the fruits of health, usefulness, and joy.

May the one who is looking to Christian Science for healing learn the deep necessity for a broader view of God, man, life, all things; for health and true largeness walk hand in hand. Sickness is made of matter-bound thinking, of impatience, disappointment, fear, self-will,—in short, the minutiæ of unillumined mentality. Health can never be found in pulse-taking, matter-watching, or self-loving, for man is not a flesh-dweller, but a limitless, free idea, living in glad activity in the infinitude of Mind. Both his interests and his desires are broad because they originate in God.

If one loses the true idea of himself in the compressed beliefs of human selfhood, the mists of dis-ease blind his eyes, and he must make his way to health by the illumination of enlarged thinking and loving, especially by loving. He must desire to overcome error for the whole world's sake. As he thus lives for humanity and prays for humanity, he will feel the vigor and glow of divine health pouring through every avenue of his being, for he is now in true relation to the boundless source of good. Who is not ready to turn from the useless trifles that moth and rust corrupt, to learn to think with the dominion and grandeur of that Mind "which was also in Christ Jesus;" where he sees, as Mrs. Eddy says (Pulpit and Press, p. 87), that "more effectual than the forum are our states of mind, to bless mankind."

There is nothing so joyous, so health giving, so important, or so imperative as to bless mankind, and to have for one's precious purpose to allow no thought to abide in his consciousness that will not bless and heal. The larger thinker rises to this holy task each morning, with newness of vigor and determined obedience. It is this sweet ideal treasured in his heart which enables him to lift his work and the thoughts of all who meet him into the bigness of good, away from the local to the universal. Patiently, constantly, the Leader of Christian Science endeavored to rouse in the hearts of all this largeness of living. Yearning for the members of The Mother Church to dwell in unceasing devotion to humanity, Mrs. Eddy included in the prayer which she declared it should be the duty of the members to pray daily, "May Thy Word enrich the affections of all mankind, and govern them!" (Manual, Art. VIII, Sect. 4). Humanity was never for a moment forgotten by this faithful servant of all. She kept her loving arms around the whole world, as tenderly praying for it as a mother for her child. May we, her followers, cast away from us each nonessential, each self-bound aim, each thought that does not manifest the largeness of infinite being, and drink, as she did, from the cup of universal love.

ness sounds the call of Christian Science: "Larger." And it will continue to call until each ear deafened by the clamor of materiality is unstopped. It is awakening the sleeper, idly dreaming of pleasure in matter and the indulgence of self, to the joy of overcoming the world for humanity's sake. It is arousing each hearer to shake off the moth-eaten robes of petty purposes, the warped beliefs of human disposition and temperament, with all its erratic likes and dislikes, the finite illusions of human history, with its myths of flesh inheritance, all the cramped and compressed sorrows and dreads of self-living, to perceive the immensity and glory of life in God. Here in the largeness of awakened being one finds man, whose home is the household of God, whose family includes all God's children, whose country is the presence of living Love,—man, born of the infinite, whose life is limitless and indestructible, whose intelligence is boundless and inexhaustible, whose purpose and destiny are divine.

Man

CHARLES A. COLVIN

MAN is the complete expression of God, or, as Mrs. Eddy so profoundly states on page 591 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" in her definition of man, "the compound idea of infinite Spirit; the spiritual image and likeness of God; the full representation of Mind." Down through the ages mortals have been taught that the real man is a human product and that man is subject to all the ills of the flesh; subject to sickness and death. It is appalling to think of the centuries of such erroneous thinking about man,—thinking of him only as a physical product with its attending ills and limitations,—and to declare that such a product is the image and likeness of God. We should blush with shame that we ever entertained such views and so dishonored God, or rather dishonored ourselves by such thinking.

The world can never fully repay the debt it owes to Mrs. Eddy for again bringing to light the truth that "man is not material; he is spiritual" (Science and Health, p. 468). In that wonderful and all-inclusive summary of the "scientific statement of being" as given on the page above mentioned, Mrs. Eddy has laid the axe at the root of all discord and human woe. By the understanding obtained through this most inspiring revelation, the world is shown what a lie the human concept is, and the light thus gained proves the fallacy of believing that man is subject to sickness, sin, and suffering. In place of such erroneous views there gradually dawns the conviction that all discord which, seemingly, has held mankind in bondage throughout the ages is only the result of wrong teaching and thinking; it is but the operation of so-called mortal mind, which claims that intelligence is resident in matter. Such erroneous thinking is in direct contravention of the First Commandment, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me."

If we closely examine the subject we will quickly discover that all sickness or discord of any nature is a false claim of power; it is a claim that inharmony and failure are just as real as harmony and success; that sin is just as real as holiness, thereby setting up the claim that there is a power, or powers, besides the one power,—God, good. And not only that, but the claims of mortal mind have gone farther, much farther, by declaring that the cause of these ills is greater in influence than God; therefore that God cannot heal them. This results in mortals appealing to a material agency, to human physicians and drugs, to relieve mankind of its suffering. And there are those who to-day, in this enlightened age, insist that God cannot do these mighty works, and they must, perforce, appeal to materia medica, expecting it to do that work which mortal mind claims God cannot do. Really, it is absurd that we ever were guilty of such reasoning. Surely such worldly thinking and teaching is setting up gods and recognizing a god of evil above and contrary to the one and only true God, the one only power.

Let those who still cling to materia medica and human agencies for help, ask themselves these questions: Am I true to the First Commandment? Am I obeying the Mosaic law and the teachings of Jesus and the apostles, to love and adore the one God? Am I recognizing Him as the one power and the only power, or am I believing in other gods, or other powers? Am I believing in a power of sickness and sin; believing it can rule me and shackle me to days of suffering and misery, to limitations and want and woe, or am I acknowledging, in all my ways, the one God who is Love? Am I believing in drugs as having power and relying on materia medica physicians to heal, or do I recognize in all my acts the God who John said is Love, who, as the psalmist says, "forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases"?

A clear and honest searching of our thought on these questions should result in our turning away with loathing from material remedies and drugs to the ever outstretched arms of divine Love. Such an honest endeavor will show us the utter uselessness of believing in such ghosts or phantoms of mortal mind's making, and instantly turn us to the one Father,—to God who is Love. When we arrive at that point in our glorious ascent out of material sense we get some concept of the real man, the only man there was or can ever be, the full image and likeness of God. We can then obtain a glimpse of the tremendous fact that man is spiritual and not material. Through this revelation we commence to measure man not by the human concept or through the five corporeal senses; we learn, in some degree, not to regard man as physical or material, but instead to see man only as he really is,—spiritual, the expression of God,—and by such reasoning to see man wherever and whenever good, God, is expressed.

In this process of constructive thinking we must, however, be very careful not to be misled by nor to confuse the human sense of good with the divine expression of good, which is the reflection of God. And then it gradually comes to us that man is not a material personality, but that he is higher and greater than the human belief of man. Human belief does not claim perfection for man; in fact, it specifically states and constantly declares that man has his limitations and is subject to discordant and death-dealing forces, whereas God made man "in his own image, in the image of God created he him."

Man being the expression of God, he can only express that which is of God, good. The ray of the sun cannot possibly express anything else than the sun. Man, or the idea of God, must and in fact does reflect God in every possible activity. Every activity, every idea, of Mind is perfect. All activities of Mind are the result of His law and always subject to His law. His law of supply, as an illustration, must be more than just the human sense of supplying a want or need.

When Jesus saw those who came to him for healing he looked beyond human physicality, beyond the material sense testimony to the real man. He beheld man as "idea" and instinctively knew that man, idea, the expression of God, is never absent, hence there is no place for anything expressing discord or any condition apart from God, good.

"In this perfect man the Saviour saw God's own likeness, and this correct view of man healed the sick" (Science and Health, p. 477). In any so-called human activity, whether the problem is business, or physical or moral suffering, we can confidently deny the claims of mortal mind and see the real idea, man, made in God's image and likeness and forever in His keeping. We should be grateful, humbly grateful, that Mrs. Eddy has disclosed the fact that man is other than the human representation, far higher than the material concept; that man is always expressing the activity of Mind.

Harmony Inevitable

LATOLIA L. GOODMAN

WE are prone to think our own problems are harder to solve than the problems of others, and therefore we accept discordant conditions as facts, and the consequent suffering as unavoidable and as something to be borne with the best grace possible. This is a mistake and is caused by our listening to error's suggestions. These suggestions may be: that we have been singled out to meet greater temptations than anyone else; that because we have thus been set apart in a class by ourselves, we must be just a little superior to God's other children, and what applies to others does not touch our own case at all. Is it not a species of selfish egotism thus to allow self and self's little world to loom so large?

Our revered Leader says in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 13), "Love is impartial and universal in its adaptation and bestowals." Instead of allowing the evil to lodge in our thought and intrench itself by constantly whispering to us that we are martyrs who deserve a great deal of credit for bearing so cheerfully what others do not have to meet, we should follow our Leader's command to "rise in the strength of Spirit to resist all that is unlike good" (Science and Health, p. 393). The article, "Rectifications," on page 20 of "Unity of Good" gives us our line of march, and by constantly reversing the testimony of the material senses, we shall see the "evidence of the spiritual senses" spoken of by Mrs. Eddy on page 288 of Science and Health. By holding fast to what we then see to be the true state of affairs, the right condition will be manifested.

A student of Christian Science found herself, through the mistake of another, placed in a very unpleasant position as to her home life, where there seemed to be no avenue of escape. There was also a great deal of opposition to her study of Christian Science, and she struggled continually with a sense of irritation over the seeming hopelessness of the situation. When the time came for her vacation, she determined to devote it to the solving of the problem. For a week almost her entire time was spent studying and seeking the understanding she seemed to need. At the end of the week several friends met her and all exclaimed at her changed appearance. She knew the work was finished, and she felt like a child who had given up trying to untangle a snarl in some yarn and had pushed the whole thing into its mother's hands, confident that she would shortly make it all straight.

When she went home, conditions had not changed for the better. On the contrary, they seemed to be worse than ever; but she knew God was governing and guiding, and she did not lose her new peace. When she found discord, the comforting thought came: None of this has even touched the real, and if you hold fast to what you know of true harmony, it will be manifested outwardly, sometime, in some way.

It was four months before any outward change took place, and another five months before she was entirely free; but those nine months were lived with an almost constant peace that the world cannot take away, and an unshakable confidence that God was caring for His children. At the end of the nine months, not only was she herself freed and placed in almost ideal surroundings, but good had come to all concerned, and a seemingly difficult business problem had been solved for one of the persons. The working out of this problem proved that God's plans for us are always far better than anything we could possibly outline for ourselves; and it also proved that the furnishings of our mental house determine our environment. After we have once experienced the wonderfully inspiring sense of God's power to prove His goodness, it is not so hard to trust Him to care for His child the next time temptation whispers that evil is really more powerful than good; and having seen the actuality of good, we have reached the point of joyous assurance that no matter what may appear to our outward vision, the situation is in God's hands, and His plan is certain to be unfolded to us in all its perfection.

Lights Along the Way

MIGNONETTE C. STARKWEATHER

AT a testimony meeting one Wednesday evening, several individuals spoke of certain verses of Scripture or quotations from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, as standing out prominently in their thought. In times of specific need these quotations came clearly to them, and realization of their spiritual import solved the problem seemingly at hand. These remarks reminded one present of a traveler who had a long road to travel, which appeared to be very dark. Knowing it was the right road, however, she started on her way. Before going very far she came within sight of a bright light which illumined the path for quite a distance, but beyond it looked very dark again. By the time the traveler had gone as far as this light shone, behold, in the distance another light gleamed. Again and again this occurred, until at length she knew that no matter how dark the road seemed at times, the light already seen was sufficient until more light came, and that more light was there as soon as it was really needed. The quotations referred to may be likened to the lights along the road, and the realization of their truth comes to the faithful student of Christian Science just at the time when it is most needed.

A practitioner on going into a home where death seemed knocking at the door, remarked to a member of the family, "With God all things are possible." As this individual saw the loved one restored to health and began the study of Christian Science, many times when there was a struggle these words came to her, "With God all things are possible," and the path was traveled with renewed courage. This was a wonderful light along the road. The full realization of the truth it proclaims emphasizes the fact that God is the real power, and the practitioner is the messenger presenting the truth about God and man to the patient. On page 207 of Science and Health are these words: "There is but one primal cause. Therefore there can be no effect from any other cause." This has served as another light along the road. Since effect is always of like nature as its cause, and since God, good, is the only cause, then it follows logically that the only effect is good. Exposure to draught, therefore, sudden change of temperature, wet feet, and the like, produce no ill effect in the experience of the alert Christian Scientist who realizes that these conditions are not causes, there being but one real cause; but the acceptance of the false mortal belief is followed by such seeming effects.

When confronted with an erroneous condition, its nothingness can soon be understood if tested out by the following words on page 340 of Science and Health: "All that really exists is in and of God, and manifests His love." If a condition does not exist in God, infinite good; if it has not been made by God and does not manifest God's love, then evidently it does not exist at all. Take, for instance, some claim of sickness. If one is almost believing in its reality, let him quickly apply the test. Does sickness exist in God, in Spirit? Did God make it, when all He made was good? Does sickness manifest God's love? If not it does not exist at all. It is just as much an illusion as that the rails of the railroad track meet in the distance. Now, if we just as surely know that, despite the evidence of the material senses, sickness is also an illusion, may we not overcome it with the same assurance of safety? There will never be room or time for discouragement to creep into thought if one has faith enough to know that no matter how dark it may seem at times, no matter how difficult the situation may appear, still, through and above it all, as Mrs. Eddy tells us on page 503 of Science and Health, "the light of ever-present Love illumines the universe."

A Few Teachings from the Bible

CLARENCE A. BUSKIRK

HOW terse and crisp and noble and true are a vast number of utterances in the Bible! In Proverbs we read concerning "him that hath an evil eye" that "as he thinketh in his heart, so is he." In Psalms we may read that "the fool hath said in his heart, There is no God." These words of the fool are contemptuous; but that God is, stands forever a self-evident verity to every wise man, to every one who really thinks. Men may differ among themselves about who or what God is, but that is the extent of their differences; for we all feel and know the eternal existence of that Supreme Being revealed to Moses as "I AM THAT I AM."

The Bible tells us that God is Spirit, and that He is omnipresence. What is termed matter cannot be all-present, in any shape. The so-called physical senses cannot discern God; for He can be discerned only spiritually. Man is conscious of God because man is spiritual. His apparent vestment of matter constitutes no part of his real being; for it is merely temporal and phenomenal. Spirit is self-existent and eternal. Self-existence has no beginning and no ending. That which is a reflection of Spirit is likewise eternal. It is axiomatic that two bodies cannot occupy the same place at the same time. If God is omnipresent, then what are sin, sickness, and death? Is God all-present where sin, sickness, and death appear to be? Yes: because evil in all its aspects is a seeming and not reality,—the same stuff of which the dreams of the night are made.

God is Life; and in Revelation we find the promise, "I will give unto him that is athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely." No one can find any other source of life. Life includes health and harmony; for both are good, as well as essential. Life does not include sickness or death, just as harmony does not include discords. To think of existence as eternal implies a Being who is eternally alive. God is good. He is not relatively good—partly good and partly bad. He is absolutely good. What is called evil is self-destructive. Everything which is of God, therefore, is likewise absolutely good; or, to employ the words of the Bible, "God saw every thing that he had made, and, behold, it was very good,"—very good, not partly good and partly bad. God never made any form of sin, sickness, death—because they are not good.

God is infinite, eternal, omnipresent, omnipotent, omniscient Truth. These statements of God's being and nature are self-evident verities which follow by inevitable logic from the premise that God is. We reason up to them, just as the mathematician reasons inevitably up to the highest problems in mathematics, or to the demonstration of problems in Euclid. God must be Truth, or there would be nothing. God is Love. The Bible assures us of this, as well as that God is Truth and Life. God is ever reflecting perfect and divine loving-kindness through everything which is of Him—everything which He has made. Divine Love is the great creative power supplying all true impulse. The Bible admonishes us not to be afraid; to love one another, and not to hate; to be of good cheer; to have faith in God. Fear, which includes hurry, worry, anxiety, and hate, which includes envy and malice, disastrously affects in belief the circulation, the nerves, and the functions of the body. These states of thought are antipodal to faith in God. Good cheer benefits man in all ways. Good cheer is not born of any destructive passion or emotion. Fear and hate are not of God, are not good. According to the measure of a man's faith in God, fear and hate and all injurious passions and emotions disappear and cheerfulness unveils her radiant face. However our earthly fortunes may seem to prosper or to darken and decay, however we smile in the sunlight or sulk and sadden in the shadows, when we find faith in God we then know assuredly that the everlasting arms of divine Love are around us and beneath us always and everywhere. Thus knowing, we grow serene.

This mortal life oft seems a purgatory
Full of drear toils and pains—a fearsome story;
Under a firmament of lowering clouds,
And which false sense in hopeless darkness shrouds!
And yet that picture is a lying dream
Of the same stuff which may to sleepers seem;
And when those dreary cloud-shapes break away,
Then shines on man the full and perfect day;
Then where were clouds the radiant stars appear—
Eternal stars of faith and hope and cheer.

Many more things are taught in the Bible, and many more citations therefrom might be made, of course, if space permitted; but have we not shown sufficient to evidence that Mary Baker Eddy, a little more than fifty years ago, with her illuminating insight and profound genius, discovered for mankind the true Science of Christianity? Concerning her discovery she says in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 110): "The Bible was my only textbook. The Scriptures were illumined; reason and revelation were reconciled, and afterwards the truth of Christian Science was demonstrated."

"All these things shall be added"

ANNE CARY MARTIN

ADVANCING in our study of Christian Science we learn with more clearness that substance is Spirit. In our daily work, either at home or in business, we need daily supplies and comforts, and feeling they are rightly ours we strive earnestly and honestly for them. Unsuccessful efforts frequently bring disappointment and discouragement; and so on reflection we find that we were working from a material standpoint with self-consciousness, pride, or haste for riches, all of which inevitably bring little relief from discomfort. When we stop to study and think,—turn to God in prayer,—and realize that all substance is God, good, we know that only by seeking first this spiritual good can we receive that for which we should really be working. At this point a great load has been lifted; we find that our responsibility lies in looking to God for all guidance and supply, and in obeying His voice.

In just the proportion that we trust and patiently work and wait, do we receive. If we are not always conscious of abundance, we may find that even though obeying, we had forgotten to give thanks to God, the giver of all good gifts. Little is rightly ours until we recognize all good as coming from God and give thanks in gratitude. As more gratitude is expressed more light is given us for our work. Thus in time we find our needs supplied beyond anything we had desired or hoped for. What we really want and shall eventually attain through our clearer and firmer understanding of God and of the operation of His law, is the ever present opportunity to fulfill His law of good. In this fulfillment we have all our desires satisfied, and the selfish, false desires disappear from our thoughts. In reflecting Life, Truth, and Love we are doing the will of God. All our blessings and supply come through obedience to God's law, the law of right, and it is only in the kingdom of God that we find this law and our supply through its operation.

When we feel the slightest sense of disappointment or loss, if we only stop and pray we quickly find the right way, and in turning and following God's command receive the blessing. In order to keep our pathway open to Truth, to the right way of doing our work, we must keep away from self in our thinking and look and work for universal rights and needs, and so receive with all others the one great reward and blessing. In other words, let us work from and through divine Principle, and its law, which keeps self and all selfishness out of the problem.

To Him that Hath

MYRA POLLARD

AT every point in one's experience in Christian Science, there is much of grace and truth to rejoice over. One who is just approaching this Science for healing of mind or body has the joy of approaching, the wonder of seeing the gates of relief open, and the delight of taking the first step. From that instant on there is always some gain, of health or success or happiness, to accept and appreciate; and as he notes these points of light and turns resolutely away from the dark shadows of failure or discouragement, he finds the way illumined for further advancement, and soon gains new vantage ground.

It is not meant that anyone should evade or avoid difficulties or turn back from any obstacle actually presenting itself. It is only meant that he should absolutely refuse to dwell upon evil in retrospect or as a fact of experience. If there has been failure in the attempt to overcome any phase of error, this very failure belongs just as much to the realm of nothingness as the error itself, and should be so considered. Thus any difficulty will be regarded as a present point of attack, and so be contemplated only to be conquered.

In the parable of the talents, the Master commended the workers who appreciated and used what they had, instead of grieving over what they had not; and as each one of us joyously considers and makes the most of the good already in his experience, he will find more added, as he feels deeper peace and greater strength for renewed effort, "For unto every one that hath shall be given."

Selected Articles

["'Proper self-government'"—The Christian Science Monitor, Boston, U. S. A., Oct. 21, 1919]

All over the world men and nations are striving after self-government of some sort or another. They are overthrowing kings and emperors, setting up new governments, adopting and amending constitutions, and they are achieving these results in ways varying in accord with the progress they have made out of materiality. Some are achieving with machine guns, others by genuine elections. And all the while, right where this tumult and shouting is going on, there is ideal government already in existence, now and always established. For, as Mrs. Eddy says in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 106), "Man is properly self-governed only when he is guided rightly and governed by his Maker, divine Truth and Love." And again on page 125 of the same book, "Reflecting God's government, man is self-governed." Man reflects exclusively one boundless intelligence, the infinite consciousness, or God. This intelligence is the divine Ego, the limitless I AM. Man, created and controlled completely by his Maker, is governed by this one infinite intelligence. Thus, faultless government is here to-day, now, and it is unchangeably good in its perfectly unfolding variety.

Truly, all the present struggles of the world in its bolshevistic, its socialistic, its revolutionary movements of all kinds, make up the birth throes of the world in the bringing forth of its better understanding of genuine government. But upheaval and revolution are not required to set up true government, for the real sovereignty is even now in control. Men, turning constantly, again and again, to Principle, and permanently turned to Principle, would experience real revolution. The nations that have reached the highest human sense of true ruling at the present moment are, in general, experiencing the least difficulty. And in proportion as they cling steadfastly to improved understanding of government, and seek higher and higher concepts, they will continue to go calmly and gloriously on.

Principle and its idea is all the government there is, infinitely good in all its beneficent forms. Therefore men need only to look to Principle for every phase of governmental activity. What sum total of legislative, executive, judicial, and constitutional activity is included in the wonderful statement of the one mighty authority which is even now being disclosed to the world, as given in the Christian Science textbook. There Mrs. Eddy says (Science and Health, p. 340): "One infinite God, good, unifies men and nations; constitutes the brotherhood of man; ends wars; fulfils the Scripture, 'Love thy neighbor as thyself;' annihilates pagan and Christian idolatry,—whatever is wrong in social, civil, criminal, political, and religious codes; equalizes the sexes; annuls the curse on man, and leaves nothing that can sin, suffer, be punished or destroyed." This limitless government, the one infinite Mind, is executive in unifying men and nations and ending wars. It is legislative and judicial in annihilating injustice and evil in social and civil customs and enactments, in criminal, political, and religious laws and promulgations. It is truly constitutional in equalizing the sexes. The one Principle and lawgiver is the all-sufficient and ever active sovereign of His image and likeness.

The unveiling of pure government, in which human personality is being shown to have no place at all, has made great strides throughout the earth. One very great proof of this is the falling of autocratic government, where dynasties in some instances had continued for centuries. For the autocrat, the absolute monarch, is a clear example of government depending entirely on finite personality, instead of infinite Principle. One such famous autocrat once said: "The state; it is I." The nation ruled over by this absolutist, progress has long since purged of such a concept of government.

But however much there is cause for rejoicing in the realization that government by the people through their representatives is sweeping the earth, and that this is a far loftier mode of ruling power than other modes displaced by it. the fact remains that this is but an approach to man's absolutely ideal ruling power, the divine consciousness. Unadulterated democracy and self-government, as shown in the quotations from the Christian Science textbook, are not government by numbers of people, whether many or few, by many minds, whether so-called brilliant or dull, but by infinite Spirit, divine Mind. God brings forth and directs His unbounded expression, and man reflects and is always satisfied with that dominion. Such administration is continuously successful, happy, inspiring. Its very perpetual existence is absolute and has no opposite. Infinite Mind knows nothing unlike itself; it has no sense of matter, human personality, material autocracy, limited democracy, or minds many. Principle, governing man, is unlimited democracy, for as the result of this sovereignty man has infinite freedom of thought, worship, and expression.

It is self-evident truth that man is created free, and coexistent with his Maker. He is undeniably released from all evil, oppression, domination, and absolutism of every kind; for good is the one existence. That this is so is seen from the simple demonstration in Christian Science that divine consciousness and its infinite idea is all there is, and what is contains no element of what is not, no element of destruction or evil. So, all there is is good. Principle and its expression is complete and unqualified declaration of independence from all that is wrong, lawless, disorderly, and tyrannical.

[C. W. Hale in Marion (Ind.) Chronicle]

Under the caption, "Miracles and Medicine," is a quotation from a sermon in which a minister refers to numerous places in the Bible which he claims limit healing to the apostolic age and record God as indorsing medicine, medical treatment, and physicians as the properly authorized channels for healing work. While no direct mention is made of Christian Science, the attack is made upon spiritual healing, and the inference is that the Scriptures oppose the methods employed by Christian Science. I would like to correct any erroneous impression that this sermon might give. Taken as a whole, it seems to be a zealous effort to interpret, if not distort, the Scriptures to make them conform to preconceived ideas and prejudices, and to justify an inability to heal the sick through the teachings of so-called orthodox churches of to-day.

The claim is made that the healing of the sick in the time of Jesus, and during the apostolic age, was given as a sign to convince unbelievers, regardless of the fact that even while Jesus was doing his healing work he said no sign should be given to "an evil and adulterous generation." Evidently Jesus considered the healing of sickness the result of the truth he taught, and not a sign to convince doubters and unbelievers, and his teaching would indicate that the regenerative and healing work followed as a necessary consequence of the understanding of that truth both in his own work and that of his followers.

The assertion that those who claim to heal the sick in any other way than by the power of medicine "have not the Lord's way, because God endorsed medicine and physicians," is disproved completely by the very references given in the sermon, especially when read in connection with the context. Taking one reference as an example of this, we read in Jeremiah as follows: "There is none to plead thy cause, that thou mayest be bound up: thou hast no healing medicines." Can anyone by any stretch of imagination or otherwise conceive of this as an "endorsement" of medicine, as our good brother claims? Surely this cannot be, especially when we read on and get the immediate context and the climax of the statement, which says, "For I will restore health unto thee, and I will heal thee of thy wounds, saith the Lord."

This is but one of many such references given in the sermon quoted, and to any fair-minded person would be convincing evidence that Christian Science is right in its teaching that material remedies were not ordained or "endorsed" by God, and that it is only the power of God that "healeth all thy diseases," that "redeemeth thy life from destruction."

Christian Science gives a clear, practical understanding of the Christ-teaching. It is thus demonstrating the power of the Christ to leaven the lump of human thought with its beneficial influence. It is dispelling crude materialism and supplying a more spiritual basis of thought and action. It is working a change for the better in the three measures of meal,—science, theology, and medicine. Mrs. Eddy writes in Science and Health (p. 118): "Ages pass, but this leaven of Truth is ever at work. It must destroy the entire mass of error, and so be eternally glorified in man's spiritual freedom."

[Aaron E. Brandt in Mahoney City (Pa.) Record]

The remarks on Christian Science contributed by a physician and appearing in a recent issue, exhibit such a spirit of tolerance, and such an evident desire to be fair, that they merit my sincere respect, even though I cannot agree with all his conclusions.

There is one statement made therein to which I desire permission to reply briefly, namely, that "man is no more all mind than he is all matter." Now while it may be the commonly accepted view that man is partly mind and partly matter, no one I believe has yet been found who has undertaken to say which particular portion or what percentage of him is mind and which matter. The chemists usually state that the human body is composed largely of water and the remainder consists of inorganic salts, leaving the mental phase of the problem out of the calculation entirely. But all chemists do not stop there, for we have no less an authority than Wilhelm Oswald, formerly Professor of Chemistry in the University of Leipsic, for the statement that "matter is a thing of thought." Another eminent authority, Professor Fiske, is responsible for the following: "All the qualities of matter are what the mind makes them, and have no existence as such apart from the mind." Plato, Abelard, Berkeley, Sir Oliver Lodge, and other great thinkers have declared that the starting point of matter is not material but mental. Herbert Spencer, whose standing as a philosopher and scientist is among the highest, stated his conviction and conclusion that even the so-called vitality of the human body, equally with other sense phenomena, is part and parcel of one and the same thing called energy.

Digitized by Google

Now in view of such opinions to the effect that all matter is of mental origin, and must therefore be of a mental nature, it ought to be of interest to anyone who has the great problem of human welfare at heart to note how the statements from such high sources compare with the teaching of Mrs. Eddy, the revered Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science. On page 177 of Science and Health we find the following: "Mortal mind and body are one. Neither exists without the other, and both must be destroyed by immortal Mind. Matter, or body, is but a false concept of mortal mind. This so-called mind builds its own superstructure, of which the material body is the grosser portion; but from first to last, the body is a sensuous, human concept."

The importance of Mrs. Eddy's discovery and teaching lies in this fact, that it reveals the fundamental difference between spiritual reality and eternal truth on the one hand, and the false human conceptions as manifested through matter and called energy, on the other; and it is owing to her clear conception and proof in practice of this difference that all manner of sickness and disease have been healed in Christian Science.

When Mrs. Eddy discovered that material power called energy is not spiritual power and therefore not true power at all, she reached the point of definitely understanding what Christ Jesus meant when he said, "It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing." And in her further discovery that a fleshly body and a fleshly mind are not really man at all, but that man is spiritual and as Spirit made him, she saw with unmistakable vision the truth of Paul's statement, "Henceforth know we no man after the flesh." Now the result of this discovery in human experience may be briefly stated in her own words as found on page 317 of Science and Health: "The individuality of man is no less tangible because it is spiritual and because his life is not at the mercy of matter. The understanding of his spiritual individuality makes man more real, more formidable in truth, and enables him to conquer sin, disease, and death. Our Lord and Master presented himself to his disciples after his resurrection from the grave, as the self-same Jesus whom they had loved before the tragedy on Calvary."

[Harry Vandegrift in Morrow County Independent, Cardington, Ohio]

Our critic declares that the claims of Mrs. Eddy "for her system of teaching are so extraordinary as to be unbelievable." He evidently means that he cannot accept them. But how about the thousands upon thousands in this and other lands who do accept them? It may be assumed that they possess an average intelligence. Our critic further declares that "probably the outstanding absurdity of her system is her denial of the reality of the material universe, of the human body, of sin, of pain and disease." Christian Science teaching does deny the reality of these things in the absolute, spiritual sense, and the Bible is the authority for it. To flash the statement to the public, omitting the premise from which it is deduced and upon which it rests, places Christian Science and its adherents in a false light. Can we not agree that in our present immature state, none are able to see things as God made them, but as we rise spiritually our views of creation will improve until we finally awake in the likeness of God—when we will know even as also we are known?

The material universe, the human body, sin, pain, and disease, Christian Science admits are real to material sense, but it is this false sense of things which Christian Science repudiates. According to the first chapter of Genesis God made all that was made and it was very good. It was a spiritual creation, however. Christian Science insists upon the absolute or spiritual creation and preaches from this standpoint. The new heaven and new earth recorded in Revelation will appear to any consciousness prepared for it. Likewise, the new man, or spiritual, incorporeal child of God, will be easily cognized when the old man with his deeds is put off. Paul declares, "Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear."

Since our critic raises the question, one may with propriety inquire into the record of the material systems of healing in coping with the recent epidemic of influenza. A charitable critic would recall the parable of the beam and the mote. Whatever of failure may attend the efforts of Christian Scientists in their healing work, does not in the least disprove Christian Science. The rule of healing having been proved, it needs only a greater diligence and perseverance in its application in order to become master of every adverse situation. All problems of discord and distress have answers. Those answers are already known to the divine Mind. Just so soon as man has that Mind in him "which was also in Christ Jesus," he will be able to do the works which the Master did and, according to the promise, "greater works." Christian Science is neither creed nor dogma, but simply Christian truth, scientific Christianity.

[Joseph E. Badger in Montreal (Canada) Star]

In these days of progressive freedom of thought and action we must be prepared to see many ancient customs broken and many cherished notions upset, but the use of a church edifice for a lecturer to attack the religion of a number of your fellow citizens, a purpose obviously not in accord with the teachings of Christ Jesus, inevitably recalls our Master's pointed question, "Is it not written, My house shall be called of all nations the house of prayer?"

The tirade of abuse directed against a noble and spiritual-minded woman, as Mrs. Eddy was known to be by many thousands of grateful followers in this and other lands, is to be deeply regretted. Like all great religious and moral reformers, Mrs. Eddy has been the target for misrepresentation and sometimes malicious attack by those who fail to understand her. The animus of these attacks, however, is so apparent that they have fallen harmless in the past and can have no better success in the present instance.

Christian Scientists welcome and invite a thorough investigation into their teaching and practice, and those who wish to be correctly informed will scarcely be content with the interpretations and denunciations of its avowed opponents. In regard to contagious diseases Christian Scientists obey the laws and strictly observe sanitary and quarantine regulations. As to the "money making" of which our adversary discourses so glibly, there are few who do so much work for others gratuitously as the Christian Science practitioner is constantly doing. It is not to be supposed that anyone would expect to call a physician who might, or might not, cure him, without paying him his bill, small or large. The Christian Scientist asks for a modest fee, which will compare quite favorably with that of any medical practitioner or surgeon.

Christian Scientists believe in God, in the divinity of the Christ, in the inspiration of the Scriptures, in unceasing prayer, in the highest morality of thought and conduct, and in the practical possibility of a present overcoming of sin and all its effects through spiritual apprehension of the Christ, "the Comforter," "the Spirit of truth."

The Candid Friend and Whisperers

"FAITHFUL are the wounds of a friend; but the kisses of an enemy are deceitful." He is indeed a true friend who warns us of our danger and will be sharp with us that we may be saved. He is ever our well-wisher, yea, more than that, our reliable helper, perhaps closer than a brother in that his relationship in love is voluntary and mental, not the relationship of birth and circumstance.

The teaching of Jesus was ever in favor of true kindness and the restoration of the lost. He bade his disciples first to have humility in order to be great; then in the case of a brother sinning, to go and reprove him—just to have friend and friend together alone. If there was a readiness to listen, then a brother had been won over to the right view. If he would not listen to one alone, then the help of other friends might be invited. If he refused their ministry, the matter might be brought to the church, and if he declined to be amenable to Christianity, only then was his choice to be recognized, in that he classed himself as a pagan. It was the teaching of the Master that if a man at the very altar remembered a grievance which his brother had against him, he should leave there his gift and depart to be first reconciled to his brother before offering it. By disclosing man's true relationship to God, Christ Jesus made clear what was true relationship between men, and revealed a spiritual meaning for the proverb, "A friend loveth at all times, and a brother is born for adversity."

The opposite of the candid friend who is trying to enlarge friendship and its comfort is the evasive whisperer, concerning whom it is said, "A froward man soweth strife: and a whisperer separateth chief friends." Quite early in the history of the Hebrew people it was recognized that the busybody working as a mesmerist in slandering others was harmful; hence one of the rules given in Leviticus was, "Thou shalt not go up and down as a talebearer among thy people." This rule is translated into picturesque language when it is said in Proverbs, "Where no wood is, there the fire goeth out: so where there is no talebearer, the strife ceaseth." Among other wise sayings we find this proverb: "The words of a talebearer are as wounds." This word talebearer may properly be rendered as in the margin of the Scripture version, whisperers. Paul in writing to the Romans indicates with what other conditions of mind they are to be classed, putting together "whisperers, backbiters, haters of God, despiteful, proud, boasters, inventors of evil things," and so on. He speaks elsewhere of the overt action of detractors, associating together "debates, envyings, wraths, strifes, backbitings, whisperings, swellings, tumults." Our Leader, Mrs. Eddy, lets us know that mental detraction and interference may go on in secret, for she says in her "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 368), "The silent address of a mental malpractitioner can only be portrayed in these words of the apostle, 'whisperers,' and 'the poison of asps is under their tongue.'"

In the hearts of Christian Scientists there springs up perpetual gratitude because their Leader fully explored the recesses of mortal mind, and handled the hissing serpents, showing them to be powerless. Neither the outspoken hatred of an enemy nor his hate cherished sullenly within, has any power to injure another whose heart is at peace with God. Mrs. Eddy is quite emphatic on this point. She says (Science and Health, p. 571), "Know thyself, and God will supply the wisdom and the occasion for a victory over evil. Clad in the panoply of Love, human hatred cannot reach you."

It is the time of the winnowing fan, and all things are being shaken so that the false may be driven away by the wind, and the good preserved in the garner. Consequently every human life is being tested by the question, What will you be? Will you be friend to mankind, healing its woes, or just a whisperer multiplying its fears and hatreds? Let it be understood that the whole work of the whisperer is certain to collapse. If he separate foremost, chief, and familiar friends to suit his purposes, it is only for a time. Love is greater than slander and detraction; warm hand will find brother hand again, drawing the friends together in more trustful friendship than before. Has the whisperer with his slander driven a country's benefactor into exile? When the people know the truth they recall him to greater honor. Has the whisperer with detraction brought discord into families, division into the church? Even then his purpose will fail, for Christian Science not only is working healing and comfort for the individual, but is establishing right relationships in families, and revealing to church and state how wholesome and kindly can be the fellowship of all those who love Principle.

The whisperer, then, is forever doomed to failure, while the friend is assured of success. Christ Jesus was spoken of as "that great friend to all the sons of men." Christian Scientists in following his example are called upon to conquer all that spoils friendship and good will, so that they may reveal to the suffering people, longing for relief and healing, praying for joy, the veritable "kindness and love of God our Saviour." That which opposes is destined to disappointment, however much it may perplex us for a day. Mrs. Eddy says (Science and Health, p. 563): "We may well be perplexed at human fear; and still more astounded at hatred, which lifts its hydra head, showing its horns in the many inventions of evil. But why should we stand aghast at nothingness?"

Grace

IN speaking of Jesus, Luke says, "The child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom: and the grace of God was upon him;" and John tells us, "The law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ;" while the psalmist in referring to the Christ writes: "Thou art fairer than the children of men: grace is poured into thy lips: therefore God hath blessed thee for ever." From this it may readily be seen that the divine quality of grace is indispensable to the expression of man as the image and likeness of God.

Grace is a term of large and varied meaning. Shakespeare defines it as embracing: "Justice, verity, temperance, stableness, bounty, perseverance, mercy, loveliness, devotion, patience, courage, fortitude." What could present a longer list of virtues? And surely each one of most desirable nature. In spite of this, mortals are not quick to prize or cultivate this heavenly quality. Indeed, on the contrary, many seem to disregard it, especially in its relation to the finer amenities of living. We sometimes even find mankind so blind to its beauty that they pride themselves on their carelessness to all the greater tendernesses and refinements of true loving-kindness, to the extent of believing that roughness and sometimes coarseness itself are greater proofs of honesty than are thoughtfulness for others and the gentleness of demeanor which result therefrom and always tend to greater loveliness of character.

Perhaps no single divine quality is capable of unfolding with richer blessing in the teaching of all that is exquisite and beautiful as well as strong and holy. The Bible is always talking of the graciousness of God, and one cannot contemplate this without instantly being conscious of a larger sense of spiritual love, of the beauty of holiness, of the perfection of being. With one's thought opened to grace, everything takes on a new meaning. Each thought, word, and deed becomes invested with a fresher and larger significance. Whatever it is one's duty to do,—if the act is accompanied with grace,—can be accomplished in such a manner as to enrich not only the act, but the actor and all who are in any way associated therewith.

If Christian Scientists were but awake to the wonder and power of their prayer, "Give us grace for to-day; feed the famished affections" (Science and Health, p. 17), they would realize how impossible it is to divorce grace from love. To conceive of love without the element of grace would be out of the question. And yet how deadened is humanity to this fact. Entirely unmindful of this unity, it brusquely pushes aside its neighbor in the endeavor to make its own way. It talks and laughs loudly, forgetful of its brother's right to quietude. It wriggles and twists in public, utterly thoughtless of the comfort of its fellow. It is self-assertive, careless, forgetful of others.

In the Manual of The Mother Church, Mrs. Eddy counsels Christian Scientists to remember "the sweet amenities of Love" (Art. VIII, Sect. 1). Now the truth is that it is quite impossible to do anything too perfectly, and the highest sense of refinement is something that should be sought in the performance of every least act or duty. There is no circumstance which the grace of tender consideration will not bless with its hallowed influence. When Mrs. Eddy tells us, in Science and Health (p. 4), that "what we most need is the prayer of fervent desire for growth in grace, expressed in patience, meekness, love, and good deeds," she certainly encourages us to seek, in addition to other graces of the spirit, that exquisiteness of demeanor which could never offend the most fastidious, and is born only of that love of purity and true unselfishness which because of loving thoughtfulness must result in blessing to all.

This is not in any way a plea for the shallowness of outward show. There can be no true grace which is not the reflection of God, Spirit. This grace is not something to be bought with money. It has nothing to do with outward apparel or appearance. It may be expressed by the child. A writer once said: "As grace is first from God, so it is continually from Him. Grace is but glory begun, and glory is but grace perfected." Jesus' life was filled to overflowing with it. As we follow in his footsteps may we too prove the blessing ours which John claimed when he said: "Of his fullness have all we received and grace for grace,"—while Paul gives us the added and most comforting assurance that "we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ: by whom also we have access by faith into this grace wherein we stand, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God."

Current Notes

WISCONSIN.—The attitude of the daily papers continues to become more and more friendly. There were fewer adverse references to Christian Science, Christian Scientists, or Mrs. Eddy published in the daily press during the period just past than ever before. Every correction of adverse comment offered to the daily press was courteously published. Some of the religious papers continue to attack Christian Science, and though four letters of correction were submitted, not one was published. However, we feel that the better class of religious papers does not attack Christian Science or give space to such attacks.

A bill to amend the Workmen's Compensation Act to permit workmen under that act to have Christian Science treatment in case of injury was introduced. This bill was given a hearing before the Senate committee on corporations, and also before the assembly committee on public welfare. The bill passed both houses by a large majority, only to be vetoed at last by the Governor, the Senate refusing to pass over his veto.

The Governor's objection to the bill was that as the employer had to pay the bills for the illness or disability of an employee, under the Workmen's Compensation Act, he should have something to say about the form of treatment. He assured us that if we amended the bill in such a manner that the employer could, if he wished, elect not to come under that part of the act permitting Christian Science treatment, by filing a written notice with the Industrial Commission, he would not oppose it. Although nearing the close of the session of the legislature, we immediately prepared another bill with said amendment. This bill was passed by both houses, signed by the Governor on July 15, and is now Wisconsin law. The Workmen's Compensation Act has been amended to change the word "accident" to "injury;" and as "injury" is now made to include occupational diseases, the scope of the act is much wider.

LONDON, ENGLAND.—Seventh Church of Christ, Scientist, which organized in December, 1914, has removed from Queens Gate Hall, Harrington Road, where it has held services since May, 1915. The church has purchased a piece of land in Wright's Lane, Kensington, a street which is both central and quiet, and a temporary building has been erected thereon. It was ready for use in seven weeks, and has room for the increasing activities of the church. The hall has a seating capacity of from three hundred and fifty to four hundred.

DURHAM COUNTY, ENGLAND.—During the year, October 1, 1918, to October 1, 1919, there has been much more activity than in any previous year since the inception of Christian Science in this county. This was caused largely by the introduction into Parliament of the Ministry of Health Bill. A meeting of Christian Scientists was held in December, and the work inaugurated there was carried on until the bill went through Parliament, when it was demonstrated that the act would not interfere in any way with the rights and liberties of Christian Scientists.

The newspapers and editors in the county have kept well informed about the activities of the Christian Science movement, and articles on the questions concerning a ministry of health in England and America have been kept before them.

Some of the papers mentioned the Christian Science War Relief work of The Mother Church, and the facts and figures were in that way made public. There have been no criticisms of Christian Science this year, nor yet of its revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy.—Committee on Publication.

The Lectures

NELIGH, NEB. (First Church).—William D. Kilpatrick, lecturer; introduced by B. Frank Hedlund, who said in part:—

Christian Science did not come into the world on any great wave of popularity, heralded by some great personage. It came silently but powerfully into the consciousness of a God-loving woman, Mrs. Eddy. Christian Science is essentially an understanding of God. All of this teaching can be found in the Bible, but we have become accustomed to thinking of the innumerable proofs of God's power there recorded as things remote and not for us here and now. During the past fifty years, however, since "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy was given to the world, innumerable proofs have shown that God's power is still available to all who earnestly strive to use it.

FOND DU LAC, WIS. (First Church).—Judge Samuel W. Greene, lecturer; introduced by George B. Gray, who said in part:—

When I first began attending Christian Science meetings I was impressed by two things: first, by the large percentage of men in the congregation; second, by the happy, contented look of all those present. So greatly was I impressed that I began seeking for the reason. That was nearly five years ago. Since that day my investigations of the subject have convinced me that Christian Science not only is good for women and children but that it is also a good workable religion for the business man. And it is a workable religion seven days in the week. I have found out that Christian Science, instead of exerting all of its energies toward preparing men for happiness in the world to come, prepares them for happiness right here and now.

PITTSBURGH, PA. (First Church).—John Randall Dunn, lecturer; introduced by James H. Griffith, who said in part:—

In this age of great unrest, doubt, fear, and confusion, the world is awakening to the fact that if we are to rise above the present day difficulties and successfully work out our salvation, it must be done through dependence upon a higher wisdom and knowledge, dependence upon divine Love; and so in the human consciousness there is a great longing for truth and spiritual enlightenment. There is ample proof of the correctness of this statement in the very presence here this afternoon of this magnificent audience.

WATERTOWN, WIS. (First Church).—Frank H. Leonard, lecturer; introduced by A. W. Meyer, who said in part:—

Humanity has probably never been in such a state of unrest as it is at present. There seems to be a general restlessness and uneasiness all over the world, and it is felt more or less by everybody. At the same time there is a deep desire and yearning for peace, not only peace among and within the nations, but peace in the heart of the individual. But how can this peace be attained? Many believe that it can be gained in accumulated wealth or other material possessions; others, by having their ambitions satisfied; some think that peace is dependent upon environment or upon human relationships; but all sooner or later meet with disappointment.

Eliphaz, many centuries before the Christian era, sounded the keynote regarding the attainment of peace, when he said to Job, "Acquaint now thyself with him [God], and be at peace." We find throughout the Scriptures that peace is dependent upon one's knowledge of God and of man's relation to God. Jesus, the great Way-shower to all humanity, although confronted on every side by trials and tribulations, was yet the most peaceful man that ever walked the earth, because, according to his own teachings, he so clearly understood God and the relationship between God and man. Jesus said to his followers for all time: "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest," and, "Learn of me . . . and ye shall find rest unto your souls."

The sayings of the Master, many of which seemed vague and even contradictory, are made clear in Christian Science, so that all those who long for peace may find it in this teaching.

OAKLAND, CALIF. (Second Church).—Paul Stark Seeley, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Mae Van Horn, who said in part:—

The question, "What is truth?" which Pilate asked of Jesus, is being asked to-day with greater insistence than ever before in the history of mankind. Many thinking persons have had this question answered to their entire satisfaction through the study and application of Christian Science.

CHICAGO, ILL. (University of Chicago).—The Rev. Andrew J. Graham, lecturer; introduced by Miss Hazel M. Schmoll, who said in part:—

The University of Chicago is an institution to which students come from all parts of the world in search of truth. For centuries the world has been seeking for an answer to Pilate's inquiry, "What is truth?" Christian Science, discovered by Mrs. Eddy in the year 1866, is the science which has come to this age to answer this question. As students of Christian Science we gratefully testify to the efficacy of this truth. When properly applied, it has solved problems of sickness, fear of examinations, and has overcome many other discordant conditions which have arisen during the course of our university life.

FRAMINGHAM, MASS. (Society).—John W. Doorly, lecturer; introduced by Julian A. Jenkins, who said in part:—

Yearning for more knowledge of the living God, Job said, "Oh that I knew where I might find him!" All down the ages mortals have echoed this thought, until to-day we find people no longer content to cling to creeds and human opinions which offer no permanent satisfaction; but on the contrary they have set out in an honest effort to discover the truth, a knowledge of which Jesus declared would make men free. Christian Science acquaints us with the living God and His practical truth, which makes men free indeed. Its message to-day is that given in the Revelation: "Let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely."

NEW ALBANY, IND. (First Church).—Prof. Hermann S. Hering, lecturer; introduced by Miss Lillian Nunnemacher, who said in part:—

The Discoverer of Christian Science and the Founder of its church has written, "To understand God is the work of eternity" (Science and Health, p. 3). The apostle Paul in his second epistle to the Corinthians wrote, "Behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation." Christian Scientists, therefore, heeding the words of these inspired writers, are those who to-day may be found eagerly applying themselves to this one all-important mission,—the work of understanding God, or in other words the working out of one's salvation, which as a present reward is bringing health and strength to the sick, hope and freedom to the sinning, and joy and contentment to the well.

Bakersfield, Calif. (First Church).—John Randall Dunn, lecturer; introduced by C. M. Coonrod, who said in part:—

To the most casual thinker it must be evident that the restless state of the people of the world to-day is an indication of a desire for something that will serve as a guaranty of better conditions or, in other words, of peace and happiness. It is as if the human mind were awakening to the fact that if its desire is to be realized, its calculations must be predicated upon something different and more permanent than that which it has heretofore employed.

Over nineteen hundred years ago, in speaking to a people in a somewhat similar state of thought, Jesus of Nazareth said: "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls." Herein he prescribes that which is most needed to insure an improved condition.

Christian Science teaches how to apply this doctrine in our everyday activities, and in so doing is bringing that peace and happiness into the lives of those who practice its theology. It proves itself to be true by healing the sick, reforming the sinner, and making straight all sorts of discordant conditions.

Kansas City, Mo. (Third Church).—Dr. John M. Tutt, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Lucile C. Mulhall, who said in part:—

In the life and works of Jesus the Christ we find that his whole earthly career, indeed, his mission, was to bring good to humanity. He said of himself, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." Christian Science is based absolutely on the teachings of Christ Jesus, and is proving through the healing of both sickness and sin that divine Love does meet the needs of humanity to-day.

Springfield, Mo. (First Church).—The Rev. Andrew J. Graham, lecturer; introduced by William Hill Barton, who said in part:—

Christian Science is a new revelation of an old idea, even the Christ, Truth, bringing to the human consciousness truth instead of error, facts instead of fiction, a haven of rest for the weary and a mountain of refuge for the sick and the sinning. It is a religion of faith, hope, fruition, confidence, and realization of the allness of good and the nothingness of evil, whereby we manifest here and now health, holiness, harmony, heaven.

Greenwich, Conn. (First Church).—Virgil O. Strickler, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Elsie P. Lovejoy, who said in part:—

Mrs. Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, restored to the world the healing truth taught by Jesus of Nazareth and practiced not only by his disciples but by the Christian churches generally for three hundred years after his earthly career had ended. Christian Scientists of to-day are again practicing this same healing through the understanding obtained by the daily study of the Bible in connection with the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures."

Testimonies of Healing

Nearly two years ago I began to investigate Christian Science, and words cannot express my gratitude to God for the many blessings I have received. I am grateful to Christian Science for the first demonstration which came to me and which was the cause of my continuing in the study of this teaching. For two years I suffered from what is called fistula. I hunted through all the books I could find that explained it, and they all stated nothing would cure it but an operation and said that if not attended to it would lead to something serious. Then I picked up a Sentinel one day and there I found that some one had been cured of fistula by divine Mind, God, good. Then I said, "God is no respecter of persons," and will cure me. I studied the chapter on Prayer in Science and Health; but still there was no healing, so I studied the chapter on Genesis in the same book. This took me about two weeks. Then one morning I awoke feeling that I was healed, and I went to the medicine chest and threw away all the remedies there. Very soon all trace of the fistula was gone.

The Bible and the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, are my daily studies. For this healing by divine Love and for the spiritual uplift which the study of this truth gives, I am truly thankful.—Stead Cliff, Los Angeles, Calif.

Gratitude and love for Christian Science impel me to tell of the blessings it has brought me. For ten years I was an invalid. Ten physicians, one a noted specialist, pronounced my case incurable. They claimed I did not have a sound organ, and that I had tubercular disease of the lungs and bowels. I also suffered from an internal trouble for which I had worn a support five years. My life was one ceaseless torture. During all this time I was an earnest seeker after truth, and would read the Bible and pray for understanding. Jesus said, "If ye continue in my word, . . . ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." These words were with me a great deal and I thought that if I could find the truth I would be free.

At last a Christian Scientist sent me a copy of the Journal and said some Christian Scientists would visit her soon. I sent for them to come to see me and when they did so I thought they were the happiest looking people I ever saw. I felt that my prayer was answered; that I would know the truth which was making their faces shine with the true light, so I asked them what I should do and they told me to get "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. I ordered the book and while it was coming, "Miscellaneous Writings" and some Christian Science literature were sent to me. I only stopped reading them long enough to eat and sleep. I was thirsting for the living water. In less than forty-eight hours I laid the support off and never have had any more need for it. In a few days I was going where I wanted to and eating what the rest of the family ate. I had not partaken of any solid food for over a year, and had been rolled around in an invalid chair. Part of the time I could not even sit up.

The physical healing is beautiful to me, but the spiritual uplift is greater than all. I cannot express the joy, happiness, and peace that fill my heart day by day as I learn more of this healing truth. Surely this Scripture is fulfilled in our home: "Old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new." How can we estimate the value of a book, the study of which brings such transformation and regeneration? I am especially grateful that through it we obtain a demonstrable knowledge of God as the only power. I am grateful for membership in The Mother Church and for class instruction, indeed, for all the blessings I have received. I appreciate the good I get from our literature and my earnest desire is to be a true Christian Scientist.

(Mrs.) Callie Q. Alley, Speers Ferry, Va.

I can corroborate every word of my wife's testimony. It was nothing but the truth revealed to her through Christian Science that healed her. I am so grateful for what it has done in our home.—L. C. Alley.

I want to express publicly my gratefulness to Mrs. Eddy for discovering and giving to the world this wonderful religion. Christian Science is not only a religion of spiritual uplift and physical healing but one we can turn to for the overcoming of all difficulties. Problems which for several years I had been trying hard to solve were opened up to me very clearly in a few weeks in Christian Science and in working them out I had many proofs of the operation of God's law.

As to physical healing, I have seen tubercular disease of the bone overcome, also influenza, biliousness, and many minor ailments. Perhaps the most important healing to me was that of my boy, nine years old. His entire left side was stricken. He could not stand on his left leg, nor could he control his left arm. Even his speech was much affected. After a practitioner had treated him for several weeks apparently with no results, I was seized with terrible fear and went to a doctor, who pronounced it a case of infantile paralysis. I left the doctor's office feeling and knowing that God was my only help. When the practitioner told me that my thought so filled with fear had no power, for God is omnipotent, suddenly a sense of peace came to me. The next morning the boy got up and dressed himself for the first time in several months. He was perfectly healed and has since enjoyed better health than ever before in his life. I am most grateful for this healing.

My hope in sending this testimony for publication is that some one may be helped, encouraged, or interested by it in Christian Science, as I am so often helped by the testimonies of others; for although it is many years since the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, logically explained for me the problem of dualism and set me on the road to prove the explanation true, these testimonies to the efficacy of Christian Science in overcoming every possible human trouble, constantly reassure and strengthen me, prompting again and again the song of gratitude.

Thoroughly dissatisfied with the teachings of the faith in which I was educated and such philosophy as I had inquired into, sickened physically and mentally, with an objectless sense of existence, I was in great need when Science and Health was recommended to me by a friend. The purchase of that book was the best investment I ever made, for the truth it reveals began at once to satisfy, to heal, to enlighten. With the help of a practitioner it was not long before a physical trouble for which I had been invalided home from Ceylon, disappeared; the taste for smoking was taken away from me, and I was relieved of the belief that I must indulge in alcoholic drinks for one reason or another, although I had no particular desire for them. These improvements have of course been permanent.

For the last fifteen years I have relied entirely on Christian Science for healing, and it has brought me not only a satisfactory solution of every physical, financial, and personal problem to which I have faithfully applied my understanding of the truth, but the far greater gift of spiritual enlightenment.

While serving with the British Army in Europe I found that gratitude for Christian Science carried me happily through many trying experiences—through extreme conditions of physical endurance and many variations of work, environment, climate, responsibility, associates, and so on. When one takes on a job in grateful assurance of demonstrating Christian Science, one learns something of what Mrs. Eddy must mean when she writes (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 263), "Always bear in mind that His presence, power, and peace meet all human needs and reflect all bliss."

For many years before I began to read our textbook, the Bible had afforded me very little help, for it seemed to present only instances of divine intervention long since discontinued and ideals too lofty to be attempted now. The Bible is still the most beautiful book in the English language, but it is also the most intelligible and practical. I am most grateful to our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, for this elucidation of the holy Scriptures, which has again rendered the knowledge of God demonstrable, and so finally lifted religion out of the realm of mere belief and controversy. I would like to add a word of sincere gratitude for all the authorized periodicals. The benefit they were to me while serving abroad it would be difficult to estimate. For The Christian Science Monitor, with its big point of view and its unifying, uplifting appeal to us all, I am grateful. It surely carries healing on every page.—J. R. SKENE, London, England.

I have lately felt an increased sense of gratitude toward all those who have helped me in Christian Science. My first experience came more than seven years ago, when a gentleman, then past eighty years of age, presented me with a copy of Science and Health. I knew nothing whatever of this beautiful religion at that time, but gladly accepted the book and listened eagerly to his explanations. From the first I gave all my spare time to reading Science and Health, and it seemed the most beautiful book I had ever read. While for a long time I did not understand it very well, still it immediately had an uplifting effect and I wanted to know more and more of what as yet seemed afar off.

A year later, while in southern Illinois, I was thrown from a horse, landing on my back. I seemed to be severely injured and for several days could not get up or lie down without assistance, and suffered much pain whenever I moved. I decided to return to St. Louis to see a city physician, as the doctor in that little town did not give any relief. In the meantime, however, I had written to a friend, a Christian Science practitioner, telling her of the accident, and the night before I expected to leave for St. Louis I received a letter from her telling me not to worry but to read Science and Health and she would work for me. I sat up reading until ten o'clock, when I was helped into bed. I soon fell asleep, and when I awakened in the morning turned over, stretched myself, then suddenly remembered I had not been able to do that since my fall; in fact, I had not been able to turn at all after lying down. To make sure I turned again, and found I was free from pain and could move about as I wished. Except for a slight soreness, which left in a short time, there was no further effect from the fall. This was a perfect healing; it was practically instantaneous, and I know the quick relief was due entirely to Christian Science.

Even then I did not turn to Christian Science wholly. I still read the literature all my spare time, loved it, and recommended it, but was sick a good deal and took a good deal of medicine. Finally, I became acquainted with another practitioner, who urged me to attend church and to make practical use of what I read and loved. This friend helped me many times and gave me a better working knowledge of Christian Science. I did begin to attend church regularly, and from that time have depended entirely upon the truth under all circumstances. I have had the great privilege of class instruction, which was the most beautiful demonstration of them all, and have no other desire than to grow in the knowledge and understanding of God. I know that without Christian Science I could never have gone through experiences which brought great unhappiness, but which are being obliterated from thought through the growing understanding of the unreality of material things and a fuller realization of the all-power and all-presence of God. The wonderful spiritual uplift which came to me, and which stayed with me for several months after having class instruction, the joy and peace and freedom that I felt, were to me a foretaste of heaven, and are certainly worth striving for.—(Mrs.) CATHERINE BROOKS, St. Louis, Mo.

Before coming into Christian Science this Scriptural verse was always a puzzle to me: "The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." It always seemed contradictory; but Mrs. Eddy explains it on page 380 of Science and Health, where we read, "Every law of matter or the body, supposed to govern man, is rendered null and void by the law of Life, God." This statement has been proved many times in our family. Croup was overcome in one treatment. One of our children was healed of measles the third day; not a spot was to be found on him and there were no after effects. Glasses were discarded after having been worn eighteen years. Typhoid fever was overcome in one week; and so I could go on and enumerate the many times the so-called law of discord has been overcome by the law of God, Love.

We are grateful for the physical healings, for they are the proofs of "God with us." I am grateful for our periodicals, for many times I have found in the Journal or Sentinel an answer to a problem. Limitation in many ways has been overcome through the understanding of this truth; also last but not least, Christian Science has taught me to rejoice always, for we have the promise, "He that endureth to the end shall be saved."

(Mrs.) CLARA M. NOTT, Waco, Texas.

About five years ago I was on board an interurban train that was running at a very rapid rate of speed when the journal in one of the front wheels gave way, dashing the car violently against the road bank. To mortal sense it was a very severe accident and the occupants were all more or less injured, some seriously. I myself was rendered unconscious and received a deep scalp cut about three inches in length, severing an artery and causing such loss of blood that the company's surgeon afterwards said that at one time he felt sure I had passed away. On regaining consciousness I worked my way out of the wreck and walked some distance to a farm, where I again passed into an unconscious state for a short time. We were only about eight miles out of the city and were soon in communication with friends at home. When I was asked my telephone number, a request to do my own talking was granted, and I told my wife to pay no attention to reports she would most likely hear, but to send for me; that I was all right. She immediately stood "porter at the door of thought," as Mrs. Eddy tells us to do in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 392), and declared the truth of being. At no time was fear apparent to any great extent, for I was so protected by divine Love that fear had no place to dwell. After I arrived home we telephoned to a Christian Science practitioner for help and in nine days I was back at work.

For this healing and many other instances of restored harmony I am deeply thankful. Words cannot express my thankfulness to God and our Way-shower, Christ Jesus, or my gratitude to Mrs. Eddy for the beautiful truth revealed through the study of the Bible in the light of Christian Science.—A. A. Tobias, Greenville, Ohio.

I indeed wish to verify the statement of my husband, for of a truth his healing has been perfect; and I also wish to add that I have had many wonderful healings in Christian Science and am very thankful to God, also grateful to our dear Leader for giving us this wonderful truth. My sincere desire is to live daily so as to reflect more of the Mind that was in Christ Jesus, that I may have a fuller and better understanding of God.

(Mrs.) Rebecca Ann Tobias.

I have good reason to feel grateful, and would like to testify to the benefit I have received through Christian Science. Within a month after I began attending the Wednesday evening testimony meetings, with the help of a friend I was freed from wearing glasses. Since then I have been healed of a rupture, headaches which caused me much suffering, and throat trouble. While I am very grateful for these physical healings, they seem as nothing compared to the spiritual comfort that I have received in Science. My son passed through an attack of influenza with very little inconvenience and none of the weakness which seemed to follow that disease.

The Bible is a much used book now, whereas it was seldom opened before I began the study of Christian Science; and to know God as Love, ever present and all-power, means so much more to me than do the physical healings. I am grateful to God for leading me into this truth, also to Mrs. Eddy for giving this religion to the world. I am grateful for the privilege of having all the Christian Science literature in my home; it is not only a help to me but a necessity, and I feel that I cannot afford to miss even one copy of The Christian Science Monitor. I am indeed grateful for the health, happiness, and comfort that I receive each day in Christian Science.

The first healing experience in Christian Science which I recall, took place some fourteen years ago. I accidentally ran the blade of a pocket knife into the palm of my hand. Through Christian Science treatment the bleeding was stopped and the cut healed. I have had many healings since, among which are the healing of gas and electric arc burns, removal of emery and steel embedded in the eyeball, protection from injury to the eyes from melted potassium cyanide spattered in the face, and the overcoming of partial deafness and mastoiditis. Christian Science was a wonderful help in solving problems in my high school and university life, as it has been in the business and educational fields since. I am especially grateful for the proofs of its protecting power during my recent army experience, and want to express my thanks for the Welfare workers and the reading rooms. The distribution of The Christian Science Monitor was certainly appreciated.

I am indeed grateful for the privilege of having attended a Christian Science Sunday school and of having been a member of a university Christian Science Society.

L. E. Nofsinger, Kansas City, Mo.

I feel a deep sense of thankfulness to God and gratitude to Mrs. Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of this beautiful religion of Love, which is teaching us our true relation to God, our oneness with our heavenly Father. At the time Christian Science was presented to me I had been a semi-invalid for ten years, and was a complete wreck. The doctors said I would never walk again on account of misplaced organs, and all the ills that attend such a condition, such as extreme weakness and sleepless nights, sick headaches, palpitation of the heart, and stomach trouble. In March, 1913, I was to be taken to a hospital for an operation, but was saved from the operating table by a neighbor who came with the message of love to ask me why I did not try Christian Science first. A practitioner was called and I was healed of all but sick headaches in one treatment. I purchased Mrs. Eddy's textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," and commenced to study Christian Science, knowing I had found what I had been searching for all these years,—God, Life, Truth, and Love. The headaches faded away before the power of Truth. Many other seeming ills and trials have been overcome since that time. I have seen tubercular disease, pneumonia, rheumatism, sprains, malignant growths, and many other ailments vanish into nothingness before the power of Truth. I was wonderfully sustained in June, 1913, when a great sorrow came to me and following that the loss of material possessions and business cares were added.

The understanding of God as Love and the spiritual interpretation of the Bible have changed my life from a state of gloom and discord to harmony and peace and quiet. I have the great privilege of being a member of The Mother Church, have had class instruction, and am able to help others through the power of divine Love to see the light of Life. My constant prayer is to do some good each day.

(Mrs.) Etta M. Burgess, Los Angeles, Calif.

I was healed of a number of diseases through reading Science and Health, although I was not in the least interested in Christian Science and had no thought of physical healing. I was and had been for a number of years an invalid, miserable in every sense of the word, and finally began to feel that I must know more of God—in some way get closer to Him. I was reared in a most religious manner, having been taught the wonderful power of God as my dear mother understood it, so in my distress it was natural for me to turn to God.

A copy of Science and Health had been given me, and divine Love turned my attention to the reading of this book. I did not find it at all interesting, but read a few pages here and there some days, though not understanding anything I read. During this time, however, I forgot to take a material remedy which had been taken for years as a prevention for gallstones. It was some time, perhaps two weeks, before I noticed that I had not taken it; then I did not think of the reading I had done as having anything to do with this; I only realized that it had not been needed at all. Then one morning I found myself without a heavy support that was laced up on me every day on account of hernia. As the physician had told me of something terrible that would happen to me should I try to step without this truss, my first thought was to put it on, and I did so. I could not be operated on for this trouble because of Bright's disease, but I noticed that even this was changing, and I suffered less from severe headaches; and like a flash it dawned on me that it was through my reading in Science and Health these changes had been brought about.

When I realized what a blessing I had in this book I at once went to work to learn what Christian Science is, and through this reading, and the study of the Lesson-Sermon each day, although it did not seem as if I understood one bit of it, I was healed of Bright's disease, gallstones, heart trouble, hernia, and many other unpleasant things. This was not done without a great effort on my part, for I was in such a confused mental condition that it took me hours to hunt the references out. I also made a sacrifice to get the Journal and Sentinel, which I spent my time in reading —every word in them—but seemingly without understanding. Then "Miscellaneous Writings" came to me, and the joy that the article "Love Your Enemies" brought to me I can never be grateful enough for. I read it very often, it seems so wonderful to me. In it I first learned that I had no enemy; then too I began to learn how to love—that to me was the beautiful healing.

(Mrs.) MARY E. HECHT, Chicago, Ill.

Christian Science has proved itself to me as the Comforter. Over sixteen years ago, at a time of bereavement, I consulted a practitioner who told me that it was a sin to long to die when God is our Life. For six months or more I attended services quite regularly, tried to study the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," read Mrs. Eddy's other writings and the periodicals, but still seemed very nervous. Finally I saw the nothingness of this false sense, nervousness, brought on through the mesmeric thought of sorrow. The reference, "I shall not die, but live, and declare the works of the Lord," lifted me out of this sense-dream to newness of life. I studied our textbook preparatory to taking class instruction, united with the branch church I was attending, and had the great privilege of becoming a member of The Mother Church.

Can I ever be grateful enough for this teaching given us through our revered Leader, and for the knowledge that God, Life, our heavenly Father, is Mother as well. I am grateful to Mrs. Eddy, also bear in mind her staunch pioneer coworkers; but above all "my soul doth magnify the Lord" for His goodness.—(Miss) CHRISTINA ELIZABETH PFEIFFER, St. Petersburg, Fla.

I am so grateful for the privilege of expressing my gratitude through our periodicals for all that Christian Science has done for dear ones as well as for myself, and I hope my experience may help some one. I had been an invalid or semi-invalid the greater part of the time for over thirty years when this beautiful truth healed me of a very painful internal trouble that the doctors said was incurable. For over two years the nerves in the entire right side of my body were so sensitive that I could not lie on that side; indeed I had despaired of ever doing so again when Science healed me. Chronic bowel disorder of many years' standing has also vanished, as well as other ailments. For years I never thought of going any distance without a large valise filled with medicine. I also had a stand filled with material remedies beside my bed, and it was such an unspeakable joy to discard them both.

God's protecting care was shown clearly in a recent experience. The chauffeur lost control of the car in which my husband, my daughter, and I were riding, and we were plunged twenty-five feet or more down a steep embankment against a stone wall. The car turned over but none of us was injured. As soon as we realized what was happening, my daughter and I both held to the thought that there are no accidents in divine Mind, and I declared out loud over and over again, "God is my Life." Onlookers thought we had gone to instant death.

I could tell of many other blessings and demonstrations. I am very grateful to practitioners for their loving help; also grateful for our periodicals, and for the spiritual uplift received. Words are inadequate to express my gratitude for Christian Science.

(Mrs.) JENNIE SOUTHWICK, Holland, Mich.

It is with a deep sense of gratitude that the following testimony is given, with the sincere wish that it may be of help to some one who may still be in the wilderness seeking the way out. For over three years our every need has been supplied through the study of the Bible and its interpretation as so lovingly given in all of Mrs. Eddy's writings, especially in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures." What a wonderful outlook on life this gives us! In former years when any ills beset us all we thought of was getting well; then we paid the doctor's bill and complained about the results. What a difference in Christian Science! When some so-called sickness manifests itself, if we instantly "stand porter at the door of thought" (Science and Health, p. 392) how quickly and lovingly God helps us to know that He is ever nigh, and where God is, all is good. Then in gratitude thought rises and gives thanks.

Shortly after my first healing, that of stomach trouble of a serious nature, remarks were repeatedly made at a luncheon in a near-by city, of the wonderful change in my appearance. Is it any wonder that each day makes us more thankful to Mrs. Eddy for her clear interpretation of the teachings of Christ Jesus, which bring us into closer communion with God in whom there is "no variableness, neither shadow of turning."

CHARLES H. WILLIAMS, Providence, R. I.

When I first turned to Christian Science for help there were many aches and pains troubling me, and a constant condition of being half sick. I had tried many electrical treatments, was always dieting and fearful of everything I ate, and for a year had been continually trying new medicines. After my first Christian Science treatment I gave up dieting, and have been able to eat normally ever since. As I gradually began to realize my birthright of health, the attacks of bilious headache became less frequent, and I was able to make plans for future days with the certainty that I could carry them out and not be ill with overexcited nerves. Later I was able to give up wearing glasses, which I had used since a small child.

I thank God for the happiness and peace which have come to me through Christian Science, and hope to impart more of its joy to all those I meet.—(Mrs.) CAROLINE STILWELL HACKERT, New York, N. Y.

Signs of the Times

[Mayor L. C. Hodgson, reported in Pioneer Press, St. Paul, Minn.]

This nation was established by deeply spiritual men,—men who believed in God, and who did their thinking and their acting against a background of eternal things. America must return to this ancient heritage of faith, must mobilize her spiritual resources if she is to achieve anything permanent. Those who say the war proved the failure of the gospel of Jesus are talking backwards. The war showed what happens when men forget the simple human terms in which Jesus talked. For a generation our world was engaged in intellectual gymnastics and reeked with the futile ambitions of materialism. Because man has a soul, he cannot live save when his soul aspires and touches the regions of the divine. The war represented mania that comes from spiritual starvation. The world still is weak with spiritual hunger.

[Dr. Albert Wilson, as reported in Rocky Mountain News, Denver, Colo.]

The new church will have a broader viewpoint. The changes will be necessary to conform with modern ideas. The new church will aim at the spiritual interpretation of democracy, and will attempt to help the two big powers, capital and labor, rightly to understand each other. It will convince capital that the laboring man is more than a mere cog in a machine. In the case of the employee, it will insist upon the laboring man recognizing the employer's usefulness; his right to say who shall work for him; his right to a fair equivalent in labor for the wages he pays; and also his right to a fair interest on all his investments.

The church will convince the laboring man that the rich and the poor have many things in common; that the principle of justice operates in the life of an employer of labor just as much as it should operate in the life of an employee. The new church will revise its conception of Christ Jesus. It will set him before the world as the stalwart friend of humanity. The trouble with a great many churches to-day is that they are living on their reputations and are making an awful mess of it. The new church will insist that it is what we are to-day and what we hope to be to-morrow that determines the future of Christianity.

[Life]

How much Christian Science has affected thought! Millions of people who don't hold by it, understand its theory more or less, use some of its phraseology, and practice it in some details, as in being wary of inducing disease or misconduct by suggestion.

[Columbus (Ohio) Journal]

There have been many meetings of religious bodies during the summer and fall and this may be said of them, that there is a marked tendency to abandon the mental attitude regarding doctrines and traditions and gather to one sublime focus, which is a reliance upon spirituality as their final arbiter. That is to say, that they are inclining more and more toward the religious motif as the promise of their true embodiment of church life. In nearly every case they have come to the conclusion that religion is not doctrine, but that the latter feature can be made of greater service by increasing its spirituality. In this spirit they can unite in establishing the kingdom of Christ in the world, and as long as they make spirituality the inherent power of religion, the church will accomplish its highest purpose. This evolution of the spirit in church life is a glorious fact, in which the whole world takes hope.

Articles and Testimonies

Available articles from members of The Mother Church and good testimonies from those healed by Christian Science are always welcomed for consideration by the Editors. Manuscripts for publication in the Sentinel and Journal, whether articles, poems, or testimonies, and correspondence relating thereto, should not be addressed to individuals, but to the Editorial Department, The Christian Science Publishing Society, Boston, U.S.A.

Letters of Appreciation

Many letters of appreciation of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR and other Christian Science activities are constantly being received. These letters express what these activities mean to different individuals in various occupations and pursuits. The favorable comment that has been received on those already published indicates that they are welcome and helpful; therefore others will be published under the above heading. Extracts from such letters follow:

I DO appreciate THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR from cover to cover. Without it I would be lost. When I have finished reading a copy I always feel as though I had taken a trip to many countries and learned a great deal. And naturally it leaves one satisfied that he has read something really worth while. The dramatic page has given me especial pleasure, and also the art, music, et cetera, columns contain glimpses of real artdom. Even the advertisements are a source of inspiration and I look them over from London to Tulsa, Oklahoma, with the greatest interest.

I DO not like to miss one copy of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR. To me the MONITOR is not only a splendid newspaper and a channel for information and education but it is as entertaining as any magazine I ever read. Excepting, of course, the metaphysical article, I love the editorials best and beginning there I generally read it all to page 1.

WOULD you like to know that it was with deep regret that I could not renew, and not through any nonappreciation of that wonderful paper. However, we have learned our lesson and would rather be without bread than ever again to be without THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR for two whole months; so we are sending a six months' subscription for the MONITOR and THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE JOURNAL. The metaphysical article on the Home Forum page was always our daily help, together with the splendid articles. We have been supplied with daily necessities through our small understanding of divine Principle.

"What I say unto you I say unto all, WATCH." Jesus

VOLUME XXII DECEMBER 6, 1919 NUMBER 14

Cain and Abel

THE story of Cain and Abel as recorded in the fourth chapter of Genesis and as interpreted by Mrs. Eddy on pages 538 to 543 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," may be regarded as a key to the enigma of mortal existence throughout all time and is specifically applicable to the problems which come up to-day to be solved in Christian Science. The poet Byron once declared that "a man that hath no virtue in himself, ever envieth virtue in others." This fact is well illustrated by the characters of Cain and Abel, who represent in embryo two antipodal qualities, which by reason of their antagonistic and irreconcilable natures must continue to oppose each other until the former is finally destroyed by the latter.

Briefly speaking, Cain stands for a mental condition in which the satanic suggestion, "Ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil," has been accepted. Hence Cain places himself above the law of God and acknowledges no law but his own will. According to Cruden the name Cain signifies "possession," or one who is "possessed;" in a word, it stands for materialism, including its complete range of social and political evils from absolute autocracy to abject slavery.

Mrs. Eddy concisely describes Cain's mental attitude on page 89 of Science and Health, where she says: "Cain very naturally concluded that if life was in the body, and man gave it, man had the right to take it away. This incident shows that the belief of life in matter was 'a murderer from the beginning.'" Instead of emulating Abel's good example or learning a lesson from his own mistakes, Cain seeks to quiet remorse with the opiate of envy, thereby plunging himself into deeper error. Envy, being a murderous quality, moves Cain to kill Abel, and afterwards when questioned by God, he denies all personal responsibility, saying, "Am I my brother's keeper?" Cain, under whatever alias he has since been known, never seems to realize that he is and always has been the keeper of his own concept of his brother. He is, therefore, quite oblivious of the fact that envy has poisoned his thoughts and reversed his natural feelings of affection.

Abel, on the contrary, is a primitive type of the Christ; his acceptable offering prefigures the living sacrifice, which is the overcoming of self and involves a recognition of the unreality of matter. The name "Abel" is defined by Mrs. Eddy in the Glossary of Science and Health (p. 579) as "watchfulness, self-offering; surrendering to the creator the early fruits of experience." Because of his naïve and ingenuous nature, Abel does not understand the necessity for handling the destructive claim of malicious animal magnetism, and so temporarily falls a victim to its seeming power. Wholly unsuspicious of Cain's deep-seated resentment, Abel goes daily about his own affairs, apparently without the slightest idea that his example of righteousness is perpetually inflaming his brother's smoldering hatred. Was it not inevitable that, in these circumstances, the one result would follow and the moment arrive when the accumulated malice in Cain's heart would break forth and give vent to its murderous impulse? When the tragic moment did at last arrive, it may have seemed at the time that brute force had actually triumphed over goodness. This, however, was not the case, as a further study of the narrative shows. In the twenty-fifth and following verse we read that Eve bore a third son and called his name Seth (meaning renewal), "For God, said she, hath appointed me another seed instead of Abel, whom Cain slew." And the passage concludes, "Then began men to call upon the name of the Lord."

The seed of Cain, according to the writer of Genesis, rapidly degenerated until the time of the flood, when it had become so corrupt that it was temporarily extinguished. The offspring of Seth, however, was spiritually progressive, and by reference to the genealogy set out in the third chapter of Luke's gospel, we find that it included such illustrious names as Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, David, and Jesus. Regarding the seed of Seth from a metaphysical point of view, and not merely from the human standpoint, we are enabled to follow in some measure the spiritual evolution which is traceable throughout the entire Scriptures; as, for example, Enoch's ascension, Noah's preservation in the ark, the divine guidance of the Hebrew patriarchs, the journey from Egypt to the promised land, the establishment of the Mosaic law, the period of prophecy and the fulfillment of the same in the coming of Christ Jesus, and finally the revelation of John, with its promise of the eternal triumph of good over evil and the permanent establishment of God's kingdom on the earth. All these are human footsteps marking the unfolding of the compound spiritual idea, known in Christian Science as the Christ, "the Son of the living God," of whom Abel is the earliest type in Bible history.

The difference between the characters of Abel and Jesus lies in the degree that each had put off the human and had demonstrated the divine. This fact was clearly perceived and stated by Paul, when he wrote in his epistle to the Hebrews, "By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts: and by it he being dead yet speaketh." Christ Jesus, however, is described as "the mediator of the new covenant" and "the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel." Abel, as has been previously pointed out, did not understand, as Jesus did, how to deal with the problem of evil. It may be said that Jesus had his Judas just as Abel had his Cain, but Jesus was able to prove the futility of Judas' treachery through his victory over the flesh whereby the Messiah or Son of God was revealed. It is evident that Jesus was by no means ignorant of the character of Judas. Foreseeing as he did that Judas was planning to betray him, Jesus took no precautionary measures to frustrate his design, although he prepared himself scientifically to meet it.

"Now," he cried in that wonderful prayer in the twelfth chapter of John's gospel, "is my soul troubled; and what shall I say? Father, save me from this hour: but for this cause came I unto this hour. Father, glorify thy name. Then came there a voice from heaven, saying, I have both glorified it, and will glorify it again."

Here we have both the theory and practice of absolute Christian Science. Jesus in this perfect sacrifice left for all mankind the illustration of true self-abnegation, whereby evil is overcome, not through physical resistance, but is destroyed forever through a demonstration of the Christ. It is plain that Christ Jesus' great proof of man's immortality was not in any sense a vicarious atonement but was a living example bequeathed to all mankind as a standard for demonstration. Christian Science is enabling humanity to understand and follow divine Principle as exemplified by Christ Jesus, and it explains those remarkable words of the Master: "He that loveth his life shall lose it; and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal." In other words, he that reverses the so-called first law of material nature and makes self-abnegation rather than self-preservation his rule for scientific demonstration, shall indeed find the true life, of which mortal existence is merely a counterfeit.

Surely, it ought to be possible now, with the immense advantages conferred on mankind through Mrs. Eddy's teachings, to maintain such an armor of right thinking as to render harmless the fiery darts of envy and all uncharitableness. The unity of man with the Christ, or only begotten Son of God, must be demonstrated in Christian Science, for it is the immutable truth and cannot forever be obscured. The footsteps in this demonstration, however, like charity, must, in the words of the proverb, begin at home, and now is the time, as our Leader has pointed out (Miscellany, p. 213), to "be more zealous to do good, more watchful and vigilant."

Cobwebs

JOHN SIDNEY BRAITHWAITE

WHAT a picture the word "cobwebs" presents,—a fragile net stretched across an open space, at the first glance beautiful in its delicacy of workmanship, but on second thought undesirable because contaminating to its surroundings. And so if one speaks of cobwebs in a figurative sense, the intention is generally to indicate a condition of murky and indistinct thinking. From the point of view that cobwebs are evidence of a deteriorating influence, it might be supposed that they would be found only in the meaner kind of residence; but we all know that the spider is no respecter of mansions. The wise man observed, "The spider taketh hold with her hands, and is in kings' palaces," implying that even the most exalted residences are convenient places for the spinning of cobwebs. Again, the great philosopher Francis Bacon wrote of "the cobwebs and clatterings of the schoolmen," indicating that intellectual proficiency is by no means a synonym for clear thinking. The cottage, the palace, the academy, are in themselves types, and those that inhabit them are dwellers in different mental conditions —nothing more.

The great Master, in his realization of this fact, said of his own residence, "The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head." Surely he was not indicating or extolling a sense of poverty or lack, but pointing to man's true residence as in divine Mind. His consciousness of existence had no sense of separation from his Father, the one Mind. He knew that man as idea cannot be cut off from the Mind which created him. On the contrary, Mind and its idea must always be one. That which presents to mortals the argument of separation is a false, usurping belief, which, like the spider's web, clouds the correct view of existence, and spins out of itself an insnaring web calculated to catch the restless, unwary, and frivolous thought. "Cleanse your mind of the cobwebs which spurious 'compounds' engender," writes Mrs. Eddy on page 271 of "Miscellaneous Writings." The attempt to bring peace to mankind by material rather than spiritual means may lead to nothing more than the building of a palace—a mental condition—in which spiders may spin their webs. If, therefore, we find a condition of hesitation, doubt, or impurity taking possession of our thought, we must get busy. There are spiders about spinning cobwebs. There was a time, perhaps, when we thought we had our mental residence swept and garnished once for all. But that is not sufficient even in our material home; neither will it do in our thinking. There must be a daily searching after and sweeping out of every cobweb of materialism.

Our true home is a spiritual one, even now perfect and harmonious, never material; but we cannot gain the realization of this fact unless we do our work daily and purify ourselves "even as he is pure." We have this home, too, not for a short lease of time, but for eternity. "We must hold forever the consciousness of existence," writes Mrs. Eddy in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 428), "and sooner or later, through Christ and Christian Science, we must master sin and death."

The Divine Vistas

ZONA BERG

IN Isaiah we read, "For as the earth bringeth forth her bud, and as the garden causeth the things that are sown in it to spring forth; so the Lord God will cause righteousness and praise to spring forth before all the nations." The prevailing concept of God and His laws governs the character of every period of human history. The vitality of faith is unique and its power is beyond human estimate. "He that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him," is set forth in the Scriptures. The newer and clearer understanding of God that is coming to mankind through Christian Science is unfolding the truth that in no sense is He absent or inactive, but a continuous present help to all who seek Him. It is comforting to mortals to know that there is a righteous success, the result of honest activity and obedience. When a mortal shakes off the belief that it can be God's will for him to be in bondage to error of any kind, he has taken the first step toward freedom and dominion.

In the light of Christian Science the declaration of John, "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be," contains the spiritual fact which, when understood and applied in daily life, means complete salvation and deliverance from every mortal ill. The average person is sometimes perplexed by the thought that, seemingly, the problems of humanity are increasing and becoming more complex; but the progress so far made emphasizes the fact more and more that no great movement for the improvement of humanity can ever be successful which does not realize the divine law in somewhat of the same clearness that Jesus did when he declared that if we would be obedient and do well we must love God with all our heart and our neighbor as ourself.

When we know God as our Father, prayer will be a joy, bringing us into the realization of His presence. Looking to Him for wisdom, strength, and guidance in all human activities whatever may be our occupation, at sea or on land, at home or in the office or workshop, in the fields, or in the halls of legislature, of commerce, of education, certain it is that our needs will always be fully met, for we have allied ourselves with God, the source of all true supply. What the world calls success is not always real success. The genuine success of our business enterprises, of all our work, rests upon the spiritual quality of our thinking.

There is an insistent call upon every one to be on guard against error of every kind, and he is best equipped who realizes his divine sonship. To reveal this is the mission of Christian Science, and many students are discerning in an ever increasing degree man's divine relationship to God. On the glorious summit of spiritual vision we get an illumined glimpse of that peace and dominion, freedom and victory, that is wholly of God. We touch the hem of the garment of Christ and gaze out upon the divine vista, as the man of God looked into the promised land.

In "Miscellaneous Writings" Mrs. Eddy, speaking of man's relationship to God, says (p. 185), "Self-renunciation of all that constitutes a so-called material man, and the acknowledgment and achievement of his spiritual identity as the child of God, is Science that opens the very flood-gates of heaven; whence good flows into every avenue of being, cleansing mortals of all uncleanness, destroying all suffering, and demonstrating the true image and likeness." Could any metaphor more clearly convey to mankind the relationship of the divine Being to His creation than that the very hairs of our head are all numbered?

It is well that all should dwell on the high and holy theme of that part of the Lord's Prayer which reads, "Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors," and its spiritual interpretation found in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 17), "And Love is reflected in love," because here we have God's work and man's work blended in a way that makes for the fulfillment of spiritual law, and Love thus reflected in love is a mighty spiritual power that will conquer all that is opposed to God and His righteousness. Who has not experienced the joy that flows from thus reflecting Love? As we are loved, so is it our privilege to love others; as we are dowered with heavenly riches, so may we share with our brothers who are in need. It is in this way that we may truly fulfill the ministry of human helpfulness.

Christian Science alone teaches every one that true, spiritual activity is divine. "Divine Love always has met and always will meet every human need" (Science and Health, p. 494), and our greatest human need is to learn how to love, to understand Love's law and its application to human affairs. Jesus said, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." Do not seek first the security of your human sense of divine activity and its law, but seek first the cause and the truthful way of expressing it in every phase of your daily activity as a son, "casting all your care upon him; for he careth for you."

God's government is the same yesterday, to-day, and forever. In the changing history of mankind with its multiplicity of races, laws, and customs, we find constant attempts to right human wrongs and troubles. How long does one have to fight the good fight? How long did Jacob wrestle? Until the overcoming of the sense of error and the appearing of harmony. In the case of Job, in spite of disease, loss of loved ones, loss of property, misunderstandings of friends, he prayed for his friends, and his life was made rich and beautiful when he learned to know God, and could say, "I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear: but now mine eye seeth thee."

Divine Protection

BIRD STEWART SCOTLAND

THERE has never been a time in the world's history, and certainly not in the history of the Christian Science movement, when men have been stirred to a deeper appreciation of God's protection. Especially in the lives of Christian Scientists are we hearing of marvelous experiences where God's protection has been proved by those confronted with all kinds of danger. The testimonies appearing in the Christian Science periodicals and those given at the Wednesday evening meetings abound with expressions of gratitude not only for deliverance but for knowing through these experiences just what the protection of God, Mind, really is. There is cause to be grateful for the awakening begun in the lives of individuals and nations during the recent war, when God's protection was so generally acknowledged and experienced. On page 387 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" Mrs. Eddy says, "The history of Christianity furnishes sublime proofs of the supporting influence and protecting power bestowed on man by his heavenly Father, omnipotent Mind, who gives man faith and understanding whereby to defend himself, not only from temptation, but from bodily suffering."

As Christian Scientists know this protection has been afforded them through the scientific application of spiritual understanding, so they know the acknowledgment of good precedes the experience of its effects. Perhaps there has never been a time when people have been more eager to acknowledge the allness of God's power; hence the power of divine protection has been brought into human experience in a greater degree. In pondering over the idea of protection and what its expansion in human thought means, it has been seen more clearly than ever before how God protects His children by endowing them with the power of right thinking. The recital of an experience of my own may be helpful to some one; at least it will add another expression of gratitude to the many already given.

An incident occurred in which I felt justified in thinking another had taken an unjust attitude followed by an unjust action. The matter having been called to the attention of the person, it was considered with such good nature I was enabled to overlook it further and even set it aside, though believing that the attitude of the one whom I considered unjust had not changed. Shortly after, in studying an article in The Christian Science Monitor, my attention was drawn again and again to the admonition contained therein, to "avoid the shoals of insidious suggestion and personal sense." Forgetting for the time all about the incident mentioned, study was given to the statement quoted, with the earnest desire to eliminate from consciousness all insidious suggestion and personal sense. The next morning I awoke with an acute pain, and in less time than it takes to relate it, I cast about mentally to find wherein wrong thinking was causing me to suffer. Instantly the incident cited was recalled, quickly followed by the almost audible acknowledgment, "I am wrong about that;" when the pain simultaneously ceased. The Scriptural promise is, "Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord, and he shall lift you up." The revelation came to me that I had been led by insidious suggestion and personal sense to misjudge the attitude and action of another, and that the power to think rightly about it was the manifestation to me of God's protection. Having learned through this experience a little more about what the protection of God, Mind, really is, gratitude therefor is here expressed.

Constructing and Reconstructing

RUTH E. WILLIAMS

TO one desiring to build an edifice successfully, first must come the planning and thought building. The cost, a place upon which to erect the structure, the materials to be used, and solidity of foundation,—all must be considered before a step toward building can be taken. To make firm and secure against time and storm, a building must have a solid foundation. If the site to be used is level and free from false growth, the work of erection can begin at once. If it be heaped full of débris or overgrown with brushwood and noxious weeds, or perhaps obstructed with a badly settled, crumbling building of the past upon it, then the work of construction is delayed by the labor of first preparing the ground. For the new structure one wants good material that has lasting qualities and looks well. With care he inspects all the different parts. It is important that the heating, lighting, and plumbing systems should be placed to the best advantage.

As the building of material houses requires system, painstaking care, and perseverance, so does our building in Christian Science. Most of us come to Science in a mental state which is a mixture of inherited beliefs, mortal laws, and human reasonings, constituting an abode where inharmony may be found. We are likely to find in these mental abodes lights that are dim and unsteady; the expected radiation of sympathy and love sometimes weakens, and instead there is found the heat of hatred, and criticism even of those most loved. Desires often are impure and roiled by unfiltered teachings, and the doors are found open for the entrance of gossip, ingratitude, and contagion. The foundation of such a home is sure to be weak and oft crumbling away. Personal ambition, fear, pain, false appetites, frequently abide in the mentality built in such a haphazard manner by evil environments and traditions.

When coming to Christian Science, sick, weak, discouraged, financially disabled, or grief-stricken, what can one expect to find? Can one find refuge from these enemies to happiness? Did not Jesus say, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest"? also, "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you"? Here is drink from the "living waters" and rest in "green pastures" as described to us in the Scriptures. Then with praise and gratitude we begin our work of reconstruction, which must mean tearing down false theories and sense testimony, and putting in their places scientific understanding and demonstration. The foundation must be the one Paul tells us of in I Corinthians: "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." With this Christ-example as a guide, only perfection can be expected in the finished work.

We begin, however, by correcting wrong thinking, evil speaking, and unkindly deeds. The structure of many years of wrong thinking does not go down in one day's clearing away, nor in a whole week of struggling to be good. It is the result of continual effort. Mrs. Eddy says in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 242), "In patient obedience to a patient God, let us labor to dissolve with the universal solvent of Love the adamant of error,—self-will, self-justification, and self-love,—which wars against spirituality and is the law of sin and death." Continually following the perfect model will at last bring out the perfect structure. This outlook in the direction of continued effort need not discourage one, for each day brings only its own problems, and not those of the morrow. One of the important lessons earliest to be learned is to perfect the day in which we find ourselves,—neither anxiously looking ahead for better conditions in which to work, nor wasting time over vain regrets, but following Paul's teaching, "Forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

The daily prayer given us by Mrs. Eddy on page 41 of the Manual will be found most helpful in starting the day aright. The desire and effort that the fulfillment of this prayer be made manifest in our day's work will prove a protection and a guide throughout the day. On page 9 of Science and Health we read, "Consistent prayer is the desire to do right." This prayer, the daily study of the Lesson-Sermon, and the effort to put into practice what we learn, will soon enable us to look back to the time when beginning the reconstruction and see that we have made much advancement. The spiritual light of understanding grows brighter; right thinking warms all with beneficial good will; Love's healing cleanses and purifies; and we find in our mental abodes more order and better arranged thinking, manifest in improved health, happiness, and success. Such home building is substantial and helpful, serving also as a strength and a refuge to all who come within its shelter. As our standard, "the Son of God," is lifted up, we shall find that not only have we come into the understanding of Christian Science ourselves but by our efforts others have been drawn to the same beautiful building, "an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

The Meaning of Christian Science

MARTEL I. MICKEY

AMONG the obstacles which confront the beginner in Christian Science are two very common errors: that Science and Health is hard to understand, or that one cannot agree with its statements. These troubles, however, are due largely to the ordinary concept of religion, as well as to ignorance of the true meaning of Christian Science. People usually think of religion as being primarily composed of a collection of doctrines or creeds, which are believed or not believed as one sees fit. Naturally with such a concept prevalent, it would be hard for them to conceive of any religious idea which departs from the one entertained by the majority. The Christian Science church, however, is fundamentally different from other religious denominations in that it is founded upon divine Science known and applied, rather than upon theories of religion merely accepted as being true; while faith, according to the teachings of Christian Science, implies absolute reliance upon one's knowledge of God and His laws.

Mrs. Eddy's book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," must not be considered merely as a book of religious discourse; it is the textbook of an exact, metaphysical Science, dealing with the divine law by which God is manifested. In other words, it is the systematic and formulated knowledge of the Christ, Truth. Jesus' practical understanding of this operative law, which he imparted to others, and which enabled him to perform his divinely natural demonstrations, or so-called miracles, made him worthy of the Messiahship. And it can be said that when we attain as clear an understanding of this divine law and practice it as perfectly, we shall be able, even as he promised, to repeat his works. This Science can only be learned by careful study of its textbook, as well as by the demonstration of its rules. One would not expect to learn any branch of the science of mathematics by merely reading a textbook through; and it would be impossible for anyone to extract the cube root of a number before he had learned to add.

The statements which one finds in the Christian Science textbook, instead of being personal views of its author, are statements of demonstrable laws or rules, based wholly upon the scientific understanding of divine Principle. They have a deep spiritual meaning that can only be discerned as one turns away from personal opinions. The earnest student endeavors each day to conform his thinking to the rules or laws set down in Science and Health, aiming to have that Mind "which was also in Christ Jesus." Before he has progressed very far in Christian Science he finds that the losses which result from sacrificing his old sense of self are proved to be gains in spirituality. He becomes broader minded, happier, improves in health; in fact, he is far better in every way, because he is learning to rely understandingly upon God, where once he relied upon materiality; and when he understands that God is with him, nothing can be against him.

Christian Science supplies the solution of all our everyday difficulties, such as sickness, fear, worry, resentment, poverty, prejudice, and countless others. These errors can only be met and overcome as one perseveres in his study and practice of Christian Science, adding continually to his fund of spiritual understanding. Gradually he learns that he can "meet every adverse circumstance as its master" (Science and Health, p. 419), and this dominion over evil, which is gained by demonstration, adds to one's understanding of Science. As the experience of many Christian Scientists shows, we can only learn through "precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little," until "we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ."

The Journey

MARGARET MORRISON

WE need not remember the fearing,
The anguish that crowded the night.
We need but remember the clearing
Of dawn, and the sweetness of light.

We need not remember the error
That lied, without mercy or ruth.
We need not remember the terror,
But only the triumph of Truth.

We need not remember the waging
Of war, and the battle's increase.
We need not remember the raging,
But only the power of peace.

We need not recall the old sadness,
God's presence and guidance to prove;
Our pathway now glowing with gladness,
Each step is directed by Love.

Selected Articles

["The Divine Voice"—The Christian Science Monitor, Boston, U.S.A., Oct. 22, 1919]

In the ninety-fifth psalm, the writer says, "To day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your heart," and Paul, in Hebrews, refers to this counsel, in two different instances. Centuries have passed, but while many would fain hear that divine voice, not always do they know it. Whether it is the suffering of self or of another, whether earthly hopes fail or perplexities multiply, or even if material prosperity continues, still eventually a sense of emptiness causes the heart to seek outside of itself some sign of that not found in human life. Then one would indeed "hear his voice," but the heavens seem of brass and no sign is given. In the textbook of Christian Science, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," Mrs. Eddy says on page 186, "If mortal mind knew how to be better, it would be better." In this sentence the reason is given why, even when the world longs to hear and to obey the spiritual admonition, yet it continues to harden its heart. The foolish absorptions in the idle round, the submission to false or wrong habits of work or play, the putting off from day to day of the effort to be in earnest,—who has not indulged in these ways of hardening the heart?

We read of those who, in times before the present, in their hours of tribulation heard the message of hope and deliverance. It is significant to note that not always did this come in the way expected. Moses, for instance, in the desert, beheld an extraordinary radiance, and then received the command to set about his rightful mission. Elijah heard not the admonition of God in the storm, or in the earthquake, or in the fire, but later, as in a great quietness, the "still small voice." Generations before these two, Jacob, upon his pillow of stone, saw and heard that which caused him to say, "Surely the Lord is in this place; and I knew it not." In this age it would seem that the Word of God has come in a way which was not looked for and in a way that many resist. Christian Science might well ask of its detractors, as did the master Christian centuries ago, "For which of those works do ye stone me?" The fact of the matter is that those who fancy themselves offended at Christian Science are offended at their own mistaken concept of Christian Science. This is proved when they come to read genuine Christian Science, not what is said about it or of it, for in thousands of cases, upon honest investigation, such prejudice vanishes.

Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, descended of sturdy and respectable New England parentage, was all her life deeply religious and given to works of love and charity. Sorrow and sickness were intermingled in her experience until she understood the divine voice. It seemed to come, as it did to that other Mary in past times, in the garden where there was "a new sepulchre." It bade her look up, away from sin, materiality, and death, to understand a risen Savior, the great healing Principle or Life. She heard and heeded the command, and straightway her bodily illness and weakness left her and she was healed. She says in Science and Health (p. 285): "By interpreting God as a corporeal Saviour but not as the saving Principle, or divine Love, we shall continue to seek salvation through pardon and not through reform, and resort to matter instead of Spirit for the cure of the sick."

Then, like that other Mary, her thought was to come and tell the other disciples. So well has Mrs. Eddy fulfilled this mission that the same divine voice which spoke to her and healed her, is speaking to thousands in the world to-day and healing them. If one doubts this statement, he has only to visit any of the testimony meetings held on Wednesday evenings in the Christian Science churches everywhere. There he can note the earnestness and love of those who tell in public what God has done for them through this teaching.

The scientific Christianity which is truly called Christian Science is different from many other teachings in that it not only tells a man that he must not harden his heart against God, but shows him how not to do this. It clearly explains cause and effect, right and wrong, and so definitely delineates the truth that the service of good is seen to be alone worth while, at the same time showing how the service of good is possible, that the sick and the sinning alike both find out how to become healed and how to stay healed; for they are taught the truth of being, which saves from those false conclusions as to life and man which are provocative and causative of wrongdoing and of physical illness.

Christian Science follows the words of the prophet Isaiah where he says, "Come now, and let us reason together." It asks its students to reason, not to believe but to understand the truth concerning God and man. In the book already quoted, we read (Science and Health, p. 284): "According to Christian Science, the only real senses of man are spiritual, emanating from divine Mind. Thought passes from God to man, but neither sensation nor report goes from material body to Mind. The intercommunication is always from God to His idea, man. Matter is not sentient and cannot be cognizant of good or of evil, of pleasure or of pain. Man's individuality is not material." As people ponder these things in the light of Christian Science, the divine presence becomes more and more real and tangible, while the things of material sense look less and less real. Thus they are released from sin, fear, and worry, and from the restlessness and discontent which before may have afflicted them, driving them to seek a false excitement by which they hoped to forget themselves, a form of hardening of the heart which delivered them into much evil. The study of Christian Science surely assuages all false conditions, and the speaking of Principle, of the divine voice, becomes ever more plainly heard as they walk farther and farther in the right path.

Is it not a blessed thing that in this year of grace, nineteen hundred and nineteen, we have that clear channel of spiritual truth which is named Christian Science, to help us remain not only calm but happy and useful amid the world's turmoil? As it helps the individual to be a better, a healthier and a holier man, so shall it surely help the nation to become of better health and holiness. For the individual and national problem is one.

[Robert G. Steel in Detroit (Mich.) Times]

In a recent issue is an interview with one who claims to heal through other than material means, in which the statement is made that spiritual healing is not Christian Science. Inasmuch as your readers may be misled into the belief that Christian Science is not spiritual healing, space is asked for a brief explanation.

Since Christian Science is based wholly on the Bible and the words and works of Christ Jesus, its sole dependence, during the nearly fifty years since its discovery, for its uniform success in healing sickness and destroying sin, has been on the power of God, Spirit. In the practice of Christian Science no reliance is placed on any material means whatever. This is spiritual healing in all its genuineness and in all its purity, for it is the method employed by Jesus in the performance of his wonderful works.

Relying on the Bible statements that God, Spirit, made everything and called it good, and that God, infinite good, is omnipotent, omnipresent, and omniscient, Christian Science denies the reality of sin, sickness, and death. Evil, in all its phases, is, then, only the supposititious opposite of good, since it can have neither reality, power, presence, nor knowledge. Christian Science does not deny, however, that evil, including sin, sickness, and death, seems real to the fleshly, mortal, material mind, that carnal mind which Paul declared is "enmity against God."

Understanding God as Spirit, and the spiritual nature of His creation including man in God's own image and likeness, Christian Science heals the sick, destroys sin, and casts out evil by knowing the truth about them and about God, even that truth the knowledge of which Jesus said would make us free. Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, on page xi of the Preface of the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," makes this plain, as follows: "The physical healing of Christian Science results now, as in Jesus' time, from the operation of divine Principle, before which sin and disease lose their reality in human consciousness and disappear as naturally and as necessarily as darkness gives place to light and sin to reformation."

For nearly half a century Christian Science has been almost alone in its stand for the healing of the sick as an essential part of Christianity. Jesus taught and practiced it and commanded his followers to do likewise, and Christian Science in its teaching and practice has emulated the Master in all his ways. Christian Scientists are therefore much encouraged that one coming under the auspices of an historic church is proclaiming that spiritual healing is a vital element in Christian work. On page 111 of her book, "Miscellaneous Writings" Mrs. Eddy says, "I love the orthodox church; and, in time, that church will love Christian Science."

[George R. Lowe in Mail and Empire, Toronto, Canada]

"G. S. H." seems to be strangely fascinated by his conception of "Mrs. Eddy's religion," which is not a new religion after all, but simply a restatement of the religion of Christ Jesus, who said, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind;" and, "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself." Here we stand on common ground. Mrs. Eddy, in her Church Manual (p. 17), writes of her purpose "to organize a church designed to commemorate the word and works of our Master, which should reinstate primitive Christianity and its lost element of healing." This does not mean that the healing of the body is exalted to first place in Christian Science, but that it is recognized as an essential fruit of true Christian teaching, even as it was in our Lord's ministry and during the first three centuries at least of the Christian era.

We agree also that science means exact knowledge. When Christ Jesus said, "It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing," he knew exactly the truth about the flesh or matter, and was making a scientific statement. Mrs. Eddy in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 313) writes: "Jesus of Nazareth was the most scientific man that ever trod the globe. He plunged beneath the material surface of things, and found the spiritual cause." When Jesus defined eternal life as the knowledge of God and of His Christ, he gave a definition which is scientific. Doubtless Christian truth is a revelation of God; this does not imply, however, that it is unintelligible or irrational, but rather that it is grasped by the highest exercise of intelligence and reason. Therefore, by spiritually scientific inquiry God is known.

That God is divine Mind is not a mere theory but demonstrable fact. Paul wrote, "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus," and he refers elsewhere to the "mind of Christ," not as a mere theory, but as fundamental Principle. He also wrote of what may be translated as "the exact, scientific knowledge of God." Paul knew.

When Mrs. Eddy first announced her discovery of Christian Science, few there were who paid any heed to it. Those who were attracted by it were the poor and needy who longed to know God as the present Savior for the healing of both sickness and sin. The spiritual and physical benefits that accrued to those who learned Christian Science testified to its worth, and more people became interested in it. For over fifty years, meeting persecution and misapprehension as well as eager investigation, it has thrived.

For many years Mrs. Eddy's career was one of privation and struggle. As Christian Science became better known, a good demand for her books grew up, and this brought her an increasing income. Simply because Christian Science won its way to the heart of humanity, its Discoverer and Founder was the recipient of much gratitude and love. Those who knew her best in her own home gladly bear witness to her Christian character, her humility, patience, and wonderful trust in almighty Love. Nothing but ignorance of her human life and misunderstanding of her mission could betray any well-meaning person, much less any Christian gentleman, to speak ill of this New England gentlewoman, authoress, and religious reformer.

The Christian Science church is not a money-making institution. It has no state establishment, no salaried clergy, no profiteers. Its members give gladly to its support and to its charitable funds. For instance, during the year ending May 31, 1919, well over a million dollars were disbursed from the War Relief fund of The Mother Church, and this amount includes over seventeen thousand dollars for Halifax relief. Christian Science practitioners are paid moderately by those who solicit their services. Surely this is in accord with the Master's word, "The labourer is worthy of his hire."

It is not likely that anyone has asked "G. S. H." to invest in Mrs. Eddy's book. He should not feel called upon to write so harshly of Christian Science, and unintentionally, no doubt, to misrepresent it. In the last analysis, of course, this work will continue to speak for itself, and Christian Scientists will be known by their fruits.

[Samuel J. Macdonald in The Saturday Review, Bergenfield, N. J.]

In The Saturday Review appears an interesting letter in "People's Forum" under the heading, "What is Death?" It is assuredly an encouraging sign of the times when this question may be calmly and intelligently discussed in the public press. And such encouragement grows stronger and clearer when women claim and exercise their birthright of equality in the study and discussion of topics of genuine import. May I then be permitted to express my appreciation of your correspondent's letter? She is surely to be felicitated upon her courage in facing undaunted so somber a question.

I trust I may be permitted also to correct an error of statement in this letter upon a subject of such general interest. Your correspondent writes, "Christian Scientists deny death altogether and when they are obliged to mention it they speak of 'passing over' or 'passing out.'" This is one of those half truths which as Lord Tennyson points out, are "a harder matter to fight." As a human experience, death is by no means denied by Christian Scientists, and as such they do not hesitate to use the word when it is necessary or advisable to use it. The best proof of this statement may be found in the fact that Mrs. Eddy uses the word death in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" over two hundred times, and in her other writings almost as many times. Let me quote one pertinent, emphatic utterance of Mrs. Eddy upon this very question of the use of the word death (Miscellany, p. 235), "To teach the truth of life without using the word death, the suppositional opposite of life, were as impossible as to define truth and not name its opposite, error."

It is true, however, that in Christian Science, death is not admitted to be anything more than illusion. It is so defined in Science and Health on page 584: "An illusion, the lie of life in matter; the unreal and untrue; the opposite of Life." As darkness is unreal and is overcome by light; as ignorance, which is mental darkness, is unreal and is overcome by intelligence; as error, also mental darkness, is unreal and is overcome by truth; so death, which is material darkness, is unreal and is overcome by Life, which is spiritual light. The apostle John says, "God is light, and in him is no darkness at all."

The apostle Paul declares in unmistakable language, "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." That which is real is not an enemy and can never be destroyed. Therefore the position of Christian Science upon this great subject is not only Scriptural but logical and impregnable.

Funds of The Mother Church

"I inclose check for ten dollars as August contribution from our family. As a family we are grateful for the protection and healing which comes to us as a result of Christian Science applied. The value of the amounts sent in seem as nothing to what we receive."

"Please find money order inclosed for six dollars, three for The Christian Science Benevolent Association fund and three for the Real Estate fund.

"This is a small expression of gratitude for the many blessings received through Christian Science, especially in destroying the sense of limitation and lack. I have proved that God has given an abundant supply for all His children, but it has taken me seven years to learn this lesson and to let go the thought of to-morrow; but when I did and just rested in divine Love I was ready for the blessing. I have learned many sweet lessons during this time and have proved that we are never tempted above that we are able to bear, for infinite Love is always here."

"It is our desire and intent to continue contributing to these funds, and we would express in some measure our gratitude that these channels for loving usefulness have been provided for us. In The Christian Science Benevolent Association, especially, we welcome the opportunity to demonstrate a greater and more impersonal love for our brother, thereby adding to our own growth, since, as Mrs. Eddy says (Miscellany, p. 287), 'in love for man we gain the only and true sense of love for God, practical good, and so rise and still rise to His image and likeness, and are made partakers of that Mind whence springs the universe.'"

A Citizen of Zion

How many people there are who begrudge not the expression of their faith that the world is in a bad state. If some one expresses hope for its recovery or faith in the inevitable triumph of righteousness, they look askance and think they cannot change their fixed faith in trouble, sorrow, and confusion. Now one can take either the material outlook or the spiritual look within. He can view evil as real and sit in condemnation upon half the population of the world because of its injustice to the other half, and so deepen his cynicism, or he can look within and estimate his own experiences of God's goodness. He can thus improve his faith in God so as to be able to cherish hope for others. When the disciple spoke of all the provision they had in sight being five barley loaves and two small fishes, he quickly added, "What are they among so many?" But the Master, taking the spiritual view, revealed the abundance of good in such a way that the multitude was satisfied.

Here and there in this day may be seen disorder; men are wrecking, burning, destroying the property of others, and looting the visible things which they covet; but they are inevitably forced to say, How futile these stolen goods are to meet the needs of the multitude; and they will be further forced to see that by production not destruction, by loving-kindness not by hatred, will the needs of the many be adequately met. In other words, it must be necessarily discerned that when men find good within they will then manifest such activities as will make this good become common good and bless all.

Since early Christianity, which freed both slave and master, one from fear and unjust suffering, and the other from fear and pride in injustice, nothing has influenced the world so beneficently as Christian Science has done, and for the reason that it has directly and adequately provided the remedy for the individual need. As early Christianity touched the individual life first, so does Christian Science deal with human beings, not en masse as so many "hands" or such and such a number of "souls," but as individual children of God. Such words as conversion, repentance, regeneration, sanctification, may be useful enough in trying to describe what takes place, but the simple word "healing" is perhaps the best one to indicate the change. How adequately this was expressed by the blind man healed at the temple gate when he said, "One thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see." So the sick variously say: Whereas I had ill health, now I am well; whereas I was embittered and hateful, now I love my neighbor; whereas I knew not God, now in my heart is the heaven of love for God and man.

Where Christian Science operates, there is a renewal of the right spirit within as a result of healing, so that the man delivered from his sicknesses and his erroneous thinking is prepared to be a citizen of Zion. He knows the futility of pride and vainglory seeking to rule the earth, and understands the enrichment of humility. For, "Who shall inherit the earth?" Mrs. Eddy replies to this question (Miscellany, p. 228) by saying, "The meek, who sit at the feet of Truth, bathing the human understanding with tears of repentance and washing it clean from the taints of self-righteousness, hypocrisy, envy,—they shall inherit the earth, for 'wisdom is justified of her children.'"

In a psalm of David's there is a characterization of the citizen of Zion as one "that walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousness, and speaketh the truth in his heart." To be upright meant much in the Hebrew sense, for the idea of perfection or of completeness was involved, just as in righteousness the idea of justice or rightness was included. Hence came the proverb, "Whoso walketh uprightly shall be saved." It is further declared in the Proverbs of Solomon: "Righteousness delivereth from death. The righteousness of the perfect shall direct his way." Nothing better indicates the sense of steadfastness and reliability conveyed by the word "truth" than the story of Elijah. It was when he had healed the widow's child, actually raised him from the dead and placed him in his mother's arms again, that she said, "I know . . . that the word of the Lord in thy mouth is truth." One can picture with happiness the prospect of a world constructed, not through convulsions, revolutions, and the flowing of rivers of blood, but redeemed through the influences therein of men and women who are themselves redeemed from evil beliefs, pride, cruelty, harshness in judgment, and enabled through Christian Science to judge righteous judgment, to proclaim salvation, to demonstrate healing, and to unfold in their characters something of the beauty of holiness.

Let us not then be dismayed because of the confusions, controversies, resistances, injustices, and strivings manifest in human minds. It is to be assumed that all the strivers are in some blind way seeking after good. If they do not know that it is healing they want, all the more reason, then, for those who know the remedy to hold steadfastly the truth in their hearts, awaiting the opportunity when they can minister to others. Mrs. Eddy's words, written years ago, fit the present hour and bring comfort. She says in "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 368): "Some of the mere puppets of the hour are playing only for money, and at a fearful stake. Others, from malice and envy, are working out the destinies of the damned. But while the best, perverted, on the mortal plane may become the worst, let us not forget that the Lord reigns, and that this earth shall some time rejoice in His supreme rule,—that the tired watchmen on the walls of Zion, and the true Christian Scientist at the foot of the mount of revelation, shall look up with shouts and thanksgiving,—that God's law, as in divine Science, shall be finally understood; and the gospel of glad tidings bring 'on earth peace, good will toward men.'"

William P. McKenzie.

"A shining light"

Men have always loved to descant upon light. Used in metaphor it has invariably been a favorite, and all kinds of helpful lessons have been propounded with it as a topic. None have ever been more valuable than the one which Jesus gave to his disciples when he commanded them, "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." Christians from then until now have striven to find out just what this command has meant and how they were to proceed to obey it. Many a preacher has presented it in many an aspect, but his hearers have often been left still wondering just what it implied.

Digitized by Google

The question has frequently arisen, How can one reconcile this teaching of Jesus with that other one of his where he tells us, "Let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth"? How is one to have his light shine to such an extent that God shall be glorified and yet at the same time be so unconscious of it that even one hand shall not know what the other hand has done? In other words, How are one's good deeds to be a power for good if they are never to be proclaimed abroad?

Christian Science has come revealing the truth which answers this as satisfactorily as it does all other questions. It teaches that true light is reflected from God, and one can only let his light shine as he expresses the qualities of God, divine Mind, in right thinking and living. This leaves no place or necessity for self-contemplation. As one divests himself of self-righteousness, vainglory, pride, and kindred beliefs there will be no self-consciousness left to dim the shining of the light. The Christian Scientist's responsibility is to be sure that no false sense of self remains in his thinking, which can act as an obscuration of the true light. He is only responsible for the shining, not for the way it is to glorify God. God will attend to that. The Christian Scientist lets the light shine when he empties his thought of all selfishness, through lifting it above self-thinking and self-seeking, and keeps it true to God, wherever he may be placed or however he may be circumstanced.

To outline as to the way one is to let his light shine and so glorify God, is to lose sight of the fact that "Thine, O Lord, is the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty: for all that is in the heaven and in the earth is thine; thine is the kingdom, O Lord, and thou art exalted as head above all." Remember, Jesus' life for the first thirty years was practically unknown to the world! Even in the three years of his public ministry there is never one instance where he sought to outline the manner in which he was to glorify God. He always did the things God told him to do,—the things which were at hand. When we see that all is Mind and that God is glorified through right thinking and living, we understand that it does not make much difference how unrecognized one's life may be from a human standpoint,—its victories over self may be so magnificent as to prove of untold blessing to all mankind. One must learn to let his light shine by serving God and his fellow man, and God will take care of the results. One's work is to reflect the truth. Truth is what the world is hungering for and is the light which will deliver from all sense of darkness.

However unnoticed one's work to-day may apparently be, remember, each one's reflection of the light is necessary to bring out the complete whole. The absence of any idea, even the least, would render imperfect all of creation. Wherever one may be, whatever the task one is called upon to do, it is God who is saying, Lift up the light! Obeying God, one will find the consecration to right thinking and living which God will cause to magnify His name in wonderful ways one may not to-day know or dream of. Then right here one can prove himself to be "a shining light."

Let us all do whatever we find to do with our might, "as to the Lord," from the simplest, most humble service to what the world may call a highly exalted one. To translate each duty into a shining of light for the glory of God and the good of universal humanity, is to rise out of limitation into the grandeur and bliss of divine activity, blessing all even though unconsciously. This is the bright shining of the light which is reflected from Light. Doing this, Christian Scientists will live also in obedience to the command of our beloved Leader, Mrs. Eddy; for she writes in Miscellany (p. 191): "Continue steadfast in love and good works. Children of light, you are not children of darkness. Let your light shine. Keep in mind the foundations of Christian Science—one God and one Christ. Keep personality out of sight, and Christ's 'Blessed are ye' will seal your apostleship."

Among the Churches

Current Notes

BOSTON, MASS.—The First Church of Christ, Scientist. Sunday services, 10:45 a.m., 7:30 p.m.; Sunday school, 10:45 a.m.; Wednesday evening meeting, 7:30 p.m., in the church edifice, Norway, Falmouth, and St. Paul Streets. The church is open to visitors Wednesdays and Fridays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Reading rooms: Little Building, corner of Tremont and Boylston Streets (fourth floor); open daily, except Sunday and Wednesday, from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., and on Wednesday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. International Trust Company Building (second floor), 45 Milk Street, near Devonshire, opposite post office; open daily, except Sunday, from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Coolidge Corner Building, 1316 Beacon Street, Brookline; open daily, except Sunday, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

RACINE, WIS.—Work was started to-day [Sept. 6] on wrecking the large brick residence at the southwest corner of College Avenue and Ninth Street.

The property has a frontage of 60 feet on College Avenue, and will make a splendid site for the handsome edifice which will be the place of worship of Racine Christian Scientists. Plans for the new structure are being prepared. Excavation for the new church will begin as soon as the present building has been razed.

The property was sold to the Christian Science church about two years ago for thirteen thousand dollars. Since the society disposed of its property at the southwest corner of Main and Seventh Streets for nearly twenty-five thousand dollars, services have been held in the Buffham Building.—Racine Call.

RHODE ISLAND.—Of the many activities in which this committee has been called upon to participate, that which was of much importance was the legislative work during the session of the General Assembly. In line with most of the states, radical and drastic so-called health measures were introduced in this legislature. From the amount of propaganda connected with the introduction of these bills, it would seem that they all originated from one source, that of a certain organization which is apparently endeavoring to dominate and to control the individual, in so far as what its members believe to be his health is concerned.

There were four bills emanating evidently from this source. Two of these bills were not particularly objectionable and were therefore not given much attention; the other two bills were most objectionable and they were given very careful attention. One was to all appearances aimed, although in a very hidden way, at the practice of Christian Science, and was in substance the same as the one introduced last year which failed to be considered. To this bill an amendment was prepared and offered, reading, "But this Act shall not apply to the practice of Christian Science." The other bill was in effect to make the physical examination of school children compulsory. An amendment to this bill was prepared and offered stating that "nothing in this Act shall be construed to require medical examination or treatment for any person or the minor child of any person who is a member of a well-recognized church or religious denomination and whose religious convictions in accordance with the tenets of his church or religious denomination are against medical treatment for disease." It is most gratifying and satisfying to be able to state that neither of these objectionable bills was definitely considered, and they were not reported back, and were thus defeated.

The number of articles in the press of the state pertaining to Christian Science has been unusually large. None, however, in the secular press required any reply, except two. These two were reports of statements made by a certain revivalist who preached in Providence for a period of six weeks.—Committee on Publication.

The Lectures

Pittsburgh, Pa. (First Church).—John Randall Dunn, lecturer; introduced by Franklin Dickey, who said in part:—

It is recorded in the gospel of John that Jesus, when seeking to instruct the thought of his disciples, said to them: "If ye continue in my word, . . . ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." It is evident that what Jesus had in mind was not freedom from good things, because no one would wish to be freed from them, but rather freedom from the things which are seemingly opposed to good, freedom from sin, and disease, and lack, and unrest, and the many like evils, to be subject to which is bondage. This statement of Jesus is a plain setting forth of the means by which such freedom is to be gained, and because the law underlying his statement has been brought to light again in our age, this way of escape from evil has become available to us, and its efficacy is again being demonstrated as it was in Jesus' time. This freedom from evil is not to be attained by physical might of any kind. The plain statement of Jesus is that it is to be gained by knowing the truth; that is, the truth about God, the truth about man, and the truth about man's relation to God.

Saginaw, Mich. (First Church).—Judge Samuel W. Greene, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Anis McAvoy, who said in part:—

Christian Science is the "pearl of great price." By it the sick are healed, the sorrowing comforted, and the sinner is reformed. It reveals the Christ, Truth, which Jesus referred to when he spoke these tender, compassionate words: "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Christian Science is a religion of love, activity, and works. Millions of missionaries in the form of periodicals, silent messengers of comfort and healing, are being sent each year throughout the world. It is an enlightening and practical religion.

Chicago, Ill. (Seventh Church).—Prof. Hermann S. Hering, lecturer; introduced by Miss Christine Paulson, who said in part:—

On page 99 of "Miscellaneous Writings" Mary Baker Eddy, Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, writes: "In no other one thing seemed Jesus of Nazareth more divine than in his faith in the immortality of his words. He said, 'Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away;' and they have not. The winds of time sweep clean the centuries, but they can never bear into oblivion his words. They still live, and to-morrow speak louder than to-day."

This word, this Christ, Truth, Christian Science brings to the world to-day,—a message of hope and joy which meets the needs of humanity not only in the healing of sin, sickness, and sorrow but in all the affairs of life. It is this word which, when rightly applied, enables us to prove that God's law is now and always will be in continual operation, thus bringing to human experience the liberty of the children of God.

New York, N. Y. (First Church).—Frank H. Leonard, lecturer; introduced by William R. Best, who said in part:—

The great problem that faces humanity to-day is that of how to live. The world itself has tried to solve this question in many ways, through policies, forms of government, societies, and so forth, but has never succeeded in bringing to light a satisfactory answer.

The only man who solved and properly answered this question was our great Master, Jesus of Nazareth. He did this through teaching the practical use of spiritual ideas and the knowledge of their value: put into practice, they mean life; continually practiced, life eternal. This was illustrated in the incident of the lawyer who asked Jesus what he should do to gain "eternal life." Jesus did not answer directly, but asked him the question, "What is written in the law?" To this the lawyer replied in the words of the First Commandment, and of the necessity of loving his neighbor as himself. Jesus told him that he had answered rightly, to put this into practice and he should live. Evidently this idea was too large for the lawyer, and he asked the question, "Who is my neighbour?" Jesus replied by telling him the story of the good Samaritan, showing the idea of compassion. The purpose of Christian Science is to carry on our great Master's work, in teaching the value of spiritual ideas.

Greenville, Ohio (Society).—Dr. John M. Tutt, lecturer; introduced by A. A. Tobias, who said in part:—

The mission of Christian Science is to give to the world a better understanding of God, that we may acquaint ourselves with Him and be at peace. Its message to the sinner is one of freedom from his bondage; it is a message of peace to the sorrowful, and of good will to all mankind. It brings glad tidings of hope to man, and offers the present fulfillment of God's promise of peace and health to all who are willing to accept and practice its simple and Christian rules.

Boise, Idaho (First Church).—Ezra W. Palmer, lecturer; introduced by Thomas C. Hollingshead, who said in part:—

In one of her "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 307), Mrs. Eddy remarks, "What a glorious inheritance is given to us through the understanding of omnipresent Love!" It is this understanding of an omnipresent God who is Love, present not only in the hour of trial to lighten our burdens but also in the hour of happiness to make our joy more full, a God ever available, all-powerful, always loving, never afflicting, that has drawn to the study of Christian Science many, many thousands who are to-day striving for a fuller knowledge of their loving heavenly Father. As they gain a little understanding of this loving Father, they find that they have also gained a desire to be more like Him, to be better men and women, better sons and daughters, better neighbors, and better friends. They are finding, too, that the study of the Bible, in the light that Mrs. Eddy has thrown upon it through her writings, has become for them a source of great joy and blessing; that passages formerly dark and hard to understand have been rendered clear and full of inspiration, while other portions always loved have come to glow with divine beauty; and as they strive to be more like their heavenly Father and understandingly search the Scriptures, they discover that they have found a way out of the trials and perplexities, the cares and disappointments, of their daily lives, and rejoice in an ever available Savior, a God who is Love.

Now this God, divine Love, has throughout all time been just as available as to-day; but it was not until a simple, loving, pure-minded woman was led to discern the spiritual import of that greatest of all books, the Bible, and through her writings make this clear to all, that mankind has been able to make use of this help and prove that God not only takes away our sins but does indeed, as the Bible itself declares, heal "all thy diseases." And Mrs. Eddy thus closes the quotation already given, "This sweet assurance"—the assurance of ever present divine Love—"is the 'Peace, be still' to all human fears, to suffering of every sort."

CLEVELAND, OHIO (Fifth Church).—Mrs. Blanche K. Corby, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Caroline E. Krause, who said in part:—

The angel message which came to the prophet shepherds of old, "On earth peace, good will toward men," has again come to this age through Christian Science. Christian Science, or divine Science, as founded by our revered Leader, Mary Baker Eddy, is true idealism, in which God, Spirit, or divine Principle, is the universal cause, and therefore the universe of Spirit is spiritual, the ideal world. This idealism, however, must be made practical; then it becomes natural and habitual. And when it is made practical, it heals disease and reforms the sinner. On page 495 of our textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," Mrs. Eddy says: "God will heal the sick through man, whenever man is governed by God. Truth casts out error now as surely as it did nineteen centuries ago." This statement has been proved through the experience of thousands all over the world in the healing of all manner of disease.

SPRING VALLEY, N. Y. (Society).—John W. Doorly, lecturer; introduced by Elting Alexander, who said in part:—

It was in 1866, after years of eager searching and earnest prayer, that Mary Baker Eddy rediscovered the "divine laws of Life, Truth, and Love" (Science and Health, p. 107), the very laws by which Jesus had been enabled to heal the sick and to raise the dead. This he did through understanding the allness of God and that His creation, the only creation, is good, and good alone. Mrs. Eddy named her discovery Christian Science.

Testimonies of Healing

Whenever I have not been able to lift my thoughts above material things or seemed unable to realize the ever presence of God, Love, on turning to the testimonies in the Sentinel or Journal I have always been uplifted with thankfulness to God for what He has done for others. It has never failed to awaken gratitude for what He has done for me, and what He is doing at all times for us all. My heart overflows with gratitude to Mrs. Eddy, who has established these periodicals and has given us the privilege of telling publicly how good God has been to us, so that others may feel comforted and more assured at each reading, that God is here and now willing to heal us of sin and disease, when we turn to Him with our whole heart.

Christian Science came to me when I thought I was losing my mind because of an incurable disease. Reading the book "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy was all that was necessary to heal both the disease and the fear of insanity. Since that time I have had many healings, some with the aid of practitioners, and others with the understanding of God that I was gaining by my daily study and by trying to put into practice what I was learning of Christian Science. I am very thankful for the privilege of adding one more testimony of God's love to man and hope it will encourage some one.

(Mrs.) Lillian Phillips, Highland Park, Mich.

It is now about eleven years since I first had the privilege of hearing about Christian Science from a friend. It was not for relief from any disease that I accepted its regenerating teachings, but rather from a tendency to search for the truth. Since then I have had only occasions for gratitude for the reforming, healing, regenerating, saving influence of this blessed teaching, which opens our eyes that they may see, and our ears that they may hear, the "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

Being at that time a student of the school of fine arts I was acquainted with all the so-called artistic ways of living —stupid exaggerations of all kinds, love of amusements, tobacco, et cetera, believed to be indispensable to art students and to inspiration. Although not in great sympathy with all those things, I was gradually released entirely from their hold through the understanding I then had of Christian Science. I undertook seriously to learn English in order that I might independently study for myself our textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," and the other writings of our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, as well as the Christian Science periodicals. Thanks be to God I have now for years been able satisfactorily to do that.

I was a hard smoker for five years, but when I heard that it was not in accord with Christian Science I tried to give it up, but without knowing quite why. So I succeeded in doing away with it entirely for a period, but afterwards fell again into the temptation of believing that if I had lessened it every day it would have been enough, and that it would be impossible to do away with it at once and forever. I was under the mesmerism that a temperate or even a very small use of it could not harm, so I arrived at the conclusion that all that I could do would be to reduce the use of tobacco. So I did, but alas for the subtle nature of evil, I never succeeded in standing by even the standard of reduction I had accepted. So it was, until I understood at last—nearly three years ago—that "evil cannot be used temperately: its slightest use is abuse" (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 289). I have been healed also of periodical nervous headaches which I had from a very early time in my life, and of many lesser troubles and difficulties.

For all these and innumerable other blessings the word gratitude does not render a hundredth part of what I and my family feel for the inspired woman to whom it pleased God to reveal this wonderful Science, as well as to all those who bear the "heat of the day" in the vineyard of our Lord.

D. Demas, Athens, Greece.

I wish to add a few words to my brother-in-law's testimony. Since Christian Science has come to us almost perfect health has been enjoyed, and whenever sickness has claimed an entrance in our thought it has been quickly overcome. Last winter an attack of influenza was overcome in two days. I did not stay in bed one hour longer than usual, went about my daily household duties and occupations, and was quite free the third day.

As there were no other Christian Scientists here for years, we were obliged to advance step by step unaided. The Bible in connection with Science and Health and all the publications of Mrs. Eddy, together with the daily study of the Lesson-Sermon, have been our only guides and teachers. The Lesson-Sermons are being read in our home and lately several persons have joined us. We are very grateful for all the blessings Christian Science brings to mankind, and hope the time may not be distant when "they shall teach no more every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them."

(Miss) Natalie E. Ziller.

Two years ago a painful swelling appeared on one of my feet, hindering me in putting on my shoe and in walking. Through the loving help of a Christian Science practitioner I was completely healed in three days, and the trouble has not reappeared. Still more wonderful, however, was a healing received later from a condition which I firmly believed would always remain with me. For thirty years I had suffered from intestinal trouble and stomach disorder, and was unable to get along a single day without using a material remedy. The faithful help of the same practitioner freed me completely within four weeks. This healing and the pure, unselfish love which the practitioner reflected awakened in me the desire to know more of Christian Science.

The study of the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, has brought me great blessings; it has given me a new and wonderful point of view, and courage to believe in all the promises of Christ Jesus, and also that his followers to-day, as in the time of the first Christian church, have the divine right and sacred duty to "heal the sick in his name" (Pulpit and Press, p. 22).

(Mrs.) M. Heidrich, Oybin, b. Zittau, Germany.

A few years ago the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, was given to me by my dear sister. At the time it all seemed very much like Greek to me, but I pressed on, knowing that it helped others and surely must help me—and so it has many, many times, both physically and spiritually. Though the spiritual understanding seemed slow to gain, yet I thank God for a glimpse of light that has come into my life through the study of Mrs. Eddy's writings, which she has lovingly given to the whole world.

I am indeed so truly thankful, that my feelings cannot be expressed in words. My desire is to practice to make perfect; as Jesus said, "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." On a trip I suffered very much from train sickness, which seemed to spoil the journey, and I had a little fear when it came time to go home, so I wrote to a practitioner asking for help. As a result I was perfectly well and enjoyed the trip back. My youngest son has been healed of ivy poisoning. He sprained his arm and the pain was severe, but it left in a very short time under Christian Science treatment. The child, however, held fear and kept the arm in a sling to protect it. When it was taken out it was crooked and remained so for over a year. Then I wrote to a practitioner, who treated him, and the arm is now perfectly straight.

The Christian Science Bible Lessons are a great help to me and I am very grateful for them and for all the authorized literature.

(Mrs.) ANNIE OSLAND, Box Grove, Ontario, Canada.

I gratefully send this testimony of what Christian Science has done for me. For nearly four years prior to 1913, I sought in vain for relief from a combination of ailments which no two of five physicians diagnosed the same. I was unable to do any work for over a year, nearly six months of which time were spent in bed. One doctor said an operation would be necessary before I could ever hope to be well again, although at that time I was too weak to be operated on. Later I improved somewhat and was able to be about my home. After several months I tried to do some light work, but soon began to fail again and then life seemed more hopeless than ever.

About a year previous to this a distant relative had sent me a copy of The Christian Science Journal, calling attention to the testimonies and local practitioners; but having always been opposed to this teaching I laid the periodical aside as containing nothing of interest to me. One morning, when it was very clear that all means of help previously employed had utterly failed, I suddenly decided to try Christian Science. A practitioner was called, and came to see me that afternoon. The next day stomach and bowel disorder of over two years' standing had disappeared. A severe case of liver trouble and great fear were some time in disappearing completely, but I am very grateful to say that all difficulties have been overcome, and Christian Science has been the only remedy used in our home for five years. Hardly in words can I express my thankfulness to God for the help we have received in every hour of need, and my gratitude to Mrs. Eddy for this truth which blesses all mankind.

My little girl, when about two years old, fell from a porch and broke her arm above the elbow. There was no Christian Science practitioner in the vicinity, so I telephoned to one in Brooklyn. Absent treatments were given every day for several weeks, and a perfect healing was brought about. The first thing to quiet the child after she fell was my singing one of Mrs. Eddy's hymns (Hymnal, p. 240), "O gentle presence, peace and joy and power." That word "power" meant so much. Because she kept asking for more, I had to keep singing it over and over, and then she became so peaceful.

I wanted to be sure of doing the right thing, but did not personally know of any healings of broken bones in Science (only having known about Science two years) and I began to be afraid. After two days a local doctor was called in, and he suggested taking the child to the hospital that afternoon, having an X-ray picture taken and setting the bone. I seemed to be in the wilderness, but found an old Sentinel that had a testimony of a woman who had several bones broken in an automobile accident and was healed in Science. After I had read this, my little girl asked for God's book, as she calls the Bible, and then opened it and asked me to read. It was opened at the third chapter of Proverbs and I started to read: "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths." Then further on I read, "It shall be . . . marrow to thy bones." Could anyone be told in plainer words what steps to take? I called up the doctor and canceled the appointment at the hospital, and continued the Christian Science treatment. The child's arm got along so nicely that I had the doctor look at it one day when I met him and all he could say was, "Go ahead with what you've been doing." As stated above, after a few weeks' treatment the healing was complete.

This demonstration of the power of Truth is only one of many and has turned belief into faith and faith into understanding,—the understanding that God is All and "there is none else." No matter what the seeming condition may be, the words of Jesus are ever before me, "Be not afraid." I know of no better way to show my gratefulness for what Christian Science has taught me than to strive in thought and action to be what I know in reality I am,—God's image and likeness.—(Mrs.) EMMA W. SCHWENCKE, Bay Shore, Long Island, N. Y.

After suffering for two years from gallstones, I heard of Christian Science, and as medicine had not helped me,—indeed I was getting worse,—I asked a practitioner for treatment and was healed. Since that time I have been healed of nasal catarrh, from which I had suffered all my life. I have become a member of the local Christian Science church, also of The Mother Church, and have had class instruction, for which I am extremely grateful. I am very thankful to God for my healings, also grateful to Mrs. Eddy for her book "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures."—(Miss) DORA GRAHAM, Belfast, Ireland.

In my profession, that of teaching French, Christian Science has been of inestimable value. The understanding that man is the full expression of Mind uncovers the falsities that one must be born in a certain place to acquire excellence in speaking a foreign language; that he need be satisfied with anything less than perfection for his goal. Never having had the intention of teaching I had preferred to specialize rather than to work for a diploma, so that when I wished to turn my training to practical account, I did not seem to fit into the conventional educational routine, and was forced to find a place for myself. Through this pioneer work Christian Science was my never failing solace, and I learned to turn more constantly to divine Mind for guidance and inspiration. In consequence, I find myself in a professional environment capable of greater elasticity, and offering greater possibilities than the positions which were sought originally.

When first presented to me as a young girl, the explanation which Christian Science gives of a perfect God and perfect man (hence the impossibility and unreality of evil) satisfied my sense of right and justice so that I accepted it at once without reserve. Subsequent study has developed this instinctive turning to the truth into a firm conviction.

Christian Science has relieved me of the necessity of wearing glasses, of chronic neuralgia, and of nervous exhaustion, which would overtake me in the midst of a season and make absolute rest imperative. It has effaced the specter of limited strength, opportunity, and supply with the joyous, secure sense of God's infinite provision for His children. Naturally I am most grateful to our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, whose life work has made these blessings available.

(Miss) Nina Winans, Evanston, Ill.

I rejoice always that I was willing to try Christian Science when it was presented to me, for it has proved such a blessing to me and mine. I turned to it for relief from bowel trouble and was permanently healed. Later, after a hard struggle, I was freed from asthma, which was said to be inherited. It is quite a few years since these healings were experienced. Before my first Christian Science treatment the only concept I had of God was of something to fear, but when this teaching revealed to me that God is Love it brought me a peace and joy that I had never known before, and I count this spiritual awakening my greatest blessing. The Bible was a closed book to me, and I did not even have one in my possession, but now I find the daily study of it and the application of its teachings a guide to health and happiness. I want to express my gratitude to our beloved Leader, Mrs. Eddy, for how else but through her unselfish love and tireless labor for all humanity could I be enjoying the blessings of Christian Science?

(Mrs.) Dora L. Cahn, Fresno, Calif.

I wish to express my gratitude for Christian Science and the many blessings I have received. I commenced the study of this religion six years and a half ago, after attending a testimony meeting. Science and Health was purchased next morning and it has been my daily study ever since. I was healed in that first meeting of a spinal trouble from which I had suffered for fifteen years. I had gotten out of bed that day for the first time in three weeks and met a friend who had been healed by Christian Science. He asked me to go to the church that evening, but I rebelled and told him I would not go and moreover did not want to hear about Christian Science. Later in the afternoon, however, I felt that I could not wait for the time to start, I had such a desire to attend the meeting.

I have also been healed of chronic stomach disorder, sprained and broken ankles, and many other physical troubles; but the knowledge of God, the illumination of the Bible, and the spiritual awakening which Science and Health and the other writings of Mrs. Eddy have given me I feel to be the greatest blessings that have ever come into my life. Christian Science has been our only physician during these years, and I rejoice that I live in the age in which God has been revealed to us through this demonstrable religion.—(Mrs.) Sally R. Hewett, Louisville, Ky.

I was suffering from great mental depression, and for many months tried to get help from various isms, but all these methods of healing left me unmoved and unhealed. One Sunday morning something told me to go to the Christian Science church, and from the moment I entered the door it seemed to me I began to experience a spiritual uplift. Before the end of that service I knew I had found the church of my long desire. I went to the reading room the following week and after a long talk with the attendant she lent me a copy of Science and Health, which I promised to read. The following week I saw a practitioner and was given a treatment. When I awoke next morning, instead of those black thoughts and a sense of rebellion that had heretofore possessed me, there was a conscious sense of tranquillity. There was no more holding back; I was in complete surrender to this demonstration of the power of Truth. My one desire was to know more of this beautiful religion, and as I studied Christian Science I began to see how Love had been leading me, not allowing me to cease my struggle until I found my right place.

My daily prayer is for greater love, knowing that only through works of love can I show proper gratitude for all I have received.

It is with the earnest hope that our experience may prove a beam of light to some wayfarer searching for Truth, that I humbly and gratefully give this testimony. For years I was subject to neuralgic headaches. I had been suffering from one of these attacks, and while the practitioner called on for help was with me I mentioned a particularly tenacious trouble of four years' standing, to which our son, five years old, was subject. The practitioner instantly met my remark with an emphatic statement of the child's completeness and perfection as an expression of God, and the matter was then dropped. From that time to this there has been no manifestation of the trouble, it having been overcome by the simple declaration of the truth. This so opened my eyes to the absolute omnipotence of Truth that when the next recurrence of neuralgic headache took place, I was able to place my entire dependence on God, throwing aside all faith in material help, with the result that I was healed.

A short time after this my baby daughter was born. Three nights later I awoke with a feeling of dread, and something impelled me to look at the baby. I found her in a very serious condition, her body turning cold, and at once I had my husband call for help by telephone. We then investigated, holding firmly to the fact of God's presence meanwhile, and found that the trouble was a hemorrhage through the bowels. This was overcome instantly through absent treatment, and the breathing, which had been very faint, became normal. In another day she was as well as ever.

Our desire is to know more of this beautiful truth, so that we can show our gratitude in deeds, for words are inadequate to express the song of thanksgiving and love in our hearts to God and our loving appreciation of the truth, which our beloved Leader, Mrs. Eddy, brought again to humanity.—(Mrs.) Mary Raymaker, Chicago, Ill.

I first heard of Christian Science many years ago, but was unable to investigate it until the summer of 1915 when I went to live with Christian Scientists in London. I joined the Sunday school and began to study the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy. Benefits were immediately experienced and within a month a great fear of air raids practically disappeared.

One day when running down a steep flight of stone steps I jumped from about five steps up, but fell, twisting my ankle underneath me. The pain was so acute when I got up that I fainted upon reaching the ground floor. Some friends helped me to a seat, however, and within five minutes I was all right with the exception of the ankle. By declaring the truth I was soon able to move with the aid of a stick, and the same afternoon stood in a queue for over half an hour with hardly any inconvenience. When I took off my boot at night the ankle swelled to nearly three times its normal size, but the next morning the swelling was gone and the day after that I was about as usual. At no time was there any discoloration, inflammation, or bruise.

When I came abroad in March, 1917, I was able to overcome fear of submarines, with the loving help of a practitioner. An attack of seasickness was quickly overcome and a wonderful sense of protection was with me during the voyage. Since then Christian Science has been such a help that I do not know what I should do without it. During two epidemics of Spanish influenza and a serious outbreak of dysentery I have remained perfectly well. Long hours of night and day duty without much sleep have been done without fatigue. Nowadays a minimum of sleep is sufficient, whereas formerly I considered nine or ten hours in bed to be essential.

I am very grateful for all these benefits, for the authorized literature, for the Sunday school, for all the help that has been given me; but especially am I grateful for the spiritual uplift and for some understanding of this new-old religion.—EDGAR L. TAPSCOTT, Gibraltar.

It is with gratitude that I testify to the daily good received through Christian Science. There have been many beautiful healings in our home through the application of this truth as explained by our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy. Ever since I was a little child I had been a sufferer from quinsy, having as many as five attacks a year. I am happy to say that I am entirely free from this ailment now and that the Christian Science treatments brought a spiritual understanding that is valued even more than the physical healing. Measles, tonsillitis, bowel disorder, chicken pox, and other discordant conditions have also been met and overcome. Each day unfolds new blessings and a desire to know more of the one Mind.

Very recently I was brought to a clearer understanding of God's protecting love in the healing of my small boy, who had inflicted a deep wound in his foot. I was alone with him and wondered how to get word to a certain practitioner who was out of town. Then came the healing thought: Your help is here—ever present Love. At once I had a feeling of peace and security. I read to the child out of our textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, with the result that he soon responded to the treatment and was playing. In two days the wound was entirely healed and no scar remained.

I am thankful for membership in a branch church, also for all the periodicals and other authorized literature. My heart is filled with love and gratefulness to God for having given us through Mrs. Eddy a truly demonstrable religion.

I cannot withhold my testimony any longer, having benefited so much from reading others. Nearly four years ago I was a hopeless wreck, having a supposedly incurable disease. Specialists in Liverpool and London gave no hope of my recovery, and said I would not live long. The sight of one eye had completely gone and the other was gradually getting worse. I prayed earnestly to God for help and my prayers were answered. A relative who had been healed in Christian Science sent me some literature, and from the moment I began to read it I knew Christian Science was the truth. At first I could only see to read a few lines, but in a few weeks found myself reading perfectly with both eyes without the use of glasses, which had been worn for twelve years. I was also completely healed of the many ailments from which I had been suffering. All this came about just through the reading of the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, and other Christian Science literature. Material remedies were thrown away, and I decided to rely thereafter on God for my help.

Headaches, which I had nearly every day for twelve years, also burns and colds, have been overcome almost instantly. All these healings are much to be grateful for, yet the physical freedom is not to be compared to the spiritual healing, for which I am truly grateful.

Before coming into Christian Science I never thought of reading the Bible, but now can say in the words of one of our hymns:—

Holy Bible! book divine!
Precious treasure! thou art mine!

I am far from any Christian Scientists, but know that if I keep ever in thought the right idea of church as given in our textbook, I shall progress. When tempted to be discouraged I just go back over the many blessings received, and rejoice; then all doubt and discouragement soon disappear. I must here give thanks for all our literature and for our Hymnal, which has so often lifted me out of darkness. The more I study Mrs. Eddy's writings the more I love and appreciate her for making it possible for all to understand the Bible promises and to obtain that peace "which passeth all understanding."—(Mrs.) KATE C. LAWRENCE, Millom, England.

In 1912 I came into Christian Science for the healing of my lungs, after having been given up by six of the most prominent doctors in this city, who said they had done all they could for me. I also had kidney and bladder trouble, as well as many other ills. I had taken so much medicine that my stomach was completely poisoned, and I could not retain even milk. Then hemorrhages set in, resulting in the loss of my voice, so that I could hardly speak above a whisper, and knowing that every material thing possible had been done I tried to resign myself to die. However, the thought came to try Christian Science, so a practitioner was sent for. She gave me a treatment, and on leaving told me I should go to church the next Wednesday evening. I looked at her in amazement as she could plainly see I was too weak to sit up over an hour at a time; but it was beautifully proved that she knew what she was saying.

By Wednesday I was strong enough to go to the meeting, although it was a rainy night and I had not been outdoors for over three months. No ill effects were experienced and I was in time for church the following Sunday morning feeling much stronger. I never missed a service after that, rain or shine. Although it was three years before I realized the complete healing of my lungs, yet I was healed of bowel trouble in the first treatment and one by one the other ailments disappeared. Many times I grew despondent and discouraged but I knew there was nothing for me to do but hold to God, and now I give thanks and rejoice that I was given patience to wait. I am a living testimony to the healing power of Christian Science.

Words cannot express my gratitude for the spiritual uplift, which has given me an understanding of a dear Father-Mother God, all through the earnest study of Christian Science. By trying to emulate Jesus in all his ways I am striving daily to be worthy to be called a Christian Scientist. Once life to me was not worth living, but thanks to our beloved Leader, Mrs. Eddy, it is now a joy to live.

Signs of the Times

[Roger W. Babson in Babson's Reports]

The need of the hour is not more legislation. The need of the hour is more religion. More religion is needed everywhere, from the halls of Congress at Washington to the factories, mines, fields, and forests. It is one thing to talk about plans and policies, but a plan and policy without a religious motive is like a watch without a spring, or a body without the breath of life. The trouble to-day is that we are trying to hatch chickens from sterile eggs.

Take the labor situation. . . . The solving of the labor situation is wholly a question of religion. The wage worker will never be satisfied with higher wages and shorter hours, any more than you and I are satisfied with more profits and a bigger house. Things never did satisfy anyone and never will. Satisfaction and contentment are matters of religion. Communities and industries where right motives are paramount have no serious labor problems.

When both employer and wage worker honestly believe that we are here in this world to serve others, the labor problem will be solved, but not until then. We employers should learn to give up, and labor should wake up. However, neither of us will do it except as we are actuated by religious motives. Both groups are largely actuated by selfish motives at the present time. Moreover, this is tremendously short-sighted selfishness. During the scramble over a division of what is already produced, we overlook the great importance of increasing production, thereby cutting down the tree to get the cherries. We all need a new outlook on life, a new political policy, a new industrial policy, and a new social policy. The old politics founded upon fear and striving only for protection has fulfilled its usefulness. We need a new politics based upon faith and striving for production.

Meanwhile, what is happening to our churches? They are going to seed. They are already deserted by the working classes, and are being deserted by the children of the employing classes. Great capital investments in land and buildings are being utilized only a few hours a week. The ministers are being paid starvation wages, and the whole church industry lacks "pep" and imagination. And yet, the church is the only organization in existence for generating right motives in man. Schools develop intellect, theaters and novels foster passion, but the church is the sole organization which develops those good motives of sympathy, love, hope, and inspiration upon which the industrial salvation of the world depends.

All men are human, whether United States senators or humble workmen. . . . The political and labor agitators, the partisan newspapers, the everyday "movie," and the other agencies which develop hate, jealousy, and fear, are running rampant to-day. . . .

The need of the hour is religion.

[Rev. C. B. Stetson in Rutland (Vt.) Herald]

Christ's work is still going on in the world. His spirit is working through us and in us all. It is still healing the sick and feeding the hungry. And it is still casting out the devils of fear and of hate and of selfishness. We must begin to-day where he began. Our prayer for ourselves and our fellows must be, "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me."

[San Jose (Calif.) Mercury Herald]

If religion consists in talking about and describing the beauties and blessings of the divine character, then religious leaders should be able to excel in this descriptive ability, though it take years of study and effort to acquire it. But if religion, in its highest aspects, consists of the possession of the divine character, of the spirit of Christ, and the manifestation in service of the power to minister its beneficences, then the effort of its leaders and professors should, it would seem, be to acquire and possess that spirit rather than to talk about it, though its possession might only come, not after years, but, if need be, after a lifetime of aspiration and effort.

Letters of Appreciation

Many letters of appreciation of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR and other Christian Science activities are constantly being received. These letters express what these activities mean to different individuals in various occupations and pursuits. The favorable comment that has been received on those already published indicates that they are welcome and helpful; therefore others will be published under the above heading. Extracts from such letters follow:

IT seems that I can no longer refrain from taking a moment of your time to express to you our great as well as constant appreciation of your wonderful and timely editorials, your Home Forum articles, and also the delightful poems selected for that page, especially those on Nature, which I am so glad it is our privilege to love and enjoy as Mrs. Eddy tells us in "Miscellaneous Writings." We are a family of seven and have been subscribers from the first,—and all readers.

ABOUT a month ago I mailed you one dollar and asked you to send THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR to the Masonic Temple, this city. I met our Tyler on the street to-day when I had a MONITOR in my pocket. Touching it with his fingers he said, "I want to tell you how much I appreciate your paper coming to the lodge. It is read by more Masons than is any other publication we receive." Other Masons have spoken to me in practically the same way.

JUST to tell you more about how much it is appreciated in our home. Mr. ——— is not a Christian Scientist, but he insists on having THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR in preference to any other newspaper, says it is the only paper that gives reliable news. He is away from home more or less, but requests me to save every issue of the MONITOR, so he can read them when he gets in. I know that you get thousands of such encouraging reports, but it is right that you should know the good you are doing.

VOLUME XXII DECEMBER 13, 1919 NUMBER 15

Immortality of the Word

NELLIE B. MACE

THE Christian Scientist is as confident of the immortality of the words of Mary Baker Eddy as he is certain that the words of Jesus the Christ are immortal. His assurance is born of the fact, not yet fully recognized by the world, that Mrs. Eddy's exposition of Truth is wholly based upon the Master's teaching. Jesus himself did not claim to have originated the truth. "My doctrine is not mine," he said, "but his that sent me. If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." He had discerned divine Principle, Truth, which has no beginning; and he had demonstrated to his own satisfaction and that of the sufferers who thronged him, that there is no reality apart from Spirit and spiritual harmony. Because he understood the eternality of Principle, he knew that the word or idea which expresses it is likewise eternal, and he was therefore able to declare, "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away." It was for the same reason that Mrs. Eddy, knowing in her spiritual illumination that she had grasped the truth of Jesus' teachings and that her written word had not departed from it, declared (Miscellany, p. 178), "If the world were in ashes, the contents of 'Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures' would remain immortal."

According to Jewish custom, Jesus was thoroughly versed in the law and the prophets, that part of the Bible which is known as the Old Testament. What he read in them was a record of the conflict between Spirit and the flesh. He saw that exactly as the people had grasped the spiritual meaning of the law and had obeyed it, they had progressed out from the dominion of the flesh. As Ezra, standing with the people in the street that was before the water gate, "read in the book in the law of God distinctly, and gave the sense, and caused them to understand the reading," so Jesus, with his innate spiritual perception, read the law and the prophets with far greater understanding, and caused those who were receptive of the spiritual truth also to understand. To his contemporaries, whose materialism buried the spiritual idea in ritual, and who consequently had no demonstrable understanding of spiritual power, he said, "Woe unto you, lawyers! for ye have taken away the key of knowledge."

In her reading of the law and the prophets, Mrs. Eddy found the same unfolding spiritual truth that Jesus understood and demonstrated, but she found it amplified and illuminated by Jesus' life and words, as recorded in the New Testament; and the outcome of her spiritual discovery was the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures." It is well known that certain scholars of Scriptural prophecies marked the year 1875—the year in which the Christian Science textbook was first published—as the time of the second coming of the Christ. Mrs. Eddy herself regarded the authorship of her book, not as hers personally, but as hers under the dictation of divine Truth or the spirit of the Christ. "I should blush to write of 'Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures' as I have, were it of human origin, and were I, apart from God, its author" (Miscellany, p. 115). When she therefore ordained the Bible and "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" to be the pastor that should preach for the church and the world, as recorded in the Manual (Art. XIV, Sect. 1), she was simply obedient to the natural and inevitable evolution of Truth, as discerned with more or less clearness by the prophets, understood and demonstrated by Jesus the Christ, and finally revealed to this age in its absolute Science.

Mrs. Eddy's position in relation to humanity is that of a divinely directed restorer of the "key of knowledge" which ritualism and dogma had lost in Jesus' time, and which materialism has again hidden since Judea's golden day. This key of knowledge, which Jesus possessed and used, and which Mrs. Eddy discovered and applied, is the fact that all causation is spiritual and that there is therefore no material cause or effect. The Christian Science textbook being what it is, a statement of the revelation to man of spiritual causation and law, it is obvious that the work of Christian Science must go on until the day foreseen by the prophet shall come, when "the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." To assist in the consummation of this great work, Mrs. Eddy instituted many branches of activity, all designed to draw humanity to a clearer understanding of Principle. But every activity, every article written for the periodicals, every lecture delivered to the people, has for its basis and authority the teaching contained in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," and for its purpose the winning of humanity to the consideration and application of the truths elucidated in the Bible and the Christian Science textbook. These spiritual missionaries have fulfilled their legitimate functions in proportion as this awakening is accomplished and the daily study of the Bible and Science and Health undertaken. A cursory examination of the book does not reveal its Science or secure the Scripture trove.

The best Christian Scientist to-day knows that he has spiritually assimilated scarcely more than a grain of the infinite truth revealed in the Bible and Science and Health; but he knows that he has found in his textbook the rules through which he can work out his own salvation, and he knows that his nobler and freer sense of being is the result of his conscientious study and his application of what he understands. He knows, too, that the Christian Science textbook is transforming the whole world, and that exactly in proportion to his own faithful study and practice, he identifies himself with this glorious impulsion of divine Principle. "The faith and works demanded of man in our textbooks, the Bible and 'Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures,' and the proof of the practicality of this faith and these works," Mrs. Eddy declares (Miscellany, p. 109), "show conclusively that Christian Science is indeed Science, —the Science of Christ, the Science of God and man, of the creator and creation."

Not the Timid but the Meek are Blessed

WILLIAM RUFUS SCOTT

HUMAN thinking, with characteristic inaccuracy, has made meekness synonymous with timidity and uses the words interchangeably with equal cynicism and contempt. Yet, manifestly, when Christ Jesus declared, "Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth," he did not mean, "Blessed are the timid; for they shall inherit the earth." The timid have never inherited anything except the inevitable ill consequences of cowardice, while the Scriptures and history abound with proofs of the good reward of courageous meekness.

The dictionary approaches metaphysical understanding when it defines the meek as those "not easily provoked or irritated; patient under injuries," and the timid as those "wanting in courage to meet danger; easily frightened." This definition of meekness, however, is incomplete because it does not bring out the high order of courage required of those who are genuinely meek. Christ Jesus was, indeed, "patient under injuries," but in all the abuse heaped upon him it was never charged that he was "wanting in courage to meet danger." Had he been timid he perhaps would have compromised his knowledge of Principle rather than face the ordeal of Calvary. The timid, accepting evil as real and life as material, shrink ofttimes from tests of their convictions lest they suffer pain or loss.

Through spiritual understanding Christ Jesus saw the nothingness of that which so arrogantly pretended to be power. Hence, while he was fearless in proclaiming the truth or rebuking an error, he would not personify evil as man, and strike down that man in an effort to defend himself or to vindicate good. The world is slow in reaching his understanding and equally slow in following his demonstration. "It would sometimes seem," Mrs. Eddy writes in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 343), "as if truth were rejected because meekness and spirituality are the conditions of its acceptance, while Christendom generally demands so much less."

What, therefore, most annoys human thinking is the refusal of the meek to react violently when attacked. This attitude toward evil it defines as tame submissiveness. Nevertheless, Christ Jesus was the most vigorous opponent evil has ever had and the most successful. He had reached an absolute, scientific understanding of God, good, which enabled him to overcome evil by a method wholly imperceptible to human sight. On the very occasions when human thinking characterizes his conduct as tamely submissive to the evil which aimed at his destruction, he was most surely destroying it. Of his conduct at the time of his betrayal, under a supreme temptation to strike back, Mrs. Eddy writes (Science and Health, p. 48): "Judas had the world's weapons. Jesus had not one of them, and chose not the world's means of defence."

Christian Scientists are learning the difference between meekness and timidity in all their activities. When a test of spiritual conviction comes in business, in the household, or in church, timidity would try to define itself as meekness and so cause a recession from a stand for Truth, or paralyze an impulse to proclaim the truth; but it is always possible to separate the gold of meekness from the dross of timidity by frankly inquiring of ourselves whether we are afraid to take a stand for right, or, if we have taken it, whether we are courageous enough to maintain it without venomous reaction in the face of opposition.

The career of Mrs. Eddy as the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science presents impressive proof of the truth of the third beatitude. Meekness characterized her conduct in the day of trial no less than in the day of triumph, and she inherited the earth, not only in the sense that she demonstrated abundant supply for human existence, but in the true sense of earth as defined on page 585 of Science and Health: "A sphere; a type of eternity and immortality, which are likewise without beginning or end. To material sense, earth is matter; to spiritual sense, it is a compound idea."

"Exalted to safety"

ANNE CLEVELAND CHENEY

NOTWITHSTANDING the fact that he to whom all Christendom looks for example and doctrine went about constantly healing the sick and even raised the dead, the criticism is sometimes brought against Christian Science that it makes the body of undue importance, in that people turn to this system of healing for physical relief, and at their Wednesday evening meetings repeatedly give thanks for having been freed from bodily suffering. If, however,—as is happening all over the world,—these same critics earnestly seek to know more of what has proved such a blessing to many of their friends and neighbors, and themselves attend one of these meetings of praise and thanksgiving, they are impressed by the fact that those who have been relieved of disease give more fervent thanks for the spiritual awakening by which the relief was accomplished, than for the freedom from physical ills, even when those ills have been the grimmest and most relentless known to the medical profession. With that simplicity and lack of self-consciousness which comes from the deep experiences of life, in almost the same phraseology one witness after another is heard to declare that above all he is thankful for the spiritual uplift, for the clearer understanding of God, which has come to him through Christian Science.

When Job was suffering utter anguish of mind and body, it will be remembered that Eliphaz the Temanite, advising, said: "I would seek unto God, and unto God would I commit my cause;" and he spoke of the marvelous things without number which God performs in order "to set up on high those that be low; that those which mourn may be exalted to safety." These words express most beautifully that sense of spiritual uplift spoken of again and again in those Wednesday evening meetings of thanksgiving which now encircle the globe. It is not so much the sense of safety from some dread foe to peace and joy and useful activity, but it is the knowledge of having been "exalted to safety," of having come higher up, nearer to God, because of this healing; it is the blessed realization that the kingdom of heaven has been brought closer to human experience.

On page 442 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," against a marginal topic, "Christ the great physician," Mrs. Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, has written: "When Christ changes a belief of sin or of sickness into a better belief, then belief melts into spiritual understanding, and sin, disease, and death disappear." It is this ineffable experience of seeing an old, wretched belief change to a better belief and later melt into spiritual understanding—it is this, transcending all else, which calls forth such gratitude as no material respite could ever awaken or approach. To know that relief has been won by merely exchanging one material belief for another, merely shifting reliance from one broken reed of earthly help to another, has been proved to be but scant cause of true gratitude to most of those who have sought help in Christian Science. They, too, have found that to God, not man, they must commit their cause; to Spirit and not to matter; to divine Science and not to any humanly evolved, so-called science; and having found God, having glimpsed the beautiful, harmonious working of spiritual law through the Christ Science, they have seen that which was unreal melt away before the brightness, the perfection of reality—God's true and only creation. This, then, is the cause of gratitude realized and expressed in Christian Science. In nothing did Mrs. Eddy prove her clear spiritual understanding and inspired leadership more than in providing these opportunities to voice gratitude for the Christ-healing,—the healing which, by displacing the sense of a diseased or helpless body and replacing it with a clearer concept of man in God's image, proves its Principle to be divine and, therefore, that it is to be glorified frankly, freely, reverently, constantly.

Those who fail to utter or to understand this wholly spiritual experience of gratitude have not yet known the Christ-healing. The expression of such gratitude is, as Mrs. Eddy says in the Manual of The Mother Church (Art. VIII, Sect. 24), "more than a mere rehearsal of blessings;" for she adds, "It scales the pinnacle of praise and illustrates the demonstration of Christ, 'who healeth all thy diseases.'" And as such testimonials are "more than a mere rehearsal of blessings," so they are more than a mere rehearsal of symptoms and images of disease; the indulgence in such details is discouraged firmly but courteously by the Readers conducting these meetings in accord with the Church Manual, and usually by the purified purpose and intuitions of the speakers themselves.

Surely we are but following in the Master's footsteps when we accept the healing of Christian Science and give praise and honor for that healing because it has taught us, in a measure at least, "to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord," and that healing in Christian Science means nothing less than salvation.

The Attainment of True Happiness

ALBERT M. PETERS

HISTORY is full of accounts of the struggles of mankind for betterment. Down the ages both individuals and nations have sought, yea, even fought for what they considered better conditions, only to awaken to the realization that when one ideal had been reached, another of greater desirability would present itself; or perhaps to find that even the state of affairs which seemed most promising, when attained had lost much of its promise. It is, however, undoubtedly true that the motive underlying all this turmoil, both individually and collectively, is to attain that state of existence which mortal man designates happiness, a state of which there are perhaps as many concepts as individuals. Inasmuch as these struggles are still going on in the world about us, is it not evident that the way to true happiness has not yet been generally understood? Even those who through God's revelation of Christian Science have seen a little farther than many others, and have commenced to claim their sonship with God, perhaps feel at times they are a long way from this heaven within.

On page 57 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" Mrs. Eddy says: "Happiness is spiritual, born of Truth and Love." This is truly an inspired statement and a source of great encouragement to the sincere seeker for that only which is good. Happiness being spiritual, it certainly is not difficult to understand that there is but one way to attain it, and this way is by putting on spirituality. Even after this statement has been accepted as true, however, the cry goes forth from many a searcher: "But how can I be more spiritual? What shall I do to hasten this growth, so that I may obtain this good and be at peace?" As in taking a journey we not only keep our destination in view but also carefully plan and take each step of the way, so in our journey Spiritward not only must we honestly and whole-heartedly desire spirituality but we must as well cultivate spiritual thinking in its more simple modes, and gradually attain the ultimate, which will of necessity follow if our work is done faithfully in so far as we apprehend it.

Now true spirituality is not a seeming unto men to be spiritual; it is not a special gift from God to one, or a few; neither can it be fully recognized by material mindedness. It is the vital, living Christ-nature given to all alike, perhaps seen only in secret by our heavenly Father, but manifested to mortal apprehension by an influence for the greatest good to surrounding ones, by kind, thoughtful deeds, and by the healing of sin and sickness. Mrs. Eddy in the sentence previously quoted has given to those mentally alert a definite way to traverse. Note she says, "born of Truth and Love." Is it so difficult a task to accept that only which originates in Truth and Love, synonyms for God? Most surely all thoughts and purposes which come from God lead to one thing—spirituality and its resultant happiness. Without thought man cannot be, and it is not difficult to test every thought and find its origin before we accept it and put it into action.

There is no possibility of the least dishonesty, trickery, or mortal mind scheming emanating from Truth and Love. Many times it would seem great good could be accomplished by methods which could not be brought into the light before all men. However, it is always well to ask ourselves whether or not the whole world could know our thoughts and doings if necessary, and if not, we can be confident they must be rejected. Any thought or action which does not measure up to strict integrity and straightforwardness, no matter how much good the result promises, could not bring any real good and consequently no happiness.

Perhaps there are those who need to guard more earnestly against the more subtle enemies of Spirit, namely, hatred, resentment, criticism, malice, and kindred evils of thought and disposition. Certainly no honest seeker for spirituality will cling even for a moment to any of these evils when he realizes that nothing of any value ever comes from them. Does hatred or malice have any fellowship with that which is truthful and loving? Does resentment bring peace and harmony to the one resenting? Does criticism, unless actuated by the most carefully analyzed, helpful motive and accompanied with a sure ability to correct, ever conduce to kindness or love for critic or criticized? The answer to these queries is in the negative; and it is always found that in the degree in which one's thoughts are occupied by these evils, will one be deprived of happiness or peace of mind.

Very often the argument presents itself that surrounding conditions hinder man's spiritual advancement and interfere with the happiness which, were his environment otherwise, would be his. This issue of evil is surely a lie well disguised, and unless stripped of its falsity will stultify any progress out of whatever erroneous conditions apparently exist. Paul, in writing to the Galatians says, "O foolish Galatians, who hath bewitched you, that ye should not obey the truth?" Well may we ask ourselves who or what hath bewitched us into believing that anything, circumstance or place or person, can deter us from thinking, acting, and living the truth? No matter how discordant conditions in the home or business seem to be, no matter how many friends betray and slander, no matter if our whole little world turns and frowns upon us, never need we for one moment relinquish the certainty of God's tender love and protection for us. And this assurance is from Truth, bringing with it an influx of harmony immeasurable.

Then if our Leader's statement of happiness be accepted and spirituality be eagerly, honestly, and persistently sought, the entire course to be followed is evident. Isaiah pointedly tells us that "precept must be upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little." And as we follow the precepts dictated by Love and let our every intent and purpose conform to Truth's undeviating line, adding to our mental storehouse more and more compassion, gratitude, and loving-kindness to our brother, refusing to admit into it anything unlike God, good, we shall progressively awaken to that state of thought where "there shall in no wise enter into it any thing that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie." This then is the consciousness all must eventually attain, and as humanity momentarily strives for its final accomplishment it will find the hours and days filled with a happiness and peace which the world can neither give nor take away, which is man's through all eternity.

"And there was light"

RUBY MAY SMALL

AN engagement had taken a party to a town twenty miles distant from their home, and it became necessary to make the return automobile trip late at night through a storm. Overcoming a momentary desire to avoid the dark, tedious ride, one member of the party, a student of Christian Science, realized that, since "in him [God] we live, and move, and have our being," only blessings could abide with "those leaning on the sustaining infinite" (Science and Health, Pref., p. vii), and the blessings gained were abundant.

Swiftly, almost silently, the car sped on, responding to the least touch of the skillful driver. Conversation lagged, and the student found herself marveling at the quiet, confident attitude of the driver, and the power manifested by the engine, as the miles were rapidly and easily covered. Thought was directed to the road ahead. Little of it could be seen in the light from the car, and with a slight shrinking she tried to pierce the darkness to see what dangers might lurk in its folds, what obstacles might loom up in the pathway. With so little light, she thought, how could the driver be so sure and send the car on at such speed? Apparently even the road kept coming to an end, leaving only a great black chasm beyond. Of course knowledge of the truth prevented belief in the reality of these illusions, and she knew the driver was content to traverse each successive portion of the road as it was revealed by the light.

How like life's journey, she mused, was this ride through the dark and storm toward home; how typical of the progress of mortals out of the darkness of material thinking into the light of spiritual understanding. Just as the automobile driver knew the road stretched on ahead even to the journey's end, just as he knew the power to traverse it was right at hand, just as he knew the light needed for guidance would prove sufficient and that the understanding necessary to make use of these things was his, just so each student of Christian Science knows that he is supplied with all rightful equipment and is guided all the way. Provided with God's messengers, the Bible and the textbook of Christian Science, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, for lamps unto our feet, there should be no hesitancy in starting out on the spiritual journey. Knowing absolutely that all things are possible with God and that He makes "the rough places plain," continued progress in the right direction will in due time win full spiritual understanding and at-one-ment with the Father. Patience and faithfulness and accuracy in following the guides are requisite.

No anxious thought concerning the dangerous curves somewhere in the darkness disturbed the driver, nor did he have to cross the high and narrow bridges with a groping and faltering dread. The light was ever present, dispelling even the gloom of the storm. No matter how dark and foreboding the clouds of sense may seem, no matter how insurmountable may seem the mountain of error coming into view, divine Truth is an ever abundant, never failing light guiding and guarding the pilgrim, overcoming and banishing every seeming shadow, whether of doubt, fear, discouragement, impatience, hatred, envy, lack, sickness, or sin, proving them to be but illusions, false beliefs, and unreal. Viewed in the true light, each storm becomes "showers of blessing" refreshing the earth. Thus pressing onward toward "the goal of Spirit, or life in God" (Science and Health, p. 324), the way grows brighter and brighter, until the heavenly home is reached and the fruits of Spirit are manifested, which the Scriptures inform us are love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance, purity. "This then is the message which we have heard of him, and declare unto you," says John, "that God is light, and in him is no darkness at all."

As the student welcomed these helpful messages, she was reminded of an experience in the early days of America's activity in the war and how the light of Truth shone upon her pathway. She and her husband wished to aid all they could in the overcoming of the evils threatening the peace and safety of the whole world, so he left for camp. She with their three little children did what she could by striving for greater spiritual light and by trying to remain steadfast to Principle. The testing days came, and only through divine strength was she able to say, "Not my will, but thine, be done," when unexpected orders sent the husband across, in a seemingly very dangerous position.

Opportunity came for a meeting at the embarkation point two days before the overseas trip, and words are inadequate to tell of the blessings derived from the little Camp Welfare room at the camp, with its loving, cheerful attendants, its atmosphere of peace and harmony, the abundance of Christian Science literature speaking "on earth peace, good will toward men;" and many happy, profitable hours were spent there. The parting came at three o'clock in the morning, and a great sense of anguish filled the heart of the student as she listened to the sound of the footsteps as her husband hurried away—to what? She knew he would always be with omnipresent God, but she cried out for greater understanding, for the light necessary to destroy the loneliness and heartache. Instantly these words came: "Thy God whom thou servest continually, he will deliver thee." With the message came the light, and with great thanksgiving all was trusted to the Father.

All through the following months the same spiritual light guided and comforted during many trying experiences, many hours of doubts and fears. The angel messengers (God's thoughts) were always present; Love never failed. Not only was the husband protected and brought safely home, but other boys who went out from the home, committed to the Father, were sustained and kept, and came forth from the horrors of the battle fields tried and purified. Great gratitude fills the heart of this student for the teachings of Christian Science; and deep is her love for Mrs. Eddy, through whose unselfishness and love for mankind so many are freed from the darkness and chaos of material beliefs. To others to whom the way seems black she would say:—

"Light sufficient guards thy pathway,
Step by step we needs must go;
Darkness flees before Truth's sunlight:
Fear thou not! 'Be still, and know.'"

Alertness

CHARLES J. DEAN

IT is now the usual thing to find in large or busy communities, that an officer of the law is stationed at the intersection of two or more streets, whose business it is to direct the stream of traffic so as to prevent congestion as well as danger. As we watch one of these men applying himself to the various problems which arise, the constant alertness which he manifests and the absolute confidence with which he handles every situation that arises is especially noticeable. There is no hesitancy or faltering, but prompt, right decision, and positive action. He stands unmoved by all the tumult and confusion, never a part of it, never touched by any of it, ever conscious of the fact that back of him is all the power of the law; so that he expects, and receives, instant obedience to his word or gesture of command.

In our demonstration of Christian Science we many times stand in the midst of the most hopelessly confused sense testimony, and should remember that it is never a part of us, never touches us at any point; that we are master of every situation, for back of us is all the power and force and majesty of divine law. We should always be alert to the fact that our business is to keep thought clear, so that no confusion or evil can enter. The richest reward that can come to one for such spiritual service is to receive the commendation, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things." Throughout the centuries men have always desired to know how this blessed promise could be won, but self and the darkness of materialism have rendered the vision obscure and they have been persuaded to listen to a voice saying, "The time for the fulfillment of these things is past and gone." At last, however, there came one who so clearly saw the light that she was able to turn it upon the "gross darkness" that had covered the people, so that once more "the glory of the Lord" is seen shining upon men.

The rediscovery of the law of Christian living and thinking was insufficient for Mrs. Eddy; she was not satisfied until she had reestablished its operation among men and given to them clear and concise statements and rules whereby he who will may demonstrate and "prove all things" for himself. In the Church Manual, in the by-law entitled "Alertness to Duty" (Art. VIII, Sect. 6), she tells us how we may make this reward a present possibility. She says: "It shall be the duty of every member of this Church to defend himself daily against aggressive mental suggestion, and not to be made to forget nor to neglect his duty to God, to his Leader, and to mankind. By his works he shall be judged,—and justified or condemned." It makes no difference what our present experience may be, whether of the wilderness, the Red Sea, or Armageddon, there is no other way by which the victory can be won.

Selected Articles

["The Miracle"—The Christian Science Monitor, Boston, U.S.A., Oct. 11, 1919]

So long as the miracle was defined and dismissed as a supernatural occurrence, it made practically very little difference to religion. Orthodoxy accepted it as an act of faith, and explained, through the mouth of a famous pope, that only the acceptance of the supernatural constituted faith. Skepticism, if bitter, dismissed it with ridicule; if kindly, sought to explain it away, and so redeem the sanity and veracity of the gospel historians. Then came natural science, holding the scales level between orthodoxy and skepticism; pointing out to both that the impossible never happens; and adding, for the benefit of the latter, that the defense of the good faith of the evangelists must be based on something stronger than editorial glosses. So matters stood when Mrs. Eddy discovered Christian Science, and, in a moment, the miracle was rescued from the realm of speculation and ecclesiastical dogmatism, and given back to the divine Science of the gospel historians.

Now the word miracle never had any supernatural significance until such was forced upon it by dogmatic Christianity. It meant, in its original Latin form, simply something strange, and was the word used by the philosophers of pagan Rome to describe their experiments and demonstrations. The man who first borrowed it from pagan philosophy and applied it to the works of Christ Jesus was Jerome; but there is not only nothing to show that Jerome desired to distort the meaning of the word, there is everything to show that he did not. The evidence of this lies in the Vulgate, in which in translating from the original Greek words of the gospel, δύναμις and σημεῖον, he used their exact Latin equivalents, virtus meaning virtue in the sense of power, and signum meaning a sign. It is obvious, therefore, that the student of Christian exegetics will have to find his definition of a miracle as something supernatural, later than the fourth century.

Nor will the defender of the orthodox faith be any happier if he turns from the Dalmatian father to the modern philosopher. Hume, it is true, with unpardonable superficiality, actually did define a miracle as an abrogation of a law of nature, only to be dryly requested by Huxley to explain by what process of argument a broken law remained or ever had been a law. "Brave men," writes Ruskin, "have dared to examine lies which had long been taught, not because they were freethinkers, but because they were such stern and close thinkers that the lie could no longer escape them." Such a thinker was Huxley, and such a thinker was Mrs. Eddy. If you can break law, Huxley said in effect, you have not got evidence of anything supernatural; what you have done has been to expose an ignorance of law, and to reveal an absolute, or, at any rate, better sense of law. In just the same way Mrs. Eddy writes on page 135 of Science and Health: "The miracle introduces no disorder, but unfolds the primal order, establishing the Science of God's unchangeable law." The miracle, then, is the demonstration of law.

There was, nevertheless, a great gulf fixed between Mrs. Eddy's and Huxley's sense of a miracle. Huxley saw intellectually that the miracle was law; Mrs. Eddy practically demonstrated the fact. Huxley invented the word agnosticism to cover his ignorance of spiritual law; Mrs. Eddy boldly proclaimed that the only law is divine. Half a dozen centuries before, the schoolman, Doctor Angelicus, had asserted that the only science was that of theology or the Word of God, and now Mrs. Eddy was reducing this assertion to demonstration; and taking as her text those words of Christ Jesus which for nearly two thousand years dogmatists and skeptics had quoted without understanding and explained without inspiration, "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also," Mrs. Eddy did not shrink, for one moment, from the inevitable demand of her discovery. She accepted the burden of proof for herself and her church. Accordingly, as recorded on page 17 of the Manual of The Mother Church, "at a meeting of the Christian Scientist Association, April 19, 1879, on motion of Mrs. Eddy, it was voted,—To organize a church designed to commemorate the word and works of our Master, which should reinstate primitive Christianity and its lost element of healing."

Mrs. Eddy had seen clearly that faith without works, precept without practice, theory without demonstration, was dead. That was the very essence of Jesus' teaching, as it is the essence of Christian Science. He was ever at work, preaching the gospel and healing the sick, and the healing was always the demonstration of the preaching. "Wist ye not," he demanded of Mary and Joseph, when they found him arguing with the doctors in the temple, "that I must be about my Father's business?" and his Father's business consisted not merely in explaining the theory of the new gospel to the world, and in stating its precepts, but in proving that the theory was a scientific one, and that the precepts were demonstrable. This insistence on deeds instead of words was the essence of Jesus' practice of Christianity, and it has been insisted upon repeatedly with equal force by Mrs. Eddy, as when she writes on page 19 of Science and Health, "Those who cannot demonstrate, at least in part, the divine Principle of the teachings and practice of our Master have no part in God."

Clearly, then, there is no excuse to be found in the Bible for representing the miracle as supernatural. Christ Jesus demanded from his followers, not only the repetition of his own miracles but demonstrations greater even than these. The attempt of orthodox theology to confine the working of miracles to his own disciples and to his own age is not alone a perversion of the Master's words but a repudiation of history. "He that believeth on me" is any man at any time, or words mean absolutely nothing at all, and every sentence in the gospels is open to reversal and contradiction. The miracle, throughout all the centuries since Calvary, has remained, and been shown to remain, a possibility to men who have enjoyed just sufficient of simple, unquestioning faith. Now in the light of Christian Science it emerges again what it was in the first century, the divinely natural demonstration of men's understanding of Principle; and therefore has Mrs. Eddy, in Section 7 of Article XXX of the Church Manual, under the heading "Healing Better than Teaching," declared: "Healing the sick and the sinner with Truth demonstrates what we affirm of Christian Science, and nothing can substitute this demonstration. I recommend that each member of this Church shall strive to demonstrate by his or her practice, that Christian Science heals the sick quickly and wholly, thus proving this Science to be all that we claim for it."

[George R. Lowe in Renfrew (Ont.) Journal]

In writing a recent letter a critic seemed to be laboring under the delusion that Christian Science is opposed to scientific research. On the contrary, the scientific knowledge of God is served by every branch of healthful knowledge and achievement. Honest investigation of everything does not discredit the supremacy of spiritual law but is quite in accord with the gain of spiritual understanding. On page 195 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" Mrs. Eddy writes: "Academics of the right sort are requisite. Observation, invention, study, and original thought are expansive and should promote the growth of mortal mind out of itself, out of all that is mortal."

In dealing with Science and Health, it is to be regretted that this critic did not quote it actually and accurately, but in an indirect way, giving citations whose correctness is difficult or incapable of verification. Also, in setting a verse of Scripture over against a sentence purporting to be taken from Science and Health, the supposititious contradiction is merely inferred from an adventitious reading of both. For instance, the Scripture verse, "In every thing by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God," inculcates exactly what Christian Science enjoins us to do, and is not contradictory to the teaching that true prayer involves much more than petitioning God. Similarly, "blood" has a spiritual significance far beyond any material sense of it.

To test Christian Science by the Scriptures, it is necessary to observe that the religious tenets of Christian Science, as given on page 497 of Science and Health, include adherence to the Bible, acknowledgment of "one supreme and infinite God," "His Son, one Christ; the Holy Ghost or divine Comforter; and man in God's image and likeness;" also "God's forgiveness of sin," "Jesus' atonement as the evidence of divine, efficacious Love, unfolding man's unity with God through Christ Jesus the Way-shower;" and the last tenet reads thus: "And we solemnly promise to watch, and pray for that Mind to be in us which was also in Christ Jesus; to do unto others as we would have them do unto us; and to be merciful, just, and pure."

Assuredly Christian Science recognizes that Christian healing as practiced by Christ Jesus was given in the Master's commission to his disciples and was meant for all time. Mrs. Eddy did not select a number of texts from the Scriptures to bolster up Christian Science, but she interprets the Scriptures on the basis of the unity and intelligibility of God as Spirit, Truth, Love. This interpretation corroborates and unfolds every doctrine of the divine Life made known in the Bible, not with the notion that the acceptance of a dogma brings salvation to anyone, but with the idea that the keeping and living of every word of God brings spirituality, life, and health with it here and now—a present salvation. Therefore the ranks of Christian Science contain both those to whom the Bible was formerly a closed book and those who find in it a satisfying Christianity, which they had failed to find in their former religious affiliations. We submit that no well meaning religionist has any reason to find fault with this process of amelioration. There is room without crowding for every sincere effort to improve mankind.

"The Bible Against Christian Science," the caption of a recent newspaper notice of a church service, is so directly misleading that, as a matter of justice, a word of correction is offered. The very first of the religious tenets of Christian Science, as written by Mrs. Eddy on page 497 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," states that "as adherents of Truth, we take the inspired Word of the Bible as our sufficient guide to eternal Life." That is definite enough, so far as words go; but Christian Science goes even farther in accepting unreservedly the test of Christian discipleship given by Christ Jesus when he said, "By their fruits ye shall know them."

Christian Science has widely spread and has been accepted by many, many earnest Bible students because it has furnished them with the fruits of sickness healed, of sin destroyed, and of spiritual understanding, comfort, and cheer made manifest, even as the Bible promises. These works of Christian Science constitute indisputable refutation of the intimation that the Bible and Christian Science are opposed.

[Katherine English in Vancouver (British Columbia) World]

In a recent issue a letter appears in which the writer alleges that Christian Science is not Christian and is not scientific. This statement is frequently met with, but is never made by anyone who is at all familiar with the subject, nor would such a one confuse Christian Science with Berkeley's philosophy, from which it is entirely distinct.

The name Christian Science was introduced by Mrs. Eddy to designate the scientific system of divine healing discovered by her in 1866. Mrs. Eddy's careful and scholarly use of words is often arresting, and its accuracy is invariably justified by any modern dictionary. For instance, the word science signifies knowledge, systematic and formulated knowledge, and such knowledge put to practical use. The meaning of the word is not confined to what is called natural science, or the science that deals with material beings, things, or phenomena. A dictionary defines science as "systematized knowledge considered in reference to the discovery or understanding of truth." This age prides itself upon being scientific, and it would be strange indeed if systematic knowledge were to be limited to material phenomena; if there were no way in which men could gain a knowledge of God as He actually exists or discover the laws of the spiritual universe. All Christians, theoretically at least, agree that God is Spirit, not matter, and that in Him "we live, and move, and have our being." Surely then, a scientific knowledge of Spirit and spiritual laws, which can be proved and used in daily life, should not seem a thing incredible. The discovery of divine law and the reduction of her discovery to a system comprehensible to the age in which we live was the life work of Mrs. Eddy.

She termed this science "Christian" because no other word could so aptly describe it, for it comes manifesting the spirit of Christ Jesus and his teachings; it is compassionate, helpful, redemptive. It comes, as Jesus did, to deliver us from evil. It teaches us, as he did, to render all power to God, who is good, not evil. Jesus taught men how to fill heart and mind with goodness, how to become blessed, how to forget self, and thus to show what manner of man results from constant communion with God, in whom is no evil at all.

The work of Jesus was not empirical but scientific; it was the result of his knowledge of the truth, of his acquaintance with God and with the laws of God. These laws which Jesus obeyed and illustrated were laws of Spirit; they enabled him to supersede material laws by his knowledge of a higher code. His deeds were prophetic of a day when all men shall know the truth as he did, and in consequence all shall be free from tyranny, ignorance, pain, from evil in any of its myriad forms. In these latter days, when the old order is changing with such startling rapidity, the teaching of the Nazarene is being found by many of the most thoughtful and intelligent to be the only system of thought that will solve the individual, social, and industrial problems that all must face with what understanding and courage they may.

Those who are students of Christian Science are beginning, in a very humble way as yet, it is true, but still beginning, to prove that true Christianity is scientific, that it is governed by unvarying laws, irrespective of person, class, time, or space. They are finding that obedience to these spiritual laws divests them step by step of erroneous opinions and beliefs, and of the suffering and limitation which ignorance imposes upon those who submit thereto.

The only possible way to understand Christian Science is to work it out for one's self in a scientific manner, to test and test again the formulated rules, to observe carefully the results of following them correctly, to let the evidence gained from experiment accumulate until sufficient knowledge is reached upon which to base judgment. Personal observation and experience will then show that Christian Science is worthy of its beautiful name.

[Harry K. Filler in The Tri-County News, Grand Rapids, Ohio]

The Tri-County News quotes a minister as having said in a sermon that Christian Scientists have no right to call themselves Christian "when they do not accept the divinity of Jesus Christ." Christian Scientists most emphatically accept the divinity of Christ Jesus. The second religious tenet of the Christian Science church, to which all persons joining this church subscribe before being accepted into its membership, is as follows: "We acknowledge and adore one supreme and infinite God. We acknowledge His Son, one Christ; the Holy Ghost or divine Comforter; and man in God's image and likeness" (Science and Health, p. 497). The last of the religious tenets of this church, found on the same page, is as follows: "And we solemnly promise to watch, and pray for that Mind to be in us which was also in Christ Jesus; to do unto others as we would have them do unto us; and to be merciful, just, and pure."

There is not a religious movement in all the world that exacts of its adherents the proofs of Christianity that the Christian Science movement exacts. Theirs is essentially a religion of works—the only true test by which one proves his worthiness to be called Christian.

Extracts from Letters

[From a warden]

"I note that you would like a statement on the effect of the teachings of Christian Science on certain of the inmates of this institution, particularly ———.

"This prisoner was received ——— to serve a life sentence for murder in the first degree. We were compelled to maintain him in solitary confinement most of his time; and he at one time made an attempt to assault a guard with the intention of escaping. He became interested in the teachings of Christian Science, and shortly afterwards when I visited his cell he told me that it was not necessary to confine him any longer, that he wished to conform with all the prison rules and would do any work that was assigned him. I decided to give him a chance and assigned him to the prison laundry, and later transferred him to the prison library, where he is now. Since that time his conduct has been excellent and he is one of the best behaved prisoners we have at this time. He gets the Science literature regularly and it seems evident that its teachings have uplifted him. We have Christian Science services every Sunday at our chapel with fairly good attendance, and it seems to me that the teachings tend to make the prisoners more obedient and willing to do the work assigned to them."

Dominion and Power of Spirit

When in the history of a country an epoch is marked by the coming to the throne of a new dynasty, time is frequently dated from the accession of this ruling house. Likewise in the human life a new era begins, in effect like a new creation, when there is accession of spirituality. Of this Mrs. Eddy says in "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 204), "Through the accession of spirituality, God, the divine Principle of Christian Science, literally governs the aims, ambition, and acts of the Scientist."

The enthronement of divine Principle, which is Love, means the dethronement forever of the carnal mind, whose characteristic is the reverse of love, or hostility to love, described by Paul as "enmity against God." Fleshly beliefs are of course hostile to all that is spiritual, and so they are insubordinate to divine law; they are "not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." Consequently when one becomes obedient to the law of Spirit his former manner of life ends and a new kind of life is known, even that life manifested in Christ Jesus; "for as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God."

Human beings have suffered much, not only from pagan theories but from various misconceivings of Christianity. The Master found his disciples slow to apprehend his true mission. They wanted power and self-magnification, and reached an undue point of self-glorification when they wanted to call down upon a village of the Samaritans the destruction of fire because the people would not make preparations to entertain them. Quietly he, their teacher, checked their ardor. He is credited with saying to them: "Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of. For the Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them." Manifestly Christianity could not be established by the thumbscrew and the boot, by rack or tourniquet. The hideous torture of human beings in the name of religion indicates always the design of human will to enthrone itself in power and to control others through fear. Exactly opposite to this is religion itself, because true religion unfolds to each individual the righteous government of God. Of the effects of this government Mrs. Eddy says (Miscellany, p. 189), "The government of divine Love derives its omnipotence from the love it creates in the heart of man; for love is allegiant, and there is no loyalty apart from love."

We have long admitted that love is the antithesis of hate. Ordinary teaching still respects the ancient adage, "Thou shalt love thy neighbour, and hate thine enemy," although Christ Jesus required love to be supreme; but to the spiritually minded, love becomes the habitude of thought, and they find wonderful results in that not only is hatred dismissed with all its malignancy, jealousy, and cruel imaginings, but fear is likewise disposed of. They then recognize how truly metaphysical John is in giving his assurance that "there is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear: because fear hath torment."

The choice before a man becomes simple when he is asked who or what shall have dominion over him. Will he allow carnality to be enthroned and his life enslaved? Or will he have spirituality enthroned and enjoy "the glorious liberty of the children of God"? The religious life has been depicted by those unacquainted with spiritual joy as gloomy, restricted, joyless, with cross-bearing, disappointment, and thwarting as its portion. The speculative, far-off heaven was to be won by present misery and depreciation, or to be secured at the cost of present wealth by priestly mediation. From none of these standpoints could one see any glowing joy coming to him because of divine goodness. God was as a man magnified,—a chief with his favorites and his enemies, a judge pledged to make out a case against those who resisted the theology of the time. But with the spiritual view comes the Christ for the salvation of the world, worthily revealing the character of God, touching receptive hearts with kindness, and unsealing fountains of gratitude and tender love. With the accession of spiritual love to the dominant place in life comes heaven in foretaste at least, for the quality of eternal life is tasted and known. "This is life eternal," said Jesus, "that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent."

The true God, then, being known as Principle, and Christ Jesus as the Exemplar, we have cause and effect understood. We are able to say with great love in our hearts that "God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." Likewise we understand how man by his practice, that is, his spiritual activity, can reveal Principle,—and how he can demonstrate Truth in righteousness, Life in healing, and Love in heavenly-mindedness. To the spiritually minded, happiness is as normal as daylight. To such a one the shadows are already passed away and he walks in the shining of the true light. Joy is inevitable in the life corrected, so that no hate arises and no fear enters. "Being His likeness and image, man must," as our Leader says (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 16), "reflect the full dominion of Spirit—even its supremacy over sin, sickness, and death."

William P. McKenzie.

"Have faith in God"

When Jesus said to his disciples, "Have faith in God," he was not turning them to an unknown Deity, but was calling upon them to rely on a Father whom he had proved in their presence again and again to be omnipotent, omnipresent, omniscient good. Moreover, he encouraged them to know that with this faith in God they too could do the same works; for he went on to say: "Whosoever shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea; and shall not doubt in his heart, but shall believe that those things which he saith shall come to pass; he shall have whatsoever he saith."

From that day to this Christians have longed to possess this wonderful faith in God, which, understood and demonstrated, would enable them to repeat the works of Jesus and his disciples. They have counseled each other to seek it; they have prayed to God to give it to them. Occasionally there have been a few earnest seekers who have succeeded in winning a sufficient belief in faith to have results of good follow. Rarely, however, could they explain in any way the process by which they had attained it, so that others might go and do likewise.

When we ponder the ordinary theological teaching in regard to the arbitrariness of God's purpose for His creation, we find a reason for the seeming difficulty in the past of winning a practical, demonstrable understanding of such faith in God as would result in a repetition of the mighty works of the early Christian era. When we remember that for centuries God has been preached as a God of wrath as well as of love, and that His correcting rod was supposed to be wielded to inflict dire calamities upon man, is it strange that it has been difficult to gain a faith in Him and in His willingness to deliver from evil and to produce good and good alone?

The revelation of Christian Science so unfolds the nature of God as infinite Love with only the purpose to bless infinitely, that the hearts which have struggled to love and serve Him even when they had believed Him to be arbitrary, come with glad rejoicing to learn this truth of His absolute trustworthiness, which immediately strengthens faith and establishes the assurance of a present possibility of so understanding God that the promised works shall be made available to all mankind.

Christian Science reveals the truth about faith just as it does the truth about all things. Starting with a clear, spiritual understanding of God, it uncovers the mistaken sense of faith in matter and its suppositional laws. It shows that the supposititious beliefs in a material existence with all its sins and sicknesses, are made up of idolatrous faith in an opposite to God and His creation. It exposes the fact that to believe or have faith in anything apart from God, good, is to disbelieve in Him to an equal degree. Christian Science thus not only uncovers false faith or lack of true faith, but also emphasizes Jesus' insistence on the necessity for true faith in God and the glorious possibilities which result from its exercise. Best of all, Christian Science shows how such faith may be obtained.

Since God is infinite power and presence, He must of necessity have faith in Himself, in His own loving purpose for His creation, in His own allness; while man made in His image and likeness must reflect this same perfect faith. Then does the Christian Scientist seem to lack faith,—there is the Principle and the rule of demonstration which shows him how to lay hold of this absolute truth in regard to God as the inspirer and possessor of faith, and of himself—the child of God—as the reflection of this faith. This idea, allowed activity in his consciousness, will inevitably reveal the claims of doubt which may be lurking in thought, as well as expose their evil foundations and entire falsity, and as the truth is further cherished and clung to it will surely dissipate all unlike itself.

Now the test of faith is always in the works; for did not James tell us that "faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone"? Then if the works are lacking one may always be sure it is because some deterrent to perfect faith, some doubt, some fear, has not yet been uncovered and eliminated. Then what is to be done? Why, simply go back to the rule of absolute, perfect faith based upon spiritual understanding, and working and praying, allow it to cast out that which is untrue. Remember again Jesus' words, "Whosoever . . . shall not doubt in his heart"! All things must be possible to him who has faith in the realities of being, as Christian Science reveals them. In Science and Health (p. 199) we read, "Failure is occasioned by a too feeble faith." Pressing steadfastly forward in the light of spiritual understanding Christian Scientists may bring into fulfillment the desire of Mrs. Eddy for them, which she expresses in "The First Church of Christ, Scientist, and Miscellany" (p. 187), where she says: "May the divine light of Christian Science that lighteth every enlightened thought illumine your faith and understanding, exclude all darkness or doubt, and signal the perfect path wherein to walk, the perfect Principle whereby to demonstrate the perfect man and the perfect law of God. In the words of St. Paul: 'Now the end of the commandment is charity out of a pure heart, and of a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned.'"

Announcement

THE Christian Science Board of Directors takes this means of announcing to the field the resignation of Dr. Francis J. Fluno from The Christian Science Board of Lectureship.

Some time ago Doctor Fluno tendered his resignation from the Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church, and in view of his many years of untiring, faithful service to our Leader, and to the cause of Christian Science, the Directors acceded to his request, feeling that he had earned a respite from the strenuous activities incidental to the lecture work. Doctor Fluno will continue his Christian Science work of Christian Science healing and teaching at his Oakland address and in these efforts we are sure that he has the love and best wishes of the entire Christian Science field, in which, it is needless to say, this Board most heartily joins.

Current Notes

COLORADO.—The general attitude of the secular press continues in all respects fair to Christian Science, and in addition some marked instances have been noted, showing that some members of the press are awakening to the insidious, but increasingly active, medical propaganda which is being pushed through every available channel. This awakening on the part of editors is due largely, without doubt, to the fact that many of them read The Christian Science Monitor. Reprints from our Monitor and Sentinel are continually being noted, and in nearly every instance due credit is given. Of the letters of correction written by this committee on publication, four sent to sectarian papers and one to a medical journal were not printed, but all addressed to the secular press were accepted and published.

Inasmuch as Christian Scientists are the only ones who are really awake to medical aggressions it behooves us to stay awake and watchful. Efforts are being made to enforce medical inspection in the public schools in spite of the fact that the Colorado law specifies that the children shall be examined by the teachers without physical contact. When this examination by the teacher reveals a defect the parent or guardian may, rather than have a medical examination of the child as called for in such an instance, have a Christian Science practitioner sign the notification card stating that the child is having Christian Science treatment, and such statement will be accepted. When the school authorities endeavor to enforce medical inspection it has been found advantageous to call their attention to the law as above mentioned.—Committee on Publication.

WACO, TEXAS.—First Church of Christ, Scientist, Monday afternoon [Sept. 30] closed up a deal whereby this church secured the Shelton property at the northwest corner of Columbus and Eleventh Streets, and it is proposed, when matters get a little more settled, to erect a large and modern place of worship on this fine piece of ground. The consideration was eighty-five hundred dollars. The ground is 110 by 135 feet in dimensions, and is most favorably located.

Church services are now being held upstairs in the Scott Building, at Eighth and Washington Streets. The congregation was organized about eight years ago and the membership has steadily grown.—Waco News-Tribune.

Dayton, Ohio.—On account of the limited seating capacity of the church on East First Street, the congregation of Second Church of Christ, Scientist, has arranged to take temporary quarters in the First Unitarian Church, Salem and Neal Avenues. Arrangements have just been completed with the trustees of the last named church for the Christian Scientists to meet there until a new church can be erected. Under the arrangements made the Christian Science church will have Sunday school services at half past two, and afternoon services at four o'clock, Sunday; and Wednesday evening meetings will begin at eight o'clock. The first meeting under the new arrangement will be held Wednesday evening, October 15.

The reading room on East First Street will be kept open as usual. The congregation expects to sell the First Street structure soon. It has been occupied by the church for the past ten years.—Dayton Herald.

The Lectures

Boston, U.S.A. (The Mother Church).—Judge Samuel W. Greene, lecturer; introduced by Bicknell Young, who said:—

Paul says, "The law made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of a better hope did; by the which we draw nigh unto God," and he also declares, "Love worketh no ill to his neighbour: therefore love is the fulfilling of the law." In both instances the Mosaic law was referred to, but all that the apostle said concerning it applies with equal cogency to everything that goes under the name of law. The Mosaic law was an attempt to interpret divine justice, and although it was immeasurably higher than anything previously given to the human race, it was necessarily limited, because, although the Israelites were the most spiritually advanced people of their times, even with them the conception of God was that of a severe judge, and law meant penalties and punishment.

With mankind to-day the same archaic views are more or less prevalent. Neither those who make written laws nor those who interpret them, nor those who accept material opinions, and thereby make the unwritten laws that largely govern mankind, have as yet learned of the actual basis and nature of law. In fact, it is only through the discovery of Christian Science by Mary Baker Eddy, who declares with unmistakable clearness the true nature of law in the words, "God is divine Principle" (Miscellany, p. 116), that mankind has been enabled to gain the right concept of law. This concept has appealed to thinkers in all walks of life. It has particularly appealed to lawyers, because the so-called principles which underlie the law indicate an eternal Principle as their true basis and substance. These and other events serve to indicate the great and encouraging but quiet revolutions that are taking place in thought and experience, both individually and collectively.

Our friend who speaks to us this evening comes from the great profession of the law. He has laid it down to take up the immeasurably greater profession of fulfilling the divine law by healing the sick and saving the sinful through the practice of Christian Science.

New York, N. Y. (Second Church).—John W. Doorly, lecturer; introduced by Charles E. Heitman, who said in part:—

When Christ Jesus said, "By their fruits ye shall know them," it is evident that he realized that works and not words constitute the only true basis for judging righteous judgment. It is on this same just and sound basis that Mrs. Eddy has asked the world to judge Christian Science, and so successfully has it measured up to the test that to-day there are literally thousands upon thousands of people from all walks of life, who bear grateful testimony to the fact that Christian Science is a practical and demonstrable religion, and an effective healing agency for all manner of sin and disease. Thus it is that the Science of Christianity, taught by Jesus and restated to this age by Mrs. Eddy, is arousing mankind to a realization that no argument is so convincing and unanswerable, and nothing is so secure and indestructible, as that which is founded upon truth demonstrated.

Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, Canada (First Church).—Dr. John M. Tutt, lecturer; introduced by W. A. Gilchrist, who said in part:—

The problems of humanity have always been much the same. All down the ages there has been sin, sickness, death, sorrow, poverty, discouragement, fear, and so on. When Jesus the Christ was in this world he solved every one of these problems thoroughly, and helped others to do so. Through his spiritual understanding he healed all manner of sickness, raised the dead, and brought joy and peace and freedom to those who learned of him. He taught the glorious truth of being, and proved his teaching by works, giving the honor to God, the Father of all. Shortly before his ascension he said to his followers, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto my Father." And his followers did do the works which he did for about three hundred years after his ascension.

In the year 1866 a noble, pure-minded New England woman, Mary Baker Eddy, discovered Christian Science, which is restoring primitive Christianity to the world, and again the works are being done and the truth of being, which includes health, joy, peace, freedom from every form of bondage here and now, is being taught and demonstrated.

Chicago, Ill. (First Church).—The Rev. Andrew J. Graham, lecturer; introduced by Miss Anna T. Robinson, who said in part:—

As human philosophy, speculative metaphysics, has not solved for us the problem of the "origin and ultimate of man" (Science and Health, p. 487) and the universe, neither is the science, so called, of ethics solving for us the problems of human relationships. It is not showing us how to uproot the seeds of social unrest, of crime, of individual misery and despair, nor are the physical sciences freeing us from accident, disease, death, fear. The outlook would indeed be dark if there were not in the human heart the eternal desire to know and the eternal desire for right action, and if there were not a true philosophy and true Science which satisfies this desire. Jesus of Nazareth, understanding the nature of God, the relation of man and the universe to God, and the operation of God's harmonious law, taught the eternal metaphysics, which never wearies nor disappoints the searcher for truth. But Jesus was no theorist; he established his philosophy by demonstration, by scientific proof, by healing inharmony of every sort through his understanding of God's law, so bringing forth to human apprehension the oneness of philosophy and science. It is this philosophy and Science of Christianity, as taught and demonstrated by Jesus, that Mrs. Eddy through long and prayerful study of the Bible discerned and set forth in her book "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures."

HARROGATE, ENGLAND (First Church).—Miss Mary G. Ewing, lecturer; introduced by A. G. Stevenson, who said in part:—

Mankind needs brotherly love and unity in all the activities of life, political and religious, industrial and domestic, and these can only be realized through the right understanding of God as the Father of us all and through faith in the ever present power of His love. In His kingdom all men are brothers, and in that realm of reality there is no warfare nor want, no sorrow, no sickness, no sin. God never made any of these things, and there is no other creator. So, as we come nearer to the truth, we are made free from fear of what is unlike God. Like so many others, I owe a deep debt of gratitude to Mrs. Eddy for teaching us, in Christian Science, to understand something of these simple verities, and to utilize somewhat in our daily life the protection which comes from practical reliance on the promises of the Bible.

SANTA ROSA, CALIF. (First Church).—John Randall Dunn, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Marion Gregg, who said in part:—

Never in the world's history has humanity been so alert to the truth as it is to-day. In the Preface to her wonderful book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," Mrs. Eddy thus puts it (p. vii): "The time for thinkers has come. Truth, independent of doctrines and time-honored systems, knocks at the portal of humanity." It is to this awakened mental state that Christian Science particularly appeals, for it shows us how, through right thinking, not only to express health in our bodies but, what is far more important, how to make our lives better and more wholesome.

LEAD, S. DAK. (Society).—William D. Kilpatrick, lecturer; introduced by Mrs. Carolyn Gatenby, who said in part:—

I remember of thinking as a child how wonderful it would have been to live in Jesus' time and to have been one of those little children that he took up in his arms and blessed. Many years after, when I became interested in the study of Christian Science, I began to realize that, wonderful as it would have been to live in the time when Jesus walked in the flesh among men, it is far more wonderful to be living in our own time, a time which is beginning to be recognized as that of the second coming of the Christ,—a spiritual coming into the hearts and consciousness of mankind. We have many among us to-day who have been privileged to witness the proofs of this Christ-coming in the healing of the sick and sinning.

BROOKLYN, N. Y. (First Church).—Frank H. Leonard, lecturer; introduced by Miss Florence L. Frank, who said in part:—

It is fair to assume that many a reader of the New Testament has wished that he might have lived in those bygone days; that he might have trod with our Master the hills of Judea and the shores of Galilee; that he might have listened to his inspired words and felt the healing touch; and, perchance, such a one, be he a sufferer from any of the myriad ills that flesh is heir to, has pondered in this wise: Were Jesus here to-day, I should be delivered from this thralldom. Do you know that Christian Science promises such a one that he may be liberated; that it proclaims the glad tidings that Christ is here, that Christ is Truth and has never left? Do you know that it reveals to us the divine law which Jesus applied so perfectly in his healing ministry, and pronounces it available to you and to me to-day?

Testimonies of Healing

I should like to express my gratitude to God, and to our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, for the many blessings that have come to me through the study of Christian Science, and more especially from the church services, which I began to attend in August, 1914. My father was a priest of the Church of England, and from my earliest childhood I had been instructed in all the beliefs of that faith, and therefore knew something of the "letter" of the Bible. From the first I was much impressed by the reading at the Sunday services of the Christian Science church of the correlative passage of Scripture from the first epistle of John, and especially by the verse, "And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure." I did not commence the study of the Lesson-Sermons till March, 1915, so that when I went into the church for the Sacrament Sunday of January, 1915, I was not aware that the service was to be different in any way. It would be quite impossible to put into words what the effects of that service were upon me, except to say that I knew I had been in the presence of God. I was completely healed of immorality, and the blessings and power that have come to me from that experience are too wonderful to relate.

I am grateful for the daily good that is unfolded to all who strive to obey the will of God, even as a little child. I am grateful also for the healing of the smoking habit and of many faults of character. Christian Science makes life worth while in every way. I trust that this testimony of the regenerating power of Christian Science may be of some help to others.—Pierce L. Hart Smith, London, England.

I wish to express my gratitude for what Christian Science has done for me. I have been healed of nervous debility, stomach trouble, and that cause of all disease,—fear. For nearly eight months it seemed almost unbearable; I was filled with torment day and night. It almost seemed useless for me to try to sleep, as the torment was more severe then. I was afraid to go out of the house, and could not approach anyone without trembling. My healing has been permanent. I was called for examination in the second draft for the Army and was pronounced in perfect condition.

I am so grateful to be able to have this testimony published, where it may help others that are similarly afflicted. I am thankful to God and to Christ Jesus, the Way-shower, also grateful to our revered Leader, Mrs. Eddy, to whom we owe so much gratitude for her plain explanation of the Bible and for her great writings. I am also grateful for the Christian Science literature, and for the lectures to which all are so lovingly invited.—Herman E. Roeder, Chicago, Ill.

I wish to verify the healing of my brother, also to express my gratitude for the many blessings Christian Science has brought to us. I was healed of hay fever in a very severe form.—(Mrs.) Lina Roeder Franklin.

At the time I became interested in Christian Science I was taking six kinds of medicine, but notwithstanding this fact I was attracted to its teachings for its value as a beautiful, practical religion, rather than for its healing efficacy. For the past six years, however, the earnest study of the Bible, and of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, together with her other writings and all the Christian Science periodicals, has healed every attack of sickness and financial limitation that has presented itself.

I have become a member of The Mother Church, which has been a wonderfully helpful privilege. Words can express only an infinitesimal part of the gratitude I feel toward Mrs. Eddy and all the faithful workers in Christian Science, who make it possible for each and all to prove Love's ever availability.—(Mrs.) Doris A. Chisholm, Salem, Ohio.

During the four years in which I have been a student of Christian Science I have found that whenever we understandingly apply the rules laid down for us by Mrs. Eddy in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" to any of our problems, the right results are always demonstrated. I am grateful for our textbook. It has enabled me to understand many things in the Bible which were before a mystery, and has changed my belief in a God afar off to faith in God, the divine Principle, the creator of every right idea. I am grateful for the practitioners who lovingly helped me through many trials, and for class teaching which changed my faith into understanding, for I can now see how to be active in good and am glad to join with the army of faithful workers who are striving each day to uplift consciousness so that all the world may feel the influence of this wonderful truth. I am grateful, too, for the Sunday school, where our children are learning to trust our Father-Mother God more and more every day. When I look back over the trials we have come through, such as measles, sprained ankle, tonsillitis, blood poisoning, infantile paralysis, influenza, and many other ills, I can rejoice that we have made some progress and can teach our children how to put on the whole armor of God so as to protect themselves from the suggestions of error.

We feel it is impossible for people to realize how much we owe to Mrs. Eddy until they have experienced the beneficent effects of the healing power of this truth she labored so long and unselfishly to share with others, and we are grateful that she has explained it so clearly that those who are willing to leave all and cast their nets on the right side may help others as she did.

(Mrs.) Margery K. Roach, Washington, D. C.

I became actively interested in Christian Science in February, 1914. Several years before that a copy of the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, was given to me by a dear sister, and I read it occasionally but could see nothing worth while in it. It was noticeable that after each reading I felt better, was happier and more contented, but I did not at the time attribute this change to Christian Science. In the beginning of the year 1914, however, I was very unhappy, so began the study of Christian Science in earnest. A little light began to penetrate the darkness, and I purchased a pocket edition of Science and Health, which I read every spare moment. In about a month the tobacco habit was permanently overcome. I had tried repeatedly to break this habit through will power but had failed. Stomach trouble has also been overcome, and I can now eat anything I wish without bad after effects. In the fall of 1917 my hair began to fall out very badly. I had treatment from a practitioner, and after several months the healing was manifest.

In April, 1918, I was drafted into the Army, and a short time afterwards was sent to France. Once in particular I was wonderfully protected, and time and again it was proved to me that "all things work together for good to them that love God." I am grateful for the sense of protection and safety that was with me through it all. I was free from the ailments common among the soldiers; indeed my health was perfect.

I am thankful to God and grateful to Mrs. Eddy for this truth that makes free, for the help of loving friends at home, and for the Publishing Society, whose literature reached me through the Christian Science War Relief committee. The Bible, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, and the Quarterly were my constant companions, together with the Hymnal; and the hope, comfort, and courage they brought and are still bringing are immeasurable. I can show my gratitude only by daily striving for more of that Mind "which was also in Christ Jesus."

Fourteen years ago, while filling my first term as teacher, I suffered so much from cramps and backache that all preparation for the next day's lessons was done while flat in bed, and considerable time was lost from the schoolroom. Glasses were worn for all study work, and had been used for more than six years. A tendency to sprained ankles made walking often painful, and a violent temper caused much unhappiness, remorse, and self-condemnation.

At this time Christian Science was brought to my attention through the healing of a sister, and an earnest study of the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, awakened hope, and joy, and confidence. Knowing that the prayer, "Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean," is answered to-day as surely as it was nineteen hundred years ago with the beautifully compassionate answer, "I will; be thou clean," there came patience to overcome temper and hate; and as some understanding of divine Love entered consciousness the physical inharmonies disappeared. Cramps and backache ceased, and only once have they tried to return in all these years, and then by reading Science and Health I was free from discomfort within thirty minutes. The glasses were at once discarded and have never been worn again, though years have since been spent in art work, demanding constant use of the eyes. The ankles finally ceased turning, and daily it is being proved that a hateful temper is no part of the spiritual man, created in the image and likeness of God, Love.

For these many blessings deep gratitude goes out to our loving and faithful Leader, Mrs. Eddy, who by her earnest devotion to the Christ-idea has shown us all the way by which we, too, may understand the ever present Christ.

Christian Science has taught me that the true and only God does not send sin and sickness. This has been such a blessing to me, for it is so different from the way I had thought of Him. The first time I attended a Wednesday evening testimony meeting and heard so many express their love and gratitude to God and to Mrs. Eddy, I thought how beautiful it would be if it were really true that there was such a practical religion, and the thought came to me that if I were sick again I would try it, little thinking how much I needed its teachings even then. It was only a few weeks after this that I was taken suddenly ill. The first thought that came to my husband and myself was to get the doctor, and not until he spoke very discouragingly to my husband and said an operation was necessary did we decide to try Christian Science. In two absent treatments I was healed.

I am grateful not only for this one healing but for many others. The Christian Science literature means much to me, also the Sunday school that my children have the privilege of attending. I am grateful for church membership and that Christian Science has given me some understanding of the Bible and a love for the study of it. I am most thankful to God for our dear Leader, Mrs. Eddy, who through her unselfishness has given us this beautiful teaching, and that so many are awakening to the fact of what this healing truth means to the world.

I wish to verify everything my wife has written in her testimony, and to add that she has not told one half of the blessings that this blessed truth has brought into our lives. We were worried, sick, and discontented; now we are full of love, joy, hope, and contentment. Before taking up the study of Christian Science we had no special aim in life but to help ourselves; now we are workers in the field with other Christian Scientists helping to heal the world.

Christian Science has done so much for me that I hardly know where to start to tell of its benefits. It found me in a very morose condition, and though other means had failed to bring me light, I was soon made happy and strong through treatment from a Christian Science practitioner. We sometimes hear people say that Christian Science is good only for troubles of this kind, that they do not believe it heals physical ailments. I have had many proofs in my own experience of its efficacy in healing what would be called strictly physical difficulties, and am convinced it is a quicker and surer remedial agency than anything else.

Some time ago, after seven years of unusually strenuous office work, with but few vacations, I found myself in such a condition that it seemed as if I would either have to take a long rest or resign my position. I called on a practitioner and asked for treatment, and within a comparatively short time was so changed physically and mentally that I was able to keep right on working; and though the work was even increased over what it had formerly been, my health continued to improve to such an extent that it was plainly noticeable to those around me. I came in contact with many people every day, and for about two months hardly a day passed without some one remarking at the pronounced change in my appearance.

In her book, "The First Church of Christ, Scientist, and Miscellany" (p. 130) Mrs. Eddy says, "Truth never falters nor fails; it is our faith that fails;" and Paul says, "God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it." All that I am and have I owe to the understanding of God gained through the study of Christian Science, and words cannot express my gratitude for it.

During the four years I have known of Christian Science I have had many proofs of its healing efficacy. In the autumn of 1918 I was healed of what is known as a blind boil. This had made its appearance on my leg just above the knee and for over a week had been causing me serious difficulty. Though I had applied the truth of Christian Science to the best of my ability the condition did not improve, and finally at the end of the week I asked for help. This was Sunday night. After one treatment I felt relief, much fear was destroyed, and I felt I could rest, knowing that Truth heals all our diseases. There was some relief the next day but I was still unable to stand, and the root of the trouble did not seem to have been reached. However, treatment was continued and on Wednesday morning the whole thing was destroyed.

I cannot adequately express my gratitude for this healing, which showed so clearly that "Truth should, and does, drive error out of all selfhood" (Science and Health, p. 538). I am also grateful for the overcoming of chronic headaches, for the instantaneous healing of an internal trouble soon after becoming interested in Christian Science, and for numerous other physical benefits; but words cannot express my gratitude for the absolute transformation of my daily life through the study and application of this new-old truth, which was restored to us through the purity and devotion of one woman, Mrs. Eddy.
